

THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

286.05
BAP
v.2

86.05
3AP
Volume II

February 5, 1921

Number 1

The Baptist

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY
FEB 5 1921
Univ of Ill Libr
Urbana Ill

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

The Future of the Philippines

THE young men in the above picture, which also includes some of the teachers, are fourth-year students in the Jaro Industrial School. They are all Christians and members of the school church. In the front row, beginning with the fourth figure from the left, are Rev. A. E. Bigelow, Jesus Dineros, one of the teachers, who was also elected school preacher, and Rev. H. F. Stuart. If you wish to see the tomorrow of the Philippines, study the faces in this picture.

Supplies for Easter

Service
"MY JESUS, I LOVE THEE"

This is C. Harold Lowden's new service, and Edith Sanford Tillotson has again written the poems. We believe it is their masterpiece, and if you want a service that gets somewhere as well as provides a beauty and charm that is unusual, we commend "My Jesus, I Love Thee." Prices: 7 cents each; 80 cents the dozen; $3.25 for 50; $6.00 the hundred. Excellent orchestration, $1.50 the set.

Springtime and the Children. Six nature and Bible lessons for the Primary Department. Culminating in the Easter lesson. By Emma N. Waglie. 6 cents a copy; 55 cents a dozen; $5.00 a hundred.

Easter Offering Envelope. An entirely new design lithographed in colors on strong white paper; 100 envelopes, 40 cents.

Easter Lily Offering Envelope. A strong white envelope, 3 x 5 1/2 inches, with a lily design printed in purple, showing fifty lilies to be marked off as offering is made. A slot is cut in the face of the envelope to receive coin. $1.25 a hundred.

No. 177 S. The Easter Assurance Post-card. 10 cents a dozen; 75 cents a hundred.

An appropriate Easter sentiment that pastor, superintendent, or teacher can use with good effect.

It is beautiful in design, and will prove a fitting remembrance at the Easter season.

EASTER CARDS:

Series No. 800. A set of ten beautiful Easter Cards with suitable designs and Easter Greetings, appropriate Bible quotations and selected poetry. Each with envelope. Printed in beautiful colors. Size of card 3 1/2 x 4 1/2. 30 cents a set, postpaid.

Send for a copy of our illustrated Easter circular.
Order from our nearest branch.

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

Philadelphia Boston Chicago St. Louis Los Angeles Kansas City Seattle Toronto

Fresh from the Field

Rev. Franklin D. Elmer, pastor of the First Church, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has accepted a call to the church at Hamilton, the seat of Colgate University, and will begin his work there at an early date.

Regional missionary conferences are to be held in Minnesota as follows rather than as announced previously: St. Paul and Minneapolis, Feb. 20-22; Rochester, Feb. 23-24; Duluth, Feb. 25-27; Worthington, Feb. 28-March 1; Mankato, March 2-3.

Mr. Leonard Saxon, soloist and chorister, desires service with some evangelist beginning not later than June. Mr. Saxon, who is a Baptist, is at present studying music in Chicago and may be addressed there at 5714 Blackstone St.

Dr. A. H. Harnley began on Jan. 23 his pastorate of the Michigan Avenue Church of Saginaw, Mich. For the last year and a half he has been a member of the Wilmette, Ill., Church, whose pastor was formerly for several years the minister of the Michigan Avenue Church. Dr. Harnley has held important positions in Illinois, having been for eight years pastor at Austin and for some time state evangelist.

Last month Bates College, Lewiston, Maine, defeated Yale University in debate. On Jan. 15 the second debate of the season was held at Lewiston, with nearly 2500 people present. This time it was with Harvard University and as was the case a year ago, the decision was unanimous in favor of Bates. This makes thirty-nine victories out of fifty intercollegiate debating contests in the course of a little more than twenty years. It is needless to remark that Pres. Clifton Daggett Gray is proud of this unique record.

Dr. J. J. Muir, pastor of the Temple Church of Washington, was on Jan. 21 elected chaplain of the national senate.

The following note is from Dr. Chas. L. White: "The American Baptist Home Mission Society is not associated in any way with the management or support of the work among the Jews conducted by Rev. Armin A. Holzer, of Philadelphia, or by Mr. Leopold Cohn, of the Borough of Brooklyn. These missions are not a recognized part of any Baptist denominational agency."

During the past year, 126 persons asked for membership in the First Church, Sioux City, Iowa, thirty-three of these being by baptism. The budget is the largest in the history of the church but has been fully subscribed. Rev. G. W. Cassidy, is pastor.

Rev. W. W. Barker, after two years of field work with the Victory Campaign and the New World Movement, has accepted the hearty and unanimous call of the First Church, Woonsocket, R. I., and began his work there on Jan. 30.

Colporteur George Watt recently held a successful series of meetings at Summit, R. I. Thirteen decisions to accept Christ were reported.

Rev. H. Cotto Reyes, pastor of the church at Cayey, P. R., expresses his thanks for the organ which came to the church through mention of the need in THE BAPTIST. He is willing to testify that it pays to advertise in our national paper.

The Baptist

Vol. II

February 5, 1921

No. 1

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves

Business Manager: Edgar L. Killam

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER      MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE      MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
                                         MR. WILLIAM A. MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PROF. GEORGE E. HERR      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
                                         HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs including every family, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearsages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	2
DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING PACKAGES TO FOREIGN
MISSIONARIES .....	4
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS, by Lee B. Doty .....	4
EDITORIALS .....	5
AMERICAN CHILDREN IN THE ORIENT, by a Missionary
Father .....	8
THE MINISTER'S MEGAPHONE, by Ray Mayer .....	9
"THE MINISTRY'S DANGER LINE," by Harry L. Boardman .....	10
THE WAY OF AN INDIAN, by Coe Hayne .....	11
HARDING BELIEVES IN PRAYER .....	12
BRITISH BAPTISTS IN 1920, by John Clifford .....	13
THE POTTER, by Nellie G. Prescott .....	14
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	15
THE OPEN FORUM .....	17
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	18
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....	20
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	21
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	22
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	23

Our New Dress

THE BAPTIST appears this week in a new dress. The cover design and heads for the various departments were drawn under the direction of Mr. Henry T. Bailey, director of the Cleveland School of Art and one of the foremost educators in the country. The shells on either side of the heading on page five are the symbol of John the Baptist and of all evangelists. The little drawings on the other pages will interpret themselves.

The Civilization of a Denomination

THIS is a real job, especially in a group as democratic, independent or stubborn as we are.

This is not a "knock." It is a fact. In this column we sometimes preach, but we never "knock."

The text this morning is to be found in the second chapter of Roger Babson, page twenty. It reads: "The greatest barometer of civilization is the ability of people to co-operate. The basis of co-operation is the consideration of the group as a whole, rather than any individual."

The modern prophet of business righteousness has given us a message which we as a denomination are just beginning to appreciate. It was the acceptance of the truth as thus expressed that led our denomination to conceive the plan and launch the enterprise of a denominational newspaper. It was that we might lay a broad foundation for denominational co-operation that THE BAPTIST came into being one year ago. It was that we might become fully "civilized."

This paper does not belong to a section or segment of the denomination. It is not the champion of any party or group. It is interested in evangelism, but not to the exclusion of education. It believes in the whole program of the denomination. It tries to keep first things first. It has consideration for the denomination as a whole rather than any individual enterprise.

But what I want to say is that the greatest civilizing force in the denomination is its periodicals. That is, these papers bring before the local churches the needy fields at home and abroad. With the common knowledge of common facts, the basis for genuine team-work is laid. "Consideration of the group as whole" becomes possible. Where there is no vision, the people perish. They degenerate. They lapse into selfishness, which is barbarism.

If this sermon is true, no more pressing obligation rests upon us than that of getting the facts to the folks—getting the periodicals to the people. Some churches have mastered the problem. Others are determined to do so. Others are still indifferent, "uncivilized."

AFTER all is said and done, the most effective methods used generally by the churches are the family canvass and the budget plan. The former plan is suggested by and follows the same lines of the now generally used every-member canvass for church finance. Here the four-minute men and women perform invaluable service. The pastor is always ready to lend his influence and help. The right folks must be secured for the actual work of canvassing. One great advantage of this method is that its results are cumulative. Each effort marks a gain in the results.

A large number of churches have used with some variation the budget plan. In some cases the church has by formal vote added to the church budget a sum sufficient to provide a copy of THE BAPTIST and Missions for every family in the church. A few churches have included the families in the congregation. In other cases the church has paid a part of the subscription price.

Directions for Sending Packages to Foreign Missionaries

THE families and friends of our missionaries often have occasion to send parcel-post packages to the foreign field, and the question invariably arises as to postal rates and regulations. In order to facilitate the mailing of packages, the shipping department of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society has compiled a brief but complete statement of general information:

In general, shipments by parcel post reach their destination much more quickly than if sent by freight, and are no more expensive. In consideration of this, it is advisable to break up large shipments and send the smaller units by mail. Wherever a package is sent, the following instructions as to shipping should be carefully carried out:

1. Wrap invoice of contents and value on the inside of package.
2. Make sure you have the full address.
3. Mark value on the outside of package.
4. Prepay all charges.
5. Write the consignee that you are sending a parcel and enclose duplicate of invoice which you wrap inside the package.

China: Packages via parcel post may be sent up to eleven pounds at 12 cents per pound, with the exception of Shanghai, where the mail is received through an American postoffice at the rate of 12 cents per pound or fraction thereof up to a limit of fifty pounds. Packages going through this post office may be insured, but no insurance may be placed on mail to other parts of China.

Japan: Packages may be sent at the rate of 12 cents per pound up to an amount of eleven pounds. No insurance is allowed on packages.

Belgian Congo, Africa: Packages weighing not more than eleven pounds may be sent via parcel post for 12 cents per pound or fraction thereof. In addition to the postage, there is a transit charge of 20 cents on each package. Packages cannot be insured.

India: Packages may be sent via parcel post up to eleven pounds at the rate of 12 cents per pound or fraction thereof. In addition to the postage, there is a transit charge of 24 cents for the first three pounds, 48 cents for the next four pounds, and 72 cents for the next four pounds. Packages cannot be insured.

Philippine Islands: Packages up to fifty pounds may be sent by parcel post at the rate of 12 cents per pound. This is a United States possession and parcels may be insured.

If even one point of the above directions is omitted, it may cause infinite trouble for the missionary with the customs authorities. This always means delay and holds up the delivery of the package.

Sometimes old magazines, Sunday-school papers, old postcards and the like are sent to missionaries to use in their work, and they are very acceptable in most of the stations. However, if the sender fails to follow instructions regarding invoices, heavy duty charges are apt to be imposed which will very often amount to more than the intrinsic value of the goods.

If when sending a shipment, therefore, a person is not sure of the best method, or if that particular case does not come under the above instructions, it is suggested that the sender write for information to the shipping department of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City, and give a general description of the package as to weight, measurement, contents, value and destination. Detailed directions regarding it will be sent by return mail.

What Does
This Mean?
—
Guess!

Then Watch This Page

A Call to Prayer

BAPTIST women, a wonderful opportunity is offered you, carrying with it, however, a great responsibility. Regional conferences are to be held in your state sometime in the near future—conferences for "information and inspiration." If you have not learned about them, write your state director of promotion. Every woman should feel a keen responsibility for the success of these conferences.

Organize prayer groups immediately, and ask these groups to meet frequently, either in some home or in the church, and pray definitely for the success of these meetings. Pray that the attendance may be large, and that the audience may be in a spiritual frame of mind. Pray that those whom He wishes to use may be present. Pray for the members of the team who are to be with you. Pray that a great spiritual wave may extend across the country. Pray that our heavenly Father may make our duty plain to us—the duty of each individual woman—and give us the courage and determination to do our part. Claim at this time the prayer promises of our heavenly Father.

MRS. HELEN B. MONTGOMERY.
MRS. JOHN NUVEEN.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Inquiry—Calumet & Hecla

M. M. W.—This company has had an unusual history. Originally incorporated in Michigan in 1871, it and its subsidiaries are now said to own and control over 200,000 acres of land, principally in the upper counties of Michigan, with extensive and well equipped copper mines, several towns being located on the company's lands. It also has a smelter at Buffalo. During its history it has paid in dividends over $1,550 per share against $12 per share paid in by the stockholders.

After paying $50, $75, $85 and $55 from 1915 to 1918, the dividend was reduced to $10 per share in 1919 and to $5 in 1920.

The latest official report available is that issued a year ago for the year ending Dec. 31, 1919. It gives the following concise explanation of the situation met by the copper industry after the close of the war: "During the war the use of copper was restricted almost wholly to war purposes, and after the signing of the armistice, the buying of copper almost ceased. The sum total of unused copper held by the allied governments and unsold copper in the hands of the producers was greater than ever before in the history of the industry. Furthermore, the production of copper, stimulated as it had been by war requirements, was almost at its maximum. Because of these conditions, the year 1919 began most unfavorably for copper. The price dropped from 26 cents to 14½ cents per pound, and even at that low figure the demand was limited."

To meet this situation, the company reduced operations to a three-fourth time basis and in March cut wages 15 per cent. This, with men leaving for better wages in other industries, caused an unbalanced force, so that in May operations were further reduced to about 50 per cent of a normal basis. In June, as living costs had not gone down, wages were restored to the rates prevailing before the March cut.

The report shows the cost of production to have been for 1919 about 20 cents per pound. As a result, the year's operations showed a loss, and such dividends as were paid were from surplus acquired prior to 1913.

Figures for 1920 have not been published. Conditions in the copper industry are still far from satisfactory, as in most other lines of business. It is hoped that when the question of German reparations is decided there will be a larger demand for copper. Meantime, however, wages and costs of operation are still high, and the amount of future dividends will depend on whether demand and prices can be made to show a profit over costs.

The Baptist

The Man Ahead

THAT is a discerning thing which the new Christians in Africa say, as reported by Jean Mackenzie, for it proves that the "same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him," and that our Lord Jesus verifies his grace and power to any soul anywhere that trusts him. "The trail is hard and tangled," they say, "but there is a Man ahead of us." "Jesus in the lead," some one else has put it, recalling doubtless, that strange journey when he "set his face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem," "and Jesus was going before them, and they were amazed, and they that followed were afraid." The book of Hebrews tells the blessed story even more fully, for there occur these statements; "the captain (file-leader) of our salvation;" "as a fore-runner Jesus entered for us."

That Man Ahead leads us into strange places, even the "valley of the death-shade;" sometimes into places that try our souls and test our faith, courage, devotion and even virtue. But he always leaves us His tracks to walk in, and if he ever gets out of our sight it is because of our lack of faith and obedience; it is certain that we are never out of his. The fact is that he is both ahead of us and by us and back of us and over us and around us, for "in Christ" is the characteristic formula of the Christian life. Nay more, and most blessedly, the Man Ahead is the Man inside, for our good news is "Christ in you, the hope of glory," and "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." He is the Man underneath and overhead and by me and around me just because he is the Man Ahead, in whose steps I walk.

O my soul, draw not back from following, turn not aside from planting thy footsteps in the tracks of Jesus! It matters not where the path may lead just now; we know where it leads in the end. It can only lead nearer him and nearer the goal. "Follow the markers," we tell him who would traverse some transcontinental trail. And has he not "left us an example that we should walk in his steps." "Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking away unto Jesus, the file-leader and perfecter of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame and hath sat down on the right hand of the throne of God"—our Man Ahead.

The Conferences Are On

THE regional missionary conferences planned by the General Board of Promotion are upon us. Nothing can take the place of personality. Many of the choicest Christian statesmen of other lands are numbered among the workers on the teams. They have vital messages which Baptists everywhere should hear and cherish. Theirs has been the privilege to face heathenism with all its vice and crime and degradation and offer the one panacea for its crushing ills—the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. They will tell you that the days of miracles are not passed. The greater things that Jesus promised are being exemplified by the Christ-life in thousands of human beings today. The Holy Spirit is still functioning in consecrated hearts and is conditioned only by our degree of faith and surrender.

It is impossible to bring the teams to other than central cities, where a large constituency may be most advantageously served. Local pastors will best serve their own people and fields by getting their largest possible delegation to the nearest conference. Give the people the vision. They can be trusted with the facts. The team leaders have been chosen by reason of their experience and fitness to render this large and inspiring service. Every conference will be a rich privilege.

As a denomination we have seen a great vision. God would never have permitted it if he had not thought that we were worthy of the task. He has already greatly blessed those churches which have answered the call worthily. He has even richer blessings in store for us if we will but prove our worthiness to be used of him.

Inevitably at the beginning, the machinery of the New World Movement was in evidence. But the spiritual end which has been in view from the first is now being stressed. The previous emphasis upon money has been for the sake of the present emphasis on evangelism and missions. These regional missionary conferences will be found to be true and strong allies of the evangelistic campaigns now being conducted in so many churches. Men who see the Lord moving in his churches at home will work and pray that the same thing may come to pass abroad. And those who catch the missionary spirit will be the truest evangelists at home.

What We Share

THERE is one who has reminded us that in true charity the thing that counts is not what we give but what we share, "for the gift without the giver is bare."

Listen to this story:

"Two Indians, Lone Man and his wife Phebe, had learned of the starving children of the East. They offered their gift in these words: 'We read about the starving children across the big waters. We want to help. We brought a load of corn to town and sold it. We raise it ourself. We sell it for ten dollars. We want to give five dollars to feed dem starving childrens. Take this five dollars and send it for us.'"

The appeal of the suffering children of Europe sounds in our ears, the unspoken cry of the millions who are starving in China makes such an uproar that those whose hearts are sensitive find themselves almost appalled.

There will be gifts, large and small, from our people and our churches. The question we raise is whether these gifts are to be the dole we hand out to the needy beggar or whether they represent a real sharing of our possessions with men and women and children who are dear to the heart of our Lord. Perhaps we can form such estimate ourselves of the value of what we do, not by the size of our offering, but by contemplating what we have left after the gift has been made.

Is Sunday for the Movies?

TWO methods of campaigning for any purpose are open to men. They may conduct an open straightforward effort towards their end. Or they may avoid this and in place of it try to blacken the character and motives of those who would oppose them.

Recently a rather bitter attack has been made on the men and women who believe that Sunday should not be given over to commercialism. They have been maligned and cartooned. They have been pictured as bigots and joy-killers. Purposes have been attributed to them of which they never dreamed. An effort has been made to cause them to appear ridiculous. This campaign has been carried on in print and picture. And the natural result has been confusion and some chagrin among well-meaning people who are as open to such propaganda as anybody else.

If any motion picture interests think that this is the best way of accomplishing their ends, if they imagine that by maligning and misrepresenting Christian men and women they will secure permission to do what they will on Sunday, they are at liberty to keep on with such efforts. But it is only fair to remind them that before now such methods have reacted on those using them. A part of the American people can be fooled for a time, but all the American people return to sanity after a time. And then woe betide the men or movements which have for their own gain attempted deceit and misrepresentation and calumny!

The Baptist in Every Home

INDUSTRIAL institutions in large numbers are trying to incorporate the Christ-spirit in their business policy and especially in their relationship with their employees. In trade and financial papers it is becoming a common thing for writers to speak of Jesus Christ and his teachings as a distinct element in industrial and commercial life. For several years at the annual meetings of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World it has been the custom for representative speakers to occupy the pulpits of the entertaining city. This is the organization that has adopted "Truth" as its motto and slogan. Among the widely circulated secular magazines probably the American Magazine has given more space to distinctly religious articles than any other unless it be the Literary Digest. This is very interesting and encouraging and gives evidence of a growing public sentiment in favor of higher and better things.

In this connection it should be observed that the distinctly religious publications are being more widely read and circulated. Nothing can take the place of the denominational paper. Its place in the home is vital. Through its columns alone can we keep in touch with our great denominational enterprises and agencies. Nowhere else can we learn of the doings of our denominational leaders, missionaries, preachers and consecrated laymen. The great Baptist world is laid out before us every week and there alone our ideals and better selves are cultured. The denominational paper is one of those vital forces that makes possible this mighty unity of effort in many lands, to the end that Christ's kingdom shall come and his will be done.

As Baptists has there been a reason for our existence? Do we realize what our fathers stood for and fought for? Are there not mighty reasons why we should carry on until the day of Jesus Christ? If we know our Bible as we ought and sense the poignant needs of the world as we should we shall certainly answer, "Yes." THE BAPTIST in every home will help to make us better Christians and better Baptists.

Everybody is looking for ideas and methods. THE BAPTIST would be glad to hear from churches in which there are being used effective methods of reaching and holding the young people. Hundreds of other churches will be interested in what you are doing. Thus the service you are rendering in your own church will be multiplied many times. You also will be interested in what others are doing. Why not sit down and write a brief, pointed account of your best methods?

They Die While You Wait

FIFTEEN thousand people are dying daily of starvation in China. A good-sized town is wiped out every day. But it is not towns which are perishing: it is people possessed of the same loves and hopes and fears which we know.

This situation will get worse and probably reach its climax in March. What is to be done must be done quickly. Tomorrow another town full of people will have passed beyond the reach of human aid. While well-intentioned people stop to think what they can do, death claims its victims.

On the last page of this number, the General Board of Promotion makes an appeal. Read it! Read it quickly! Read it carefully! And then act! Our Baptist people can send their contributions to the treasurer of our Foreign Mission Society, and this money will be cabled at once to China. The money will get to work as soon as it is furnished.

Steward or Owner?

A STEWARD does not own the property he has in his possession. He holds it for another and must at fixed intervals or at some date give an accounting.

Christian people are not absolute owners of what they have. They themselves and all they have belong to God. They came naked into the world and they go out in similar fashion. A diamond pressed in a dead hand means nothing. All they can take back to God is the soul which he gave. And the worth of that soul is a good deal dependent on the use they have made of material things while in the body.

The daily question of the Christian is not "How much do I owe God" but rather, "How best shall I use today these gifts which God has placed in my keeping?"

Some think that they have done all that can reasonably be asked when they have placed one-tenth of their income apart for religious purposes. Others feel that, when this is done, they have only made a beginning. And, to our shame be it said, there are those who feel that they can offer nothing in God's service until every last one of their own whims has been met.

Let no man call himself a steward and act as if he were an owner.

We are living in the weeks which have been set aside by the General Board of Promotion for the consideration of this whole matter of stewardship. Let us open our Bibles and see what Jesus said about it. What then were Paul's conclusions? And when we have found these, let us sit down and give the divine Spirit free play in our hearts and lives.

***

Our request for the choice devotional articles which our readers have tucked away in their Bibles has called out a large number of clippings which will be published from time to time. Some of them appear in the present issue. There are yet more for which we are waiting. The invitation was addressed to you.

***

Every day brings us letters in praise of the decision to popularize THE BAPTIST which we are increasingly carrying into effect with every issue. Our aim is to produce a paper to please and help the great body of our readers. All suggestions and help towards this end is welcome.

***

"We study that we may serve." That is a fine sentiment and ideal. It does not age but grows in effectiveness and vigor with the added years. This was one of the early mottoes or slogans of the Baptist young peoples movement.

***

"Every disciple a soul winner," carried into effect, would bring in the kingdom within a generation or far less. What has been the record of the past year for your church? Has each member won another in twelve long months—fifty-two weeks—365 days? What has been the result for the kingdom of all those busy lives? What is their chief concern?

***

President-Elect Harding has decided that there shall be this year no inaugural ball and has declined also to attend a charity ball which has been scheduled for the time at which the other might naturally have been held. Considering the state of the times and the feeling of great numbers of our churches on this matter of the public dance as at present practiced, the incoming president will find that he has made many friends by his action.

This Week's Prize-Winners

Live Pastors or Dying Churches?

IN times like these many a thinking Baptist is facing a dilemma. Earnestly desiring to stand for Baptist principles, he yet longs to see a more complete union of evangelical Christianity.

He sees in an over-churched town, the little Baptist church which cannot secure a live, magnetic pastor, and consequently has over it a pastor of another kind who leads a lost cause. He asks "Does this condition show wisdom and foresight?"

Some of our churches are letting down the bars of principle through a careless leadership and this is regrettable. On the other hand, in a community where the choice is whether to "support" several half-dead churches or to maintain one wide-awake organization, could not one be a better Christian, yea, a better Baptist, in an amalgamated church?

What is the remedy? Is it a question of church or of pastors? Candidates for the ministry cannot be too carefully sifted out. We deplore the crying need of good pastors, and the enticements of other callings; but aren't we concerned over the wrong end of the problem?

In our anxiety to have leaders, are not misfits pressed into service?

Here is food for earnest thought by our Baptist educators. Too many are essaying to shepherd flocks whose needs they cannot possibly comprehend. If we must perpetuate our Baptist organizations in small places, is it not imperative that such churches shall have pastors who shall command respect in the community and truly lead the flock?

Long live our Baptist heritage! Yet that heritage is but a part of the kingdom.

Williamstown, Mass.

E. HARWOOD NEAL

The Sacredness of a Promise

SINCE our New World Movement campaign last May in which as a church we went over the top with our allotment, fully three dozen pledgors (all members in good and regular standing) have repudiated their pledges, either openly by word of mouth, or by action, ignoring statements and appeals. This spells, in great big letters, failure, unless redemption comes from some new and unexpected source.

When one gives his word, he assumes a sacred obligation and establishes a standard by which his moral weight or measurement may be unmistakably estimated. For a promise is a test of honor, a test of loyalty, a test of Christian character, which one had far better never make than make and break.

Eighteen years ago our little son, aged thirteen, lay upon his death-bed. One day he asked; "Mamma, why am I sick so much of the time?" I replied: "I do not know, Harry, but suppose you promise Jesus right now that if he will make you well this time, you'll be a good Christian and serve him the rest of your life." A look of seriousness, a moment's pause, and then these words: "No, I can't do that; I might not keep my promise."

Not to save the life which he knew was rapidly ebbing away would he make a promise which he might not keep.

O, that men and women, Christian men and women everywhere, might get that child's conception of the sacredness of a promise.

Chanute, Kansas.

MRS. W. M. GRAY

American Children in the Orient

Exciting surroundings, superstitious and ignorant servants, lack of association with children of their own race, and slender educational advantages hinder the development of American children. Should missionaries have children?

BY A MISSIONARY FATHER

THE physical conditions among which missionaries' children are born on the mission fields are such as to make it unwise to keep them there beyond their early years. In Africa, India, China and the Philippines, the heat and humidity, and all that is involved in tropical conditions, prevent the development of healthy bodies and souls.

In opening a new field it is necessary for the missionary and his family to live in a tent or in a hut of some kind until material can be collected and a house built. When our work for the Garos in Assam was just beginning, Dr. M. C. Mason lived in a little straw and bamboo hut. One day his child was playing about on the veranda while he was at work in the hut. A cry caused him to rush out. He saw a wild elephant which had turned to be a "rogue," bent on destruction, coming up close to the veranda. He had no gun with him and no time to get one, so without a second thought, he picked up a stick and, rushing up to it, began to beat the man-killer over the trunk. The wicked brute was so surprised that it turned tail and ran. The doctor after it, beating its hind legs!

A man on tour in the district was living in a small rest house which had walls made of coarse matting. One day while the man was having dinner, the servant, who was passing one of the dishes and was standing back of his employer and rather close to the wall, felt something strike the clothing on his back. Turning part way, he saw that it was a cobra which had struck. Its fangs were caught in the clothing, and this held it from a second attempt.

"Stand still!" the man said quietly.

Getting a sword, he cut the snake in two—and finished his dinner.

We have often taken ticks, similar to the cattle ticks of this country, out of the children's ears, to say nothing of those taken from every other part of their bodies. Poisonous bugs, beetles, caterpillars, centipedes, scorpions, flies, mosquitos, lice, and roaches—all of these in some places, more than these in others, and less in a few fortunate places—create such physical surroundings that the little bodies have no opportunity for a healthy development.

The cynical poet was wrong when he characterized all the people of an oriental country as follows:

"I looked o'er the land, 'twas a low-lying land,
Its towns had no church house or steeple.

And its people were a low, lying people."

But the children in the picture typify conditions which cannot be tend to be lost in the atmosphere of hopeless fatalism.

An illustration of the sights which tend to do this was seen in a beggar who frequented a busy corner in the city of Calcutta. He was a young man, probably twenty years of age. Leprosy had eaten away his nose and one side of his cheek, including his upper lip. His teeth were thus exposed, and his fingers also were gone. He would run along the sides of the avoided in many of these lands. It is necessary that certain care be exercised there which is not required here. Because a certain class of people must be employed as servants in the homes, the children come into intimate contact with ethical and moral conceptions which are infinitely lower than ours.

Missionaries' Children Abroad

A missionary mother in China was dumbfounded one day when she found her little daughter doing worship to one of the gods, and this on the mission compound and also in good Chinese, with proper heathen ceremonial! She inquired where in the world she had learned all this, and was told that a little Chinese girl of her own age, who was a playmate, had taught her.

Such things as this can readily be corrected, but debasing habits and immoralities cannot easily be eradicated. Children cannot help but see things which harden the finer sensibilities. Even sympathy and pity street cars at a place where they had to slow down for a crossing—holding up the stumps of his hands and showing the awful sore on his face and beg for money. Many similar sights are forced on the attention of all who live in the Orient, and the effect on child-minds is more harmful than on older persons.

In times of famine, the distress of the hungry and dying is seen by the children, especially when the missionary takes an active part in the relief of the distress. Epidemics of small-pox, plague and other such scourges which sweep through these lands year after year endanger not only the health of the little folks, but life itself. All these things add greatly to the weight of the responsibility of keeping children in an oriental country, and constitute an extra burden laid on lives and hearts that have almost all that they can carry in the burdens which come from undermanned fields and insufficient equipment.

In most of the fields where we have mission work there are communities of white people. With the exception of Africa, our work in the East is among peoples to which numbers of English-speaking men and women have been attracted—in some places for business, as in China and Japan, and in others for government service as well as for business, as in India. There is in each of these countries a community of mixed blood which usually seeks to retain the language as well as the customs of the white race. For these people and also for the children of such parents as cannot conveniently make arrangements for their little ones in the home land, there are schools where English is the language and where the system is either British or American. These schools are usually in a healthful place—in a summer resort or hill station where there is as great an opportunity as possible for the children to have healthful surroundings. But healthful surroundings can never remove the unfortunate moral and ethical surroundings of these countries.

The dialect of English that is learned in these schools is certainly fearfully and wonderfully made. In India particularly it is very noticeable. The name of "chi chi bat" has been given to it. Were this the only thing that must be unlearned, it would not be so serious; but the fact that a whole system of morals and ethics learned during the most impressionable years must be eradicated makes the problem one of real seriousness.

Many of our little ones are slower in their school work and general mental development after they return to this land than other children who have not had the handicaps of the East. But the knowledge that the vast majority of missionaries' children have developed into useful citizens is the great encouragement to the missionary parents who are facing the one real sacrifice of a missionary's life—that of separation from their children whom they love: separation because of that love, but also because of "the love of Christ which constraineth."

The Minister's Megaphone

The United States has in it a great undeveloped market for Christianity. The newspapers reach this market. Editors will help those ministers who help them.

BY RAY MAYER

NOT so long ago a minister outside the Baptist denomination declared that the church was dead, but that religion was very much alive. In other words, the authority for this statement indicated that there was something wrong with the institution responsible for marketing the gospel of Jesus Christ. "Marketing" is a word related to the commercial world, and there are those who may not approve of linking it with Him. I use it advisedly, putting the construction upon it that one would employ in a broad, all-sweeping sense. I mean the bringing of Jesus Christ to the maximum.

I have no quick cure-all for the malady that caused the "death" of the church. In fact, the church is not dead. It is hitting on five cylinders and has a sixth in reserve. That sixth cylinder is the great, undeveloped market for Christianity in the United States. Christianity has not been given the advantage of its market. It has been restricted. How to reach that market? Through the minister's megaphone!

Many a man carrying golden messages of peace and happiness isn't shepherding to his full capacity for the reason that there are not enough people who know that he has those golden messages of peace and happiness. Some day he will realize the value of using the minister's megaphone, and he will talk to more men and women who have avoided him for the theater and the front verandas than he had ever hoped to swerve into the right paths. The minister's megaphone today is the newspaper and the magazine.

I am not attempting to tell men who have spent years in the pulpit how to lure people into their churches. But I am attempting to tell them that I know that many of them have not used the minister's megaphone, or, if they have, that they have not used it effectively. I am trying to tell them how they may put the desire in the hearts of those who do not come within the reach of their voices. Create the desire for Him, and the pews won't yawn.

Too many ministers have regarded certain newspapers, especially, as being commercialized, poorly-edited, unreliable make-shifts, and for that reason have disregarded them absolutely. Not so the theatrical men, the motion-picture house administrators, and the cabaret people. No matter what their literary merit, their area of distribution is wide and is to be reckoned with. Underneath the veneer of commercialism is the sound underlying principle of accuracy and righteous living. The newspaper is one of the greatest instruments of Christianity if used judiciously and consistently. How to do it? As editor, reporter and advertising man, I have found out how the minister does it—the minister who does it successfully.

A clergyman does not need to be a rabid sensationalist, an orator or a pulpit "wonder" to gain the public recognition. By that I mean newspaper recognition, too; for that which the newspaper recognizes, the public in turn usually recognizes, or at least the greater majority does. You can keep your church filled, you can accomplish the greatest good for the greatest number, if you do not neglect your newspapers.

I have heard so many clergymen—splendid, forceful men—say to me when I questioned them as to their ability to keep out of the newspapers:

"O, I have had too much of that sort of thing. It doesn't thrill me to have my name in the paper." Perhaps it doesn't. But it isn't whether or not it thrills you: it is whether or not you give the widest voice to Him whom you represent. Are your own likes and dislikes to be allowed to hamper your work? If proper presentation in a newspaper or newspapers of your work will fill your church, can't you afford to side-track any personal aversion you may have for publicity?

The newspaperman, from editor to reporter, works fast and has much to do in a short period. Time-savers are his hobby. If you make it easy for him to obtain the news of your church, he will print it in preference to that of the clergyman who makes it difficult to learn of the activities of his congregation.

I am able to quote you two opposing situations. A bishop was named in a large city. I sent a scholarly young man to the clerical head of the district. Apparently the visit had been anticipated, for when he arrived and stated the purpose of his early morning visit, the religious leader left his breakfast and presented to the reporter data, written by himself in concise newspaper style, bearing upon the life and achievements of the appointee. He also had photographs ready. He was possessed of other information the newspaperman wanted. The man returned to the office of the newspaper in plenty of time to compile a lengthy and accurate story.

This is the second instance: A newspaper sent out a reporter on the day before Christmas to obtain greetings from the head of each denomination—greetings which should carry a message of religious good will to the large population of that city. All were willing but one. He quibbled, he criticized the idea, he criticized the newspapers, and he told the reporter how he should write stories. In fact, he was as disagreeable as possible. Finally, unwillingly, he wrote the greeting. This was accomplished after twenty-four hours. The reporter was disgruntled. He carried the facts to the editor, and it was difficult after that for this man to gain entrance into the news columns of that paper, either for news of himself or his church. He had disregarded an opportunity to cultivate an organ reaching 100,000 persons.

I would advise every minister of the gospel to drop into the office of the newspapers in his town or city once or twice a year at least, arriving at about two o'clock in the afternoon if it is a morning paper, or about four o'clock if it is issued in the afternoon. These are the slack periods. The city editor will be glad to chat with him and to tell him just what he wants in the way of news from his church. I have heard newspapermen say after such a visit: "That minister seems to be a regular fellow." And he will remember that personal contact and will ever prove of service.

The newspaperman of today is not the newspaperman that fiction has made him. Today he is a young, receptive man, usually married and with children. He does his work efficiently and leads a clean life. He has also to meet the demands of modern newspaper-making. He is in accord with righteous living and ways that are fair. He hates hypocrisy for he sees so much of it. The minister who fights for the things that are best, the average newspaperman will support.

Creed does not matter. Every editor realizes that, even if he would, he dare not discriminate. To do that would reveal his leaning. I know many of the men of the "fourth estate," and without exception they are not narrow.

The editors will help you if you will help them. And in helping them, you help His cause.

"The Ministry's Danger Line"

On the surface two brethren differ on an important subject. Are they one in essential meaning?

BY HARRY L. BOARDMAN

THE writer of the article under the above caption, appearing in THE BAPTIST of Jan. 15 seems to involve himself in certain strange inconsistencies. His reasoning will scarcely bear a critical investigation.

The "danger line" is in preaching the "social gospel," which the writer declares has no existence. Yet in the same paragraph he defines the social gospel quite satisfactorily as preaching the gospel of Jesus with the social emphasis which it may rightfully have. Dean Mathews, in "The Individual and the Social Gospel," says: "We call the gospel as applied to groups of individuals, social conditions and social forces the social gospel only for the sake of using a convenient term." Mr. O'Donnell evidently believes in such a gospel, and this is the social gospel.

His distinction between preaching social righteousness and defending social theories and programs is superficial and invalid. Suppose an instance, common enough in history and experience, when social righteousness becomes identical with a particular social program. Had Mr. O'Donnell lived in the old anti-slavery days, could he have consistently preached social righteousness without espousing the cause of abolition? But this was simply a mighty, concrete "social scheme" for human well-being. One is led to wonder if the writer has lived and preached all through the recent years of anti-saloon agitation in America without ever taking sides on this tremendous social question. Would he hesitate to support actively a "social scheme" having for its object the amelioration of child labor conditions in factories, or the guarding of a city's milk supply because, forsooth, sentiment is divided on the questions at issue? Selfishness and greed are quite content with a preaching of social righteousness which does not precipitate itself in the practical application of its principles in business and in life.

The writer's use of the League of Nations as an illustration seems most unfortunate for him. He says that the masses of the people are opposed to the league, and that therefore preachers were very unwise to advocate it as a social program. Even admitting that the masses are opposed to the league (which is by no means assuredly true), does the writer imply that it is a preacher's principal business to keep his ear to the ground to hear what "the masses" think about it before he proclaims his gospel of social righteousness? And must a minister glorify the "noble ideal" and wait for a perfect plan for its realization before he commits himself to a positive program of effort? On such a basis, where is the room in modern life for the prophet with his venture of faith? The late Prof. William James long ago effectually exploded, in "The Will To Believe," the theory that one must decline to believe anything until he is absolutely assured of its truth.

Mr. O'Donnell would have all ministers refrain from effort in behalf of programs of social righteousness until assured that no mistakes are possible and that success is certain. Such a system of expediency will not get far in the present-day conflict with social wrongs; and the advocate of it has already passed the danger line! The "fundamental distinction" between "preaching social righteousness" and "defending social schemes" disappears in thin air when, as is often the case, social righteousness and social schemes coalesce.

Here, too, seems to lurk that ancient fallacy which would divorce religion from life. The minister as a specialist in religion is supposed to know little or nothing of political and social matters. A fairer position would be to hold that religion relates itself vitally to all life, including politics and the social order, and that a minister cannot be a specialist in religion today without recognizing religion's inevitable im-

(Continued on page 14)

The Way of an Indian

This untutored Indian believed God. When God bade him go and preach, he went. And the Spirit went before. The story has the flavor of primitive Christianity.

BY COE HAYNE

NEAS-JE-GAR-GATH, an Indian wood carver converted in Canada, while in search of work on the Pacific Coast was preaching to a group of white people in the Union Mission of Long Beach, Cal., when a woman in the audience became convinced of his earnestness and determined to send him to some Indians in the northern part of the state.

"Neas-je-gar-gath," she said at the close of the service, "we want you to go and teach a band of Indians near Yosemite Valley. They know nothing about God, and you must go to them and teach God's word."

"Well, I don't know," said Neas-je-gar-gath. "I pray about it."

For two weeks Neas-je-gar-gath prayed over the matter. Then he spoke to the white woman. "I have talked to God, and he has told me to go. I don't know where that place is. I don't know how to get there. I have no money."

"We will buy your ticket to Madera, where you will get a train out to Raymond. Then you will have to walk thirty-five or forty miles to reach the Indians. You had better buy some things to take with you; for there is no store up there."

With money furnished him by his newly-found friend, Neas-je-gar-gath purchased a few articles for personal use and then secured a ticket to Raymond. He reached that place late at night. All the money he possessed amounted to $1.50. He was a stranger. He stood out in front of the depot and prayed, and then he asked a man where the Indians lived.

"They live a long distance away," said the villager. "There is deep snow on the ground, and it is very cold. You cannot go there tonight. You had better go to the hotel."

For a night's lodging Neas-je-gar-gath paid half of his supply of cash. The next morning he stood on the street feeling cold and hungry. He did not know what to do. Then it occurred to him that he would better get something to eat. After breakfast this question came back to him: "How am I going to find Indians?"

A Christian Indian

He approached a man on the street corner. "I am a Christian," he said. "I am a missionary to Indians. Is there any Christian mans about here?"

The man pointed across the street and said, "I believe that man is a Christian."

The Indian accosted the man who had the reputation of being a Christian. "They tell me you are a Christian man. I want to go out here to Nippinnawasee where Indians live to teach them to be Christians. I got no money. Do you know of anyone going out that way?"

"The Indians were here about a week ago," said the white man. "That man over there is the constable, and I understand that he is going out to Nippinnawasee today. I'll ask him to take you along with him in his machine."

It was late in the evening when Neas-je-gar-gath arrived at Nippinnawasee. The man who kept the store told him that the first Indian house was at least three miles further on.

"Good-bye," said Neas-je-gar-gath to the constable. "Thank you for bringing me."

"If anybody bothers you, let me know," said the constable.

That made the Indian missionary feel good deep in his heart. He started out with his little grip containing a Bible, a song book, two pairs of socks and some towels. He carried half of a quilt rolled up. He walked upon the snow for two miles, when he saw a little Indian house. The sight of it brought a thrill of exaltation to his soul. At last he could begin the gospel to the Indians! It was the day he long had prayed for. He set down his grip and bed-roll and walked behind a clump of evergreens. Kneeling in the snow, he prayed God to help him.

"Lord, you want me to come teach Indians," he began. "I am here. I not know what Indians do or say when I go to house. Lord, go before and open way, so they take me in when I come."

Although he was cold, hungry and tired, when he arose to continue his journey (he had had nothing to eat since breakfast) he "felt good in his heart." He took up his grip and quilt and approached the house. Then his courage began to wane once more, and he stopped to pray. He felt anew the call to "Go on."

Presently two women came out of the house to meet him.

"Sisters, I am a Christian," said Neas-je-gar-gath. "I am an Indian all same as you. I have come to teach you and help you to become Christian. Shall I go in?"

"Yes, go in."

Because he was cold, he went close to the fire, and as he sat there, he told the women why he had come to the mountains to find his people. Presently two men were seen approaching the house in a wagon.

"They go to get whiskey," said one of the women. "Maybe come drunk. What you do when they come drunk?"

"I don't know," said Neas-je-gar-gath. "Pray, I guess."

"Maybe these men not like your being here."

The visitor prayed silently as he watched the men come closer. The women passed out of the house.

"Be careful," said one. "There is somebody here."

"Who is here?" demanded one of the men.

Neas-je-gar-gath went out of the house and told the men that he was their brother who had come to do the Indians good. He declared his desire to preach the gospel to the Indians of that region. One man whom he addressed was Jim Rowan, whose house he had entered.

"Brother Jim Rowan," said the preacher, "will you let me stay in your house?"

"We no got anything much, but I do best I can for you. You can stay."

The other Indian, nearly 100 years old, came in singing a ribald song, and Neas-je-gar-gath knew that he was drunk.

"I come to show you the good way," said Neas-je-gar-gath. "You get salvation in your heart, and you no want drink any more."

In answer to the preacher's request for something to eat, Mrs. Jim Rowan said, "We no got much, but we give you what we got."

Some cooked water-grass, called Indian cabbage, was set before Neas-je-gar-gath, and when he smelled it he cried within his soul, "Lord, help me!" He had never eaten this dish before. But he knew the Indian way. If he did not eat, he would not be received as a true Indian. Even if it choked him, he knew that he would have to eat some of the stuff. He took one taste. It was so bitter he wanted to spit it out; but he knew that he could not do that and he tried to swallow. His throat burned. Then he must eat another bite. He feared that he could not get that down. All the Indians were looking at him. He got down a little of the strong weed. "Now I will have to try another bite," he told himself. He swallowed a third piece of the water-grass. He felt that his throat was on fire.

"Mrs. Jim Rowan," said Neas-je-gar-gath, "I have seen that you are good in what you give me, but I can't eat any more of this. I don't want to make you mad. My heart is all right. I am an Indian all same as you."

Then the good man was given four crackers and a cup of coffee. It was all that he had to eat that night. But in right good spirit he read a portion of Scripture and then told Jim Rowan that he wanted to pray in his house.

"All right," said Jim Rowan, "but I don't know anything about praying."

The next day being Sunday, Neas-je-gar-gath said to his host, "Jim Rowan, you take me to schoolhouse. A woman in Long Beach say I should preach there."

"All right," said Jim, who was rather the worse for whiskey.

After the sermon, Neas-je-gar-gath began to sing: "Hide me, O my Saviour, hide me." It broke Jim's heart, and he began to cry. Neas-je-gar-gath knelt down by his side and prayed for him.

"I am sorry for my sins," said Jim Rowan, and at that moment he gave his heart to Jesus. When he reached his home he told his wife the joyful news.

"I am glad to hear that," Mrs. Jim Rowan told Neas-je-gar-gath. "You see, I have only one arm. Whiskey took the other one when we came home from Wagona one night all drunk and run over the edge of bluffs. Wagon turn over and break my arm. I was drunk. I don't want any more of it. I am glad Jim Rowan going to quit whiskey."

On Monday morning Neas-je-gar-gath said to Jim Rowan, "You take me round. I want to find all the Indians in this country."

So they went about finding Indian homes, and many people came to the service the following Sunday. The preacher asked all who wanted to be Christians to get down upon their knees, and all the Indians knelt. Then as Neas-je-gar-gath prayed he heard one after another say, "Jesus, come into my heart and take sin all out."

"Amen," said Neas-je-gar-gath. "That is the way to talk to Jesus."

Neas-je-gar-gath has remained among those Indians until the present day. You will find him in the California mountains working as the faithful associate of Mr. Brendel, who has done so much for the Mono tribes. They have been assisted by several young women missionaries.

Harding Believes in Prayer

IN response to a request from the editor of THE BAPTIST that Senator Harding give through the columns of this paper some statement to the people of our churches, there comes under date of Jan. 20 from his secretary, Mr. Christian, this word:

"I regret to say that he has found it a matter of physical impossibility to find the time in which to prepare the message. For weeks past his every moment has been occupied in the despatching of emergency public business which would not wait and in holding the scheduled conferences of which you have read. . . . I enclose an article containing some expressions which Senator Harding has made relative to religious matters. It may be that their reproduction in some form will be helpful."

The statements referred to, and which thus receive personal endorsement, were made at the time Mr. Harding was made a Royal Arch Mason. They are as follows:

"During the last ten days I have been taken far back into the story of creation, and I have found it to be adding to my sense of religious devotion.

"Prayer grips the heart and adds to one's confidence.

"I believe in prayer. I believe in prayer in one's closet, for there one faces God alone. Many times the outspoken prayer is only for people's ears. But I can understand how those of old, in their anxieties, problems, perturbations and perplexities, found courage and strength when they gave their hearts to the great omnipotent God in prayer.

"How many things are in the Scripture that we, in our worldliness, never discover!

"After all, men are very much alike. God made us all in the same image, and there is no difference in us except as we have developed; or when the weight of responsibility is shouldered on us, then God makes men equal to that responsibility. It is the touch of responsibility that makes human beings awake.

"The government of this republic has been adrift, and the inevitable result has followed. But I am not afraid because I know through courtesy, confidence and close adherence to justice one will have at his call the best minds and intellects in the great republic, and with their truth, advice and direction, we cannot go wrong.

"I trust that in the four years that are to come I shall be worthy of the honors you have conferred upon me, and that I will come back and look you in the face and be able to say, 'I have kept the faith.'"

When Mr. Harding takes the oath of office on March 4 as President of the United States, his hand will rest upon a Bible which is opened at the passage in Micah which reads: "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good, and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

British Baptists in 1920

English Baptists began 1920 in fear and trembling. They ended the year glad, exultant, adventurous and hopeful. Their deepest need is a quickened individual and collective conscience as to evangelism.

BY JOHN CLIFFORD

WE HAVE just closed one of our greatest years. God has indeed done great things for us whereof we are glad, exultant, adventurous and hopeful. Of our three great years in this century, this will on several accounts take highest rank and produce, so we believe, the largest fruit.

We began 1920 in fear and trembling. The war had plunged us into many and serious difficulties. "The stock of moral emotion," says one of our historians, "in a nation is limited." Our stock had been so seriously drained that our people seemed incapable of moral ardor and of spiritual enthusiasm. Conscience was under the soporific influence produced by the war.

The churches shared in the lethargy, and nearly every society, large or small, was faced by a financial deficit. Deacons' courts were struggling to make both ends meet. Pastors' wives had to carry on as best they could with insufficient supplies. The pound was reduced to eight shillings and sixpence as a purchasing instrument. Church expenses were more than doubled. The overdraft at the Foreign Mission House was menacing, and all the signs pointed to an increase of it. Our people had not learned to think of their gifts to the work of God in the terms of the new and reduced value of money, and therefore it was only by a special effort that the situation could be effectively dealt with.

In this emergency our eyes were lifted to the hills from whence cometh our help, and God responded to our prayers and led us to call on our whole membership with one voice for 250,000 pounds—one-half of it to be spent on the foreign field, £100,000 of the other half to go to the fund for sustaining the ministry, £20,000 to go to the support of women's work, and the remaining £5000 to be used for furthering our evangelizing work in Europe.

That was the plan; but the unique feature was the complete union of the Foreign Mission organization and the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland in the task. They came together. They were of one mind. They worked with one heart, and the people offered willingly and with splendid self-sacrifice, so that they not only reached but passed the goal. For the first time in our history we have found complete unity—found it where it is always to be found: not in disputes, but in common and loving service for God and men. The magnificent success of this endeavor has fed our faith in God, in our mission and in our churches, and inspired us to step into the new year with high purpose, resolute will and inextinguishable enthusiasm.

The gathering in London in July last of the executives of the Baptist World Alliance, whilst of deepest interest to Baptists all over the world, was a special joy and inspiration to British Baptists. It was a delight to meet our fellow-workers from other countries, and to confer for nearly a week on the common and urgent task of carrying the gospel of the grace of God in its New Testament simplicity and strength to the peoples of Europe suffering as they do so gravely from the misrepresentations of the message of Christ given by a blinding and weakening ecclesiasticism. Brethren from the Southern and Northern states visited some of our churches, and the messages they gave us drew our hearts into cordial fellowship. As long as we live the memories of those meetings will abide a refreshing and gladdening inspiration.

The European work takes a new start. The unanimous and hearty appointment of Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke as our chief commissioner was felt to be the carrying out of the will of God: the Head of the church has appointed him; and we shall all pray that his special gifts and consecrated soul may be used by the eternal Spirit, that the word of the Lord may be glorified through his ministry.

It will be remembered that the Lambeth appeal of the 252 bishops of the Anglican Church for union ruffled the surface of our lives. I cannot say that our churches took a deep interest in it. Mostly it was felt that, whilst the entirely new spirit it breathed towards the Free Church of England was to be welcomed, it did not carry us far towards a larger fellowship—a fellowship in service outside the churches—than we today enjoy. So far as I can find, it does not discover any change in us. But it strengthens the conviction that if we are faithful—and we must be faithful to Christ our Master and the Head of the church—discussion will result in the illumination and confirmation of the principles we hold; of the interpretation we have given of the New Testament, and of the manifest teaching of the Spirit of Christ in history; and, at the present time, of (1) the exclusive supremacy of Christ in and over his church, (2) the precedence of truth and goodness over mechanical unity because truth and goodness are absolute values (but mechanical unity is only incidental), and (3) of the necessity of freedom for the individual, autonomy for each group of His disciples, and deliverance from all state control.

I learn that some of our American friends are fearful lest we should fail to "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free." I am not altogether surprised. England is not America. The Anglican Church is a great social institution. It is the church of the king and court. Within it are "the seats of the mighty." It leads in all our special national functions. For three centuries it has fostered the separation of Englishmen into two classes; "Churchmen," so-called, and Dissenters; and its influence is very powerful. But Baptists are rooted and

What Makes a Good Deacon?

Most all of us have known a man who was an ideal deacon. What was there about him that made him so good?

Boil the story down and tell us in the fewest possible words just what it was that made him so valuable to the church—that endeared him to you.

We are going to print a page some of these days, not giving the names, but telling of the qualities which have made men notable deacons. Tell us about the one you know.—The Editors.

grounded in the New Testament, and they know that "fidelity to conviction" is, as Lord Morley said years ago, "the mainstay of human advancement."

Our deepest need as British Baptists is the quickening of conscience as to our personal and collective obligation to lead our fellows into the conscious enjoyment of fellowship with God through Jesus Christ. We are evangelical, but insufficiently evangelizing. We affirm that we are put in trust of the gospel of Jesus Christ, but according to general testimony we are failing to discharge our trust with the zeal, the consecration and the thoroughness it demands. The complaint is widespread that the direct appeal to the will is not heard in our pulpits as it used to be. I cannot tell; I do not know. I only write of what I hear from many quarters—that men are not heard saying, Thou persuadest me to be a "Christian." There is reasoning, often most cogent, like that of the late Prof. Finney, which was directed to make the hearer feel that he was foolishly and wickedly illogical if he did not pass over to the side of God and cease from his rebellion against him; but it is followed by the powerful impact of the will on the personality of the hearer, leading him to bow at once to the claim of God and commit himself out and out to the Christian life.

But our work for the united fund has been associated with prayer and effort for a spiritual revival; and therefore we go forward grateful, dedicated and hopeful.

London.

"Ministry's Danger Line"

(Continued from page 10)

pact on all life, and without being able to make the application of religious truth to life problems in every sphere. If the minister of today wishes effectually to discredit himself and his church in the estimation of the man on the street, all he needs to do is to let it be known that the "religion" in which he is a "specialist" is not concerned with the practical solution of the vital moral and social problems of our common life. Here again the ministry crosses the danger line.

And, finally, what of the writer's statement that "the kingdom which Christ came to establish is a spiritual kingdom, and not a temporal or social one"? A spiritual kingdom it is indeed, involving the progressive triumph of Christ's spiritual principles among men. But a temporal kingdom it is also—not in the sense in which we speak of earthly powers as temporal, but in the very real sense that He came into the world and projected His kingdom in the sphere of time and time relationships. And a social kingdom it surely is, because His spiritual principles inevitably transform human society when given a working chance. And whatever may be the possible kingdom activities in "eternity beyond," certain it is that whatever contribution we may hope to make to the reign of Christ in this weary world, we shall have to make in this timely life.

The preacher's true message is twofold — salvation for the soul through Jesus Christ (individual), and salvation for the soul's environment through the operation of the principles of the same Saviour (social). As Pres. Faunce puts it so admirably in "The Social Aspects of Foreign Missions": "We shall supplement the evangelization of the individual by the preaching of a social gospel. We shall hold that Christianity is concerned not only with the transformation of single lives, but with the creation of a social atmosphere in which single lives can unfold in beauty and power. We shall conceive that our aim is not only to rescue certain souls from a wrecked world, but to save the wreck itself, repair its broken spars, and send it on a happier voyage. We shall hold that the growth of Christian character is vitally related to civic betterment, to medical attendance, to intelligent philanthropy, to honest public service. We shall hold that the good seed needs the good soil, that the individual Christian needs a Christian civilization around him if he is to 'bring forth an hundredfold' in moral and spiritual achievement."

The danger line for the ministry of today is not in consistent and legitimate emphasis upon this sort of a social gospel.

Riverside, Cal.

The Potter

He works with clay; as clay, he himself is worked

BY NELLIE G. PRESCOTT

THIS Potter is sitting in his little, dark, one-room shop in Hopo, South China, making red clay rice bowls. One is on the wheel in front of him and others, completed, are on the shelf at his side.

He is a good potter—careful and conscientious; but a glance tells us that he is acquainted only with the clay of earth. He does not know that as he molds the soft, damp mass into a useful vessel, so he might be fashioned by God's hand into a man with a purpose and vision of life.

He has never heard the gospel. He does not know the Christian message.

When, under the New World Movement, the 228 new foreign missionary families and the 176 young women are all at work, perhaps even the potters who are busy with the clay of the ground will hear that Jesus Christ is the Saviour and his Father the great Potter of the world.

"As the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O House of Israel."

New York City.

The Bulletin Board

The Gospel According to You

Rev. F. R. Meyer once said, "We (Christians) are either Bibles or libels."

"You are writing a gospel,

A chapter each day,

By deeds that you do,

By words that you say.

Men read what you write,

Whether faithless or true,

Say! what is the gospel

According to you?"

A Great Southern Church

Tentative plans have been drawn for the new meeting house of First Church, Dallas, Texas, which will be one of the largest in the South and perhaps in the country. The main auditorium will have two large balconies; the Sunday-school section alone will accommodate 5000, with B. Y. P. U. rooms seating 1200, large dining room and kitchen, parlors for socials, committee meetings, rest rooms, and other departments, which will be used for the comfort and convenience of the congregation. The building, when completed, will cover an entire block, including that part of the block now occupied by the present house of worship.

Christian Endeavor Anniversary

The Christian Endeavor Society will celebrate this year the fortieth anniversary of its organization. Dr. Francis E. Clarke has seen this society grow from its beginning in the Williston Church, Portland, Maine, until it, or other organizations founded on the same principle, is found in every part of the world. Dr. Clarke has done his work so modestly and tactfully that he has today the respect and confidence of the entire Christian world.

New Editor of Western Recorder

Dr. Victor I. Masters has been elected editor of the Western Recorder, Louisville, Ky., in place of Dr. J. W. Porter who has resigned in order that he may devote himself entirely to his church. Dr. Masters has done editorial work of a high order in the past and of late has been conspicuously successful as superintendent of publicity for the Southern Home Board. He began his work on Feb. 1.

English Baptist Seminaries

The investigation being carried on by a committee of the Northern Baptist Convention of the teaching in our theological seminaries is reflected somewhat in conditions in England, where, on the part of some bodies there exists a suspicion of the soundness of the teaching of others. For instance, the presiding officer of the Pastor's College connected with Spurgeon's Metropolitan Tabernacle, at the recent annual meeting of that organization, spoke in rather a pessimistic vein concerning the backsliding of other Baptist theological colleges, asserting that all eight of them are more or less penetrated with the higher criticism.

Presbyterian Salaries Rising

A committee of elders which has been conducting a salary increase campaign in the churches of Pennsylvania reported at the synodical session recently that in the last three years 436 Pennsylvania Presbyterian churches have advanced the pay of their ministers. The average increase in each church has been $460—a grand total of $225,000 every year. Home missionary salaries are rising, so that less than fifty are being paid less than $1200. Two hundred and fifty two out of 418 are receiving more than $1500.

Mrs. Asquith and President Wilson

In a recent magazine article containing further memoirs of Mrs. Asquith, the following reference is made to President Wilson: "I enjoyed hearing President Wilson at the luncheon given to him in the city on Dec. 28, 1918, more almost than anything I could have imagined. His is the kind of speaking I like best. Lord Hugh Cecil has white fire and is more brilliant and more elevated, but the President has a quality of his own which is impossible to put on paper. His refined, egotistical face, thin, slightly sensual mouth, and quiet but thrilling voice add to his unusualness."

When Dr. Watson Forgot

The following good story is found in one of our exchanges, although no source is given: "In the early years of his ministry, the late Dr. John Watson, known in literature as Ian Maclaren, determined to preach without manuscript. He would take into the pulpit but a single sheet of paper containing a few notes. Sometimes his memory would fail and he would say: 'Friends, this is not very clear. It was clear in my study on Saturday, but now I will begin again.' His congregation was very sympathetic, showing not the least impatience. One Sunday morning at the close of his sermon a gaunt highland elder said to him: 'When you are not remembering your sermon, just give out a psalm, and we will be singing while you are taking a rest, for we are all loving you and praying for you.' Many years afterward, Dr. Watson, then an eminent minister known widely in two hemispheres, declared: 'I am in the ministry to-day because of the tenderness and charity of those country folk, those perfect gentlemen and Christians!'"

Near East Relief Record for the Year

Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge, the treasurer of the Near East Relief, reported total receipts of $14,697,379.91 for the year at the annual meeting of the trustees held in New York Jan. 7. During the past year Armenians in America have contributed more than $1,000,000 through the committee for the assistance of their own people. They have brought to America between 2000 and 3000 of their relatives, sending $500,000 through the committee to be used as traveling expenses. Mr. Dodge stated that, including government flour, made available through Mr. Herbert Hoover and the American Relief Administration the total American relief operations in the Near East during the past year amounted to more than $30,000,000, and the total since the beginning of the organization is something more than $55,000,000.

The Devil Prevents Preaching

In a recent address before a state convention in the South, Dr. A. T. Robertson of Louisville, Ky., is quoted as saying that Gothic church architecture is an invention of the devil to prevent the effectiveness of preaching. It is, he said, "a wonderful success" in accomplishing this end.

Dr. Rushbrooke's Present Work

Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke, who was elected Baptist commissioner for Europe at the conference held in London last July, is undertaking his work with enthusiasm and encouragement. He hopes to do much to arouse the Baptists of the world to the need for the largest measure of fellowship with the Baptists of Europe, especially during these critical days. For the first few months in office he has been giving himself chiefly to the relief work, and is now giving some time to Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Hungary.

Dr. John Clifford Honored By the King of England

The King of England has conferred on Dr. John Clifford the order of Companion of Honour, which is given only for merit and valuable public service. There are only twenty-eight Companions of Honour in all the British Empire. Of this new mark of distinction for Dr. Clifford the "Baptist Times and Freeman" says:

"There is something peculiarly fitting in the bestowal of such a distinction on Dr. Clifford, for it is the recognition of an outstanding feature of his life and character. Throughout the whole of his long public life he has walked with honour as his companion. His life has been one of singular beauty in its self-sacrificing devotion to great causes. Few men have engaged in more or fiercer controversies, but even his bitterest opponents have never dared to attribute to him any selfish or unworthy motive. And no one has ever come to know him, however slightly, without learning to admire and to love him.

"In this gracious act of the King we may assume that Mr. Lloyd George has had a great part. He has been associated with Dr. Clifford in public life for many years, and though they have not always been in complete agreement, he has never failed to recognize his absolute sincerity and his dauntless courage. They have these qualities in common, and it must have been an unqualified pleasure to Mr. Lloyd George to pay this tribute to his comrade in many a great battle for freedom and for righteousness."

Foreign Mission Board Helps Europe

At the last meeting of the Foreign Mission Society board an additional $25,000 was appropriated for relief work in Europe. This makes a total of $75,000 appropriated for this work since November, and additional sums will be forwarded as contributed by the churches.

Moving Pictures in Church

Although there is debate as to the use of motion pictures in connection with church services, the use of them seems to be on the increase. Some testimony concerning the results is of interest. For instance, the First Presbyterian Church of Kalamazoo, Mich., has for a year been using motion pictures in connection with the evening service with the result that the auditorium, which seats between 1200 and 1300 people, has been unable to accommodate the crowds. According to the report, "more members have been received into the church, more children have been received into the Sabbath school, the gifts to the local church have been larger, and the gifts to missions greater than at any previous time."

Distinguished Guests from Abroad

Rev. C. E. Wilson, foreign secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society of England, Mr. Thomas Penny, a member of the board of that society, and Rev. Charles Padfield, a Baptist member of the Congo Bololo mission in Central Africa, reached New York recently. Immediately upon arriving in America, they were made the guests of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, which was in session at Garden City, Long Island, where they had opportunity to meet representatives of nearly all of the foreign mission agencies of this country.

Sec. Wilson, Mr. Penny and Mr. Padfield came to America for the special purpose of attending a conference on Jan. 21 and 22 in New York City, at which representatives of most of the foreign mission agencies at work in the Belgian Congo joined in the discussion of numerous practical questions affecting the work of all the societies.

Our English brethren will visit Richmond, Va., for a conference with members of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, and will also study the work of Hampton Institute, Virginia, with a view to securing suggestions with reference to the development of industrial training on the mission fields of Central Africa.

From Bible Examination Papers in India

Paul was let down in a basket from Jerusalem to Jericho.

God saw that Adam and Eve were perfectly happy in the Garden of Eden and he couldn't stand that, so he let in the serpent.

John the Baptist was clothed in the hairs of camels and ate worms.

Nabob planted a vineyard and put a fence around it; then he put a cherubim and serafim at the gate to keep out the cattle.

At first Moses did teacher work and then office work. One day he went to the Lord and asked him if he could have the job of leading out the children of Israel. But the Lord said: "No, Moses, I haven't any money to pay for that work." But Moses replied: "Lord these people are increasing by leaps and bounds and they need a bigger place." "Can't help that, Moses," said the Lord, "I just can't afford it." Then Moses said: "Oh never mind about the money, I have enough to live from hand to mouth, and I don't want any pay, I just want that work." Then to get rid of him the Lord let him do it. (Contributed by Mrs. E. N. Harris, Toun-goo, Burma.)

Conference on Christian Unity

From Feb. 2 to 4 a Christian Unity conference has been in session in the Second Baptist Church, St. Louis. The expectation has been that the attendance would exceed 1000 delegates, largely from the churches of the Middle West. This conference is unique in that it is strictly a Christian unity conference, being interdenominational, and each party having freedom to discuss the plans presented and the outlook for Christian co-operation. It includes movements for Protestant unity as well as movements for the unity of the whole church—Protestant, Anglican, Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholic. It likewise includes theological, ethical and social approaches, as well as approaches by polity. It is, beyond any doubt, the most comprehensive presentation of Christian unity that has ever been made, and it is no surprise that it has awakened such great interest.

Episcopal Church Rejoices

The Living Church has the following to say concerning the financial campaign conducted by the Episcopal Church: "Nearly one million dollars flowed into the church's national treasury during December!"

"In a statement issued early in December, the treasurer of the Presiding Bishop and council reported that on the first of December there was due on account of Nation-wide Campaign pledges for 1920 the sum of $1,124,128.

"The treasurer now announces that from Dec. 1 up to the close of business on Jan. 12 there was received on account of 1920 pledges about $925,000.

"Out of these receipts there has been paid on loans $305,000, or more than the amount borrowed during 1920 on current operating account, and a substantial working balance has been established to care for current disbursements.

"This is the most wonderful record that the American Church has ever made. It is the vindication of the Nation-wide Campaign. It is the demonstration of the fact that the heart of the Church is right. The church has resolved that the day of her pettiness has passed, and she has set out in dead earnest to do her real work in the world. No longer are we a church of detached or isolated parishes and dioceses. We are a vigorous, dignified national church."

You Can Rent Babies Now

Two American young women, doing welfare work in Poland under the Y. W. C. A., have "rented a baby" for six months, according to a letter just received from one of them at headquarters in New York. This novel action is the result of much thought on the part of the young women, they assure their friends. The mother of the baby could not afford to support the child during the winter, and as all asylums were full she was about to allow the child to be adopted when the Y. W. C. A. secretaries offered to take the child and pay for it until summer. The mother may be able to provide for it after that.

Closed Saloons and Open Colleges

"The closing of saloons is sending many young people to college." Thus declared William Jennings Bryan in a recent interview with a reporter for the Ohio State University Lantern. "Five years ago we spent three times as much money on intoxicating liquors as we did on education. A part of that money at least has been diverted to educational channels. Five years ago less than 10 per cent of all the pupils in the common grades entered high school, and not over 2 per cent ever went to college. If only 4 per cent now go to college, we can see why the university halls are filled to overflowing."

Intensive Survey in Buffalo

An intensive survey has recently been completed in Buffalo under the direction of the comity committee of the Buffalo Federation of Churches. The individual church was the unit of investigation and through the study, neighborhood by neighborhood, some interesting and important information was gathered. The total population of the sections studied is 158,000; of this number 136,000, or 86 per cent, are foreign-born or the children of foreign-born. It was also discovered that about fifty-four per cent of this entire population, or 85,000, were non-attendants at any religious service, Protestant, Catholic or Jewish. About 20,000 children, or 50 per cent of the estimated number of children of Sunday-school age in these sections, are not members of any Sunday school.

This condition is typical in all large cities and it is encouraging to know that the churches are beginning to realize that there is a city problem. Rev. E. H. Dutton, city missionary secretary of Buffalo, is chairman of the comity committee referred to above and Mr. H. R. Husted of the social service department of the Home Mission Society had active charge of the survey.

The Open Forum

THE SCIENTIST CANNOT HOLD HIS PEACE

I cannot let pass an extraordinary statement in a communication in THE BAPTIST of Dec. 18, 1920 (p. 1585), without a belated but earnest protest. The article, signed by J. W. Weddell, purports to be a contrast between what is called the "new theology" and the "old theology."

Item seven reads: "The new theology says that man is the product of evolution. The old theology says that man is God's special creation."

I had not thought it possible that there were educated people who still clung to the belief in the "special creation" of man. I presume that to be consistent Dr. Weddell also must believe in the "special creation" of every other living being. It would be passing strange if all animal life was the product of evolution up to the anthropoid apes and stopped there, leaving "special creation" for man alone.

I have taught anatomy and surgery for over forty years to several thousand students. It has been my life business to learn the truth and to teach it. The evidence from anatomy that the higher forms of life have developed during ages from the lower is absolutely incontrovertible. It is as convincing as the evidence for the Copernican system of astronomy, and I hardly think that anyone—barring Parson Jasper—still believes that the sun revolves around the earth.

One must always remember that the Bible is written, not in scientific language, but in popular language, just as even we say that "the sun rises in the east." Moreover, it is written in the highly imaginative form of the poetic East, rather than in the hard, matter-of-fact form of the more exact and prosaic West.

Copernicus published his new system in 1543. The old theology, ninety years later, compelled Galileo to renounce that system.

In 1553 the old theology burned Michael Servetus at the stake in Geneva. In 1903—350 years afterwards—an expiatory monument (on which appears our own Roger Williams) was erected in that same Geneva, the city of John Calvin.

Less than a month ago Prof. Michelson of Chicago announced that, by his new method, he has measured the brightest star in Orion and found it a sun 260,000,000 miles in diameter, while our pigmy sun boasts only 800,000 miles. The light now reaching our eyes from other suns so much more distant and probably even still far larger must have started on its earthward journey hundreds of thousands of years ago. But the old theology of Archbishop Ussher, in the middle of the seventeenth century, taught that the world was created in six literal days and only 6,000 years ago.

The editors of THE BAPTIST are not responsible for any opinions expressed by contributors to this department, and reserve to themselves the right to terminate any discussion whenever they may think best.—EDITORS.

The archeological discoveries also indicate the same conclusion. We have written records, over 6,000 years ago, which show a highly complex civilization. The relics of prehistoric man, which I have myself seen in the natural caves in southern France, depict animals extinct in western Europe ages ago, and must, therefore, go back many thousands of years earlier.

The geological record confirms the anatomical, the astronomical and the archeological evidence of the fallacy of the old theology in matters of science, if interpreted literally.

The new theology wisely accepts what is fully demonstrated. To try to set up today science as understood by the old theology is not only setting up what is false, but is alienating intelligent people from the church.

Philadelphia, Pa.

W. W. KEEN.

WALL STREET'S BROOM WILL NOT SWEEP BACK THE TIDE

IN THE BAPTIST of Jan. 15 the Wall Street Journal is quoted as saying that wages fell from $8 per day to $2 during the panic of '73. In the spring of '73—several months before the panic—the writer, then twenty-one, engaged his services to a brick yard for $1.75 per day of ten hours—hard labor at that—and continued to work until fall, and no cut was made in wages then or any time thereafter.

Directly after the great rebellion, wages were high. I think carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers, etc., received about $11 per day. This is nearly what wages for these trades are on the coast at this time. I have no recollection of how high laborers' wages did go, but I think the Journal is away above the mark.

The spirit displayed by this supposedly influential paper gets us nowhere. If said editorial represents the feelings and purposes of the constituency it aims to reach, the first step that should be taken is to restrict the franchise. It might model its operations somewhat after the "grandfather's clause" as adopted by our southern neighbors.

A second and important step to restore industrial peace would be to curtail our educational privileges, for beyond all question the ballot and the schoolteacher are the prime factors in making the difference between the worker of today and the worker of fifty years ago.

Limit the worker's knowledge to the ability merely to read and write, or even cut that out, and teach him to say his prayers with a string of beads under the direction of a state-paid clergy, and all will be "quiet on the Potomac" so far as labor goes. It will be a man's job to bring it about, however.

Sacramento, Cal. W. H. CONLIN.

"HIER STEHE ICH!"

If I may close for the defense—

I am sorry, as respects this thing we call the new theology, that I cannot say with some of my beloved brethren, Non est—there is "no such animal." He stalks abroad roaringly hereabouts; and conscientiously and courageously we preachers have got to meet him and withstand him or give up contending for the faith.

I am sorry, too, since I love peace and try habitually to be given to kindly speech, that I cannot, in this righteous contention which is thrust upon the ministry today, speak always gently and acceptably to all. But so be it.

Dr. Galusha Anderson, who was our teacher and guide in those good old days, was as strong a rhetorician as he was a theologian—it runs in the family, by the way—and he uttered his thunders calmly and courteously, like the Christian warrior-gentleman he was; but it was thunder all the same, and armed with forked lightning when he fought against error and for the revealed Word.

And so you will perhaps pardon one who aims at the truth if the doctrinal discriminations and antitheses in the twelve points in the issue of Dec. 18—partly my own and partly another's—be somewhat sharply drawn and swiftly put. It could scarcely be helped in such brief elliptical statements. It was spoken with directness, indeed, yet fraternally, "holding the truth in love."

We Baptists are the broadest people on the face of the earth, but, God helping us, we stay by the Book! Suppose we put it another way, for comparisons are always odious. Speaking not negatively, but positively and plainly, will it be agreeable to us all to say:

1. The Bible is the Word of God.
2. Jesus Christ is the Son of God.
3. The birth of Jesus was supernatural.
4. The death of Jesus was expiatory.
5. The life of Christ is mediatorial: the life he is living now at the right hand of the throne.
6. Christian life and character come down like the New Jerusalem from above, where Jesus is our Prophet, Priest and King.

(Continued on page 31)

The Chimney Corner

"A Hat for the Laundress, and—Something Else!"

MRS. Standish had her own idea about laundresses: they were women who washed and ironed your clothes down in the cellar, they cost you $3.00 a day, and you gave them a Christmas basket in December. That was as far as her thought about them ever went, until November, 1920, when Prissy took a hand.

For Prissy's mother "washed" for Mrs. Standish every Monday as regularly as the day came around, until one Monday when she was sick—much too sick to raise her head from the pillow. So Prissy rushed the other children off to school, and even tried to find someone to go in her mother's place to wash for Mrs. Standish; but, as all the world knows, Monday is a day when laundresses are not sitting around doing nothing—so there was no one to be found. Therefore Prissy brushed her hair neatly and wasted five minutes laboriously writing something on little pieces of paper. Over and over she did it, but it never came out right, so finally she took the best of the lot and set off for the Standish home. For a long time she had had things to say to the Lady of That House—things that could not be trusted through a telephone at a corner drugstore.

Mrs. Standish's house was the prettiest one on Pleasant Street, and as Prissy rang the door-bell she loved to think it was her own mother who kept the window curtains so white and crispy. Yet all the time her heart was pity-patting against the yoke of her calico dress; and when the door opened she spoke to the maid in what can best be described as an "ingrowing" voice.

"I would have speech mit Mrs. Standish," she said, bobbing her head politely, "if you should to give her my calling-card," and she handed in her little square of ruled paper.

One regrets to state that the maid snickered at sight of its inadequacy. But Prissy looked at her sternly, saying, "Sooner she gets the card, she will to see me!" And she walked bravely indoors, as if she had come hundreds of times before.

Upstairs, Mrs. Standish took the piece of paper and read: "Miss Priscilla Alden Sin-," and, turning it over, found the ending on the other side: "-oski." She carried the paper down to the library, where Prissy rose and bowed.

"My mother, she couldn't to come for washings today. She's got a hot all over her, but sooner I tucks her back in bed she makes sleepings. It is better so, yes?"

Mrs. Standish waved the piece of paper: "And is this your name?" she asked.

Prissy nodded: "I am too long a name to fit on one side of the card—Priscilla

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Alden Sinoski, I am. And I thought you should to know that we had come over, too."

"Come over?" Mrs. Standish repeated, rather puzzled; "come over where?"

"Why to America!" Prissy said, "in boats, like Myles Standish done. Didn't you to remember he was among the first immigrants on America?"

"Immigrant?" gasped Mrs. Standish. "Why, my dear child, you're crazy! If my husband could hear you calling his ancestors immigrants—"

Prissy looked at her soothingly: "O lady, it might be worsen, much worsen. Why, I am immigrant myself, didn't you know? You tell Mr. Standish it's all right when you get used to it. Only we come from Poland, not England."

Mrs. Standish swished her skirts: "But, my dear, we've been Americans 300 years before you ever left Poland."

Prissy clutched the arms of her chair and said the thing she had come to say: "But I am Americans, too, Mrs. Standish, and I want you should be Americans with my mother more harder. She got a big lonely sooner she goes out to do washings. All day long she is down in American cellars: she makes fine washings on American clothes and she eats American foods—but she ain't got no likings for America, and I want she should be Americans as proud as I am. All times she got only a big hate. Mrs. Standish, lady, you are the politest Americans she knows, so could you be more American mit her, please?"

Mrs. Standish simply stared: "Well, of all things!" she gasped. "What a comical child you are, Priscilla Alden Sinoski. Tell me, how did you get the first part of your name?"

Prissy sparkled like a case of lovely jewels: "Sooner I comes on America we live in a town where they got a place called a Christian center. Come Thanksgiving Day they gives a party on everybody in the neighborhood, and they reads a poem by a gentlemans named Longfellow, and the children were dressed up for actings the poem. Und suddenly there ain't nobody for being Priscilla. 'Where have she went?' they keep saying, und I was chose, quick! You should to see me, lady, mit a gray dress und a big white hanky round my neck like it was a shawl, und buckles-from-silver on my shoes, und a little white bonnet-from-cotton on my head. Und John Alden und Myles Standish both asked me for being their wife. Me, mind you! Well, I most died, from happy! So I ain't never had no lonely in America since I learnt how those first Americans was immigrants just like me, und made sailings away from their old country for finding liberty und safety just like why we left Poland. I made myself be named Priscilla Alden ever since."

"Was that in this city?" Mrs. Standish asked.

"But no," sighed Prissy, "that was before my father began dying. When he finally did it, then we comes on this here town so my big bruder could do workings in a factory. My next-to-the-big bruder, he got himself made soldier for fightings in your war, und he died. In France, that was. So my mother she don't get no likings for America like she should. For my big bruder he talk all times about moneys; but say, you should see the kids! We play Prissy Alden all times what I ain't working. Jan, he's John Alden, und Nicky, he's Myles Standish. We play coming over—in the tub, you know; und I've learned them well that America's the land what makes immigrants into Americans, sooner they loves it."

Mrs. Standish found herself saying, "Priscilla, just what would you like me to do?"

Prissy beamed as if all the wishes in the world were coming true: "O, please, I want you should buy my mother a hat-from-velvet; here's the money all saved," and Prissy untied a corner of her handkerchief, displaying three crumpled dollar bills. "I want you should please get it a stylish hat, mit feathers to wave on top. All times she wears shawl on her head like she never get over being immigrant. Come Thanksgiving Day I have give my word how my mother und the kid should sit in your church und make thanks to God for giving us America."

"I'd love to buy the hat," Mrs. Standish assured her, "and, now, surely you want something yourself."

Prissy wriggled uneasily: "It's a silly something," she sighed, "but I heard tell how your church gives a thing called a pageant come Thanksgiving Day, for to show the landing of the Pilgrims. I heard tell how the children in the Sunday school is to make actings, und O—O, how I would be Prissy Alden all over again."

Mrs. Standish was embarrassed: "But, Priscilla, in a little New England town like this so many of us are actually descended from Pilgrims that this pageant is to be given only by children whose ancestors came over in the 'Mayflower'—"

Prissy interrupted passionately, "But ain't I said it: We come over, too, lady!

We ain't been born 300 years ago to make sailings on the 'Mayflower,' but sooner we hears of America we come in a big—yes, a bigger, quicker, finer boat than the 'Mayflower,' too."

So all Mrs. Standish could do was to ask the committee about it, and a woman descended from Elder Brewster said enthusiastically, "O, do let's have her! Why, she's more American than any of us!"

And that's how it happened that Prissy of Paradise Alley was a star in the Pilgrim's pageant on Thanksgiving Day along with all the New England children from Pleasant Street. Mrs. Sinoski sat in the very front row, wearing her hat-from-velvet, and one could see for oneself that the "lonely" seemed to have oozed away. For she had suddenly discovered that once upon a time all these other people had been new in America, too. A little matter of 300 years' difference in time simply did not matter, Prissy said. And surely Prissy must know, for she had been a father and a mother and a general manager to the Sinoskis for a good many years.

Every woman knows that friendliness is the source of contentment. And Mrs. Sinoski had found it.

The Young Reserves

The Log of the Flying Pig

I THINK it was half way between meat and dessert that I began noticing things. There were certainly mysteries in the air! I could hardly wait until father rolled up his napkin and took his last sip of water, as he always does—even on occasions like this when something was certainly brewing, as they say in novels. When we finally pushed back our chairs, I tore out into the hall and cornered Bill on his way upstairs, and said in an agony of suspense, suspense (how do you spell it, anyhow?), "Well, didn't you notice anything?"

"Notice anything?" he repeated. Bill is very bright—in school. I often wonder that he doesn't shine more in conversation. He's at least a year older than I am, but no one would ever notice it in general ways, although he may be a speck taller and weigh an ounce or two more.

It didn't take me long to find that he hadn't noticed a thing—not one thing, although there had been spoils all through supper that had been very odd.

"You are all stomach at meal-time," I said severely. "Even your eyes are stomach."

"Well, now, Miss Detective," he said peevishly (as if he had a fever, you know), "what have you been noticing that's so strange?"

I might say right here that Bill and I play detective a great deal together. It's what he's going to be when he grows up, so we thought this youthful training would be valuable. I shall be able to help him until I get married, of course. Or maybe I won't even get married, if nobody asks me. That will be sad, but I shall try to make a new name for myself "detecting." There are a surprising number of details that only a woman sleuth can discover—as, for example, during our supper, when Bill had noticed nothing.

Well, there are two doors into our dining room, so I led Bill to the door we hardly ever use. Opening it a crack, I whispered into his ear: "Now, what about the side-board?"

He craned his neck to see the old buffet, and then he gave a low whistle.

"Empty!" he said in a stage whisper; "all the silver gone, tea-pot and everything! O—but maybe Agony is cleaning it?"

I smiled. I admit it was a superior smile. "Maids do not clean the silver at supper-time, but in the morning after breakfast."

"Do you mean to say you think it's been stolen?" he hissed excitedly. "Then why didn't mother and father notice it was gone? Or old Agony herself—surely she would have missed it, for there was a good bit of it, you know."

"Of course I know," I said calmly, "and I'm very much afraid that mother and father know, too. There's more in this than meets the eye, Bill! For if it had been stolen, surely they would show some sort of excitement, wouldn't they?"

"Uh-huh," Bill agreed, all ears.

"Well, they didn't. Father munched his supper just as usual, and mother talked. But did you notice anything unusual in the way they talked?"

Bill shook his head: "I give you my word, Peggy, I never noticed a thing."

I groaned. "You're deteriorating," I sighed (don't you dote on long new words? I do!) "You may even get gout, Bill, like the gentlemen in novels who eat too much. However, the curious thing is that mother and father would start sentences and then never finish them—just let them trail off. And when dessert came Agony passed the china cream and sugar things, and father said, 'O! I see you had to pawn the silver dishes after all? Then mother said, 'S'sh!' Didn't you notice that?"

"No," sighed Bill. "I was just hoping no one would see me pile on the sugar."

"Ah, me," I said gently, but lovingly. Boys are so dense!

Then Bill groaned. "Peggy," he said solemnly, "he's bankrupt! That's what's the matter. Bankrupt! And mother's pawned the silver. Isn't that what you think?"

"I'm afraid s-so!" I stammered. But suddenly I wasn't nearly as sad about it as Bill seemed. It sounded so romantic to be bankrupt! I made little pictures of myself going to school wearing the raggiest kind of rags, and being rescued by somebody dressed to look like King Cophetua in a picture we have on the nursery wall.

But Bill is intensely practical—men are, you know, even when they are just boys; and he said bravely that as far as he was concerned he wasn't going to let father flounder in financial difficulties—his very words. Wasn't that a beautiful way to put it? It made me cry—it sounded so stalwart and strong.

"We will empty our banks," said Bill, "and take the money to father. Then tomorrow I'm going to find a job somewhere. Luckily school is over, all but one day more, which I can cut."

"But you aren't old enough to work," I objected. "Mother's on the child labor committee, and I know for a fact that all children must be at least fourteen before they can work, and you're only—"

"S'sh! Forget it," Bill said gruffly. "What difference do a few years make, more or less, when my family is pawning silver heirlooms to feed me? Me! Why feel my muscle, Peggy Hathaway."

I felt it. It was wonderful—for one so young, I mean. I couldn't help crying again.

Then we went upstairs to get our banks. They are the unfortunate iron kind that are awfully hard to open. Bill broke a nail file first and then bent father's best screw-driver while wedging his own bank apart. Mine was somewhat easier to open. All told, we had $4.11 the first time we counted it, and $3.86 the second time we counted it. So many slippery pennies made it confusing, you see. We put everything in a small white wash basin and carried it downstairs to father.

He and dear mother were talking in low tones on the sofa, but they stopped instantly as we came in. I might add that Timothy was in bed, of course. He is only four, but we are very, very fond of him, and he will figure largely in this story later on.

Well, when I saw dear mother and father on the sofa I nearly dropped my half of the basin. It was really very heavy, being mostly pennies. Of course Bill was to do the talking.

"Father," he began, clearing his throat. "Peggy and I—," and then poor Bill broke down and choked.

Dear mother looked so puzzled and so very beautiful. She inspired me to take the heavy basin and put it in her lap. "It's money for the housekeeping budget," I said in a thin un-Peggyish voice. "We don't want you ever to pawn another thing."

Well, mother looked at father, and father looked at mother. And then—they laughed. Mercy, how they did laugh! And it ended by my sitting in mother's lap, while Bill sat in father's, so they could tell us the real secret. They said it was the last time they would ever try to have secrets from us—we were too dreadfully clever and observing. (Wasn't that complimentary of them?)

And it was the jolliest secret possible. They had meant to spring it on us the day after school closed that we were going away on a most unusual vacation—

(Continued on page 31)

The Devotional Life

Life

WONDER why we come to earth,
Why the mystery of birth,
Why the days of living breath
And the majesty of death?
It is not for gold or raim;
Not alone for toil or game;
And sometimes it seems to me
That this trip through life must be Ordered so that we may know
One another here below.

Life's a get-acquainted spell;
A chance to know your brothers well.
It's a round of days and years
Filled with laughter gay and tears,
And of struggling towards a goal,
As a trial for the soul.
Here we come to learn of men;
Here we come to see them when
They are at their best and worst.
Angels must be humans first.

Life's a get-acquainted trip,
And the world a mighty ship
Plunging on through storm and shine
To some destination fine.
Here we live and strive and grow
So that we may come to know
One another and be friends;
And at last, when living ends,
He has nobled served God's plan
Who has served his fellow man.

Get acquainted with your kind!
Open both your heart and mind.
Stretch to them a helpful hand,
Know them well and understand
What it is they seek afar,
And you'll find how fine they are.
Do not live your life alone.
Know your neighbor and be known,
And, remember, night and day
Angels grow in mortal clay.

—Edgar A. Guest.

A Prayer for Today

ABOVE all, that I may not be a coward.
That I may have courage—courage to be unmoved by the uncertainties of life, and without dread of loss, whether of friends, of health or of fortune. That I may come with a firm and a tranquil mind to the work of this day, fearing nothing—ready to meet bravely failure or deprivation.

That I may bring to the day's efforts good humor and a cheerful regard for all with whom I may come in contact. That I may not judge others hastily or with bitterness. That I may not be grasping, but content with a fair share of this world's goods, willing to let others have theirs. That I may be diligent in the performance of duties and cheerful in manner. That I may be earnest in the pursuit of right. That I may stand with open mind ready to receive the truth in small affairs and in large—whether in learning new and better methods, or in receiving that philosophy necessary to a brave, tranquil, well-poised, well-harmonized life.—John Brisbin Walker.

This Is Victory

WHEN you are forgotten or neglected, or purposely set at naught, and smile inwardly because you are counted worthy to suffer for Christ; when your good is evil spoken of and your wishes crossed, to take it in patient, loving silence; when you are content with your food, your raiment, your climate, your society, your own circumstances;
when you can truly love to be unknown and can forget your own services and achievements; and when you can stand face to face with the faults, imperfec-tions and spiritual insensibility of others, and endure it all as Christ endured it,
this is victory."

Faces in the Clouds

IN ONE of the German picture galleries is a painting called "Cloud-land." It hangs at the end of a long gallery; and at first sight it looks like a huge, repulsive daub of confused color, without form or comeliness. As you walk toward it the picture begins to take shape. It proves to be a mass of exquisite little cherub faces, like those at the head of the canvas in Raphael's "Madonna San Sisto." If you come close to the picture,

My Purpose

REMEMBERING in this anniversary year that the first immigrants to America came seeking freedom and equality even more than wealth, and that the noblest heritage which they have bequeathed to us in their democratic attitude and spiritual faith, I hereby declare my steady purpose:

To seek to understand better the various national and racial inheritances of which our newer Americans are justly proud, and to cooperate with them in contributing the worthiest elements of all the past to the new America that is in the making.

To improve every opportunity for friendly, personal relations with my fellow citizens of other race or religion, and to help forward, in every possible way, their understanding of our American language, traditions and ideals.

To cooperate through study, prayer and personal conduct, in demonstrating that the practice of the principles and spirit of Jesus Christ in all human relationships is the surest way of securing real democracy in our own land and peace and good will among all men everywhere.

you see only an innumerable company of little angels and cherubim. How often the soul that is frightened by trial sees nothing but a confused and repulsive mass of broken expectations and crushed hopes! But if that soul, instead of fleeing away into unbelief and despair, would only draw up nearer to God, it would soon discover that the cloud was full of angels of mercy. In one cherub face it would see: "Whom I love, I chasten."
Another angel would say: "All things work together for good to them that love God." In still another sweet face the heavenly words are coming forth: "Let not your hearts be troubled: believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions. Where I am, there shall ye be also."—Cuyler.

Utterance

CONDEMNED for silence? Yes, ah yes!
Unspoken words have no redress;
For who must bear this awful cost:
God sent a word, and it was lost!

O, be not mine reluctant speech,
To warm, to cheer, to guide, to teach;
Nor may I selfishly withhold
My grain of truth's unminted gold.

Not lightly, rashly would I speak,
Nor waste the words through purpose weak;
But e're sincerely would I say
The truth I live, from day to day.

Past is the prophet age of power?
Nay, truth unfolds like leaf or flower,
And oft through humblest instrument
Are God's new revelations sent.
If any word thou sendest me,
O God, let me speak it clear for thee;
If none, then silence; but my prayer
Is to be listening, listening e'er.

—James Buckham.

Salvation

THIS salvation about which many are so strangely careless, is the great work that has engaged God from the counsels of eternity and will engage him to the end of time. And how should men labor for an end that is of such value in God's eyes! To be saved and sanctified ourselves, and to be also the instruments of saving others—of plucking brands from the burning, this is especially and emphatically the work of the Lord, one in which men are called to be fellow-workers with God—the true business of their life, in which they are to abound in all circumstances and seasons.—Thomas Guthrie.

"If we succeed without suffering, someone has suffered before us; if we suffer without succeeding, it is because someone will succeed after us."

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for February 20

"The Wise and The Foolish Virgins"
Matt. 25:1-13. Golden Text: Matt. 25:13

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

Two chapters intervene between the lesson on citizenship and this lesson. Matthew 23 is given entirely to analysis and anathema of the Pharisees. Jesus departs from parable and speaks in plain words against the irredeemable spirit of pharisaism. Chapter twenty-four groups together, according to Matthew's method, the eschatological sayings of Jesus. Beginning with reference to the impending destruction of Jerusalem, Jesus speaks of different consummations taking place between the judgment on Jerusalem and the end of the age. Then follow three parables, one of which constitutes the text of this lesson. The three parables are designed to emphasize the practical side of the predictions found in chapter twenty-four. The parable of the virgins is designed to stress the necessity for forethought and preparation in meeting crises and emergencies; the parable of the talents is designed to emphasize the necessity for industrious fidelity to duty in view of the things revealed in chapter twenty-four; and the parable of the sheep and the goats is a vivid picture of the principle of service which will govern the rewards and penalties of the final judgment.

The Lesson Taught

Wisdom and folly are dramatized by the ten virgins who joined in the festive wedding procession.

Wisdom

"Five of them were wise." The emphasis is upon the adjective. The question naturally arises: "In what did the wisdom of the wise virgins consist?" A casual study will reveal the three things which marked the wisdom of the five wise virgins. First, it was the wisdom of forethought: "But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps." That is to say, they not only filled the small lamp with oil, but carried a supply of oil in another vessel to replenish the lamp from time to time as needed. Like the modern motorist who starts on an overland journey and sees that his machine is equipped with extra tires, tools are all in place, and the engine well supplied with gas and oil, so these wise virgins considered the emergencies that were likely to arise and provided to meet them. That is the practical side of the "doctrine of the second coming of Christ." Believers in it should be marked by such wisdom of forethought that no emergency would find them unprepared. Second, it was the wisdom of preparation. The forethought led to action. They provided resources for the time of need. Their wisdom was practical because it found expression in preparation. If the bridegroom tarried, if he did not come as quickly as they had reason to hope, they would not be disappointed, and they would not be caught unprepared. Believers in the second coming of Christ should be the most resourceful of Christian people, because while they wait for his coming their lamps are trimmed and burning, lighting the darkness around them and guiding the traveler on his way. If they missed the bridegroom altogether, they would probably find later that inasmuch as they lighted the path of a little child they had done it unto him. Third, it is the wisdom of conservation. It looked like selfishness on the part of the wise virgins to refuse to share with their less fortunate sisters whose lamps were going out for want of oil; but it was not selfishness: it was sagacity. The wise virgins believed in the wisdom of conservation. To share with the "slacker" student your preparation for class work or examination is to do him an injury. Some things are non-transferable. Responsibility is one of them. The wise virgins were wise in refusing to "prop up" the tottering folly of the foolish virgins.

Folly

In what did the folly of the foolish virgins consist? First, in unreasonable reliance upon a speeding-up process. They reasoned that the bridegroom would come quickly, and hence that there was no necessity for laying by resources, making careful preparation, and using the utmost conservation. It was enough for them to fill the lamp with oil. They could see no necessity for burdening themselves with an extra oil vessel. Possibly they rebuked the wise virgins and charged them with denying the promise of the coming of the bridegroom. Paul had to write a second letter to the Christians at Thessalonica to correct them and to direct them away from the folly of the foolish virgins. It is a great temptation to some people to neglect the oil while they wait for the fireworks—to neglect the hard work and sacrifice of producing Christlike men and creating a Christlike social order in the world while waiting for some speedy winding-up of affairs by the sudden appearance of Christ in person. Second, in taking a gambler's risk instead of honestly providing the resources. The chances were in favor of the speedy coming of the bridegroom. Then why go to the trouble and expense of taking oil in their vessels with their lamps? The very element of risk involved heightened the thrill of the experience. If their calculations proved true, then they would be the wise virgins. Third, in vainly hoping that if the worst came their resourceful friends would assist them in the emergency.

What is the conclusion of the whole matter? "Watch, therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour." The element of uncertainty in time should lead to the element of certainty in preparation. When the world war closed, America was preparing to carry it on for ten years if necessary. The very element of uncertainty as to how long it might last led the allies to renewed diligence in making preparation for a long period of warfare. That is the lesson of the parable. The day and hour of Christ's return are unknown; but the marching orders of Christ are not unknown:—"Therefore go ye and make disciples of all nations."

Sunday-School Lessons for Adults

By F. F. PETERSON

TWO facts should be kept in mind in teaching adults: First, they are interested in the Christian principles in the lesson, and, second, they desire to know the modern application of these principles. They need to realize that the truth is not foreign to modern home, social, business and religious life. It is therefore the concern of the teacher to make dominant these ideas and their results.

One class spent three years in studying the life of Christ from a harmony of the gospel. This was followed by a year devoted to the Acts of the Apostles, six months to Hosea and Amos, and a year to Romans. The date, subject of the lesson, leading questions and Scripture passages for each quarter were printed on cards which could be slipped into the vest pocket. The following is an example of such a plan, worked successfully in a class numbering 650 men.

April 2—"Christ and the Sabbath": What was the original purpose of the Sabbath? What was Jesus' attitude and teaching? What is our duty to the Sabbath? References: Gen. 2:2, 3; Ex. 31:13-17; Mark 2:27; Luke 13:10-17.

April 9—"Christ and the Pleasures of Life": Did Christ forbid or encourage pleasures? What is right and wrong in amusements? What is the duty of the individual Christian and the church in this matter? References: Matt. 6:33; 9:14-15.

May 21—"What Does Christ Mean to Me?" A symposium. The session of May 21 concluded the study in the life of Christ and was most helpful.

The Sunday school should have a great compassion for the vast number of men and women without God or hope in the world. Here is an open field for largest service to the King.

(To be continued next week)

Young People's Work

Topic for February 20

New Work Our Committee May Do
Revelation 3: 7-13

Committees in the young people's society are a good thing provided they are not "standing" committees. The discussion of this topic will reveal the weaknesses of the society organization and furnish opportunity for the presentation of larger activities. New work our committee may do! Which committee? Is it—

1. The program committee? While not wholly new, the committee should set itself to the task of preparing well in advance an adequate devotional and educational program for the society. The large number of failures of the past may rightly be marked up against this committee. If the committee is not equipped for the task, a few weeks' study of a B. Y. P. U. manual will help.

2. The educational committee? The B. Y. P. U. or young people's society of whatever name should be the training camp of the church. The Sunday school needs trained teachers and workers. Start a teacher training class; enlist members of the society in the Baptist trained leaders' course; ask the pastor to lead in a discussion of Baptist principles and history; and put several new books in the library of the society.

3. The missionary committee? Make the largest possible use of the new missionary topics; institute a mission study class; write to Dr. W. A. Hill, secretary of the department of missionary education, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City, for leaflet of missionary libraries; inform the young people concerning the great missionary objectives of the denomination as put forth in the New World Movement.

4. The social committee? Plan something more than spinning the plate or dropping the handkerchief. Order a copy of "Ice Breakers," by Edna Geister, or some other good book on socials, and have something really interesting and new. Reorganize the welcoming and visitation work of the committee and make it effective. Make a study of the social affairs of community life and try to discover how they are affecting the religious life of the young people of the church.

5. The music committee? Reform needed here! More than reform—a revolution! Turn over to the sexton of the church a lot of the trashy song books used up to this date. They will make splendid kindling material for church fires. Purchase copies of "The Hymnal for American Youth," by Augustine Smith. Do not always sing "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," for it is quite possible that some of the members with an over-supply of energy will not only attempt to brighten their own corner, but some one else's corner as well.

Rally at Fresno, California

On Friday evening, Dec. 17, at the First Church, Fresno, there was a fine rally of Baptist young people from the San Joaquin Valley Association. Enthusiasm? Of course! Numbers? "Five Hundred," they said. Pre-Christmas doings are powerless to distract such a group of buoyant young Christians. Dr. John Freeman Mills and his societies were excellent hosts. After the yells and stunts, Pres. M. L. Askin dispatched important business in good order. Pastor Mills spoke a word of welcome. Director Millard L. Thomas conducted the devotional exercises on the subject of "Winning to Christ," showing the place which religious education holds in evangelism.

Dr. John Snape, pastor of the First Church, Oakland, was the orator of the occasion. He was witty, optimistic and

(Continued on page 31)

First Baptist Church, Tacoma, Washington.
B.Y.P.U. "KID" PARTY

October 22, 1921

Our Own Folks

North Dakota Letter

By FRED E. STOCKTON

North Dakota Baptists had an interesting and inspiring week from January 9 to 16 inclusive. For three days of the week the pastors and field men were brought together at Grand Forks. Three things were undertaken.

Religious Education

From Sunday to Tuesday inclusive, Dr. T. S. Young, national director of church vacation schools and week-day religious education, assisted by Rev. C. S. Osborne of Churidan, Iowa, conducted an intensive training school in this field. This was the first school of its nature held within our convention territory. Not only the Baptist churches, but those of other persuasions enjoyed the instruction of its sessions. The average attendance for the three days was nineteen. Sixteen persons attended ten or more hours. The interest increased constantly, so that we have good reason to believe that one or more vacation schools will be held in Grand Forks, and throughout the state. Definite steps have already been taken to procure time for week-day religious education within school hours. A second school was held at Fargo from Friday afternoon to Sunday afternoon of the same week. The attendance here was not so large, but we closed the sessions with the assurance that here also the vacation Bible school has gained friends. We are sure that the visit of Dr. Young and Mr. Osborne will prove of abiding worth, and has made the development of this work so much the easier for Rev. E. Wiese, the state director of religious education.

Missionary Conference

One entire day was given over to the consideration of our missionary task and opportunities today. Special speakers for this day were Dr. R. M. West of the General Board of Promotion and Dr. A. M. Petty, district representative of the Board of Promotion, and Rev. John Alexander Frey of Riga, Latvia. The day was full of inspiration and information along the lines of our missionary activities. Mr. Frey is to remain in North Dakota for about one month, visiting many of our fields and speaking about religious and social conditions in Russia today. He is being greeted by large audiences.

Evangelism

The last day of the conference—which was the retreat proper for the pastors and state workers—was under the direction of Dr. H. F. Stilwell, superintendent of the department of evangelism of the Home Mission Society. In many ways the week came to its climax during this day. Dr. Stilwell was assisted by Dr. R. M. West, who spoke on matters pertaining to the department of life work. Dr. West remained in Grand Forks over Sunday, preaching in the First Church, and on Friday and Saturday meeting many university students in conferences on the subjects of life work, and speaking at meetings of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.

Reports are coming in to the office from the pastors as they return to their work, giving expression of their enthusiasm over the inspiration received from the days spent together in the retreat and conference. We feel that better work will be done and each worker will be able to realize better the task of the whole denomination. The pastors of the state, by formal resolution, expressed their sincere appreciation for the co-operation of the societies and the messages brought to the conference by the several speakers.

Colorado Letter

By W. F. RIPLEY

There is an evident quickening of interest in Bible-school and young people's work throughout the state, occasioned by the coming of Rev. L. I. Hanson from the Portage Street Church, Kalamazoo, Mich., as the director of religious education. He has visited a number of churches and has met with a most cordial reception. Constructive plans are being formulated for the development of this important branch of our denominational work.

Building Enterprises

Necessity knows no law. Hence a number of our churches are meeting imperative needs.

At Ordway, where Rev. J. Sheridan Bunch has done a most aggressive work for the past thirteen months, the congregation recently entered a basement which will serve as the first story of the main auditorium of the completed building.

Pastor Huckleberry at Las Animas has led the church at that place in the construction of a basement which was used for the first time on Jan. 2. That church now has the most adequate equipment it has possessed in all its history.

At Brighton, where a church was recently organized under the leadership of Chapel Car Evangelist Blinzinger, the building enterprise goes forward with great promise. The new pastor, Rev. J. L. Hedblom, confidently expects the completion of a well-equipped building in the near future.

Still other churches are just at this time diligently consulting architects and studying plans with a view to the erection of buildings in the near future.

Evangelistic Efforts

The church at Boulder has recently closed an excellent meeting. The pastor, Rev. John Skeen, had the assistance of Rev. Mr. Parker of LaPorte, Ind., as assistant in the music. Sixty-seven additions are reported, including many students and a number of the faculty of the state university.

State Evangelist Starring has just closed a good meeting at Ault and is now engaged with Pastor Lane at Grand Junction. He goes next to Fort Morgan.

State Evangelist Steadman is holding a meeting at Hooper, Rev. W. A. Goudie, pastor.

The church at Delta has had the assistance of Rev. Truman A. Varnadore in special meetings. A large number of additions are reported.

The First Church, Colorado Springs, and the First Church, Pueblo, are both stressing evangelism, looking to the Easter season as a time when special effort for an ingathering will be made. Many of the churches are reporting frequent conversions and baptisms.

Promotion Work

A number of the young people's societies are studying the Survey.

On Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 a missionary conference was held with the First Church, Denver. Mrs. Peabody, Dr. Brooks and Rev. W. H. Bowler were the principal speakers. The attendance, the spirit, the addresses and the fellowship of the conference were excellent. It is the general feeling that a real impetus was given to our denominational program. Later in the season conferences will be held at Delta, Pueblo and at least two other points.

Sunny Southern California

By FRANK DURHAM

Of all the pictures that adorn the walls of our homes, perhaps the ones that claim our interest most often and hold us longest before them are those of people. The strength, the grace, the charm of personality, is unfailing, and living, acting folks are ever the interpreters of life. So I am presenting some of "Our Own Folks" in this letter.

Dr. Selden W. Cummings

Having just rounded out an eight-year pastorate with the First Church of Pasadena, Dr. Cummings now goes to Boston as pastor of the Ruggles Street Church. The Pasadena pastorate has been greatly blessed of God, and 700 members have been received into the fellowship. The growth of the church and Sunday school has made it necessary to enlarge the plant, and plans for enlargement are already laid and will be carried out in the near future. Dr. Cummings has also stood among the foremost leaders in every movement for the benefit of the community, he has been in the councils of our state convention, and he has rendered valuable service as a member of the General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention.

If the writer might speak a personal word from an experience of some years as an associate of Dr. Cummings at Pasadena, it would be to say that the members of the church have loved their pastor and followed him loyally. He never spared himself when he could render anyone a service; he carried his people on his heart; and in his preaching he kept close to the great central truths of Scripture, seeking always to exalt Christ and present him as Saviour.

At a recent meeting of the ministers' conference in Los Angeles, Dr. Cummings spoke helpfully to us. Many expressed sincere regret for our loss, while all rejoiced that he is following a deep conviction as he takes up his new work. Such a man can come to us, but he cannot entirely go from us. His helpful spirit will abide with us here, though his work is henceforth on the other side of the continent.

Resolutions adopted by the church make the following reference to Dr. Cummings: "Since his coming to Pasadena he has won a secure and enduring place in the affectionate regard of the membership by his uniform, genial and warm-hearted Christian courtesy and by his generous and sympathetic ministry to the sick, the sorrowing and the needy. * * * We honor him for his staunch loyalty to the Holy Scriptures as the word of God and to the fundamental principles of the church of Jesus Christ as set forth therein. * * * With deep regret we contemplate the loss of his wise counsel and energetic aid in connection with the new building enterprise which now confronts us. * * * We would not omit the faithful and self-sacrificing work of the wife of our pastor, who has proved herself a helpmeet indeed, sharing in large measure in his pastoral work and in the activities of the church. * * * We feel that in yielding to the appeal of our sister church we are giving up one of the ablest pastors in our denomination."

Dr. Augustus H. Strong

Among the many stirring experiences which reward those who attend the Los Angeles ministers' conference on Monday mornings, none have lifted us to greater heights than that on Jan. 10. Dr. Strong, whose long life of service shines with such brightness, and whose influence through the Rochester Theological Seminary has set the truth of Christ so clearly before many students, now belongs to the whole denomination and to the kingdom at large as a kind of patriarchal leader among us. He was introduced as the speaker of the morning and gave a lecture-sermon on Psalm 138:2: "Thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name." Pointing out that "name" stands for God's manifestation of himself in nature, while his "word" is the revelation given through persons, Dr. Strong gave some illuminating contrasts: Scripture and nature; grace and law; a personally conducted universe as against impersonal laws; and Christ as God's last and complete Word in the revelation of himself to man.

The address was given with that perspicuity and passion which are the fruit of reverent devotion to the cause of truth and personal fellowship with Him who is the Way, the Truth and the Life. It was a great hour, and, as one of the by-products, every man present was inspired to get a new grip on himself and keep growing. Those who have followed Dr. Strong's writing through the years were impressed that he is still growing—that his system of theology is not something which was learned once for all like the multiplication table, and which can be repeated forward and backward forever the same, and always proved by a "proof text." No; it is a surer thing than that—a living thing: it is a man's statement to other men, telling them the convictions and assurances that have come to him from personal acquaintance with God.

Evangelist Stout at Whittier

Prof. B. P. Stout, who has been assisting Rev. E. M. Hulett in special evangelistic services at Whittier, is unique as an evangelist. Pastor Hulett speaks warm words of commendation. Prof. Stout gives what he calls sermons in songs, many times singing for an hour with little comment. Or, again, he fits his singing to the pastor's sermon, this giving a most effective setting to the truth which is being presented.

People greatly enjoy the services, and the meetings are reported to be the most largely attended of any evangelistic services ever held in Whittier. There are results too. Over twenty-five united with the church, and thirty young people have taken a definite stand signifying their readiness to devote their lives to any field of labor, home or foreign, to which God may call them and for which they may be able to fit themselves.

The pastor is still gathering the fruit of the meetings. The Whittier Church has a program that is placing it among the best working churches in Southern California.

Albany, Troy, Schenectady and Vicinity

By WILLIAM MORGAN HULL

The January meeting of the pastors of the Hudson River North Association was held in the Calvary Church of Albany. Dr. P. C. Wright of the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board spoke on the pension fund. Considerable interest was manifested, but when it came to actually joining, the first year's payment acted as a stumbling block to the large majority.

Our New Pastors

Since our last letter the four churches reported vacant have all called men, some of whom are already on the fields. Rev. George E. Manter has come to the Memorial Church of Mechanicville from the Lake Avenue Church of Hilton. This is the union of a good man and a good field.

The First Church, Troy, is happy over the acceptance of the pastorate by Rev. F. King Singiser, who has been serving as director of promotion for the metropolitan district. He will begin his work about Easter time.

Rev. H. J. Kingdon of First Church, Beacon, comes to the Millis Memorial Church of Troy, and Rev. G. A. Fairbank of South Glen Falls to the Hope Church of Albany. Both of these brethren are well and favorably known in this vicinity, and the pastors of the association are looking forward with pleasure to having them join us.

News from the Churches

The Memorial Church, Albany, David L. Jamison, pastor, has just held a quarterly business meeting. It reports twelve new members received and a balance of $182 in the treasury, with all bills paid. The attendance at the morning service has outgrown the seating capacity of the building.

Calvary Church, Albany, J. G. Lauderbaugh, pastor, also reports large attendance at church and Sunday school. Several new members have been received by letter recently.

Pastor James Fisher has just finished his first year at Tabernacle Church, Albany. His report to his church shows, among other things, eighteen baptisms, ten weddings, twenty-two funerals and twenty-five addresses outside his own church. The church is in healthy condition, the treasurer reporting a 50 per cent gain in the receipts for current expenses as well as a large increase in benevolence.

The union evangelistic campaign of the Baptist churches of Albany will be in charge of Rev. M. E. Van Nostrand, chairman, Rev. James Fisher, secretary, and Mr. Arthur Roy, treasurer.

Pastor Robinson of Rensselaer reports a baptism on Jan. 9, and that one young woman of his congregation has given her life to missionary work. The observance of the week of prayer resulted in a great spiritual uplift.

Reports of continuous activities come to us from Stillwater, where J. H. Messenger is in the second year of his pastorate. Improvements costing $1,200 have been made on the church basement and paid for. The church remembered the pastor handsomely at Christmas time.

At Second Church, Troy, the women's missionary society, as a "White Christmas" gift of service, has doubled the attendance at the church prayer meeting and promises to make it still larger.

The Calvary Church, Schenectady, under the leadership of Rev. Edgar C. Smith, has been making some gratifying strides. The entire indebtedness of $4,150 has been paid and a lot purchased for a parsonage. During the past year the benevolent giving has been increased sevenfold and the current expenses 40 per cent. The pastor's salary has been practically doubled since he came to the field four years ago. Several have accepted Christ in the evening services during the past month. Two have been baptized and others are awaiting the ordinance. The Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. are in exceptionally fine shape.

A New Day for Kalamazoo College

In the New World Movement financial campaign it was agreed that Kalamazoo College should receive $1,000,000 from the $100,000,000 which it was expected would be secured. It is now probable that from that campaign the college will receive approximately $600,000.

The national and state promotional boards have agreed that those churches which did not meet their quota may now in their continuation campaign designate their pledges to Kalamazoo College. Pledges so made and designated may apply on the original quotas given the local church and state in the New World Movement campaign for $100,000,000.

Mr. Frank B. Bachelor, who a few years ago was pastor at Coldwater and then for four and one-half years pastor at Ann Arbor, has been secured by Kalamazoo College to represent the college in its extension program.

In accordance with the new arrangement of designations approved by the national and state promotion boards, it is expected that by the presentation to churches and individuals of a well-defined plan of college extension, an additional sum of from $600,000 to $1,000,000 may be secured in the immediate future.

The president and trustees are now working out carefully the details of the proposed college extension. It is probable that a much enlarged and more varied line of study courses will be introduced. This will, of course, necessitate the enlarging of the teaching staff. It is possible and probable that the area of the college grounds will be considerably increased.

The plans contemplate the expenditure of approximately $500,000 in new buildings. At the minimum, several buildings will be erected. It is hoped that within the next few years, if not immediately, we may have a woman's building, two science buildings, a library and chapel, a men's dormitory, and a commons and recitation building.

Mr. Bachelor has an office in Bowen Hall, Kalamazoo College, Kalamazoo, and will be glad to receive from pastors, alumni, and any others, inquiries concerning fuller information regarding the extension program of the college.

The Baptist Women's Foreign Mission Jubilee

By Mrs. T. E. Adams

The program of this historic celebration is passing from the skeleton stage to a tangible conclusion. In variety, interest and effectiveness, it is both intriguing and illuminating. It comprehends the introduction of several European and oriental visitors—our society's contribution to Christian woman leadership in world reconstruction. One is a physician from Burma, and another a college woman, with a B. A. degree, from India—a direct descendant of that Lone Star Mission which remained steadfast by tears and sacrifice and prayer. We have teachers and professional nurses from Assam, China, Japan and the Philippines. As if these were not enough, there will be a pageant and choral singing and exhibits—but you are invited to be present and see for yourselves.

The big celebration will be in connection with the meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention in Des Moines in June.

Rev. J. W. Brown is now the pastor at Mt. Home; Rev. J. R. L. Haslam, at Notus; Rev. Matthew Chamberlin, at Kuna; Rev. G. A. Morley, at Oakley, and Dr. George H. Young, at Twin Falls. These pastors are getting the work well in hand, and the churches without exception are happy in the new relationship.

THE USTICK CHURCH has succeeded in making the final payment on its parsonage and has already received the $500 gift made by the Home Mission Society in co-operation with the state. The Blackfoot Church has purchased a new home for its pastor, Rev. E. O. Butler, and he is now in possession of permanent quarters. This makes twenty-six churches with parsonages and thirteen still without. Encouragement ought to be given until every church within the state possesses a home for its pastor.

THE STATE is being graciously blessed with a spirit of revival, beginning early in the fall and continuing without abatement up to the present time. A conservative estimate of the members already added to the churches would be 400. The state is fortunate in having on its field force men who have had considerable experience in evangelism. Four of these men are at the present time engaged in a series of meetings. Rev. E. L. Mills, state evangelist, is at Cambridge, Rev. A. L. Black at Nampa, Rev. E. O. Otto at Arco, and Rev. J. W. Croft Moreland. At Arco there have been fourteen professions, and one has been received by letter, two for baptism and one by relation. Rev. Matthew Chamberlin of Kuna is assisting Dr. L. A. Garrison at Eagle; Rev. A. V. Willey of Idaho Falls, Rev. W. F. Roberts at Gooding; and Rev. E. O. Butler, Rev. A. P. Ekman at West Firth.

EAST WASHINGTON AND NORTH IDAHO

ONE OF THE MOST HOPEFUL things in the East Washington and North Idaho Convention is the large number of churches which are paying off their indebtedness to the Home Mission Society. Just recently three churches in Spokane made final payments of all indebtedness: the First Church, Rev. J. E. Smith, pastor; the Grace Church, Rev. A. F. Colver, pastor; and the First Swedish Church, Rev. C. G. Ericson, pastor. The Calvary Church (Negro), Rev. E. B. Reed, pastor, has purchased a new site and is making splendid progress. The Colfax Church, Rev. J. F. Day, pastor, recently received thirty-five into its membership. Ellensburg, Rev. R. V. Ashmun, pastor, is in the midst of a fine revival. Sixty decisions are reported to date. Rev. A. F. Colver, of the Grace Church, has received thirty-five at the regular services during the last three months. Coeur d'Alene, Rev. W. H. Gibson, pastor, has received forty members into the church since becoming pastor six months ago.

THE RESPONSE to the appeal for funds for European relief in this convention field has been splendid. More than $2,000 has been received at the convention office for this purpose. General preparation is being made throughout the field for the regional missionary conferences to be held in February.

Rev. J. O. GOULD, student-pastor at the State University of Idaho, at Moscow, is getting his work organized and is meeting with splendid response on the part of the student body and the faculty. The Presbyterians and Methodists join with the Baptists in his support.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Pacific Coast

OREGON

THE McMinnville Church has been experiencing a gracious revival under the ministry of Rev. W. A. Waldo, pastor of the Corvallis Church. On Jan. 19, after two weeks, fourteen had been received for baptism. Dr. Waldo has been a great blessing to the church both because of his personality and because of his message. Over 400 members have been added during the three years of Dr. C. L. Trawin's pastorate. A series of sermons on "What Saith the Word of God?" has been announced, culminating at Easter.

WESTERN WASHINGTON

A ONE-DAY MISSIONARY INSTITUTE was held by the woman's mission circle of the First Church, Seattle, Jan. 7.

Rev. J. O. BOVEE and wife of Kelso are conducting a series of evangelistic meetings with the Dayton Church. They are available for one or two more meetings.

Rev. D. M. McPHAIL, pastor of the First Church, Bellingham, has returned from his month's rest in California greatly improved in health.

THE KELSO CHURCH assumed self-support Jan. 1.

Rev. FRED BERRY, director of evangelism for Western Washington, assisted by Earl Cochran, gospel singer, conducted a series of meetings with the Everett Church, Rev. W. E. Henry, pastor.

Rev. R. W. KING, pastor of the Port Angeles Church, reports a continued spirit of revival, with frequent conversions. A rousing "get-together" watch-night service was held in the largest hall in the city on Dec. 31.

THE RESPONSE to the appeal for Christmas offerings for European relief has been generous. Nearly $4,000 has already been received from the churches and Sunday schools, while a number of the schools gave their offerings to Near East Relief.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE ANNUAL MEETING on Jan. 5 of the First Church, Porterville, Rev. Frank W. Crawford, pastor, showed a good condition in the church, both financially and spiritually. On Jan. 2 two persons were received by experience and one by baptism.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

AFTER A SIX YEARS' PASTORATE at El Centro, Rev. Walter S. Reed has taken up his work with the First Church of Corona. During the six years at El Centro, the church was made self-supporting and the pastor's salary doubled. A new church edifice, was built which is entirely free from debt. A new parsonage was also built. Two hundred and fifty members were received, one-third of them by baptism. Mr. Reed was a member of the local school board and county Red Cross committee and president of the ministerial union, besides serving on many other important committees.

Rocky Mountain States

IDAHO

THE QUARTERLY BOARD MEETING of the Idaho state board was held Jan. 21. The report of Supt. A. B. Minaker showed that the quarter just closed had been one of great activity in all departments of religious life throughout the state. Many important changes have taken place, and despite the financial stringency, courage, hope and promise are in evidence everywhere. The quarter began with several of the churches pastorless, and, though difficulty is still experienced in locating men, during the quarter five of the churches settled pastors.

DR. F. W. CARSTENS, of Seattle, will become director of evangelism for the convention field Feb. 15.

DR. A. E. BAILEY, general superintendent, is taking a vacation—the first in four and a half years of service.

MONTANA

REV. DANIEL BRYANT began work with the First Church, Great Falls, on March 1 last. THE BAPTIST is just in receipt of a most enthusiastic letter concerning the work done in these nine months. At almost every service there are decisions for Christ; some of the membership has been renewed; many of the young folks have been baptized. Accessions to the church have been between forty and fifty. Big plans are made for the new year. The small church building will no longer comfortably seat the congregations and a new structure is an immediate need. Mrs. Bryant has, with her husband, won for herself a large place in the hearts of this people.

Mississippi Valley

SOUTH DAKOTA

THE FIRST CHURCH, SIOUX FALLS, Rev. G. Elton Harris, pastor, has an inspiring program for the year, including advanced goals in evangelism, attendance at public worship, education, Christian service, training in Christian service, and social life. The deacons are trying to enlist a large number of people in these different lines of activity. On Sunday mornings the pastor is preaching a series of sermons dealing with the teaching of the Bible on fundamental questions of Christian life and faith.

MINNESOTA

REV. J. McFARLANE has been pastor of the First Church, Austin, for three years and a half, during which time 142 new members have been received. Disbursements for 1920 were $7,441.46, of which $2,122.94 was for benevolence. The pastor's salary has been increased $200 for the coming year, this being the second increase during the pastorate. "Evangelism and Soul-winning" is the slogan in all departments of the church work.

NEBRASKA

Nebraska's New State Secretary

Nebraska Baptists deem themselves extremely fortunate in securing Dr. Walter I. Fowle to lead them in their Christian enterprises. He came to us Dec. 1 last, immediately upon the close of the work of Rev. Ray E. York. The choosing of a state secretary, as well as the choosing of a pastor, is often attended with more or less anxiety. But Dr. Fowle is so well known to our people that we feel confident in his leadership. He really belongs to Nebraska. Part of his youth was spent here, and after his college and divinity school work and a pastorate at Ames, Iowa, he came to Nebraska as the pastor of the important church at Grand Island. During the five years of his pastorate at Grand Island, he did a notable work and was prominent in the councils of the state. Since then he has been pastor of the strong church at Galesburg, Ill. We have won him back and are glad.

The position which Dr. Fowle occupies is that of executive secretary and director of promotion. Rev. G. L. Sharp, formerly field secretary, becomes director of missions and evangelism.

Dr. Fowle is bringing to his work excellent judgment, a fine co-operative spirit, a contagious optimism, and business-like methods. His work in the past has been such as to bring him in personal relations with the leaders of the denomination, whose confidence he enjoys. We confidently expect for him a prosperous administration.

Lincoln.

C. J. POPE.

IOWA

REPORTS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING of the First Church, Muscatine, showed a membership of 1132, there having been 166 additions during the year, eighty-three of whom were adults. A total of $25,000 was paid into the several treasuries, $7621.18 being for benevolences. A committee is at work considering the remodeling of the present church edifice or the erection of the new structure. The salary of the pastor, Rev. W. H. Rogers, has been increased $1400, and Miss Mary Newton has been employed to assist him in pastoral work.

FIFTEEN NEW MEMBERS have recently been received into the church at Centerville. The Sunday school, under the direction of A. P. Speers, is just closing a membership and attendance contest which has resulted in a large increase in the average number present. At the Christmas festival, the church presented Pastor J. O. Staples with a check for $50.

THE FIRST CHURCH OF COUNCIL BLUFFS, Rev. J. Frederic Catlin, pastor, has organized a men's glee club of twenty-five members. It gave its first concert on Dec. 16. A women's glee club is being organized. Sixty-two new members were received into the church during 1920. Mr. Joseph Robinson, senior deacon, was laid to rest on Dec. 26. The church and Sunday school contributed $150 for the needy Baptists in Europe. A teacher training class has recently been organized. Attendance at all services is the best for months.

THE SECOND CHURCH, COUNCIL BLUFFS, has recently been engaged in special services with Rev. T. J. Reese of Silver City as the preacher.

WISCONSIN

THE CHURCH AT HONEY CREEK dedicated on Jan. 20 a new community hall costing $15,000. Seven months ago the church suffered the loss by fire of its house of worship and community hall. It was a crushing loss for the buildings were practically new. With remarkable spirit, however, the whole community rallied and, with the volunteer aid of adjoining towns, the new building was dedicated practically without debt. Work on the new house of worship will probably begin in the early spring. Delegations from Janesville and Delavan, as well as near-by towns, attended the dedication. The pastor, Rev. Ralph Barry, and his people are to be congratulated.

INDIANA

THE FIRST CHURCH, MUNCIE, on Jan. 5 gave to Dr. J. F. Fraser a farewell reception before he left for his new work with the Fourth Avenue Church, Louisville, Ky. Dr. and Mrs. Fraser were presented with a chest of sterling silver, and the women gave to Mrs. Fraser, in addition, a brooch. In the seven years of Dr. Fraser's ministry, 736 members have been received into the church, 439 of them by baptism, the debt on the church building has been discharged, and a new organ has been installed. More than $86,000 was pledged for the New World Movement. The church has been thoroughly organized. The spiritual obligations of church membership have ever been kept before the people. A record for church attendance has been established.

ILLINOIS

REV. A. A. GORDONIER resigned at La Moille on Jan. 16 and has accepted a call to the First Church at Paris, where he will begin work on March 1. Before leaving La Moille he will hold special meetings, with the assistance of Evangelist Frank M. Dunk, beginning Jan. 31. A men's class has just been started with a motto of "I will not flinch." The deacons (Mr. G. B. Dean, chairman) and the deaconesses of the church constitute the pulpit committee.

THE FIRST CHURCH, CANTON, last October called to its pastorate Rev. Chas. H. Gray, of Galesburg, to the place made vacant by the resignation in August of Rev. Geo. B. McKee. On Jan. 11 the annual meeting was held. Reports showed progress and great interest along all lines and especially in missionary subjects. A unified program, as suggested by the pastor and presented to the church by the board of promotion, was adopted. On the following Sunday morning an impressive installation service was conducted for the officers.

A SUCCESSFUL EVANGELISTIC campaign under the direction of Dr. Franklin W. Swift has just closed at the First Church of Irving Park, Chicago. There is general agreement that these were the greatest meetings of the kind ever held in the church. During the two weeks, 134 persons came to the front and definitely gave their hearts to the Lord. It was a most definite committal of life to the Lord Jesus Christ. Many others rededicated their lives and many personal workers developed.

MICHIGAN

REV. AND MRS. WM. DOWD, of Impur, Assam, while recuperating in this country, are staying at 503 Stanwood Ave., Kalamazoo. The college is justly proud of these two former students. Miss Elizabeth Hay from India is also resting a bit in this haven of rest for missionaries.

CARO CHURCH is much alive. It rejoices in the fact that Pastor Eldred Charles is its successful leader, and it enters heartily into his program. Caro is well established on the Michigan Baptist map.

PASTOR L. D. PETTIT, of Bellevue, has been co-operating successfully with the Methodist minister in a series of special meetings, which are held alternate weeks in the churches. Good results are reported from this Christian work.

THE FIRST CHURCH, LANSING, is carrying out an evangelistic program, leading up to Easter. At the annual meeting, the following facts were brought out: The church contributed during the year a total of $40,533.85. Of this, $25,550.98 went into the New World Movement. The Sunday-school membership, including the branches, is 836. New members received in the church and two branches number 125, making the total membership more than 1,300. The board of deaconesses reported 1,244 calls made. The board of deacons was increased from twelve to fifteen.

KANSAS

ARRANGEMENTS are being made for an intensive training institute for the students of the Kansas City Seminary and the church workers of the city and vicinity. Special attention will be given to developing leaders and workers for church vacation school work and week-day religious education. It will be under the direction of Dr. Young, of Philadelphia, and the director of religious education in Kansas.

SEVERAL OF our churches have on new building enterprises at the present time, such as Caney, Great Bend and El Dorado. They propose to put some $25,000 into the building at Caney, $35,000 at Great Bend, and $100,000 at El Dorado.

A NEW BUILDING was completed at Ellis recently, and it is reported that the dedication took place on Jan. 9. Rev. H. MacD. Thompson, of Hays, has been the foremost leader in this worthy enterprise.

MARYSVILLE has extended a call to Rev. H. G. Weir, of the Dover and Auburn churches. He has accepted and is just now entering upon his new work.

OHIO

Cleveland Association

The First Church has just published its annual report for 1920. It indicates one of the most progressive and prosperous years in all the splendid history of that organization. During the year, sixty-seven members were added, thirty-seven of this number coming from the Sunday school. The missionary spirit, is indicated in the fact that while some $20,000 was expended on current expenses, $42,000 was given for benevolences. The prospects are that during the current year the church will give toward the various missionary projects $3 for every $1 that it expends for its own maintenance. This church is being led out into genuine service by Pastor David Bovington.

The Calvary Church recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. It is a church without a problem—or, at least, this is how the chairman of the deacons' board described it at the silver anniversary supper held at the church on the evening of Jan. 12. During the twenty-five years, the church has had five pastors. Of this number, Rev. Mr. Stone, the first pastor, Rev. J. Ford, his successor, and Rev. J. S. McLendon, a present incumbent, were present to enjoy the festivities and to rejoice in the splendid progress that the church has made. Rev. Mr. McGuire, the fourth pastor, is in the West and could not accept the invitation for the occasion. Rev. Mr. Pilot, the well-remembered and much-beloved leader who preceded Mr. McLendon in the work, has passed on. Although Calvary Church does not send its benevolent contributions direct to the Board of Promotion, it has during the year made large increases in its benevolent gifts, the total for the year amounting to $3500. A special effort is being made by the church to present the claims of the ministry and other direct Christian service to the young people who may hear the call. The high esteem in which the pastor is held was clearly indicated in the enthusiasm with which the congregation voted to increase his salary by several hundred dollars. Calvary Church, through its present pastor, is sounding an evangelistic note.

Splendid progress is being made in the organization and equipment of our Christian center in the Negro community. Through the co-operation of the Negro churches, the building is being comfortably furnished, and under the able leadership of Mrs. Anderson many activities have already been undertaken. The indications are that the present building will soon prove too small to accommodate the classes that are being enrolled and to provide space for the social work projected. At present a large number of these people are out of work, but the attendance upon their churches increases. It is hoped that through the Christian center standards of Christian and social activity may be established.

The association has in contemplation for erection during the coming year, a chapel for the Rumanian people to cost about $30,000. It is also planned to co-operate with the Lakewood Church in the erection of a suitable edifice for that commanding location. In this project at least $75,000 must be expended.

Atlantic Coast

NEW HAMPSHIRE

A SERIES OF CONFERENCES was recently held in the state at which the majority of the pastors were present. It was under the direction of the state secretary, assisted by Rev. York A. King, New England district secretary of evangelism. At these conferences the associations were organized to care for evangelistic work through church evangelism and the interchange of pastors. An instance of the value of this plan has already appeared. Rev. M. R. Foshay, of the First Church, Manchester, preached during a series of meetings at the Somersworth Church. A number of hopeful conversions was the result. On the two Sundays Mr. Foshay was at Somersworth, the pastor of the Somersworth Church, Rev. A. T. June, supplied the pulpit of the First Church, Manchester, and conversions resulted in this case also.

THE RESIGNATION of Rev. W. J. Setzer, of the Pleasant Street Church, Concord, to become pastor of the Worthen Street Church, Lowell, Mass., is regretted. Mr. Setzer will leave the church at Concord in fine condition. Large audiences have attended his preaching. The Pleasant Street Church is one of the New Hampshire churches that adopted the family group plan in its church work and found it one of the best methods ever introduced into the church work.

Centenary Celebration at Claremont

The celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Claremont Church is worthy of note. Services began on Jan. 9, other meetings being held on the Tuesday, Wednesday and Sunday following.

The centennial sermon was preached Jan. 9 by the pastor, Rev. Wesley A. Paige, whose topic was, "A Century of Achievement and Blessing." There was a service of song in the evening, with an address by the pastor on "A Century of Song."

On Tuesday evening a church banquet was served. The church history was read by Dea. Walter Pierce, and addresses were given by two of the former pastors, Rev. R. B. Pattison and Rev. F. M. Swaffield. Wednesday night, at the anniversary prayer meeting, there was an address by Rev. F. M. Swaffield. On Friday night the church came together again and listened to greetings from the town, from the chamber of commerce, through its president, and from the other local churches, through their pastors.

Sunday morning, Jan. 16, the anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. D. S. Jenks, secretary of the New Hampshire Convention. The anniversary exercises were brought to a close in the evening, when an address, "The Church of the Future," was given by Rev. Virgil Johnson, a former pastor.

The Claremont Church with the other churches of the town, recently enjoyed a season of revival under Evangelist Reese. The pastor has already baptized fourteen persons, and there are others to follow. The church has been fortunate in securing the best of pastors in past years. The present work of the church gives evidence of virility, spirituality and progress.

MAINE

REV. CLARENCE A. BUKER, pastor of the Boothbay and Barter Island churches, was taken suddenly ill at the morning service on Dec. 12, and was taken soon afterwards to St. Andrew's Hospital at West Boothbay Harbor suffering from pneumonia and complications. A long period of rest and recuperation will be necessary. He wishes to express his appreciation of the cards, flowers, letters and gifts which have brightened some of the long hours.

CONNECTICUT

THE ROCKVILLE CHURCH held its annual church supper and roll call on Jan. 20. Dr. A. B. Coats, state convention secretary, was the guest of honor. The program consisted of an address by Dr. Coats and remarks by Rev. H. B. Sloat, state director of promotion, together with several musical selections. The work of the church has greatly prospered during Rev. R. W. Ferguson's pastorate of two and one-half years. The church is planning for an evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Rev. York A. King during February.

THE FIRST CHURCH, HARTFORD, held its annual business meeting on Jan. 17. The receipts for the year were $48,009—an increase of $13,000 over 1919. This church is now giving to benevolences $29,383 annually, which means that it is giving thousands of dollars more to benevolences than to local expenses, and this amount will be greatly augmented before the present year closes. Forty-six new members were added during the year. The membership now stands at 930. The Tuesday night institute, which has been a part of the church program for several years, is largely attended this winter. Great interest is manifested in the classes in personal leadership, C. E. methods, and studies in the New Testament, the latter conducted by Dr. H. J. White, the pastor.

THE SOUTH CHURCH, HARTFORD, Rev. J. N. Lackey, pastor, has had an exceptionally good year. Reports at the annual meeting Jan. 20 showed receipts amounting to $23,533.43, of which $10,287.27 was for benevolence. Eighty-nine new members were added to the membership during the year, fifty coming by baptism. The church, in addition to carrying a generous insurance for the pastor and furnishing a car, gave further appreciation of his work by adding $500 to his salary. Beginning Jan. 27, the church is planning to conduct an intensive study campaign for six weeks in stewardship, missions and evangelism.

MASSACHUSETTS

THE FIRST CHURCH, LYNN, prospers under the acting-pastorship of Dr. Alexander Blackburn while the pulpit committee leisurely hunts for a man. Dr. Blackburn seems young enough to delight the people with full and effective service everywhere, so there need be no undue haste. The congregations morning and evening are equally large, which is unusual, and the people are keenly responsive to a kindling minister.

FIRST CHURCH, BEVERLY, Rev. Carey W. Chamberlin, pastor, is one of our dependably solid and widely efficient churches. It is planted where people could hardly dodge it even if they were so disposed. But the large congregations in the spacious meeting-house prove it to be an attractive center. It is a steady work there. Pastor Chamberlin has everything in hand, and without spasm, spurt, or jerkiness, keeps up a normal pressure that makes a strong church still stronger.

THE FIRST CHURCH, PEAODY, Rev. Norman Bartlett, pastor, is rejoicing in a new, young minister, with an old head and a full equipment for work. It is a good, sizable, solid meeting-house, with plenty of people around it, and many of them are finding their way into it.

THE EAST CHURCH, LYNN, where Dr. A. E. Harriman is the long-time and up-to-date leader, is one of the most interesting churches in the commonwealth. Right down town in the heart of business stands the old meeting-house, which is always full of people every time its doors swing open. The new historic building has a way of renewing its youth and looking as if the people loved it. And they love their minister also; and well they may, for in the things that make a church a power, he is pre-eminent.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

Rev. C. M. D'Arcy closes his work at Lebanon the last Sunday in February.

THE STATE BOARD of promotion is arranging a series of eight regional missionary conferences, to be held at Connelville, Feb. 9-10, at Erie, Feb. 14-15, at Williamsport, Feb. 17-18, at Scranton, Feb. 21-22, and at four other centers. Through the associational boards of promotion, personal invitations are being extended to each church to be represented at these conferences. The state board is also laying special emphasis upon the Stewardship Period, Jan. 23 to Feb. 20. The goal for Pennsylvania has been set at "Four Hundred Stewardship Groups This Year." The plans of the department of stewardship of the General Board are being pushed, and a special enrollment card is being prepared as an aid in reaching the objective.

Scranton and Vicinity

The Scranton Baptist Ministerial Association has had two inspiring meetings this year. At the first Rev. A. E. Plue of the North Main Street Church led the members in a devotional and inspirational service that was helpful to all; at the second Dr. Joseph A. Bennett, of Philadelphia, presented the truth concerning the citizen of the kingdom as shown in the Sermon on the Mount.

Reports from the different churches were interesting. Immanuel Church, under Dr. C. H. Rust, has just closed the year. For beneficence, $13,000 was raised. The membership is close to 1,100. One hundred new members is the goal by Easter.

Calvary Church, Taylor, Rev. C. G. Langford, pastor, has been having evangelistic services conducted by Dr. Bennett and there have been more than 120 who have professed conversion. More than fifty were baptized on Jan. 23.

The Blakeley Church, Olyphant, Rev. Mr. Aber, pastor, has the expectation of seventy-five new members by Easter. Work for the young people is progressing. A large number of ex-service men are being deeply interested.

Rev. G. M. Reid, of Scranton First Church, closed his first year with a series of special services, and a goodly number of the Sunday school have responded to the invitation to accept Christ. A young man who has been an excellent worker in the church has just expressed his purpose to prepare for the ministry. The Bulletin of Jan. 16 says: "Our special meetings brought to all of us a new sense of God's presence and power."

Rev. Mr. Crippen has just moved to Clarks Summit from Vermont to become pastor at Summit and Clarks Green.

On Jan. 7 a reception was given the new pastor at Factoryville, Rev. T. Vassar Caulkins, and his wife. A large attendance manifested the interest of the church and community in the new relation. Keystone Academy boys added much to the occasion with their Glee Club songs and their academy-yells.

Rev. Theodore Heysham, of Norristown, at the invitation of the church and academy, delivered at Factoryville his interesting and instructive lecture, "The Birth of the Bible," on Jan. 13 and on the next night gave his recital of "Ben Hur," illustrated with sixty colored stereopticon slides. Both evenings were greatly enjoyed. Dr. Heysham is doing a fine work with his Bible lecture and chart.

Dr. Joseph A. Bennett braved the coldest day of the year to drive from Taylor to Keystone Academy to speak to the boys at chapel. He compared the plans of life of the devil and of Christ—life by bread alone, and not by bread alone, but by every word of God. His visit and his message will be long remembered.

Belated World Surveys

WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY

It is difficult to state the one most significant advance step in 1920, for there have been many. It might, by some, be measured in money—a larger budget than ever before and a Jubilee thank-offering of $365,000, oversubscribed in loving devotion by Baptist women in this fair land. Others might measure the step by the new buildings and equipment promised or provided, which include hospitals, school buildings, dormitories, missionary bungalows, Bible schools, a neighborhood house, a college hostel, automobiles, and even sewing machines and baby organs.

Still a third group would erect a milestone because during 1920 a larger number of young women than ever before in the history of the society have gone out to the Orient to carry to the girls and women over there the training, education, character and inspiration that only the Christian woman possesses. In this connection may it be added that an increasing number of young women in our colleges, schools and churches are thinking of foreign service and asking to be considered for appointment.

The significant fact, however, in all these points of view is that they lead to one and the same conclusion. After all, the advance step is not here at home in anything that has been done or given through the society and its loyal supporters: it is over there—in Japan, China, Assam, India, Burma, Africa and the Philippine Islands—where the girls are crowding our Christian schools, the sick, our mission hospitals, the little children, our kindergartens and Sunday schools; where women are learning the true meaning of the words "home," and where every day hearts acknowledge the love and the saving power of Jesus Christ, and the world through the work of Christian women is brought nearer to the day when God's peace and righteousness shall reign.

The prospect for the new year? Never so bright, so momentous, so critical in the history of the world as it is today for the womanhood of every land. Never such eager desire, never such a feeling out beyond herself and her little world, never such opportunities for service have come to an awakening woman's heart as face us in 1921. There is only one answer to the question asked. The Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society would "lengthen their cords" and "strengthen their stakes" to serve the women of the world.
New York City. NELLIE G. PRESCOTT.

NEW JERSEY

Last year was one of epochal spiritual progress in New Jersey. Under the masterful leadership of Executive Secy. Raymond M. West, now in service with the General Board of Promotion, Convention Pres. F. Wayland Ayer, and the convention staff, and through the pulpit persuasions and sagacious guidance of Christly pastors, thousands have responded with unparalleled enthusiasm and liberality to the call of the New World Movement. All previous high-water marks have been made low-water levels by this wonderful flood of sacrificial giving. Upwards of $2,800,000 was subscribed toward the movement, and to date 82 per cent of the proportionate amount due has been paid in. As might be expected, the tabulated evangelistic results tell a thrilling story of progress. There was an increase of 44 per cent in the number of baptisms over the preceding year's record.

But statistics, however impressive, give only a suggestion of what really has been accomplished. Who can measure what eternal spiritual values have been added to the souls of our people? Thousands have really begun seriously to assume kingdom responsibilities. Many pastors speak with a deeper sense of the authority of the divine Spirit, and joyfully recognize a new inspirational response from the pews. Our people have come into a masterful sense of their ability to serve Christ in a great way. The assurance arising from a spiritual victory is theirs. Besides this, a type of theology that prompts its devotees to stand apart from the recognized Christian content of our New World Movement is now called upon to apologize for its existence.

Newark. THOMAS P. HOLLOWAY.

What Some Churches Are Doing

A Department of Methods

Brotherhood of Nations Supper

TO the men's club of the Calvary Church of New Haven, Conn., undoubtedly belongs the credit of inaugurating a phase of our relations with the "new Americans" which, if widely followed, will mark a distinct advance in assimilation and brotherhood. The foreigner has had many things done to him and for him, but not so much "with" him on a plane of equality. This thought prompted the holding of a supper on Jan. 3—the date of the regular monthly supper of the club—to which each member was requested to bring a guest of non-English-speaking nationality.

At 6:30 p. m., to the accompaniment of lively music, 130 men assembled at tables in the Bible-school room. Flags of all nations strung from wires between the pillars gave the room a gala appearance, and more flags stood in standards on the tables. The music changed to "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," in which all joined, and then paused, waiting for the pastor to ask a blessing. Instead of the pastor, this was done by Peter Lin of Nanking, China, a graduate student at Yale, who seemed to strike the keynote of the evening as he thanked God for the spirit of love and brotherhood which there prevailed, and prayed the Father that all his children in every country might be filled with the same spirit.

Scarcely had the coffee been served when "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag" was flashed on the screen, followed by "A Long Long Way to Tipperary." The room was then divided into two camps, and the two songs were sung at the same time in competition. Then followed more war songs and old favorites, ending with "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

The president of the club, Charles T. Lincoln, one of New Haven's prominent business men and during the war a Y. M. C. A. secretary at Camp Devens, called attention to the unique nature of the meeting and humorously presented Pastor James McGee. Mr. McGee, in a few sprightly but earnest remarks, introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Frank L. Anderson, lately in charge of city mission work in Chicago, whose subject was, "The Making of an American." Dr. Anderson reviewed in a fascinating manner the mixture of races in Europe, beginning with the prehistoric Stone Age, followed by the Bronze and Iron ages, whose men each conquered their predecessors because of their more efficient implements of war. Referring to the British Isles in particular, the Celt was followed by the Jute, the Saxon, the Angle and the Norman, each of whom, already of mixed blood, in time intermarried with the conquered people and learned its language, making his own contribution thereto. The same holds true of the other peoples who have come here, such as the Italian and the Greek. Each is itself a mixture, so that the so-called American is a mixture of mixtures and the only real American is the Red Indian. The making of an American, then, began centuries and millennium ago in northern Europe, in the fusing of blood and ideas which produced the predominant British stock that settled Virginia and New England. Soon came the French Huguenots, adding their sturdy and devoted spirit. When New Rochelle was first settled, this little band walked twenty miles every Sunday to New York in order to attend the old church in Pine Street, and then twenty miles home again. Then came the Dutch and the Germans, the latter settling in Pennsylvania, each adding their own peculiar contribution to our life and ideas. Then came the Slav's—one, in fact, having been a signer of the Declaration of Independence; and then the Italians, although an Italian, Christopher Columbus, got here before them all, unless the solitary Englishman whom history reports in Columbus' crew happened to step ashore first. And since then these peoples have been coming in millions from all quarters of the earth, fusing with each other in a way which may seem slow to us, but which is rapid in comparison with the 500 years it took to blend the Scotch-Irish before they emigrated to play such an important part in the creation of the new republic.

The result of all this will be, in the centuries to come, a blended race on this continent, in which a type will emerge just as distinctive as the Englishman or the Frenchman, both of whom were mixed races, as we have seen. At present there is hardly a thing done for us but is done by some man, woman or child who in comparatively recent years lived under a foreign sky. One time down in Parkersburg, W. Va., while waiting for a train, I noticed one of the waiters in the restaurant, whom I took to be from South India. After a while I spoke to him and asked him if this were not so. He admitted it, and we began to talk about the poems of Tagore. His eyes lighted up, and he told me more about Tagore than I had ever known and gave me a true insight into his poems. Here was a man with the soul of a true poet, though just now engaged in a humble occupation. At another time I engaged in conversation with a man blacking my shoes who I thought was a Greek. This proved to be the case, and he confided to me that he was studying for a university course and could read the plays of Aeschylus in classical Greek. Thus it is when we have the personal touch—and this is the one thing most necessary in our dealings with all these peoples who are making the American of the future. Make friends of them and reveal the spirit of brotherhood, and you will be amazed to find the wealth of feeling and often the learning and culture which underlie their present rough exterior.

After Dr. Anderson had concluded, a roll call was taken, each member and guest arising, and the members giving their names and the names and nationality of their guests, as well as autographing the same for the archives of the club. The following countries were represented: United States, Canada, British Isles, Denmark, Italy, Philippines, Norway, South India, Russia, China, Chile, Japan, Poland, Ceylon, Cuba, Porto Rico, Jamaica, Australia and Croatia.

This most enjoyable, not to say thrilling, evening, ended with more singing, the last song being "The Star Spangled Banner," and with a vote of thanks to Dr. Anderson, who is president of the new International Baptist Seminary at East Orange, N. J.

WILLIAM FIFE TURNBULL

Church and Sunday School Equipment

Church Furniture

Pews and Pulpit Furniture made according to our own or architect's design. Altars, Pulpits, Lecterns.

Sunday Schools

Ideal chairs of uniform design for all grades. Special Class Tables, Register Boards, Folding Chairs, Platform Furniture.

Church and Sunday School Furniture of every description.

Write for Catalog B

DELONG SVOBODA COMPANY

Witherspoon Bldg. Philadelphia, Pa.

IT IS A BURNING SHAME

that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

Baptist Department

Mutual Insurance Corporation

Furnishes Protection AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM

No assessments; easy payments; profits to policy holders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured. No agents. Deal direct.

National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. and Mgr., 1509 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

Annuities

Annuity Bonds are issued by all the Boards and Societies of the Northern Baptist Convention.

For information, including rates, write to the Society or Board concerned or to

The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention

276 Fifth Ave., - - New York

Write for this Booklet

For Christian investors. You receive regular, generous, non-taxable life income. Your money helps a Christian enterprise.

Ask for Booklet B, American Bible Society, 26 Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society

Our Corporate name is

"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"

Executive Secretary, Charles L. White

Treasurer, Samuel Bryant

23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

A FIRST PRIMARY BOOK IN RELIGION

By ELIZABETH COLSON

Lessons which lead the child to a religious interpretation of his world. God in nature, in the home, church, and everyday life.

Price, net, $1.75; by mail, $1.92.

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN

Easter Extraordinary

EASTER! DAY OF DAYS! is the title of a new service for Sunday schools, of rare beauty and worth. Sample copy mailed for four 2-cent stamps.

Send us your address (and that of others interested) and we will mail free our new catalog of Easter services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for mixed voices, women's voices, and men's voices; also anthems for choir.

HYMNS FOR TO-DAY, new, for the Sunday school and church, voicing the forward-looking spirit of to-day in beautiful songs, new and old. Contains 15 Easter hymns and two Easter services. Price, $75 per 100. Returnable sample copy mailed for examination. Orchestrated.

We make a specialty of religious orchestra music.
FILLMORE MUSIC HOUSE, 538 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

EASTER FREE

Sample Services of Songs and Recitations to Ministers, Superintendents, and Committees.

Returnable Samples of Choir Cantatas and Anthems.

The Garden of Joseph, new song story by Adam Geibel. 25 cents.
Easter Helper No. 7 (not sent for examination), 15 cents in stamps.

HALL-MACK CO. {21st and Arch Sts.,
ADAM GEIBEL CO. } Philadelphia, Pa.

DO YOU KNOW !!

The Business World needs Christian Young People. An Efficient Business Training midst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY
Write for particulars Osage, Iowa

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Young Women
Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year.
Apply early for September.

Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Illinois

HIGHER EDUCATION

Courses in English, Spanish, Mathematics, Chemistry, Drawing, Education, Business and in 35 other subjects are given by correspondence. Begin any time.

The University of Chicago

29th Year

Division 22 Chicago, Ill

Harry W. Jones
CHURCH ARCHITECT
Minneapolis

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO. HILLSBORO, OHIO

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

T. WM. LESTER

TO THE BUDDING COMPOSER

WITHIN the past ten days I have had three letters from as many different sections of the country asking for advice as to publishers and means of having musical works published. As one of the most prominent publishers in the country said to me last August, "I used to think that everyone I knew was busy writing moving-picture scenarios, but now I know it is songs, songs, then more songs!" And the same wail goes up from all the publishing fraternity.

Now, the publishing of music is the same as any other business—the product released must be salable and capable of returning a profit to the vendor. "Art for art's sake" has little weight with the men putting out our music. Virtually every house I know has some certain standards by which it limits its output, and most of these publishers are idealists at bottom. To know such men as William Arms Fisher of the Oliver Ditson Company, George Fischer of J. Fischer and Brother, Banks Davison of White-Smith, Walter Fischer, Gustav Saenger and F. E. Burgstaller of Carl Fischer, H. W. Gray of the company of that name, and Clayton F. Summy—to enumerate but a few—is to realize that these men, while of necessity ever watchful of the commercial interests of their great publishing houses, still maintain an unspoiled and vivid enthusiasm for the beautiful and artistic. A cordial welcome is always assured for the manuscript that combines artistic individuality with some consideration of what is possible and practical.

If a composer sends his or her manuscript to a series of three or four reputable publishing houses that are known to be interested in that particular type of material, and gets it back with the usual formal but kindly rejection slip, it behooves the budding composer to sit down and commune with the manuscript in search of reasons for this fate. Is the notation as simple as it could be? Are the ranges practical? Are the notes, the accidentals, and the expression signs as they should be? Is the framework worked out so that it is balanced correctly, or does the personal interpretation of the composer need to supply a false enthusiasm? Is the difficulty of the work all out of proportion to the results achieved? When one tears a manuscript to pieces in a brutally impersonal manner, many surprises are to be found. And we must all remember that an artist can take a mediocre work and make of it a pseudo-masterpiece. But true artists are few and far between. My song or what-not must sound well when done by the amateur or unskillful if it is to be of any commercial value. A great composer once said to me, "My boy, make it fool-proof!" In short, be absolutely certain that your exact thoughts are reproduced on paper so clearly that there can be no chance of mis-reading.

Above all, avoid those fly-by-night houses that coyly advertise "settings of song-poems," the publication of your manuscripts, etc. If the composer has plenty of money and can afford to pay for the luxury of seeing his name in print, well and good. Go to a reputable publisher and guarantee the cost of publication, after taking his advice as to the grade of the work, with probable revisions. In this case you at least get some satisfaction for your money. But all too often the ambitious neophyte pays a good stiff price to some cash-in-advance organization for nothing but a few hundred poorly printed copies of music and a copyright. The company has no means of placing the composition on the market, and there is no chance for any return on the investment except from the proceeds of the few copies to be sold to friends and relatives.

If a composer is fortunate enough to have his works accepted by a publisher, the usual procedure is to make a royalty-contract, the publisher paying the composer a certain percentage of the list price on every copy sold and bearing all expense of publication and distribution. If so desired, the material may be sold for cash, thus becoming the absolute property of the publisher. If the works of a new composer find any public favor at all, he need not worry about future issues. As long as he keeps up his standard of self-criticism and plays fair with his own gifts, he can rest assured that the publisher will be only too glad to provide a profitable outlet for all the public can use. We hear much about the big profits the different companies have made from certain specific "hits," but little is whispered about the tremendous amount of money poured out on the shelf-decorators.

ORGAN INSURANCE

IN a recent issue of that splendid journal for organists and those interested in church music, the Diapason, appeared the sub-joined letter from Roland Diggle, a well-known organist and composer of Los Angeles. The points brought up are so pertinent as to merit careful attention. The article is as follows:

ORGAN INSURANCE

I wonder how many churches and organists have taken into consideration the large increase in the cost of organs when arranging for a renewal of a fire insurance policy? Two instances have lately come to my notice where the organs have been destroyed by fire, and the insurance on each, ample for duplicating the instruments four or five years ago, is now not much more than half enough for a new instrument of the same size and quality. The fault is perhaps largely with the church authorities. At the same time, a wide-awake organist will keep his eyes on such matters, for, in the event of the organ's being destroyed and the insurance on it only enough to build a smaller and, most likely, inferior instrument, it will be the organist who will suffer most.

I would urge at least a 50 per cent increase in the insurance as a general

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6 cents per word per insertion; cash with order.

PRE-EASTER EVANGELISTIC LEADERS AND HELPERS. Write Interdenominational Evangelistic Association, Winona Lake, Ind.

rule; but of course it is an individual matter for each organ, and all cases must be judged accordingly. Whatever you do, make the insurance high enough. If the church makes a fuss over the premium, and some of the smaller churches will no doubt do so, give an organ recital or concert and get the money yourself. It may be a lot of bother, but it would be better than to be out of a job, if your organ is destroyed.

REVIEW OF NEW MUSIC

From the White-Smith Music Publishing Company, Boston:

"The Victory of the Cross," P. A. Schaecker.

"The Angel's Easter Song," P. A. Schaecker.

"From Gloom to Glory," Adam Geibel.

"Behold, I Shew You a Mystery," Frederick Maxson.

This list of songs should please the church soloist desirous of appearing with some other offering than the ever-present "Hosanna" of Granier on Easter morning. The two numbers by Schaecker are effective melodious settings of texts by Wm. A. Gardner—somewhat stereotyped as to musical material, but well adapted for use where simplicity is desired. Another asset is the fact that violin or violoncello parts can be had, thus increasing the festive feeling of the two songs. Music of much the same type is found in the song by Geibel. Textually, it has the decided advantage of a dramatic text by Isabel Small. The last title listed above—the song by that well-known organist and conductor of Philadelphia, Frederick Maxson—impresses one as a much bigger production than the companion pieces. Published only in one key, it should provide meaty material for a dramatic soprano or tenor voice. The text is scriptural, chosen so as to offer fine contrast and climax possibilities—which are well used musically by the composer. The accompaniment is set for organ, and the practiced hand of the routinized organist is evident. It is a song than can be highly recommended.

The soul of music slumbers in the shell, Till waked and kindled by the Master's spell;

And feeling hearts, touch them but rightly, pour

A thousand melodies unheard before.

—Samuel Rogers.

Obituary

Trowbridge.—Mary Pine Booth was born in Medina, Ohio, in 1843. She moved with her parents to Wisconsin, and in 1866 was married to Edward N. Trowbridge of Trempealeau, who died in 1900. She was a member of the Baptist Church at Trempealeau, Wis., then at Whitehall, Wis., where she lived for many years, and later at Boulder, Colo. On Jan. 14, she passed away at the home of her son, Dr. W. M. Trowbridge, of Viroqua, Wis., after a life of rare faithfulness and devotion. Of five children, two live to mourn her loss, Dr. W. M. of Viroqua, and Mary of Prescott, Ariz.

The Open Forum

(Continued from page 17)

7. Humanity is God's special creation, formed after the image of the divine and meant for his glory.

8. Man is an actual and wilful sinner, fallen, through disobedience, from his high estate and utterly lost.

9. But by grace we are saved, being justified by faith in the atoning blood of Christ.

10. And the new life that is ours is by miraculous regeneration and sanctification through the Holy Spirit given to them who obey him.

11. The gospel is sent to redeem souls out of this present evil world, and set them apart to God.

12. Our hope is in the coming of Christ's kingdom—in Christian hearts today and presently in all the earth.

Here we stand. "If this is treason, make the most of it."

Oberlin, Ohio. J. W. WEDDELL.

The Log of the Flying Pig

(Continued from page 19)

yes sir, the queerest, strangest vacation that anybody in our town ever had, for father had a canal boat in which he was going to take us for a cruise lasting weeks and weeks.

"Noah's Ark, I call it," laughed mother.

"Will we be gone exactly forty days and forty nights?" I asked.

"Yes, my dear," said father approvingly, for he always likes it when we show that we know the details of Bible stories. (How could we help it, when dear mother makes them so real?)

So now you see why the silver had been safely stored away, down at father's safe deposit bank. But until you read what I write next week you can't possibly understand what is meant by "The Log of the Flying Pig."

(To be continued)

B. Y. P. U.

(Continued from page 22)

instructive. His challenge to the young people was impressive, compelling and timely. It is enough to say that Rev. J. V. Travis of Hanford was himself in leading the music. A pleasing violin number was rendered by Mr. Wilkinson. Refreshments and social fellowship closed the great rally. Like rallies were projected and located for the next four months.

The Christian Preacher

By PROFESSOR A. E. GARVIE, D. D.

518 pages. $3.50

The most important book for preachers that has been published for many years.

It treats of the character of the sermon, the choice of subjects and texts, the contents and arrangement of the sermon, the composition and the delivery of the sermon. This book will not only be read from cover to cover but will be constantly consulted. No preacher can afford to be without it.

Charles Scribner's Sons

597-599 Fifth Avenue

New York City

HOW TO TEACH RELIGION

Principles and Methods

By

GEORGE HERBERT BETTS

"It is nothing short of a revelation. It is nothing short of a revolution."
—EXPOSITORY TIMES, Edinburgh.

Net, $1.25; by mail, $1.35

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT

Which is the Word of God

Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest. pt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid; stamps taken. Agents wanted. GEO. WAINBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

ORCHESTRATED EDITION

(Now Ready)

"Popular Hymnal"

"THE WORLD'S MOST SERVICEABLE SONG BOOK"

400,000 Copies Published in Two Years
Largest Churches in America Use It.

Write for Circular to

ROBERT H. COLEMAN, Dallas, Texas,
Editor, Publisher and Distributor. Depository also in Chicago.

The Church Beautiful

THOUSANDS of churches in America have been rendered more beautiful and inspiring by the workmanship and designing of our seating department. All of their experience and training gained through these many years of devoted application to the finest traditions of their art is at your command and disposal.

We shall consider it an honor and a privilege if we can be of any assistance to you in the building or refurnishing of your church edifice.

American Seating Company

Exclusive Manufacturers of Ecclesiastical Furniture

GENERAL OFFICES, 11069-79 LYTTON BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

Sales Offices in All Principal Cities

A Bowl of Corncobs, Roots and Dried Leaves

THIS was the meal set before 200 wealthy men and women in New York on January 27. The bowl contained a full day's ration for each of fifteen million people in North China today.

The New Yorkers were afterward served with chicken and meringue glacé, for even American generosity draws the line on eating root hash.

But no chicken and meringue glacé are served the starving Chinese. We must, however, see that they get millet and beans and other nourishing food to keep them alive.

Conditions baffle description. Let Bishop Lambuth, who has just returned from China, tell a part of the story:

"In one village 80 animals were in use prior to the famine; now only 20 were left and they were about to be slaughtered or sold. In another 30 animals and only 3 left. The people had pawned or sold their clothing in the face of the coming winter. They said they would rather freeze than starve. I took a photograph or two in which boys were almost stript of their clothing.

"As to the food itself, or what is being used for food, I found just six weeks ago that what they had would not last more than 3 or 4 weeks—that consisted of nubbins of corn with 15 or 20 grains to a nubbin. These grains were not well formed and were watery. In the famine area the ear is not the length of your index finger and has an average of only 15 or 20 grains. The millet was empty, a mere husk, with no head. The people were eating ground corncobs mixed with leaves of elm, poplar and ash trees, and the little berry that grows on the ash tree. Also potato tops where they could beg or steal them. These were soon disposed of. I found them eating thistles. I asked a farmer one day: 'Why are you eating this stuff?' It was being prepared by his wife. He replied: 'There is no help for it.' Then he added: 'I couldn't get my animals when I owned any animals to eat the food I am putting into my own stomach and that is what is being eaten by my family. You well know the consequences.'"

March will be the crucial month. These millions of people will then have become so weakened that unless they have more food they will perish.

Immediate action is necessary. Send money promptly to Geo. B. Huntington, Treasurer, American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Second Mile

This amount does not count on the One Hundred Million Fund. But we must not let our great denominational enterprise prevent our doing our utmost. This is "Second Mile" service.

1 cent will buy a meal;
3 cents will save a life for a day;
$1 will save a life for a month;
$2 will save a mother and babe for a month;
$5 will save a family for a month;
$10 will save a mother and babe till harvest;
$25 will save a family till harvest;

*The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention, 276 Fifth Avenue
New York City*

96.15
BAF

Volume II

February 12, 1921

UNIVERSITY OF Number 224

The Baptist

FEB 11 1921
Unit of the Urbana Ill

Published Every

the Northern Baptist Convention

EVANGELISTIC NUMBER

Where Clough's Telugu Converts Were Baptized

A Prayer for the Friends of Christ

LORD JESUS, in mercy thou hast called me out of darkness into thy light. Thou hast saved me by thy grace, forgiving my past and making me a possessor of thy Spirit. Thou hast given me peace with God--aye, the very peace of God within. Thou hast given me a sense of power to resist evil and to do thy holy will.

Thou hast put a rainbow in my sky pointing with certainty to an immortal life with thee beyond the grave. My past lies bathed in the light of thy love in forgiveness, my present in the light of thy love in saving energy, and my future in the light of this same love in the certainty of hope.

To what end is all this? It is that I may be an effective messenger of thy grace to my fellows. I would not disappoint thee. Help me to fulfil this high vocation. Awaken within me a concern for others which shall reproduce thine own shepherd care. Teach me the tact of grace: to be bold without being officious, intense without being fanatical, wise in the things of God and the soul without being pretentious. Teach me how to introduce others to Christ by introducing Christ to them. As a good salesman help me to secure decisions that shall change the whole course of lives.

O Lord Jesus, help me to win for thee the reward of thy sufferings.

JAMES A. FRANCIS.

Fresh from the Field

Regarding an appeal being circulated in the territory of the Northern Baptist Convention from the deacons and pastor of a church in Arkansas for aid in building a new Baptist church, Dr. Charles L. White of the Home Mission Society says: "Arkansas is in the Southern Baptist Convention, and appeals for church edifice work in that state should be made only to Southern Baptists."

The First Church, Mason City, Iowa, Rev. A. W. Tandy, minister, is receiving additions to the membership almost every Sunday. The Sunday school crowds the building, there is a constantly growing prayer meeting and all departments are on the increase.

For the last four months, Evangelist Williamson and Mrs. Williamson of Pitman, N. J., have been working in Iowa. They will finish their engagements there on March 6, and will be available for other churches after April 17.

Evangelist Geo. W. Taylor recently closed a successful meeting with the First Church, Baraboo, Wis. There were more than 150 decisions. On Feb. 1 he began meetings at Evansville, Wis.

Rev. J. B. Sims has resigned at the Smith Center and Oak Creek churches in Kansas, and is moving to Oklahoma.

Rev. W. E. Davis of Chanute, Kans., has resigned to accept the pastorate of the church at Cameron, Mo.

Rev. Russell G. Van Royan and Rev. Edgar Earl Hicox were ordained on Dec. 30 at the State Avenue Church in Kansas City, Kans.

Rev. Franklin A. Stiles has resigned as pastor of the First Church, Lima, Ohio, and will on March 1 take up his work with the First Church of Middletown. He has done a splendid work in Lima, both in his church and in the general life of the community. The church has about double the membership it had at the beginning of his pastorate.

One week of evangelistic services begun on Jan. 9 at Branford, Conn., was extended to three. Sixty out of eighty-five local members were in attendance, together with an equal number of non-members and friends. The pastor gave the message, and most of those present took part as occasion was offered, testifying to a quickened Christian life and a clearer vision of the immediate task to which the church stands pledged.

Rev. A. P. Howells is during February the supply at the First Church, Douglas, Ariz. During January he was with the church at Colton, Cal.

After having been with the Anti-Saloon League for several years, Rev. J. L. Watson has resumed evangelistic work and at present is conducting meetings at Newark, Mo.

Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Robinson, tithing evangelists, of Lansing, Mich., are spending the winter months in Detroit churches at the request of the Detroit City Union. In the Second Church recently, 150 signed a tither's pledge for the first time. The lectures are illustrated by still and moving pictures.

At the Morgan Park Church, Chicago, the Christmas European relief offering amounted to $710.83, which is by far the largest sum contributed by any church in the state.

Under the auspices of the Interdenominational Committee of the Central West for Missions, an all-day meeting is to be held on Feb. 18 in the Woman's Building of the Moody Bible Institute. This is the annual day of prayer for missions.

Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, the evangelist, of Waterloo, Iowa, will hold a meeting with the First Church at Fort Collins, Colo., from Feb. 6 to 27.

What Some Churches Are Doing

A Department of Methods

Call to Evangelistic Work

THROUGH its committee on evangelism, the Presbyterian General Assembly has issued a call to the Christian men and women in the pews. A portion of it is reprinted here in order that our Baptist people may become familiar with the practical and helpful program which is presented in another of the great Christian denominations:

The call of Christ to pastors and members is threefold.

I. Prepare

But how shall we prepare? We must prepare ourselves and our households, that no hindering thing may keep Christ from having his way either in our hearts or in our homes.

One who for years has proved himself to be a great lover of men and a keen observer of human life has recently said: "It is an appalling thing to me to observe Christians and to find that many who in their youth had a zest for Christian service seem in their maturer years to have become insensible to the calls of the Holy Spirit, and in consequence are losing much of the fineness of life." The sad thing about it all is that these same people seem to be unconscious of their loss.

What good thing has disappeared from our hearts? Is it the warmth of true devotion? Is it meditation on God's Word? Is it the habit of constant prayer manifesting itself as we walk the streets, as we serve in our hours of labor, and as we worship in the place of prayer? Is it the consciousness of God's approval of our lives and habits? And what have we lost in our homes? Is it love for one another? Is it patience under provocation? Is it care in culturing our children? Is it reverence? Is it the family altar? These all must be restored in our hearts and in our homes if we are still to count ourselves disciples of Jesus Christ; if we are to continue to cherish in our hearts a sure hope for eternity; if we are to render spiritual service for Him.

II. Pray

We are to enter with Christ into the work of intercession for men and objects entirely outside of our own interests. The supreme test of a Christian's life is to be found just here. Is there in his life enough of love for men, faith in God and perseverance of spirit to enable him to begin and continue the work of intercession?

Companionship with Christ in the work of intercession inevitably leads us to do two things:

1. It will fix our minds upon the objects of intercession in order that we may come to God with a definite, daily, devoted sacrifice of prayer to him on their behalf. No greater service than this can be rendered by any redeemed man. Mr. Mott has said that "the history of the church and Christian experience alike show conclusively that those who have accomplished most in extending the kingdom of God are those who gave to prayer for others and for interests outside their own lives the foremost place in the use of their time and strength."

2. The work of intercession brings us also face to face with our fellow men that we may intercede with them on God's behalf, even as we have interceded with God on their behalf. We need not hope to exert any strong influence upon men except we have first interceded in prayer for them. It is our contract with God and our partnership with Jesus Christ in intercession that will give us love, sympathy, understanding, freedom from fear, tact, winsomeness, and the ability to speak the right word in the right place when we appeal to others to give themselves to God.

III. Present Thyself

When we have prepared for service by cleansing our hearts, and disciplined ourselves by the service of intercession, we are inevitably led to the conclusion that we must once and for all yield ourselves to God for active service; or, as Paul commands Timothy, "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth."

What is the work that God is calling us to do who worship him in our homes and in the pews?

1. We are to present ourselves to the church, through its leaders, for immediate and definite service. It will not avail us to say that we are too busy for any service in the church, for time is a gift of God as much as life or treasure, and we are stewards of time as we are stewards of material things.

2. We are to present ourselves informed and ready for work. We are to find out what are the plans of the pastor and the church; what are the opportunities that lie about us in our immediate neighborhood and in the community; and we are to decide who are the men and women to whom we may speak concerning the call of Jesus Christ.

3. We are to present ourselves, having acquainted ourselves in some measure at least with the Bible that we may "handle aright the word of truth, as a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." One can answer from the Bible, and from his own living experience of fellowship with Christ, any question which may come to him from a sinful, hungry heart, about the way to find forgiveness and life and peace.

4. We are to be true to our enlistment pledge as a good soldier should be true, for "no soldier on service entangleth himself in the affairs of this life that he may please him who enrolled him as a soldier." Of course one must be occupied in the affairs of this life, but he need never be "entangled" by them.

5. We are to be persistent. The work of winning people one by one calls for superhuman patience, but this need not lead us to despair, for that is exactly the kind of patience which God gives us for his work. God expects to deal with others through us, or he would not have called us to the work of preparation and of prayer, and he would not have led us to present ourselves before him for service.

The Baptist

Vol. II

February 12, 1921

No. 2

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves

Business Manager: Edgar L. Killam

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE
MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WILLIAM A. MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HORE
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS
PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs including every family, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts. CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	34
WHAT SOME CHURCHES ARE DOING.....	34
NEW WORLD MOVEMENT PLEDGES AND RECEIPTS .....	36
STATEMENT CONCERNING THE FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY.....	36
EDITORIALS .....	37
MUSIC IN EVANGELISM, by Chas. H. Gabriel.....	40
CHURCH EVANGELISM, by A. W. Beaven.....	41
THE EVANGELISTIC METHODS OF JESUS, by W. R. Schoemaker .....	42
SUNDAY-SCHOOL EVANGELISM, by Albert H. Gage.....	43
WHAT HATH GOD WROUGHT? A Symposium on "The Most Interesting Conversion I Have Known".....	44
MY BEST REVIVAL MEETING, by J. C. Massee.....	48
THE BULLETIN BOARD.....	49
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	50
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	52
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	53
OUR OWN FOLKS.....	54
OUR MUSIC CORNER.....	62
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS, by Lee B. Doty.....	63

Church Clubs, Attention!

OUR club raisers are doing a great piece of work in securing the renewals this year. Attention is here called to a few of the large lists just received. We have increased our office force to meet the rush and can promise you prompt service. Make us earn our money. Send in your club at once.

Tonic

THE board of deacons has guaranteed a subscription list of at least 10 per cent of our membership, which is 1,064, and I am enclosing herewith the first of the new list of subscribers" (Fanny M. Brant, pastor's secretary, First Church, St. Paul, Minn.). This is a "repeat" order, plus.

"As this 'bulletin' indicates, I'm on the trail of renewals and new subscriptions. I expect to mail my list by Jan. 31, so don't worry about Fargo First" (Ralph W. Hobbs, Fargo, N. D.). This church last year had the banner list of the near Northwest, and still Dr. Hobbs is after new subscriptions! It is great to be alive just to see the new spirit in the denomination.

The lure of new subscriptions is not to be found alone in the bracing atmosphere of North Dakota. It is effective almost everywhere—East, West, North and South.

OF the large club lists received within the past week or ten days, in which there is a very noticeable number of new subscriptions, we will call attention to the Jefferson Street Church, Los Angeles, the First Church, Corvallis, Wash., South Bend, Wash., Santa Ana, Cal., Mapleton, Minn., Kankakee, Ill., Wellington, Conn., Newburyport, Mass., Lewisburg, Penn., Dover, Me., Granville, Ohio, Lewiston, Me., and Niobe, N. Y.

We are constrained to say something about Niobe. The pastor is George R. Holt. He cultivated cabbage and produced culture. Here's the secret: He planted a garden. The husbandman, according to the Scriptures, was first partaker of the fruits. His garden yielded abundantly. He set aside the cash returns from the plot of ground for Christian work. The church gave a thank-offering on Thanksgiving Day, a small part of which was added to the pastor's garden money, and presto! This rural church had twenty-six subscriptions to THE BAPTIST and a like number to Missions. Brethren, Pastor Holt must have had a great garden. We venture to prophesy that he is laying the foundation for an even more productive church.

AS far as we know, the Michigan Convention stands alone in one particular: It has a fund the income of which is to be used to provide missionary pastors and others with THE BAPTIST. The fund is the gift of a prominent layman who was formerly president of the convention. We quote from the terms of the bequest: "Believing in the Lord Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, and in the Bible as the Word of God and the only authoritative revelation of his will and purposes concerning man, and in the CHRISTIAN PRESS as the promoter of his kingdom of righteousness and peace, Christian intelligence and solidarity, I hereby give," etc., "to the end that such churches may be kept in closer touch and sympathy with our denominational aims and interests, methods and progress." This man not only believes in, but is ready to pay for such service. A dozen of our other state conventions are now providing their missionary pastors with THE BAPTIST. They do it as an investment.

Statement as to Table "A"

TO THE $47,689,636.65 reported by the states as pledged toward the $100,000,000 should be added $4,000,000.00, the anticipated income of all organizations during the five-year period from legacies, matured annuities and income from invested funds; $17,789.85 reported from mission fields, and $82,000 in special gifts, making a total credit on the fund to Dec. 20, 1920, of $51,789,426.50. There are other funds which will count but which are not reported now because we do not have definite statements regarding them.

This total is less than was reported at the Buffalo meetings of the Northern Baptist Convention. The decrease is accounted for by the fact that in order to enable him to accomplish the purposes he has in mind, one donor has requested that certain gifts made by him to the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board, which were included in the totals reported at Buffalo, be not counted on the $100,000,000 fund.

A subscription of $2,000,000 made unconditionally and another subscription of $2,000,000 conditionally—$4,000,000 in all—have been received toward the $100,000,000 fund from the same source. The unconditional subscription of $2,000,000 is included in the $51,789,426.50. The conditional $2,000,000 from the same source, as well as a conditional subscription of $1,000,000 from another giver, may be counted as follows: one-half of the amount when the total subscriptions aggregate $62,500,000, and the balance when $87,500,000 is raised.

It will be necessary, therefore, to secure additional subscriptions amounting to $45,210,573.50 in order to reach the $100,000,000 goal.

Next week we will publish the receipts by states to Jan. 20, 1921, showing what the receipts of the two home mission societies, the two foreign mission societies and the Publication Society have been for the first eight months of the fiscal year as compared with the receipts for the same period during the three previous years, and also answering the question raised by one of our most influential laymen: "Do you really mean business? Are you going ahead to raise the balance of the $100,000,000?"

J. Y. ARCHISON,
General Director.

Statement Concerning the Foreign Mission Society

WITH the advice and approval of the officers of the General Board of Promotion, the board of managers of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society makes to its constituency the following brief statement of its actual financial condition:

The financial requirements of our society for the current fiscal year amount to $2,735,976, made up as follows: Balance not provided for in the year 1919-1920, $808,023; approved operating budget for the current year, $1,761,287; special addition for European relief, $166,666. The total receipts applying on these requirements for the first eight months to Dec. 31, 1920, have been $853,316. The balance yet to be provided is $1,882,660. The receipt of its full allotment as based on the payment of all pledges to the

(Continued on page 60)

New World Movement Pledges and Receipts

TABLE A

This report, as of Dec. 20, 1920, is compiled on the basis of a form of report adopted by the General Board of Promotion at its annual meeting held in Minneapolis, Dec. 1 and 2, 1920.

I States in order of highest percentage of quota subscribed.	II Quota of $100,000,000 fund apportioned to each state	III Amount pledged to Dec. 20, 1920, plus benevolence credits for fiscal year April 1, 1919-May 1, 1920.	IV Percentage of quota paid or subscribed to Dec. 20, 1920.
North Dakota .....	$ 200,000	$ 200,283.99	100.14
Arizona .....	215,000	215,105.00	100.04
Wyoming .....	118,000	92,668.00	82.
Vermont .....	650,000	482,126.20	74.2
Washington, E. ....	626,000	416,142.93	66.5
Montana .....	200,000	132,000.00	66.
District of Columbia ..	200,000	128,973.00	64.5
New York, Metrop. ....	10,000,000	5,870,468.00	61.7
Missouri .....	1,000,000	611,917.17	61.2
New York State .....	7,606,000	4,634,628.73	60.9
Idaho .....	287,000	173,102.61	60.3
Nevada .....	51,000	30,000.00	58.8
Michigan .....	3,500,000	2,000,000.00	57.1
Rhode Island .....	1,320,000	750,000.00	56.8
Massachusetts .....	7,877,000	4,307,313.00	54.7
South Dakota .....	640,000	350,000.00	54.7
West Virginia .....	1,045,000	1,045,000.00	52.7
New Jersey .....	5,341,000	2,803,804.14	52.5
Washington, W. ....	830,000	434,713.00	52.4
California, N. ....	1,654,000	859,500.00	51.9
Indiana .....	3,500,000	1,814,072.21	51.8
Pennsylvania .....	8,968,000	4,596,650.56	51.3
California, S. ....	1,849,000	1,849,500.00	50.4
Connecticut .....	2,255,000	1,107,196.36	49.1
Oregon .....	1,045,000	501,000.00	47.8
Colorado .....	1,301,000	610,000.00	46.8
New Hampshire .....	1,107,000	518,000.00	46.8
Ohio .....	7,000,000	3,220,167.36	46.
Wisconsin .....	1,540,000	726,549.00	40.7
Maine .....	2,050,000	796,000.00	38.8
Delaware .....	150,000	58,048.61	38.7
Iowa .....	3,270,000	1,261,425.48	38.6
Illinois .....	7,108,000	2,593,784.00	36.5
Kansas .....	3,085,000	1,125,000.00	36.5
Nebraska .....	1,506,000	547,600.00	36.4
Minnesota .....	2,640,000	903,229.30	34.2
Utah .....	75,000	25,668.00	34.2
Total .....	$94,559,000	$47,689,636.65	50.77

TABLE B

I States in order of highest percentage of payments of pledges:	II Amount paid on $100,000,000 fund during fiscal year April 1, 1919-May 1, 1920.	III Amount due on pledges to Dec. 20, 1920.	IV Amount paid on pledges to Dec. 20, 1920.	V Percentage of amount on pledges paid Dec. 20, 1920.
Nebraska .....	$ 62,966.91	$ 76,888.87	$ 76,415.57	99.10
Illinois .....	100,160.00	395,623.04	363,438.01	93.13
Rhode Island .....	23,505.00	115,261.22	96,084.26	83.45
Connecticut .....	56,384.00	166,715.40	138,301.77	82.87
Maine .....	65,999.00	115,817.30	96,145.97	81.48
District of Columbia ..	20,942.31	20,942.31	17,819.82	78.64
Kansas .....	71,348.00	167,165.93	129,560.81	77.50
Minnesota .....	90,857.00	128,835.98	100,018.96	77.40
New York Metrop. ....	785,887.00*	1,170,149.87	903,704.03	77.23
Iowa .....	130,235.39	179,467.62	178,785.84	76.22
North Dakota .....	5,582.09	30,890.31	23,345.49	75.67
Wisconsin .....	37,596.17	93,439.63	70,406.29	75.33
Indiana .....	102,989.39	271,469.87	203,464.25	74.95
Nevada .....	4,278.84	2,177.45	2,177.45	74.28
Massachusetts .....	184,941.00	654,125.84	477,495.17	73.16
New York State .....	374,756.74	675,845.04	496,108.68	66.52
Pennsylvania .....	254,478.07	688,902.39	461,817.69	65.63
Washington, W. ....	27,805.00	64,557.57	42,061.30	65.15
New Jersey .....	126,327.88	444,834.39	316,874.23	65.09
West Virginia .....	40,237.00	159,092.20	102,639.92	64.51
Oregon .....	11,790.00	77,456.34	46,425.61	59.93
Vermont .....	38,453.86	70,390.32	41,127.55	58.42
Michigan .....	93,906.00	302,409.14	178,619.74	57.52
Colorado .....	29,165.00	92,151.70	52,760.06	57.25
New Hampshire .....	61,800.00	82,243.32	69,122.42	57.15
Delaware .....	8,311.00	7,891.06	4,355.54	57.14
Idaho .....	10,422.00	25,809.85	14,720.92	57.00
Ohio .....	110,056.34	493,430.00	346,712.23	56.24
California, N. ....	140,328.00	136,362.98	76,013.55	55.74
Arizona .....	9,799.85	32,572.32	15,634.80	55.08
Wyoming .....	4,513.00	13,986.05	7,513.77	53.72
Montana .....	20,414.00	20,414.00	10,533.95	51.60
South Dakota .....	20,000.00	52,355.77	25,982.04	49.62
Washington, E. ....	26,989.00	61,740.76	50,422.46	49.17
Utah .....	2,092.00	3,740.42	1,829.40	48.91
Missouri .....	—	97,083.01	37,887.04	39.02
Totals .....	$3,069,595.90	$7,471,567.37	$5,424,713.03	72.74

* Includes large payments on pledges to New World Movement credited to fiscal year ending April 30, 1920.

** Includes funds in transit applicable to the first six months of the current year but received after the books were closed Dec. 20, 1920.

The Baptist

Wanted—A New Apostle!

LIKE every other field of human activity religion has become divided into specialties. We have men who have given themselves to the tasks of stewardship, to the tasks of life enlistment, to the tasks of social service. Men have become specialists in foreign missions, in home missions, in education and in church efficiency.

It is well that our gifts are so diversified. The church is debtor to great lives dedicated to all of these splendid tasks. Indeed, men have been so efficient in and so devoted to some of these tasks that they have become known as apostles to this and that, and died in their labors with the blessings of thousands lingering in their fading consciousness.

We need a new apostle, an apostle who will not only tell us something, for we all know enough if we but stop to think, but an apostle who will stir us to holy action. I refer to the apostleship of the Christian home. Here is a field that is practically untouched. There will be no crowding, except for the services of such an one. He will be a voice crying in the wilderness.

A well-known leader in Baptist life stated recently that he had searched the hymnologies of all denominations and those not denominational and could not find one hymn dedicated to the Christian home. There were hymns for church dedications, funerals, marriages, baptisms, reunions—in short, for almost anything and everything; but not one hymn dedicated to the Christian home.

There are lots of Christian folks, living together, and living a very good average as Christian practice goes. But how few homes there are that are Christian homes—that is, organized with intention to show forth the Christian spirit, practice, and accomplishment!

We are great crusaders in this new age. We are ready to take a tilt at any vice or hint of vice. And yet, we are allowing to pass from our midst one of the most vital agencies for righteousness that God ever gave us. O, for an apostle with a burning zeal for the Christian home!

Evangelism

THIS week's issue of THE BAPTIST is devoted largely to the subject of evangelism. No explanation of this is necessary. The subject is occupying the minds and moving the hearts of people in all of our churches and will continue to do so.

The articles presented are worthy of a careful reading. The short stories of interesting conversions are original documents of the utmost importance and interest. Teachers and parents will do well to encourage the young people to read them. These stories remind us again that we serve a living God who moves in the hearts of men and whose coming changes darkness to light, failure to success, and despair to hope. A man's faith and courage grow as he observes how the earth is thus touched from time to time with the light from heaven.

Evangelism is a plain Christian duty. Christ bids all his followers to be evangelists. The professional evangelists undertake the task in one way. Every pastor intends in his heart to be practicing always what has been called church evangelism. There is no Christian upon whom it is not incumbent to go find his brother and bring him to Jesus. If the New Testament makes anything clear, it is that we are saved to serve, and that the first part of our service is the proclamation of the good news of the gospel that Christ is able and willing to save to the uttermost all that come to God through him.

Evangelism is also a privilege. Nothing brings us closer to our Lord than the attempt to win others to him. Nothing brings us closer to the men and women about us than a real effort to give them the joy which Christ has brought into our lives. It has been said of joy that, "He who joy would win must share it: happiness was born a twin." It is also true that he who would know the full joy of his Lord must share it: such happiness is found as it is bestowed on others. He that winneth souls is wise—and also happy.

The period between now and Easter should witness in Northern Baptist churches the greatest ingathering in their history. Why not? God and his power abide. The name of Jesus is potent. The only question seems to be whether those who call themselves children of God shall be found faithful.

The Foreign Mission Society Needs You

FOR THE current year the Foreign Mission Society needs $2,735,976 in order that its work may be carried on in anything like a proper fashion. Of this $808,023 is to take care of a deficit, $1,761,287 is for the operating expenses of the year, and $166,666 is for European relief.

In the eight months to Dec. 31, there was received $853,316. By May 1, the further sum of $1,882,660 must be in hand. The amount received in the eight months was far above the normal. So must the receipts for the latter part of the year be exceptionally large.

Such figures are worth studying. But they all reduce themselves to this, that if the amounts pledged in the New World Movement and due this year are paid, the society can provide for its work as planned and make a substantial reduction in its deficit. If these pledges are not paid, there is likely to be an increase in the society's indebtedness.

That puts the matter squarely up to the individual. If he keeps his promises, the work moves on. If he does not, the work is crippled. He may emphasize in his own mind the importance of his neighbor's keeping his pledge. That neighbor is thinking in the same fashion of him. And both are right. If John and his son and wife and his neighbor and the church and all the churches do what they have agreed to do, all will be well. If they do not, if there is failure anywhere, the work of the Lord will be stayed, and money will be spent in paying interest which might better be used in paying men and women to preach the gospel.

How would the New World Movement get on, how would the work of the kingdom get on, if all the Lord's men and women were doing what you are doing? Have you loved the Lord enough to keep your promises to him and to attempt a really big thing for him?

Do I Belong to Myself?

TO WHOM, as a Christian man, do I belong? To myself? To my family? To the man for whom I work? To the man or woman I am going to marry or have married? To my task? Or to what?

There are men in this world who frankly are owned by their business; it claims all their thought and energy. There are women who are the bond-slaves of their social interests; all else is put into a second place. There are people who work merely in order that they may play; when the day's tasks are over, then, according to their own claims, they begin to live. Most young men and women pass through a period when they absolutely belong to some other to whom they have given their love; we older people laugh at them, but at the same time have a fondness for their affliction.

But to whom does the Christian belong? Ask the question of some eminent Christians and you get no uncertain answer. Paul said that he belonged to Christ. "I live," he said, "yet no longer I, but Christ liveth in me." And in the line with him have been men like Luther and Wesley and Moody and Carey and Judson, path-breakers and foundation-layers in the kingdom of God, and a host too numerous to mention, to whom the world looks with joy and pride. All of these people had lost themselves, but they all bore glad witness that they had at the same time found themselves. In surrender they had discovered perfect freedom.

Is it true that we belong to Christ, to God? Do we really believe that? Do we act as if we believed it? Do we govern our thoughts and control our actions and use our money as if God was the owner and we only the steward? Words are of comparatively slight account: it is facts that count in the world. And a mighty fact this is of which we are speaking.

If this question of ownership were really settled and settled beyond dispute, many other important matters which now vex the world and the church would be settled with it.

O Lord, grant that I may not be one of those who say "Lord, lord," and then act as if they were their own masters. Make my words and my life to agree. May I assert my claim to be master of my own soul only to lay that life at thy feet. Teach me the joy of surrender. Let me know the blessedness of being Christ's man.

And may there come to me that peace which passeth all understanding as, with my hands in the hands of my Lord I say, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done."

Are We To Go to Rome?

HERE is an obscure line in a recent Associated Press despatch emanating from no matter where: "Mr. Egan, late minister to Denmark, may be the first U. S. representative to the Vatican."

The line appeared in a paragraph of generous approval of President-Elect Harding's expressed intention to disturb as little as possible the present personnel of the diplomatic service of the United States. In such a paragraph it had the unmistakable look of a "feeler." Would the public take notice of it? If so, in what mood would they take the suggestion? If nobody says anything, may we not conclude that public opinion is asleep on the subject? If some narrow sectarian makes a noise, it will be easy to cry him down for raising the religious issue on the eve of a great administration.

If the line was a "feeler," how do Baptists feel about it? If it was an authoritative announcement of policy by the incoming administration, it is pertinent to ask, How does the country feel about it?

It will be answered that Great Britain does it. Mr. Lloyd George has recently explained that Britain's representative at the Vatican since the beginning of the war has rendered useful service and that he will be continued.

We propose a question, and we should like it to ring from coast to coast, "When did the Vatican become a civil government, a Court, entitled to a diplomatic representative from the United States?" We do not believe that our government has so far forgotten its fundamental principle of the separation of church and state as to send a diplomatist to represent us in the councils of a church.

Milton, we need to hear thee speak again!

Divorce Is Not Right Because Common

ONCE upon a time a divorce startled people. The divorced man or woman was a novelty in the community. He was also more or less of a social outcast.

Such days are no more. Divorce is now the most hideously common thing. One seldom stops to inquire if perchance another has been divorced. The breaking of marriage vows is one of the things which people have first abhorred and then embraced. It can hardly be said, as it was in Rome, that there are women who number their years by their husbands. But there are some who have made a beginning.

Figures on divorce are so common that we shall not present any here. They do not mean much to most people. But they are many times larger than they ought to be. Men and women are getting used to the idea of divorce. The thought is gaining ground that, as one can put off a pair of shoes if they pinch, so one is at liberty to get rid of a husband or wife if he does not "fit." And people lose the discipline which would come if an uncomfortable situation were faced and lived through.

A good marriage brings much happiness. But marriage does not exist for the sake of happiness alone. On one side it is a school in which people learn the lessons which make them real men and women. On another side, it is the institution which creates the family. And families should be permanent if God's plans are to be realized. Divorce is even more demoralizing to the children than it is to husband and wife.

We do not say that there should be no separations or divorces. It may sometimes be necessary for men and women to live apart. Our Saviour recognized at least one cause for divorce. But we do say strongly that in order to preserve the integrity of the home, which occupies an important place in God's plan for men, our churches must take a serious view of divorce. Marriage is a sacred thing, the family is a holy institution, and no Christian should take a light and flip-pant view of either, or share the prevalent looseness of thought regarding them.

The man who carries a revolver will some day be tempted to use it. Nations armed to the teeth are certain sooner or later to find occasion for a quarrel. Militaristic policies are largely responsible for the present-day woes of the world. Nations do not arm primarily because they are suspicious of each other; they become suspicious because they are armed. A large army and navy leads to dreams of world empire. And world empires are won by war. The United States spends 93 per cent of its income on wars, past, present or future. If it is the purpose of the new administration to attempt to bring about disarmament by international agreement, then Christian churches should from now on, give themselves to prayer, and back their prayers by their works, to the end that this mighty advance towards the application of Christ's teachings to the relations between nations may actually be made.

While some people give themselves to debate on the question, "What is the Bible?" all of us can use the Bible day by day as food for our spirits. It may be to us also a picture gallery in which we shall find the portrait of God as given both in the words of inspired men and supremely in the face of Jesus Christ.

"He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith to him, We have found the Christ, and he brought him to Jesus." This is the pattern, the method, the spirit for every member of every church.

Some interesting material on the subject of evangelism, crowded out of this issue, will appear next week.

This Week's Prize-Winners

Our Baptist Heritage

BAPTISTS inherit a pioneering spirit that is ever reaching forward to newer revelations of age-old truths embedded in the Book. We inherit the inspiration of illustrious men whose pioneering spirits paved pathways to progress. We inherit the standards of religious geniuses who, seeking independently and alone in different centuries and in different countries to learn the truth, emerged from their seeking ready to die for Baptist convictions.

Balthazar Hubmaier, famous Catholic orator, studying the New Testament to refute the rising Reformation, went beyond the reformers and became a martyr Baptist.

Alexander Carson, Irish Presbyterian, impelled by his studies in the New Testament, surrendered a comfortable living to become a humble Baptist pastor and author of an epochal treatise on baptism.

Carey, son of a parish clerk, hater of dissenters, studying to understand the Bible teaching, suddenly and without human instruction entertained Baptist views.

Judson, sailing as a Congregational missionary, prepared to refute the Serampore Baptists but instead broke with all his associations to become the inspiration of American Baptists.

Add to this heritage Bunyan, Roger Williams, Onken, Clough! These all pioneered, which is the genius of Baptists; eschewed all authority save the Bible, which is the independence of Baptists; and arrived at a unanimity of essential convictions, which is the glory of Baptists.

Now our generation reincarnates this trail-blazing genius in the New World Movement, and seeks, in a spirit of daring undreamed of a decade ago, to plant missionary pioneers at strategic outposts of Christendom. Our peculiar Abrahamic propensity, the dynamic of our denomination, is inevitably pushing us onward.

El Paso, Ill.

HERBERT HINES.

Food versus Armament

AMERICAN relief of the war-stricken people of Central Europe is not only the clearest proof of the sincerity of our friendship, but also the surest means of national defense. It is the supreme opportunity to demonstrate our international good-will.

The cry of the three and a half millions of starving children is a direct appeal to America. No other country is able to relieve them. Our first impulse to succor them springs from Christian love. But good policy also demands it. For the friendly relations that will naturally follow the generous response to their need will prove a more effective defense than warships and armies. We shall not only save the lives of these helpless children, but awaken a feeling of friendship wherever this act of kindness is made known. The friendship of our neighbors for us is a better protection than the mailed fist.

In this and similar acts we shall best point the way to that new international spirit, which we are hoping will be established. The ready response to this appeal is really inspiring. It shows that we as a people believe in the new spirit of good will among the nations, the sentiment that was so aptly expressed by Mr. Herbert Hoover recently, when he said:

"I would rather have the good-will of other nations than armament great enough to overcome them."

Granville, Ohio.

W. A. CHAMBERLIN.

Music in Evangelism

The happiest person living is the consecrated Christian. He sings at church and at work. Few cannot be reached by song, especially if in the soul of the singer there are faith, conscience and love

BY CHAS. H. GABRIEL

WHEN God made music, he made it to be used as a vehicle for his praise and for the delectation of humanity.

The sweetest music of the universe, to the mother's ear, is the droning "a-a-ah" of the babe she holds in her arms; and its first little song, sung in baby dialect, is a symphony of beauty to her.

Almost every great reform that has gripped the world has used the persuasive powers of song, and the church universal has been more strengthened and cheered by its ministry, perhaps, than by any other means. Music overleaps the bounds of denominational hedges and becomes the possession of all mankind.

Some have claimed that a line of demarcation between sacred and secular music cannot be drawn.

Any real music is good music if listened to in the right spirit. It is the text and the spirit of its interpretation that draw the line. A cheerful "Sunshine in the Soul" drives the clouds away. "Hold the Fort" stimulates the despairing defender of righteousness. "The Son of God Goes Forth to War" stirs the slumbering patriotism of the church militant, while "I Need Thee Every Hour" keeps us near the cross and makes us realize our dependence upon Him.

Music in evangelism is helpful, unique, necessary.

HELPFUL

because it arrests and controls the thought of the congregation. In the audience are those whose hearts are heavy with sorrow, care and trouble. Others are fretting under the hurt of real or imagined neglect or injustice. Some are there out of curiosity, or even to mock. Anger, remorse, revenge, despair—almost every human emotion and desire are present in the heart of someone. Music, rhythm and sentiment of the right sort will assimilate and centralize this great conglomeration of mental aversion and agitation, and fit it to receive the message from the pulpit.

It quiets the natural commotion of an audience by pleasing the ear and attracting the attention. It is restful, physically and mentally. It breaks down all social barriers. The society leader and the plebeian are guests of the same Host. The professional musician and the amateur sing in the same chorus of praise without stress or criticism. High, low, rich, poor, saint and sinner—each is on the same level with the other in the house of the Lord, and music more than sermon produces this mental state.

UNIQUE

in that it is an attractive invitation and entertainment. Some are pleased with one song and some with another. An individual on the street hearing music and seeing a crowd will stop to investigate. If he likes the music, he lingers; if not, he goes on his way. So with the song in evangelism; it pleases and draws attention. Music unites and concentrates the thought of an audience upon one subject or theme, and that is the soul of power.

NECESSARY

since sacred music with its sentiment innately transports the thought of the listener into its own realm of hope, joy and peace. It is indispensable in modern evangelism. Many a truth has been indelibly engraved upon hearts immune from sermons. The sermon is soon forgotten, but the song that impresses endures for a lifetime.

As the soldier responds to the bugle call, so the human heart answers to the appeal of music. Some may scoff at the Christian sentiment expressed in a song that pleases their ear, but the thought, kept alive by the memory of the melody to which it belongs, often lives on to woo and win.

The happiest person living is the consecrated Christian. He sings at church, in the prayer meeting, in the Sunday school, and at his work. Many a life has been regenerated and a legion of wanderers brought back to the fold by hearing the call of the gospel through a simple song sung by a fellow workman on the street or in the shop. All people cannot be brought under the influence of sermon, but few there are who cannot be reached unawares and unexpectedly by song.

The amount of money spent annually by each one of the different denominations of the Christian Church possibly exceeds one million dollars. The budget for this purpose is liberal, but—money alone will never make church music a success. Some churches resort to all manner of means to secure musical "attractions" for their evening services, not realizing the fact that no musician will go to church to hear music, in its true sense. He knows the artist will not be there. If he goes at all, he goes to hear the gospel either in sermon or in song—not to listen to some "soloist" display the acquired ability to soar in flights of pyrotechnical solfeggios, or indulge in spasms of trills and tremolos.

Why, then, should the house of the Lord be turned into a concert hall in the endeavor to attract large audiences? Art should be recognized and encouraged in the church, and the nearer it is to perfection the better; but it must be accompanied by faith, conscience and love in the soul of the singer if spiritual results are realized.

Gipsy Smith Says:

THE Word of God is as essential as prayer to the one desiring to live the Christian life. When I pray, I talk to God. When I read his Word, he talks to me. That is why the psalmist said, "Thy word have I hidden in my heart that I might not sin against thee." The Bible should be put before the newspaper and novel. No day can be what it ought to be unless the soul has, first, its moments with God in prayer, and, second, some word from that Book which is the only book in the world that dares to say, "Thus saith the Lord."

Socrates said, "Know thyself." Marcus Aurelius said, "Control thyself." Jesus of Nazareth said, "Deny thyself." The unselfish life is the life that Jesus Christ lived, and no sane person in all history can say anything against it. And out of that sacrificial life, lived and died for others, Jesus Christ is saying to you and to me today, "Follow me." The biggest sin in the world is selfishness.

Church Evangelism

If we have enough prospects and see them often enough in the right way, and have a good enough article, we must eventually make sales. Pastoral evangelism wins, teaches and trains people

BY A. W. BEAVEN

THERE are two types of evangelism—professional and pastoral. While this article recognizes the immense value of the professional, it deals more particularly with the pastoral.

In pastoral evangelism there are three phases: Winning people, teaching them, and developing them in service.

In winning people, it is well to contemplate the general dictum of the salesman. If we have enough prospects and see them often enough in the right way, and have a good enough article, we must eventually make sales.

In creating a prospect list, the following are valuable sources from which to secure the names of those who are unchurched or non-Christian: Children from the Bible school; young people and adults from the organized classes; parents of Bible-school pupils; non-church members of the congregation; people of the neighborhood discovered as a result of canvasses or visitation. Sometimes additional names can be gotten by asking the congregation on some Sunday morning to write the names of people living near them who have no church home.

STEPS OF APPROACH

After obtaining such a list, a certain amount of preliminary work or seed-sowing can be done by mail. It might be, at first, by general invitation to the church services and announcement of special services. A little later, a letter might follow stating the need of every family of a church home, with its religious habits and religious instruction, etc. Still later, a more personal letter may be sent presenting the claims of Christ on the individual and the need for confession of faith. And still later, an announcement may be made that on certain evenings the pastor will be glad to meet all those who are thinking of confessing Christ or uniting with the church in any one of the various ways, in order to give them an opportunity to ask questions and to enable the pastor to inform them as to what would naturally be involved in taking such a step. It should be understood that attendance upon such a meeting does not bind one to unite with the church, but simply indicates interest.

THE INSTRUCTION CLASS

This instruction class might meet two or three consecutive evenings, and might involve a certain amount of instruction in the simple essentials of the Christian life: What it means to be a Christian; how a person starts; how he should confess it; what the church is; how it helps the new Christian; how the new Christian can help others through it; an explanation of baptism, the Lord's supper, and the inoculated with the idea of evangelism, the spirit of prayer, and a consecration to the work. A fall retreat for such workers, with the plan outlined and time given for preparation and instruction, is exceedingly valuable. This gathering should include the deacons and deaconesses, the trustees, the Bible school, teachers, and others who would make good personal workers.

The week of prayer can be used splendidly for more intensive preparation of these workers and the heads of all organizations, when the evangelistic responsibility can be laid upon them all.

In addition to this, it is a good idea definitely to organize these workers into groups, each group having a chairman. Perhaps have a certain number of districts in the parish. To these people, all names of prospects can be assigned for visitation, and new names, when found, can also be turned over to them. Regular meetings of these groups should be held for prayer and for reports on names. Ofttimes these meetings may take the form of cottage prayer meetings to which may be invited the people in the district who are interested.

A WORD FROM THE PULPIT

It is needless to say that the pulpit messages for the pastor, along the lines both of instruction in personal work and of exhortation to decision for the Christian life, must parallel the other program that is being carried on, and that there must be developed on the part of pastor and people, through prayer, study and conference, a genuine eagerness for decisions and forward steps.

Pastoral evangelism must necessarily include determination after people have made a decision and confessed Christ in church membership, to see that they are taught and built into the life of the church. There should be a group of people whose definite duty it is to take charge of new members for at least a year. Each member of this organization should be responsible for not more than two new members. He should not only meet the new members, but take them into the steps a person normally would take in uniting with the church. A group of personal workers should assist the pastor on these evenings. Part of the time should be given to prayer, and the meeting should close with a decision time. These group gatherings in some cases might easily be held at the Sunday-school hour, the people coming from various classes; or they might be held immediately before or after the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, or on a separate evening. The culmination of these classes might occur three or four times a year, possibly at a New Year's Eve baptismal service, in connection with the Christmas service at Easter, and on Children's Day.

Bulletin Board Suggestion

TRY the following on your outdoor bulletin board this week: If you feel shaky, get strong by going to church next Sunday. You will find strength in God's house.

THE PERSONAL FACTOR

Personal work and the personal interest, however, are absolutely essential to the success of this type of work. The mail will never do it alone. It is imperative, therefore, that the people of the church who must be depended upon with the pastor for personal work must be group gatherings, introduce them to the people; and see that they are put into Bible classes and other organizations with which they might like to unite, and with groups where they will become members, feel at home and receive the instruction and preparation for service that they may need.

Pastoral evangelism must of course provide also for a follow-up of these same people year by year. It should be the duty of some other group in the church to divide the membership into groups of not more than eight or ten families each, so that one person in each group might maintain year after year pastoral interest in and oversight of the people in his group.

Rochester, N. Y.

The Evangelistic Methods of Jesus

*Eight principles marked evangelism as practiced by Jesus.
If these are applied, results are as certain now as in his day*

BY WM. R. SCHOEMAKER

WHAT were the things considered essential in evangelism by Jesus? This is the most important question we can ask regarding this vital subject. Jesus' answers in theory and practice are quite clearly stated. We need to bear them constantly in mind if we would meet success and win his approval. These fundamental principles are:

1. Adequate personal preparation: Both in precept and practice Jesus is perfectly clear on the spiritual preparation necessary to do evangelistic work. This spiritual preparation is twofold—constant fellowship with God in prayer, and continuous power from God through the Holy Spirit.

Jesus himself was constantly in prayer. He prayed all night before choosing his twelve apostles—his first and most intimate group of evangelists. One of his last prayers was to aid and inspire them in their gospel work. He insisted also on the essential need of the Holy Spirit in the accomplishment of evangelistic work. It was in the power of the Spirit, received at the time of his baptism, that he accomplished his great evangelistic task. It was the one thing that he required his apostles to tarry for before they entered their vocation as evangelists. Prayer and the Holy Spirit are just as essential in our preparation for successful evangelism as in theirs.

2. Public preaching: This had the first place in Jesus' practice and precept in the promulgation of the gospel. In our emphasis on other forms of evangelistic work we need especially to remember this. Jesus proclaimed the message to the multitude. He did this in a kindly, tactful, but fearless way. He preached the good news of the shepherd seeking the lost. He sought to bring living water to the thirsty, and the bread of life to the hungry. Yet he was just as fearless in pronouncing doom upon the unbelievers. His parables of warning are some of the most vivid of his teachings. His scathing pronouncement against the Pharisees in the twenty-third chapter of Matthew has scarcely a parallel in Christian history.

3. Personal evangelism: Jesus constantly used the personal method of evangelism. In this way he supplemented or complemented his public preaching. By this method he not only brought the gospel message to Nicodemus, the woman at the well, Zacchaeus, and the thief on the cross, but to scores and probably hundreds of others. When he sent out the twelve and the seventy, it was not only to preach, but to do personal work. Two by two they were to go and tell the gospel story. The personal method must always have an essential place in the promulgation of the gospel. All followers of Jesus can do personal work. To do the most effective work, the personal workers must be organized. This is what the Master did with his disciples.

4. Social evangelism: Jesus made his great social world minister to evangelism. This is the most difficult kind of evangelistic work in our day. It was at a feast in Levi's house that Jesus came into personal contact with publicans and sinners. It was at a feast in Simon the leper's house, with Lazarus as a guest, that many believed on him. It was at a dinner in a Pharisee's house, when he was anointed by a sinful woman, that he preached the gospel of forgiveness. It was as a guest in the home of Zacchaeus that he brought salvation to that house. We need again to make our social life and the social life of our people, especially our young people, minister to the great cause of evangelism.

5. Philanthropic evangelism: By this is meant the carrying of the evangelistic message through deeds of brotherly kindness and mercy especially to the sick and afflicted. Jesus purposely linked his preaching and healing ministries together. He cured a nobleman's son, and salvation came to the whole household. He healed the man born blind, but did not abandon him until he had opened his spiritual eyes.

We as Jesus' followers must make this world of physical and mental suffering minister more largely to the proclamation of the gospel. Medical missions have realized this on foreign fields. We must do the same at home. The time of sickness is often the best time to reach a whole household.

6. Aggressive evangelism: Jesus constantly carried the evangelistic message to those who needed it. We

A Sonnet

GOD speaks to hearts of men in many ways:

Some the red banner of the rising sun

Spread o'er the snowclad hills has taught his praise;

Some the sweet silence when the day is done;

Some after loveless lives at length have won

His word in children's hearts and children's gaze.

And some have found him where low rafters ring

To greet the hand that helps, the heart that cheers;

And some in prayer, and some in perfecting

Of watchful toil through unrewarding years;

And some not less are his who vainly sought

His voice, and with his silence have been taught—

Who bear his chain that bade them to be bound,

And at the end, in finding not, have found.

—ENGLISH SPECTATOR.

wait until they first in some way come to us. In all his missionary journeys Jesus went where people were—home, market, seaside, roadside, wellside, etc. In a natural and normal way he presented the gospel message to all whom he could in any way interest. He used no spectacular means for drawing the crowds. On the contrary, he seemed constantly to avoid the spectacular. He made the gospel its own best advertiser. We in our day are coming to see that this is absolutely necessary if we are to have sane and effective evangelistic methods.

7. Universal evangelism: Jesus was interested in the salvation of all classes. In fact, with him there were no classes except two—the saved and the unsaved. He was as interested in the rich young ruler as he was in the poor widow; in the educated Nicodemus, as in the uneducated, sinful woman at the well of Samaria. His compassion for the lost was manifested to all. He was also supremely interested in the salvation of children. In this he had to overcome the opposition even of his own disciples. One soul was as valuable as another with the Saviour, and the value of every soul was infinite. All alike needed salvation.

8. Organized evangelism: Jesus trained and organized his followers to do evangelistic work. He did not leave them to do it in a haphazard way. He gave his twelve disciples, the inner circle, an extended course, theoretical and practical, as a preparation for leadership in this great task. He took a still wider circle of seventy and gave them practical instruction in soul-winning. He went still further and used all believers as his messengers of the gospel. He made a herald of the sinful woman of Samaria. He sent the Gadarene demoniac home to tell what the Lord had done for him. By the great commission he laid the task of evangelism on every disciple, great and small.

These eight fundamental principles of evangelism are just as essential in our day as they were in the first century of the Christian era. We need to apply them to our own day in a sane and practical way, and the results are as certain as they were in that early day.

Denver, Colo.

Sunday-School Evangelism

Sane and permanent evangelism is based upon the facts and teachings of the Bible. It also recognizes that there are definite "seasons of the soul." Sunday-school evangelism keeps both these facts constantly in view

BY ALBERT H. GAGE

E VANGELISM is the natural atmosphere of a Sunday school. The good news of the heavenly Father should radiate from every teacher, illumine every lesson and inspire the conduct of every scholar.

THE IMPORTANCE OF TEACHING

Sunday-school evangelism recognizes the place and importance of teaching. When in the beginners' department the superintendent is telling the stories of the heavenly Father who loves and cares, she is laying the foundations of a living faith. When a junior teacher is presenting the facts, history and geography of the Bible, she is doing the work of an evangelist. And when a teacher takes a group of young men or young women who are already Christians and helps them to understand and follow more perfectly Jesus' way of life, she is completing the work of an evangelist. There can be no sane and permanent evangelism that is not based upon the facts and teachings of the Bible. On the other hand, it is to be expected that the wise and effective presentation of biblical truths will result in personal decisions for Christ as Lord and Master.

Sunday-school evangelism recognizes that there are definite "seasons of the soul." There are three definite times when God's spirit strives most earnestly with the human spirit. During these periods more than 90 per cent of all conversions occur.

The first period of religious awakening comes around the twelfth year. For the child who has been taught in home and in Sunday school, it is perfectly natural to accept Jesus and become an active member in the church. It is surely a wise providence that provides Jesus as the personal helper and friend for a boy just before he enters the period of rapid growth, of great temptation and of misunderstandings.

A boy gave the following testimony before a board of deacons: "Jesus was twelve years old when he decided to help God. I am twelve years old. I have decided to do what I can to help God." This statement is characteristic of the religious life and attitude of a twelve-year-old boy. It seems both the right and the natural thing to be a Christian. If we were doing better work in our Sunday schools we would win more of these fine boys and girls in this first period of glad, wholesome religious awakening.

AN AWAKENING AT SIXTEEN

At the close of the period of rapid growth—about the fifteenth or sixteenth year, there is another religious awakening. This time it takes a different form. There have come new social and emotional experiences. Now your boy and girl are influenced either through their heart or through their companions. They accept Christ through some appeal that has touched their heart or through the influence of some of their closest friends, or through both.

A boy of fifteen who was known to be a Christian was asked to be one of those to be baptized on Sunday night. His reply was, "I don't want to be the only boy." This was perfectly characteristic and illustrates the strong social ties of this age. In the same church, when a certain young woman decided to confess Christ openly, at once several others in the same Sunday-school class said, "We will come too." If we were doing better work in our Sunday-schools we would have larger and better organized classes for our older boys and girls.

THIRD WAVE OF RELIGIOUS INTEREST

Again around the twentieth year the wave of religious interest rises. But this time the appeal is personal, individual and intellectual.

A young medical student joined an organized young people's class in a Chicago Baptist church. He was elected secretary of the class and also pianist of the school. After several months of service and of study, he presented himself voluntarily before the church for membership. He said: "When Mr.— was here he told us that there were three periods of life when religious interest was highest, and that most people who became Christians accepted Christ during one of these periods. I did not believe him. It made me

(Continued on page 48)

What Hath God Wrought?

Stories on "The Most Interesting Conversion I Have Known" were asked of a number of pastors. Here they are, written by men of today concerning men of our time, and all showing the gospel's transforming power

A Boy's Decisive Victory

YEARs ago—it doesn't matter how many—a boy of eleven sat in a back seat in a little prayer meeting in central Michigan. The invitation to stand for Christ was given. No one could appreciate the agitation of that boy's heart. He wanted to stand, but couldn't. A mysterious weight held him down. A good woman in front of him, evidently divining his condition, turned and gave him an encouraging nod. With a Herculean effort he struggled to rise, and as he left his chair a strange exhilarating reinforcement seemed to sweep over him and take possession of him, lifting him to his feet in spite of himself.

The boy was young and inconsequential, even in that little group, and others saw nothing momentous or dramatic in the simple incident, but in that young heart, it was a decisive battle and victory. Somehow he had broken out of himself and had experienced the tingling, energizing power of Christ. He made many mistakes afterwards, and he had much to learn; but the currents of his life were swung into a new channel. The memory of that incident still lingers through the years and reassures the reality of Christian experience.

A. WATSON BROWN.

Sacramento, Cal.

Christ Calls an Attorney-General

EVERY Baptist in Oregon knows and reveres the name of Rev. Andrew J. Hunsaker, pioneer. Quite recently he passed his 87th birthday. Rarely does he miss a service of the church. His prayers are a benediction, and his continued interest in personal work is an inspiration. When he speaks, young and old are at attention. The following notable conversation came under his observation years ago:

It was in the year 1888, and Mr. Moody, that prince of preachers and personal workers, was holding meetings at Walla Walla, Wash. One evening he made a startling challenge, in substance as follows: "I want God to get glory to himself by raising some Lazarus from the dead. I want the name of the most difficult case in the Northwest—a person whose conversion will cause men to give all the glory to God."

Mr. Hunsaker came to Mr. Moody with the case of the most notable citizen of the far West. Mr. Moody was visibly affected, saying, "You are the second person to present that name. I am going to help you. Have faith in God." According to his later confession, it was at that very time that a certain great man began to be troubled about his soul.

In 1853 George H. Williams came to Oregon as chief justice for the territory, under the appointment of Pres. Pierce. Later he served as one of the leading members that framed the constitution for the state. In 1864 he was chosen United States senator from Oregon. His ability was so marked that in 1873 Pres. Grant gave him the position of attorney-general in his cabinet. A few months later he was nominated as chief justice of the United States supreme court, but, learning of some opposition, he prevailed upon the President to withdraw the nomination.

During all these years Judge Williams had manifested no interest in religion. Rough in both the content and the form of much of his speech among men, he was one of the most profane men I have ever known. An outspoken unbeliever, no more unlikely candidate for the kingdom of God could have been found in the whole country. At such an hour, Mr. Moody came on to Portland. One evening during the progress of his meetings, the whole congregation was electrified by the appearance of Judge Williams moving to the front of the platform and, with the humility of a little child, bearing witness to the marvelous love of God. In substance he spoke as follows:

"In my lifetime I have made a great many speeches, many of them from this platform. I have for some days been troubled about the Christian religion. When I heard that Mr. Moody was coming here, I made up my mind that I would attend the meetings. At first I thought I would slip in and take a back seat in the congregation, but when I came in I decided to take a place on the platform and identify myself with the meetings. This was my first victory.

"Yesterday Mr. Moody came to my home, and, after a few personal words, I knelt in prayer with him. This was the first time in all my life that I had bowed my knee to either God or man. This was my second victory. Now I am standing before you to confess Jesus Christ as my Lord and Saviour. I run, I fly to the arms of Jesus and acknowledge Him as my Lord and Master."

This notable conversion made a profound impression throughout the Northwest. Men of affairs were led to think more seriously of and to act with greater respect toward the religion of Jesus Christ. Verily the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth! May God help us to claim its promises!

C. L. TRAWIN.

McMinnville, Ore.

An Indian Conversion

HE was a resident of Madras, of an unusually high family. His father had died, and he had been raised in the home of a rich uncle. This uncle was a man of high position in his city and also in the legal profession.

The great majority of conversions in India come as the result of personal work on the part of missionaries and native workers. This young man, however, had never attended a Christian meeting, nor heard a Christian address, nor talked with a missionary or a Christian worker. He was studying in a Hindu college in Madras and came into possession of a copy of the Bible. At first it interested him, and then it charmed him, and later it convinced him of the necessity of a different life. He went to the missionaries of Madras, and they, knowing the bitter persecution that would follow, sent him to Ongole. The missionaries in Ongole wanted to be perfectly certain that he had "counted the cost," for they knew what he would have to meet. They took him under instruction, but declined to baptize him until he should be perfectly sure that he could stand the test.

They notified his people in Madras of his intention, and every day his eminent friends from that city came on the train to Ongole to beseech him not to disgrace them; but he was firm and, renouncing his caste and inheritance, was baptized.

Persecutions came, but he never regretted his stand. He went to Burma, fearing the danger to his life, which he understood all too well, and there lived a noble Christian life until he died. W. T. ELMORE.

Lincoln, Neb.

"I Am Ready"

IT was not in a revival meeting, nor even in a church service, that one of the most interesting conversions I have experienced occurred, though doubtless the public services contributed their part.

The subject was a man who stood high in community and business life. His charming wife and two children were active church members. He was taken sick with a slight attack of the grip, and the pastor paid him a visit, being careful to select a time when he was alone. After a pleasant conversation, the pastor said, "Mr. —, I covet you for the work of Christ and the church." Looking the pastor straight in the eye and calling him by name, he said, "When I get ready to join the church, I'll let you know." Not knowing whether this was an indication that he resented the solicitation or whether it meant that he had been seriously thinking about it, the pastor replied, "Very well, Mr. —, then I shall expect you to speak to me about it one of these days; and all you need to say when you reach the conclusion is, 'I am ready.'" The pastor prayed earnestly for that moment to come. One evening a few weeks later the church phone rang, and the pastor took down the receiver to hear the man at the other end of the wire say, "I am ready." Soon after, he and his younger son went down into the baptismal waters together. He is now one of the most useful and influential men in a large and prominent Baptist church. J. E. SMITH.

Spokane, Wash.

A Miracle of Grace

ONE day, a few years ago, I received a telephone call asking me to come immediately to the county jail. On arriving there, I found that a notorious thief desired an interview. His name was Fenton, and he had been arrested for stealing. He gave me his confidence and began to tell me his life story, which was one of the most interesting I have ever heard. He had been brought up in a Christian home in Canada, but at the age of twenty-one had begun to steal, and for twenty years had followed the career of a robber. He had already been in three penitentiaries and many jails. He was now facing a sentence to the fourth penitentiary unless I could prevail on the judge to co-operate with me in trying to save him from the sentence and his wicked life. Everybody thought it was a useless case, and the judge himself felt that it was almost impossible to save such a well-known crook and a thief of that particular type.

After his trial, he was given a short sentence to the work-house, and then was paroled to me. In the course of a few weeks I had the joy of leading the man to Christ, and soon afterwards baptized him. His salvation was a miracle of grace because of his long life in crime and the fearful record that he had made. For three years I have watched this spiritual transformation go on, and today Mr. Fenton is a well-known lecturer, telling the story of his life in an address entitled, "The Cause and Cure of Crime." He addresses many churches, is frequently heard at business men's clubs, and sometimes speaks to working men's organizations, when thousands hear him. He has already won hundreds to Christ and the Christian life.

Cleveland, Ohio W. W. BUSTARD.

A Stalwart Engineer

ONE conversion in my experience towers in the landscape of my mind like Pikes Peak, sun-kissed with the light and power of God. It took place in the old Clark Street Mission, Chicago, where I witnessed many a modern miracle of "Twice-born men." The subject of my sermon that night was, "Under Love's Wings," and the text was "How oft would I have gathered thy children together as a hen gathereth her chickens beneath her wings, and thou wouldst not."

The point that touched the heart of this particular man was that no chick is so soiled by grime and dirt as to be refused shelter 'neath the mother's wings. He came down the aisle, in response to the invitation, still under the influence of drink, a stalwart man on whose face sin had walked rough shod, leaving only a wreck of his former strength, like a giant tree struck by lightning. He bowed in tears before the redeeming Christ, and his great frame shook with sobs as the whip of conviction thrashed his conscience; and he arose a new creature in Christ Jesus, changed by the Spirit's power into "a human peak, quivering with a thousand mornings."

This was his story in brief: He had been an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, with a wife and two children sheltered in a humble yet happy home. But strong drink, with its bloody talons, had torn up the home nest, scattered the nestlings, and thrown him over the precipice.

That night he told me that he was going back and gather his family together under the wings of love.

He went out of my life "like ships that pass in a night," but he traced me to Lima, and after about a year he wrote me a letter saying that he was happy with his family again, was back on his old engine, and was abiding still under His wings.

FRANKLIN A. STILES.

Lima, Ohio.

What a Printed Invitation Did

SOME years ago, in a small-sized city, four churches joined in holding a series of evangelistic meetings. The meetings were held in each church for one week. A day or two before the meetings began, notices were scattered in the homes of the entire city, accompanied by an invitation to attend.

One family at least did not tear up the notice, but read it. This family had not been in touch with any church. The father, upon coming home from work, was shown the messenger. He read it thoughtfully, and then said, "Where is that church?"

Though he had lived in the city for a good many years, he did not know where the church was, and neither did his wife. But interest was aroused. After supper the husband said to his wife, "Let us go to the church and see what is doing there."

They found the church; they heard the gospel; and they went home serious. The next night they went; and when the invitation was given to go into the inquiry room for prayer and conversation, they were among the first to go in. It was a privilege to talk and pray with them. The Lord opened their hearts. They went home that night rejoicing in the peace of God. They brought the children with them night after night, until all the members of the family old enough to accept Christ came into the kingdom.

It went like wild fire through the city that Mr. — had been converted. Why? Because he was so well known, because he was known as one of the greatest gamblers of the place. He was never known to go to church. He earned much money, but it all went into the gambling pool. But men liked him.

He had many good qualities. Men believed in him despite all his faults. When it was said that Mr. ——— had been converted, men said, "There must be something to it." I baptized this brother, with most of the family. He became an honored citizen and, in due time, a respected officer in the church.

Let us not despise little things.
Bozeman, Mont. E. R. CURRY.

Strength for Confession

IN the spring of 1919, at Indiana Harbor, Ind., we found a poor sick Hungarian man, with a large family. His illness was incurable. The pastor and the missionary, working together, relieved the suffering and persuaded the man to read the Hungarian Bible. For months while he lingered it was constantly at his side.

After he had been confined to his room for weeks, one night he came to a Hungarian prayer meeting at Katherine House, our Christian center, and told the story of his conversion, which in substance was as follows:

"Last night as I slept, the Lord Jesus stood by me and told me to come here and confess him and be baptized. When I said I was too ill, he said, 'I will give you the strength to do as I say.' So I am here."

The story seemed strange to the little group of Hungarian Baptists, and they wished to see "some fruits in his life," so he was not received. The following Thursday night he was not received. The following Thursday night he was there again with the same testimony. This time he was received; and on the next Sunday afternoon I baptized him in the American Baptist church, whither he had walked a distance of about half a mile.

When I said to him after his baptism, through an interpreter, "Jesus will give you strength," he said in reply, "Only for this, my dear brother." He went home and to his bed. He was never with us in the church again. Some weeks later we laid him away, and on that occasion Bro. Elias Revy, the Hungarian missionary, preached from the text: "And it shall come to pass that at evening time it shall be light." True, indeed! A great Light had shone into his poor soul and led it out of the error of vain dependence on the knavery of priestly efforts and into the presence of Christ himself. He was saved.

ROLLO C. SPEER.
Bloomington, Ind.

Ready for Either Home

THE task of choosing the most interesting conversion is like trying to choose a favorite text from the Bible: much depends upon the point of view, the circumstances and the individual mood.

In response to the public invitation, a little lad of eleven years expressed his desire to become a Christian. I remember clearly the impression on my mind: He looks so young and so small. At the close of the meeting I talked with him and opened up the Scriptures, showing him the simple plan of salvation. He said to me; "I have been thinking about being a Christian for some time, and I have decided that if I am old enough to do wrong I am old enough to do right." And the lad showed an intelligent grasp of the gospel. With the consent of his parents, who were not church members, he was received into the church by baptism.

Soon afterwards the lad was taken sick with diphtheria. His father was a doctor, but in spite of all that love and skill could do, the lad succumbed to the disease. Just before his death he said to his mother, "Mama, I am going home." The broken-hearted mother said, "Willie, my dear, you are home. This is your home." Willie replied, "I don't mean this home; I mean that home yonder." The mother said to me in the hour of her sorrow, "I am so glad that Willie became a Christian and was baptized and received into the church." Not long after, the mother confessed her faith in the Lord Jesus Christ by the public act of baptism. CHARLES ELDRIDGE.

Coffeyville, Kans.

"Wonderful What Faith Can Do"

IT has been given me to see many conversions, but the most interesting I have seen was that of Jack Hunter. After a violent quarrel, he and his brother engaged in a pistol duel and Jack was fatally wounded.

On Sunday morning, at Jack's request, his physician called me to the house. Going there in haste, I saw that he had only a short time to live. After passing the time of day, I said, "Well, Jack, how is it?" and he replied, "It is all right. I have made my will, leaving everything to my wife." Then I said, "Jack, we are all hoping and praying that you will recover, but in case you do not, how is it with you?" Turning his face away for a moment, and then looking up at me, his face filled with despair, he said, "It is mighty dark to me. There is no hope."

I then read to him John 3:16, I John 1:9, Rom. 10:6-13, and Matt. 6:14, 15, and tried to make plain to him the way of the Saviour who would forgive sins and receive the sinner unto himself. After we had talked for some time, I knelt by his bedside, and as I prayed he repeated the words after me. When I had finished, he offered a prayer of his own. Looking at him, I saw that the dark cloud was lifted, and the light on his face was such as one is not often permitted to see. With a smile, he said to me, "It is all light now. The darkness is gone. I see clearly. It is wonderful what faith in Christ can do."

He went that afternoon to meet Christ face to face; but before he went, he gave a beautiful testimony for his Lord.

A. W. TANDY.
Mason City, Iowa

A Fight for God and for His Own Soul

BROTHER VICTOR one Sunday morning went by our church on the other side of the street. It was just before service time. He suddenly stopped and watched the people going in and by the church. He had just left his home after some harsh words to his wife and children. The family lived with the wife's father and mother. They were all Roman Catholics.

Victor had not been to church for fifteen years. He was unwashed, unshaven, unkempt, and had on his working clothes. Victor was a rough fisherman. As he stood opposite the church, he was nervously chewing a good-sized cud. The golden juice of the weed was quite visible at the two corners of his mouth, and some had trickled on his square and determined chin. His cap was on the back of his head—to indicate, no doubt, that he did not care for anybody. He was a bully in the arena. He was six feet tall and was very bony and muscular.

On the doorsteps of the church, a few of our men, well dressed and apparently happy, were talking together when they noticed the strange and rough-looking man listening to their conversation. One of them, considered very bold, had the audacity to beckon to the stranger to come into the church and hear the minister preach. I had already taken my place at the pulpit to open the service when I saw that great giant of a man, with breast half bare, take a seat in the rear of the church. A man came up to the pulpit to whisper in my ear that a "rough one" was in the church.

The subject of my sermon was "The Lost Sheep." The Good Shepherd was the Lord himself. The sheepfold was the church. The sheep, well taken care of and protected from wild beasts, were the disciples of the Saviour. The lost sheep in the wilderness was the human soul wandering outside the kingdom of God and suffering in the kingdom of Satan. After the service I shook hands with the man and invited him to come again. He said he would; and though the smell of alcohol was in his breath, he was able to see and say that the lost sheep was himself. To the surprise of us all, he was in the church at the evening service. He was completely sober, was washed and shaven, and had on a white collar and his Sunday clothes. He kept on coming regularly. He became the janitor of the church, and took a great interest in the work.

The crisis came at baptism. He was to be baptized at a certain Sunday evening service. At the morning service of that day he came to me and said, "Mr. Cayer, you will have to excuse me * * * I cannot be baptized tonight." "What is the trouble, my dear brother?" I asked. To use his own language, he said to me, "My home is turned into a hell, and the devil is in it. If I go be baptized, my wife and children all leave me, my father-in-law go make me move out of his house, and Black Devil, brother-in-law, go to kill me. I better wait for some other later time." I simply said to him, "My dear brother, this is a war between God and the devil. You are a strong man. You used to fight for the devil once. Now you are asked to fight for God and your soul. If you are defeated today, perhaps you will be defeated again later, and finally defeated in hell. If you win today, you may win again later and save all your family." This took place before the morning service. The man was much agitated during the service. I noticed that he was biting his lips often, and that he was now and then passing his big bony hand over his forehead and through his hair. The conflict of destiny was taking place in that man's soul while I was preaching on the beatific vision of the soul suffering and dying for Christ, as Christ had suffered and died for us.

At the close of the service the man was ready not only to fight for God, but also to endure persecution and to suffer martyrdom. The victory was won! I shall never forget the impression he made on me that memorable Sunday morning when, holding my hand in his two big hands, and all vibrant with holy emotion and heroic determination, he said to me, very meaningfully and deliberately, "I—go—be—baptized—tonight—though—all hell is here, my wife and children leave me, and my brother-in-law kill me. I—go—be—Christian Baptist." He was baptized. His wife followed him about a year later.

P. N. CAYER.

New Bedford, Mass.

The Greatest Audience—One

IT was years ago, when a student at the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, that I met Joe and learned a great lesson, the secret of efficiency in evangelism. A conference upon evangelism was being held at the old historic Second Church.

Preceding the evening session, under the leadership of Dr. M. P. Boynton, at a corner a block from the church, a street meeting was conducted. There was a good crowd and much interest as, standing upon a chair at the curb, the pastors of the Chicago churches told briefly, one after another, their experience of the gospel of the saving Christ. I was near enough to the center of things to have touched each speaker, and with an overflowing heart I envied each his chance, but knew that no such opportunity would be mine, an unknown theological student.

The time of the appeal came, and with it, to my heart, the convincing message of the Spirit: "The Lord does not need you to speak from that chair, but to speak to someone on the edge of the crowd." I did not hesitate. I sought out one only to be rebuffed, another only to be spurned, and a third to find a hungry-hearted man. It was Joe Hudson, ragged, dirty, unkempt—whose hand gripped mine as he said, "I want to get next to Jesus Christ." Ere I bade him good-night he had promised to come the following evening to my room at 150 South "D," when we would more thoroughly go over the matters involved in his decision.

At noon the following day, at a time when usually I would have been away—something kept me. You may wonder what: I have never wondered since. I heard timid steps in the hall and a timid knock at my door, and when I opened the door, there stood Joe. "Why, Joe," said I, "I thought you were going to get that job, and that I would not see you until seven." "Well, I did not get it, but"—as he put his hand to his heart—"that does not worry me: I want to get this straightened out." We sat down together and talked things over, to discover in his life the memory of a sainted mother, whose prayers that day were having their abundant answer. The great decision of Joe's life was sealed in faith as we went to our knees at the throne of God.

When we arose I said, "Now, Joe, we have settled the main thing. Let us talk of another. You want to get a job. Wouldn't you like to use the shower baths—the boys are all out to lunch?" "Say, you bet I would. I wish you had seen the place I slept in last night." "A 10-cent lodging-house, was it not, Joe?" A nod was the answer, speaking volumes of the lack of self-respect cheap lodgings bring in their wake.

While Joe was in the shower I looked at the garments he had worn. I will not describe them. They beggared description. I was a poor theologian, but when Joe returned—and I'll say to his credit that he had used half a cake of soap, the remainder of which, with the towel, I afterward threw away—I had laid out on the bed a clean shirt and collar and tie. "Joe, I am going to loan these to you, and when you are ready, we will go out to lunch." He replied, "Say, I don't want you to think I'm that kind—beating my way." "No, Joe, but you will let a friend have the privilege of friendship, will you not?"

Of the successful finding of a good job; of the subsequent increase of wages with honest work; of the resultant reunited family—for sin and wretchedness had sundered home ties; of letters in my possession from that thoroughly redeemed home, its inmates loving one another and God, and being supporters and members of his church—of all this I need present here no detail. But the man who that day, after we had lunched together, walked off the campus of the university was Mr. Joseph Hudson, if you please, with head erect, with life changed, with self-respect restored—a new creature in Jesus Christ; while the man with halting step and timid knock who came to my door was a down-and-outer, Joe Hudson.

And the lesson I learned? God did not want nor need me on that chair by the curb, with the others speaking therefrom to the crowd, that preceding night as he did want me and need me to speak to the one on the edge of that crowd—a hungry-hearted man: the greater audience, after all. It reminds me of the suggestion contained in that text written of Phillip and the eunuch: "And opening the Scripture, he preached unto him Jesus"—where the preacher was a man, where the audience was one, where the subject was Jesus Christ, and where between the one speaking and the one hearing there was an open book, the Scriptures. I have always believed that out of that street meeting I got a bigger dividend than anyone who spoke there that night.

Delavan, Wis. R. L. KELLEY.

Sunday-School Evangelism

(Continued from page 43)

mad. But the more I thought about what he said and compared it with my own experience, the plainer it became to me that he was right."

Sunday-school evangelism is based upon the two principles of instruction and the definite periods of religious interest. There need, however, to be careful and prayerful opportunities given from time to time for the personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour. A declaration day service at Christmas, New Year's, Easter or Children's Day may be conducted with great profit. Such a service needs careful preparation. Decisions can often be made personally or by classes with their teacher or by departments. Never expose your school to some zealous person who does not know nor love boys and girls and young people. Have definite pastor's classes for instruction of the new converts. Arrange the school so as to conserve the new life and develop it into the fullness of the Christlike life.

My Best Revival Meeting

By J. C. MASSEE

THERE were in my experience two "best" revival meetings—totally different, yet strikingly similar.

The first was in Mansfield, Ohio, in the winter of 1900 and 1901. It began in the Sunday school. The pastor had given the invitation; but there was no response. A girl fourteen years of age moved across the aisle and spoke a quiet word to a friend, who yielded and came forward. She went to another and another with the same result, until she had won five that morning. The sixth later joined them. Two of the six have become missionaries. The revival spirit spread. It developed into a meeting which continued throughout the entire month of January. The pastor did the preaching, and one of the young men of the church conducted the opening service each evening, reading the Scripture and praying. There was generally no conference between the pastor and this leader. It was soon manifest, however, that the Holy Spirit was directing, for day after day the leader and the pastor chose the same Scripture for the evening service. The whole meeting centered around one song, "I Surrender All." For the greater part of the month the thermometer was below zero. Snow and ice were everywhere. The pastor, becoming sick with the grippe, spent his days in bed, but preached in the evening. The meetings were well attended. Backsliders were reclaimed and many were converted. The reaping from this meeting went on for eighteen months. Evils of long standing in the church were corrected, and a spirit of fraternity was born which lasted for years. That spirit tied the hearts of the church and the pastor together with a tie that binds with tender firmness and strength until this day. It was a meeting which the pastor and the people conducted under the leadership of the Holy Spirit. I feel its glow again as I write.

The second meeting, also the best, was at Dayton, Ohio, five years ago. The pastor preached for three weeks. The congregations were never larger than 300. There were sixty-six additions to the church membership, and also other conversions. The work was quiet and deliberate, but gracious to the last degree.

It is to the method there that I would call attention. On five Sundays special appeals were made in the Bible school by departments. We began with the juniors all together one Sunday. They were of tender heart and easily reached by the gospel invitation. No appeal to the emotions was made. There was a simple, earnest explanation of the way, and quiet prayer, and then a gently voiced invitation to the children was given. They were sent home to tell their story of conversion. Much was made of it from the pulpit. An announcement was made that on the next Sunday a similar meeting would be held for the intermediates; on the following Sunday, a meeting for seniors and adults; on the next Sunday, one for grown women of the school; and on the final Sunday, a meeting for all men's classes. A personal letter was sent to each member of each class advising him of the plan and purpose, and invitations were given that day. None were caught by guile, but were forewarned. Only a few stayed away, and most came expectant. The gospel message was given, the gospel invitation extended, and the gospel belief followed. Those who accepted the invitation were further instructed in the duties of baptism, church membership and Christian service. Children under fourteen were taken into catechetical classes for from two to three months before being baptized.

While this work was being done on Sunday, meetings were held each evening in the week; the invitation always being given. Monday evening was known as "everybody's night"; Tuesday evening, as "mothers' and fathers' night"; Wednesday evening, as "church night"; Thursday evening, as "strangers, visitors' and backsliders' night"; Friday evening, as "young people's special night"; and Saturday, as "rest day." The pastor preached, and we had a special evangelistic singer. Those who accepted the invitation were sent, according to their choice, into the inquiry room, to the left, to meet with the deacons to be approved for church membership, or to the right, to meet with the teachers or pastor, for further instruction and prayer that they might know the way more perfectly.

I believed then and I believe now that as to method this was the sanest revival I have yet conducted, and that as to results it was the most satisfactory also. This kind can be accomplished only by prayer and in an atmosphere of constant, perennial evangelistic preaching and gospel invitation. For years it has been a rare experience in my ministry to have a Sunday in my own church without confessions of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. This is brought about by a simple presentation of the old gospel and a humble reliance upon the Holy Spirit for results, followed by an earnest and imperative invitation for men's acceptance of Christ as Saviour and confession of him as Lord.

The Bulletin Board

DR. MANNING ELECTED BISHOP

In the Episcopal Church, the diocese of New York is probably the most influential. The election of Dr. William T. Manning as bishop is therefore an event of interest to all other denominations. The sessions of the convention which culminated in the election on Jan. 26 were enlivened by an attempt of the Hearst papers to pillory Dr. Manning as a "reverend Britisher." He was indeed born in England, but has lived in the United States practically all his life and has been known for his active Americanism. Since 1908 he has been rector of Trinity Church in New York City—probably the wealthiest parish in the world. Dr. Manning is liberal in theology and greatly interested in Christian unity movements.

METHODISTS MOVE TO CHICAGO

The headquarters of the Council of the Boards of Benevolence of the Methodist Church has been moved from New York to Chicago, opening in the latter city on Feb. 1. The mission boards and the Book Concern are to remain in New York for the present. This removal comes about through the discovery by Methodist leaders that their chief constituency is in the Middle West and that these people regard New York as being a long way off.

DRUGGING CHINA

Years ago there was intense indignation among church people in the United States because of the discovery that the British government had practically forced opium upon China.

That indignation should now turn upon ourselves, for customs records show that within a short period of five months enough morphia and opium were shipped from the one port of Seattle to give one dose to every man, woman and child in China. These narcotics were shipped to Japan and carried through China largely by Japanese peddlers and druggists.

The Jones-Miller bill, now before Congress, is intended to shut off participation by the United States in this traffic.

MR. HARDING ON UNITY

British papers are quoting a letter from Mr. Harding in which he speaks of bringing the English-speaking peoples of the world into closer amity and understanding, and goes on to say: "I am impressed not so much by the glory that the English-speaking peoples may take to themselves as by the profound duties God has thrust upon them—the duties of being restrained, tolerant and just. These duties will find their greatest recognition in united and unshakable friendship, understanding and oneness of purpose—not for the exclusion from the brotherhood of others, but for a better brotherhood flowing towards others." He believes that when there is developed a workable association of nations for preventing wars, the unity of the English-speaking peoples will play no small part in promoting a world-wide fellowship of nations.

ASKS REDUCTION OF ARMAMENTS

At its recent meeting at Garden City, Long Island, the Foreign Missions Conference of North America passed the following resolution: "Meeting at an hour when plans are being proposed that look toward the reduction of armaments and the endeavor to reestablish this shaken world with its outlook toward peace rather than toward war, this conference wishes to voice its prayerful hope that wisdom, power and success may attend these proposals.

"In registering this expression of its eager desire, the conference is confident that it speaks not only for itself but for the great mass of its constituencies at the home base and no less for its thousands of representatives in all the great lands of the world."

WHAT IS YOUR ADDRESS?

The Board of Promotion endeavors to keep the addresses of the pastors in the territory of the Northern Baptist Convention. The denominational papers are watched for announcement of changes of pastorate. State directors are asked to assist the board. The greatest help could come from the pastors. Pastor—when you move to another field, will you write to the File Clerk (or any clerk or anybody), Board of Promotion, 276 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., and say: "I have left ——. My present address is ——".

BAPTIST HOPES RISING IN ENGLAND

Since 1905 there has been an unbroken record of decreases in the membership of English Baptist churches and Sunday schools. The Handbook for 1921, just published, seems to show that this ebb has been stayed. The membership was all but maintained for the year, while the number in the Sunday schools shows a considerable increase. The figures in the Handbook are really made up to the end of 1919 and do not therefore take into account the spiritual results of the United Fund Campaign. The 1100 baptisms reported at the end of November are believed by many to be the first-fruits of a great spiritual harvest. The Handbook for 1922 may therefore show a good increase in the number of church members.

PASTOR CONDUCTS LUMBER-CUTTING

As a practical attempt to help men out of work, Rev. M. R. Sheldon, pastor of the First Church, Bucyrus, Ohio, has gone into the firewood business. He has secured the offer of a number of acres of wooded land near the city, the owners of which wish the land cleared, and put men to work under the superintendence of a capable foreman. The wood is cut into stove lengths and sold in the city. About a dozen men can be used in this way, but Mr. Sheldon has found it possible to put some of the applicants in touch with other jobs. That such effort does not interfere with the spiritual work of the church is shown by the fact that in the first year of the pastorate, which is just closing, there have been forty-five additions to the church.

A GOOD SERMON

The Church Times gives the following as the marks of a good sermon: "It must be filled with the personality of him who preaches it; in other words, it must convey the impression of internal conviction and personal sincerity."

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES FOR PASTORS

The Christian Work is planning a series of correspondence courses which promises to be of general interest. The first of the series is one on town and country church methods which Dr. Edmund deS. Brunner will direct. The course has ten lessons which take up country church problems; organization and finance; the survey of the parish; religious education for the local church; worship, evangelism, preaching; special work for men and boys, women and girls, New Americans; leadership training for local and life work; the new country church building; the church's obligations to the community; building the program of town and country church.

Associated with Dr. Brunner, who is now executive secretary for rural work of both the Federal Council of Churches and the Home Missions Council, is an Advisory Council of Home Mission Board Executives, most of them directors of town and country church departments, several pastors, and two laymen.

While the course is designed for the pastor, lay workers will find it valuable.

WILL THE SUNDAY SCHOOL DISAPPEAR?

Prof. Allan Hoben of Carleton College is quoted in the Morning Tribune of Minneapolis as saying: "I hope to see the day when the Sabbath school will disappear entirely from the church. It does more harm than good to children because it tends to draw them out of the regular church services. Investigation of the influence of Sabbath schools upon children has shown that they have actually reduced their spiritual morals." Many of the teachers, he says, are unfit and therefore teach many errors. The newspaper account does not represent Prof. Hoben, however, as in favor of abolishing religious education. On the contrary, it represents him as wishing that this important work would go back to the family and into the public school.

The Chimney Corner

The House of the Giraffe

THERE is a house not very far away—a pretty house with all the appointments that a pretty house ought to have; but it is, none the less, the House of the Giraffe. For whenever a child inside those four walls asks, "Why this?" or, "Why that?" the mother, who is as pretty as the house, says gently, "You wouldn't understand, dear. Just do as I say." And the gentleness turns into impatience, the impatience into exasperation, and the exasperation into threats when the "whys" are repeated and repeated. So the children's questions dangle in mid-air, or perhaps are kissed away by the pretty mother, who adds light-heartedly: "Run out and play now, but remember what I said."

So the children leave the House of the Giraffe to play in the garden, but they keep right on wondering about things.

There is more than one House of the Giraffe in town—in any town: very nice houses, many of them, with hardwood floors and two bath-rooms and electric lights. But the children might as well be living in frontier log cabins for all the actual good that modern plumbing and wiring does their souls, for they are hungry—hungry for the reason why.

He had such houses in mind, perhaps, when He made that request way down across the centuries: "Feed my lambs." And the mother who spreads thick slices of bread with butter and jam does not always realize that she is starving her children with the single statement: "You would not understand, dear."

What do you suppose goes on inside small brains when that verdict is pronounced at every prohibition? Mentally they must form little pictures of the Reason Why hopping up on some shelf, way beyond the reach of even tip-toe soaring.

That matter of obedience, for instance—implicit obedience. "I wont! I wont!" screams Jack; then, in that tragic fairness of curious childhood: "Why should I, anyhow?"

"Because I say so, dear."

And even if the word is not spoken, it hovers in the air: "You would not understand." So that in any House of the Giraffe two things seem almost bound to happen in regard to obedience. The illuminating Why being lodged on its inaccessible shelf, there is a stubborn dislike for toeing a needless line of procedure, and a flaming determination to break over the minute adult backs are turned. Whereupon another generation is started on the bias that parents are "too awfully old-foxy for words." By the end of the teen age there will be a trusted teacher somewhere to be confided in: "My mother and father don't understand things." And so the tables get themselves turned!

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Etiquette, too. Now you must admit that etiquette seems like a tiresomely staid little social commodity, brewed years ago by tame grandparents who never had movies or high-school frolics or taxis to dash around town in.

"O mother, how perfectly pokey of you! All the other girls are going to the party with boys—yes, in autos. What's the harm? Why can't I go?"

"You wouldn't understand, Helen, but it's one of those things your father and I will never permit. Just make up your mind to that, dear."

The above is quoted verbatim. It happened in a House of the Giraffe, where the real reason that makes certain elements of etiquette a moral necessity were so high up in the air that nobody could eye them with understanding—except, of course, the tiresome complacent giraffes themselves.

For it all boils down to the frightful fact that in this day and age the parents who exact complete obedience without explanations are in grave danger of becoming as inapproachably aloof as giraffes. Why not? Surely they built their own house. In deserted solitude let them eat all that exalted wisdom stored up above youthful heads. Even the family pet gets the delicate attention of having its saucer of food conveniently placed on the floor beside the stove. Only children in the House of the Giraffe go hungry.

So look in the mirror and ask, "Dear me, am I a giraffe? Am I?"

This is no whimsy: it is too uncomfortably solemn. Five out of every ten girls or boys in a high school will convince you of the truth, and four out of every ten children in the nursery. Keep your ears open in the presence of parents and children. "Because I say so" bespeaks the Tyrant Giraffe. "You wouldn't understand" bespeaks the Baffled Giraffe. And no doubt there are species all the way between—dear, amiable, helpless species who cannot buckle down to the fact that their job is feeding lambs instead of transforming themselves into giraffes.

How very companionable it would be to

"A Child and I"

THE only crown I ask, dear Lord, to wear

*Is this—that I may help a little child.
I do not ask that I should ever stand
Among the wise, the worthy, or the great;
I only ask that softly, hand in hand,
A child and I may enter at thy gate.*

take down some of those select bits of giraffe wisdom and serve them up in morsels tempting enough to feed to hungry minds!

"Sweet reasonableness" (Matthew Arnold's synonym for Christianity) sits behind the eyes of half the children in the world. They know they are people, and they respond to being treated as people. It's only this incomprehensible giraffe business that perplexes and then alienates them.

It is true that in a clash between authority and insubordination, the sweet reasonableness vanishes into thin air! That is hardly ever a time to talk things over satisfactorily. Even parents are prone to lose the same point of view. This article is a plea for inoculation—beforehand! "Shoot" honor and religion and obedience and etiquette into the system by means of a hundred secretly-administered pricks.

There is nothing more subtly flattering than to be taken into somebody's confidence—somebody older, somebody with authority. Very well, suppose you are a parent with a dream of your family's conduct in your mind's eye: Talk it over as man to man—indirectly, by stories, by comments on the blunders or successes of others; directly, by painting a picture of the future. An intimate philosophy of history: God; father; mother; you, our child; our hopes.

There is a quaint charm in entering a home where the children say "we"—meaning mother and father and I: beings on the same plane, with common interests. In the House of the Giraffe parents are referred to as "they."

Once more the Friend of Little Children speaks across the centuries: "Feed my lambs." So with whatever ingenuity we possess we begin devising means of explaining fitly the beauties of the Reason Why.

Always Doing One's Best

THIS habit of always doing one's best enters into the very marrow of one's heart and character; it affects one's bearing, one's self-possession. The man who does everything to a finish has a feeling of serenity; he is not easily thrown off his balance; he has nothing to fear, and he can look the world in the face because he feels conscious that he has not put shoddy into anything, that he has had nothing to do with shams, and that he has always done his level best. The sense of efficiency, of being master of one's craft, of being equal to any emergency; the consciousness of possessing the ability to do with superiority whatever one undertakes, will give soul satisfaction which a half-hearted, slipshod worker never knows.—Orison Swett Marden.

The Young Reserves

"The Log of the Flying Pig"

CHAPTER II

THE night that mother and father told us about the cruise we were going to have in a canal boat, I don't believe either Bill or I slept a single wink—not right away, anyhow.

No sooner was I in bed than I realized I had forgotten to ask the most important questions. Where were we going? How do people lie down to sleep in a boat like that? Where is the cooking done? And how about old Agony—would she dare go?

I might add that we are all very fond of Agony. She is our colored maid. Her real name is Agnes, but she's such a groaner and moaner that way back in the days, years ago, when she first came to work for mother, somebody called her Agony, and the name has stuck. We mean no disrespect by it, for she's one of the family now. It's no worse, really, than my being nicknamed Peggy (which isn't my real name at all, as you may have guessed). But the point is that while I lay in bed it occurred to me that Agony would never, never do in an ark. You see, she is so very big! Unless it should turn out to be a larger ark than I supposed, she could never fit in—except, perhaps, with the help of a shoe horn! And then if she did much moving around she might rock the boat—make it list in that unpleasantly tippy fashion. Dear mother is rather timid in boats when people rock them, so we never do—never. Therefore, how could we ever take Agony? There was more to my thoughts, but I fell asleep in the middle of them.

And breakfast was one grand babble. It was so hateful to have this last day of school when there was the ark to prepare for. Usually last days of school are very heart-breaking, I think; but not this year. I never asked so many questions in my life as at breakfast; and mother got so mixed that she said "Yes" in all the "No" places, and "No" in all the "Yes" places, so that Bill and I spent the entire morning in school feeling curiouser and curiouser, as Alice in Wonderland once said. I think school lasted hours longer than usual in spite of the same old clock ticking on the wall. Anyhow, we finally flew home; and, sure enough, there was my own little trunk waiting for me to finish packing. Mother had done most of it.

"You'll only need your everyday dresses, Peggy, and your dark sweaters. Get your rubbers and sneakers and bath-robe, and collect your hair-ribbons and hankies. And when you get all your absolutely necessary belongings stowed away, I've a new job for you. See this nice big straw hat I bought for you? It's just a farmer's hat from the 5 and 10-cent store, but I think it would be fun to paint some flowers around the crown, don't you?"

Well, didn't I? That's just like my mother. She's so deliciously unexpected. Of course she's an artist herself, and she wishes I had real talent. But I haven't much. However, I knew how to daub the most entrancing poppies and daisies and buttercups around the crown with her oil paints, and it wasn't until I was all through that it dawned on me that this was her clever way of keeping me out of mischief for several hours. With Timothy trotting around underfoot all day, and Agony losing her head every ten minutes (not really, but almost!), and Bill doing excited summersaults all over the house, no wonder she wanted me quiet for once in my life.

The hat looked perfectly lovely, I thought, when I paraded in to show it off. Mother said the wide brim would protect me from the sun, for I freckle so badly that Bill says I look like a map of the Pacific Ocean dotted with little islands. We have a game naming them: "This is Aniwa," says Bill, and then instantly I must name who it was who went to that island and converted the cannibals: John G. Paton, as of course you know. Doubtless he's a hero of yours, too.

Timothy was much impressed with my hat.

"Did Mrs. Noah wear a hat wif a bwim?" he asked. I might add that we're very, very fond of Timothy, but he's only four and says such odd things. You mustn't mind them. We just smile and love him more than ever. Besides, mother has made the Bible stories so real to him that he thinks the Noahs lived only yesterday instead of centuries ago.

Mother told us at supper about the dearest, queerest thing that Timothy did while we were at school. She missed him for over an hour, and the house was so quiet she was afraid something was wrong, because up to that time he had been tagging her like a shadow. So she went into the nursery, and what do you suppose? Right across the nursery floor he had a funny procession of his toys all ready to go into "our ark," as he calls it. But he was standing with one hand very anxiously clutching his dear little chin.

"They won't go in wight, muvver," he gasped, running to mother's arms. "See—only one elephant, and one lion and one doggy. But, muvver, there's two pencils and two stowly-books and two Easter eggs. Will God care?"

Now, wasn't that dear? You see, mother had made it so real to him before that God wanted Noah to have two of every living thing to go into his ark, and Timothy does want to please God so much. Sometimes Bill and I wish we were as good; but, as Bill says, we've been born so much longer that our minds are too full of other things—queer, unnecessary things, no doubt.

All afternoon I was so busy filling up the corners of my trunk with the various clothes and play-things I was sure I would need for forty days and forty nights, that I had little time to think of Bill. But after supper I went into his room and stood rooted by the door. You never saw such a cyclone of things! It was as if a bomb had exploded and scattered everything. But to Bill it was all very orderly indeed, and he stood in the middle and pointed out the ruins like some general of the war in Europe.

"My compass!" he exclaimed, digging it up from a pile of stuff.

"What'll you want that for?" I asked.

"Isn't that like a girl?" groaned Bill. "Why, to steer with, stupid! Father's the captain and I'm first mate."

I drew myself up as slim and impressive as possible as I said, freezingly, "Canals run in straight lines, between narrow banks, and I consider that you are being absurdly nautical to clutter our ark with a compass."

Bill grinned: "Crazy! Well, here's my fishing tackle, although father says there won't be anything but minnows and tadpoles in a canal. Here are my bathing things, my scout things, my specimen pins and mounting trays—for I'm going to collect bugs for our zoology class; and here's my butterfly net, too, and of course my baseball stuff. And here are our rainy afternoon games. There are my neckties and one extra collar button. And here's a notebook and mother's fountain pen for noting latitude and longitude, and all other kinds of observations, for father says I should keep a log of the 'Flying Pig.'"

I sat down on the floor with a thump: "Keep a what?" I cried.

"A log," he repeated. "That means a sailor's record of a ship's progress."

"Oh!" I said, dazed. "And what was that about the pig?"

"Didn't you hear? Why, father says there's a name painted on the side of our canal boat: 'Flying Pig,' it reads. 'Flying Mule' would be more to the point when the donkey balks."

"What—a donkey?" I gasped, for things were getting curiouser and curiouser.

"A donkey, of course, and a donkey-driver. The boat's got to go, hasn't it? And sometimes I'm to drive the mule myself—father said so. I guess no boy in town ever went off on such a lark as this!"

"I can't wait for tomorrow," I sighed. "Do you suppose Noah was half as excited about the ark?"

But Bill was stuffing his belongings into his trunk so higglety-pigglety and making such a commotion that he only grunted.

But when I was in bed, with the lights off, I had to admit that of course in Noah's case there was to be a flood, and he must have felt dreadfully about losing his neighbors—even such scallawags as they were. Whereas we will be coming back to our neighbors more interesting than ever—like Artic explorers or wild animal hunters, for we will be full of the adventures of the 'Flying Pig!' Next week I'll tell you what happened next.

"I wish I was a little fish," said Jack. "Father says the ocean is full of currents, and I like currants better than anything, except bananas, apples, oranges and sweet potatoes."—The Philadelphia Record.

Young People's Work

Topic for February 27

A WONDER WORKER—MARILLA BAKER
INGALLS

Matt. 28:19-20; Rom. 1:14-17; 10:12-15

Among pretentious missionary biographies you will find none of Marilla Baker Ingalls. Because of her expressed wish, no memoir of her was written. A brief sketch of her life, "By the Banyan Tree," prepared by Grace Mitchell Everts, was issued some years ago for a limited circulation among those who loved her and had helped in the work to which she gave her life. From this and from numbers of the former Baptist Missionary Magazine is gathered this account of her eventful and remarkable life.

Eventful and remarkable it was in an unusual degree, and much more: it was consecrated, faithful, fruitful, great in service, great in sacrifice, and great in results.

1. The beginnings: Marilla Baker, the eldest daughter of Selah and Sally Baker, was born in Greenville, N. Y., about 1827. We see her as a merry, light-hearted child, loved and loving, reading from the Bible to her blind grandfather, and showing at an early age a surprising knowledge of the book. One day at church a stranger, a missionary from Burma, addressed the people. On the desk before him was a little white idol from Burma. The small maiden listened with rapt attention and sympathy, and announced afterward to her companions that if she wore grown up she would go to Burma and tell the people that that idol was no god.

2. Womanhood: But neither mission band nor Farther Lights nor woman's society was there to tend that tiny seed sown in a heart brimming over with love and laughter and joyous life. As the years passed, no girl ever loved a good time, a pretty dress or a tale of chivalry and romance more than Marilla Baker. But there were nights when, closing her chamber door on all the fun and frolic of the day, the young girl thoughtfully turned the leaves of the great Bible book lying on the light-stand and, snuffing the candle, looked long at the pictures of the gods; and when she came to the picture of the idol that had spoken so strongly to the little child, she bowed her head in silence and watered the seed with prayers and tears of pity for the poor Burmans.

One day Lovell Ingalls, a missionary from Burma, came to her stepfather's house in Wisconsin. The daughter at first gave him scant welcome. He was grave and quiet, twenty years her senior, and a widower, whose wife and two children were buried in that far-away land. Before long the maiden's warm heart was touched by his story; pity grew to love, and in 1850 they were married.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organization, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The mother of the bride watched the ceremony with many misgivings. "Marilla, her daughter, whose dancing feet were never still, whose merry laugh was never quiet; Marilla with the sparkling eyes, the nodding curls, the quick retort; Marilla, with all her love of a dainty dress, a feather, a flower, crying her heart out over a favorite novel and throwing all responsibility and care to the winds; Marilla, the wilful, married to a missionary twenty years her senior and facing the unknown future with liveliest expectation!"

And yet those very qualities of vivacity, wit, enthusiasm and buoyancy, consecrated to the Master's service, were the means of drawing the attention of the heathen people among whom her life was spent, and of winning many souls to frust the Saviour whose presence filled her with joy and love.

3. Widowhood: Five years of happy married life and service for others passed quickly in their Burmese home. Then Mr. Ingalls, worn out with arduous and unremitting work at the age of forty-eight, died at sea, between Calcutta and Rangoon. Before he passed away, he said to his young wife: "I am glad I have given my life to these people, and if God does not close the way, work on, work on for the Burmans." And work on she did, through discouragement and trial, through good times and bad times.

4. Her life work: After a short visit to America to bring home for education her husband's daughter by his first wife, she again sailed for Burma. Against the advice of many friends and fellow workers and missionary leaders, she chose to go alone to the jungle village of Thonze, in lower Burma, where there were only two or three Christians. Here she began the great work of her life—away from white companions, five days' journey from doctor or friend, and without most of the comforts of civilized life.

The "Guide Book" (1917-1918), speaking of the Thonze Mission, says: "The mission compound here is a large tract of land obtained by the late Mrs. Ingalls, but now held by the Foreign Mission Society. There is a station day school, and the work is largely for Burmans. A motorboat is found useful in the evangelistic work. Population in field, 350,000; churches, three; church members, 555; baptisms, thirty-three; schools, two. Buildings: Mission house, chapel-school building, dormitory, teachers' and preachers' houses."

Up to the last, this faithful worker labored for the people to whom her life was given, and near the close of 1902 she quietly fell asleep in Jesus and was buried, according to her wish, in the little jungle cemetery. (Adapted from Service.)

News

WESTERN WASHINGTON

Rev. T. H. Hagen, director of religious education, says in writing about the state B. Y. P. U. rally held in the First Church, Tacoma, on New Year's Day:

"I think I am safe in saying that the rallies have been growing in interest and numbers since I came to the field, but this year's rally was the biggest of them all. A conservative estimate is that at the afternoon program there were 500 young people present from the unions in our field. By actual count, 435 sat down to the banquet after the afternoon program. Despite the fact that a football game was being played at Everett between the Everett High School and the East "Tech" of Cleveland, the Everett unions chartered a special car and came seventy-seven strong. They had arranged to have telegrams sent them at the close of each quarter giving the score of the game, and there was an outburst of cheering when the game ended with Everett defeating Cleveland. The New Year's rally of 1922 will be held in Everett."

MICHIGAN

The B. Y. P. U. of the First Church, Cadillac, held its fourth annual "pep banquet" Nov. 19 in the parlors of the church. The attendance went beyond expectations. Large delegations came from Boon, Reed City and Manton. An interesting program was rendered.

Rev. H. S. Grandholm, pastor of the church, acted as toastmaster, and Dr. H. Ford of Traverse City gave an inspirational address that was much appreciated. Echoes were heard from the other young people's societies represented.

ELEMENTARY WORK IN NEW YORK

"The work of my department continued with only slight abatement while we were moving our home to Binghamton. I am now able to give much more time to state duties, which had become necessary if the growth of the department was to be stimulated.

"Because it has already been demonstrated what can be accomplished by efficient leadership in an association, we are proceeding as rapidly as is consistent with the careful selection of such directors throughout the associations of the state, affording special training where necessary to secure the highest type of competent leadership."—Mrs. Frederick W. Tomlinson.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for February 27

THE REWARDS OF FAITHFULNESS

Matt. 25:14-30. Golden Text: Matt. 25:23.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

With his going away and his coming again in mind, Jesus continues his parables. The parable of the virgins emphasized vigilance. This parable stresses faithfulness. The parables are strictly oriental, and their setting is in the first century. The servants mentioned in the text were slaves to whom their master transferred the responsibility of administering part of his business while he went away for a visit in another country. He distributed responsibility according to his judgment, of the ability of each servant. After the responsibility had been transferred, it was the duty of each servant to administer the trust in such a way as to make the business pay dividends.

The Lesson Taught

Transferring the task, assuming responsibility, and shirking service are three of the main points of the lesson.

Transferring the Task

The picture clearly teaches that which has ample corroboration in the New Testament, viz.: Jesus purposed to extend his kingdom through men whom he had chosen to carry on the work which he began. In plain words he said to his disciples, "As my Father sent me into the world, even so send I you into the world." And later he promised them the aid of the divine Spirit in order that they might be his witnesses unto the uttermost part of the world. The business atmosphere and principles of the parable should not be so spiritualized as to lose the substance of its teachings. Why not take the parable just as it is and let money in it mean money and business mean business? Does not the task of extending the kingdom of God in the world take money, and should not many of the servants of the Lord be set apart to make money honestly and give it away religiously for the support of those who must give all their time to teaching, preaching and healing? The parable needs no interpretation if the talent is allowed to represent money. Jesus has transferred the task of getting the money for the kingdom to men whom he selects for that purpose, and he holds them responsible for doing business in a businesslike manner as his stewards in his absence. Jesus has no other way of getting his kingdom supported. He is not here in the body to direct the affairs of great corporations, to earn a salary, or work for wages. Therefore he must depend upon his servants to trade with their talents and make money for him.

This is just as much a "holy calling when taken seriously as the call to the gospel ministry. The Christian business man is also a minister of Christ. The Christian laboring man is another minister of Christ even though he may not have had the hands of the elders laid upon his head in ordination.

Assuming Responsibility

Two of the three servants assumed their responsibility. They were given a trust, and they proceeded at once to administer it. They did not quarrel over the difference in the amount each possessed. The man with $5000 and the man with $2000 were equally responsible for making the most of what they had. Sometimes the man with less than his more fortunate brother acts as though his responsibility were less. But in this he makes a mistake, because each man is responsible according to his ability, and no more. This is the point at which the tithe breaks down. The New Testament principle is, "Let each one give according as he hath been prospered." The tithe is a starting point for all, but not a stopping point for many. The fact of the parable is that all belonged to the Lord. The servant is the trustee. He is responsible for such investments as will produce not 10 per cent, but 100 per cent. The servant with the five talents and the servant with the two talents doubled the original investment. That was in the long ago before the days of big business. Today doubling the original investment is not considered much in business. Even bank stock, which is the most conservative of investments, trebles and quadruples in a short time. If business men would put their powers to make wealth at the disposal of Christ, the world would soon be evangelized.

Shirking Service

The sad note of the parable is found in the wail of the man who hid his talent in the ground. He gave back the original investment to his master. Why, then, should not the master have been satisfied? Because the servant himself was an investment of the master, and both man and money had depreciated because of the failure to serve. The servant had depreciated in value to his master because he maintained the wrong attitude of mind. His attitude of mind was negative and false and selfish. The talent was a secondary consideration; the servant was everything. That is the reason for Paul saying to the Corinthians when he took a collection for the poor in Jerusalem, "I seek not yours, but you." Jesus called the one-talent shirker an "unprofitable servant." Judged by this standard there are multitudes of "valueless investments in men." The outer darkness is the only fellowship for which they are fitted. "To him that hath shall be given."

Sunday-School Lessons for Adults

By F. F. PETERSON

(Continued from last week)

A CLASS of women wished to make a careful study of the mystery of human suffering. The Book of Job was made the text, with Moulton as commentator. Five solutions were found, and a group of women became responsible for discovering everything possible connected with each solution.

Group one investigated "Suffering as heaven's test of goodness."

Group two: "The very righteousness of God is involved in the doctrine that all suffering is a judgment upon sin."

Group three: "Suffering is one of the voices by which God warns and restores men."

Group four: "The whole universe is an unfathomed mystery, in which the evil is not more mysterious than the good and the great."

Group five: "The proper attitude of mind towards the mystery of human suffering. The strong faith of Job, which could reproach even God as a friend reproaches a friend, was more acceptable to him than the servile adoration which sought to twist the truth in order to magnify God."

It is evident that such a study as outlined here, if thoroughly undertaken, would open up many questions in theology which would call for a careful study of the Bible and current thought. That is precisely what happened.

A men's class spent a year in the study of Proverbs. The teacher assigned to several men such questions as, "What proverbs in today's lesson are most appropriate for the home? For business? For sons and daughters? For fathers and mothers? For wives? For husbands? For lawyers, doctors and teachers? For labor? For capital? For amusements and society? etc. Each man was to keep a list in a blank book which was occasionally read in class. This year's work was most profitable.

Oftentimes a debate can be arranged. Two or three people can be given special assignments to report the following Sunday. Very little time needs to be devoted to geography, customs, or ancient political relations. The teacher can easily give the proper setting.

It is well to restrict the discussion. If a person has spoken once, he may not speak again until others have had an opportunity. Look out for the "hobbyist," the "crank" and the "garrulous." Encourage discussion. Do not let it go too far afield. Begin and end promptly, leaving some things still to be said.

(Continued on page 63)

Our Own Folks

Wisconsin News and Notes

By ROBERT W. SHAW

A Notable Pastorate

On Jan. 19 the First Church of Racine held its annual meeting. It was a notable gathering because it also celebrated the tenth anniversary of the coming of Dr. Henry Clarke to the pastorate.

During these ten years Gorton Hall has been erected at a cost of $110,000; the church property has been revamped at a cost of $10,000, and $30,000 has been added as an endowment. The present property valuation of the church is nearly a quarter of a million. In these ten years there have been 513 additions to the membership, 247 of which came by baptism. The present membership is 700, a net gain of 250. The church has the largest Baptist Sunday school in Wisconsin and the largest Christian Endeavor Society in the state.

This year has been the best in many ways in the history of the church. During the evening the church presented Dr. Clarke with a pair of socks, but stowed away in them was $275 in gold. Dr. Clarke has a warm place in the hearts of his ministerial brethren of the state. At the present time he is chairman of the board of managers of the state convention, as well as a member of the executive committee.

A Unique Revival

At Eau Claire, where E. R. MacKinney ministers, a unique effort of evangelism has been going on. One of the ministers began a meeting in his own church, and after one week another church joined in, and then the third church, and the fourth week a fourth church. The meeting moved from church to church with good interest. Each evening a five-minute sermon or talk was given in the picture theaters, and the reception there was cordial and gracious. Mr. MacKinney says, "Seldom have I spoken with greater freedom than in these theater meetings." And he says that the other ministers testify to the same thing. They also published a sermon each day in the city papers. This unique experiment has not only brought the churches closer together, but it has demonstrated to the people a practical plan of co-operation in evangelism.

Some News and Notes

Daniel Shellpuk, who has been doing work among the Russians of Milwaukee for several months, recently had the privilege of seeing the first fruits of his labors baptized.

Charles Wagner, pastor of the German Church at Watertown, has resigned to take up the work with the German Church at Ellinwood, Kans. Rev. Christian Dipple has resigned at North Freedom and gone to Emery, S. D.

Rev. A. T. Erickson of Green Bay has recently been on the operating table for appendicitis. He is out again and recovering his strength.

The church at Bancroft recently burned its mortgage on the parsonage. It has taken heroic work and sacrifice to keep this work going, but the membership is that kind and has gone forward with faith and courage.

Pastor Protsman and family of Merrill have been passing through deep waters. A promising son nineteen years of age has been ill for some time, and paralysis has developed. They have hopes of his recovery, though it will take many months.

The Regional Conferences

The regional conferences have been on this week in Wisconsin, and the reports indicate that a new spirit is taking hold of our Baptist people. There is the conviction among many of the brethren that we should endeavor to recover our morale, and then, with the growing consciousness of our unity, we should endeavor to put over the big drive and gain the victory both spiritually and financially.

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

Evangelism

Concentrated attention to normal and effective forms of evangelism is occupying Boston ministers of all faiths at present. Interest has completely swung away from some past forms of evangelism, that is certain. It used to be assumed that nothing much was to be done or expected without what were called "special meetings," planned in cold blood, under a "professional" evangelist, who was to come on with his "kit" of hysterical antics, cataclysmal stratagems and financial frenzies. Naturally the hippodrome and tabernacle method got into vogue and came to be heavily overdone.

The prevailing conception of evangelism now is so reasonably different from all that, so promotive of spiritual health in the average church, we are made to wonder that we ever allowed the emphasis to swing away from the local church so as to magnify out of proportion the peripatetic evangelist. That picturesque spell-binder has seen his best days.

The Evangelistic Minister and Church

It is not the unexpected, but the inevitable that has happened. Religious excitement is short-lived. The machinery and the mechanism that were built up to produce it are only on the way to the scrap-heap. When they cease to excite, they are undone, and that is only a question of time. But the evangelistic minister and the local gospel church are not only of time, but of eternity as well. "Building Up the Body of Christ" has come to be the slogan now. There is never anything hysterical nor epileptic about that; but devoutness and consecration in both church and minister seek for the spiritual quickening that may be continued in religious education and intelligence.

The recent notable gatherings in Boston were significant because of their majoring of the church and the minister and their silence concerning the professional evangelist. It begins to look as if the modern church had attained unto a new expectation—one of growth in grace, instead of paroxysmal excitation. For this let us devoutly thank God!

Maria Hale Gordon

The translation of Mrs. A. J. Gordon has awakened tender memories of the golden days of the Clarendon Street Church where the whole Christian community was blessedly conscious of her saintly husband and of her own sympathetic consecration to church enterprises and great social reforms. It was a rare benediction to sit in the old church during the funeral service and recall the former glories that irradiated the sanctuary when twenty-six years ago mourners thronged it at the funeral of Pastor A. J. Gordon. That memorable scene of triumph through tears can never be forgotten by those who shared it. The last exultant expression of Dr. Gordon was, "Victory!" At Mrs. Gordon's funeral, every utterance echoed the word. The same triumphant hymns were caught up again by the throng.

Pastor Freda presided. And it was befitting that Arthur H. Gordon of Buffalo, the son, should be the voice. With admirable propriety and self-restraint, and a very tender touch of intimacy, he spoke from the heart of the family life. He assumed, as did we all, that it was the time so to do, and that the beautiful life of his parents was also shared by the larger family in the church and community. His modest sincerity and spiritual calmness served him perfectly in what might have been a trying experience. It was good to be there. An aged minister said to the writer on the way out, "Heaven seems very near!"

New England Baptist Library

At the thirteenth annual meeting of the library, held Jan. 27, a good year was reported. The foreign mission section of the library, which had to be removed to New York with the offices, has almost entirely been made good by gifts and purchases, and a large addition has been made to the modern sections of religious education, social service, Sunday-school administration and development, and homiletics. Dr. F. F. Peterson's stimulating leadership in office efficiency and inspirational assemblies is awakening a noticeable interest in the fresh and attractive literature now being created by able leaders in what might be called popular Christian education.

A Bit of Optimism

After holiday compliments come January bills and all civic and religious "reminders." And when New England storms dip into zero temperatures, melting the costly coal in our "bins," and when always the subtle anxiety that the war has left harnesses the mind to depression, it is good to glance at our calendars with their tonic quotations. Here, is one from Whitman: "It is no small matter, this round and delicious globe, moving exactly in its orbit forever and ever, without one jolt or the untruth of a single second." And this from Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes: "There is something in this universe of ours besides our fears." Are these modern prophets speaking comfortably to Jerusalem?

St. Louis Letter

By W. E. DARROW

The Delmar Church

The Delmar Church held its annual meeting on Wednesday evening, Jan. 12, with about 300 in attendance. During 1920 the church added 100 to its membership—twenty-six by baptism, sixty-four by letter and ten otherwise. There has been a loss of fifty-four members, the membership at the time of the annual meeting being 476. Home expenses amounted to $12,032.30 and contributions to missions, to $13,193.95. The average Sunday-school enrollment for the first nine months was 276, and the average attendance, 175; and for the last three months the average enrollment was 333 and the average attendance, 248. At the annual meeting, Rev. Mr. Marsh of the Northern Board and Dr. Bryan of the Southern Board were adopted as the church's missionaries. The plant of the church, located in the west end of the city, cost over $100,000. It was dedicated in 1919. Rev. Lewis M. Hale is pastor, and Miss Laura Lee Patrick has recently come to the church as his assistant.

Pastoral Changes

Rev. Grover C. Schwartz has been called as pastor of the Tabernacle Church. Rev. Oliver Shank is now definitely located as pastor of the Fourth Church. Rev. L. R. Call has entered upon his work as director of religious education for the Second Church.

Notes and Comments

The building recently purchased at Tenth and Carr streets for the housing of the Italian work, and for a larger Baptist effort in the heart of the downtown district, is being rapidly improved.

The Jewell Church is now without a definite place for the holding of its meetings, having been compelled to move out from the hall it had rented for the purpose. It has purchased a lot on the corner of Virginia Avenue and Osceola Street, on which it hopes to build in the near future.

On Jan. 11, at the annual meeting of the Immanuel Church, Rev. E. L. Pinkerton, pastor, the mortgage which had been on the property since 1892 was burned. All bills are paid and the outlook is encouraging.

A Superb Regional Conference

By D. D. MAC LAURIN

The first of the regional conferences under the direction of the General Board of Promotion was held in the First Church of Madison, Wis., Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. This region embraced four associations in this part of the state. The conference was one of the most successful meetings any of us ever attended.

The team furnished was superb. The speakers were Dr. Lemuel C. Barnes of New York, Rev. John Tilden Latta of Burma, Miss Martha Troecke of New York, Miss Brimson of Chicago and Dr. M. D. Eubank. Better presentations of the great cause in its manifold aspects could hardly have been made than these made. The addresses of Mr. Latta were new in conception and delightful in execution. He led the people to see vividly the kind of work which our missionaries are doing among a people whom he described in an entertaining fashion. It was not the old-type address by the old-type missionary. Everybody knows the fascinating story which Miss Troecke tells of her thirty years' experience in Ellis Island while ministering to the lonely and weary and tested people who flock to these shores. The one, however, who captivated and enchanted and thrilled the audience was Dr. Eubank. The writer has heard for a good many years our foremost missionaries, but he never heard an address so captivating and informing as that with which Dr. Eubank closed the conference on Tuesday evening, Feb. 1.

Of course his subject was "China" and the Chinese man.

This is a strategic movement on the part of our General Board of Promotion. If all the churches in all our conventions could be brought under the inspiring sway of the eloquent facts presented in burning words, as in this convention, our new day would be on us in a minute.

The First Church in Madison was glad to be host to her sister churches and these servants of God in this great interest.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Atlantic Coast

NEW HAMPSHIRE

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

NEW LONDON has enjoyed the work of the fruitful pastorate of Rev. Ira M. Baird for eight years and more. Mr. Baird baptized seven persons into the fellowship of the church Sunday morning, Jan. 16, and at the evening service gave the hand of fellowship to eighteen. Thirty-one have been baptized since June 1, and during the eight years of his pastorate 174 have been baptized. A considerable number of these have been students at Colby Academy. For many years a strong evangelistic atmosphere has prevailed here.

Rev. R. L. KIMBALL has resigned at Berlin to take a pastorate in Vermont. He took up the work at Berlin in 1917, and his departure is much regretted.

Rev. A. G. LITTLEFIELD, formerly pastor at Suncook, was installed as pastor over the Newton Church by appropriate services on the evening of Jan. 19. The Newton Church was organized in 1750, being the first Baptist church organized in New Hampshire.

RHODE ISLAND

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE CENTRAL CHURCH, Dr. C. M. Galup, pastor, has been given a beautiful new church window by Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Eddy. The window was formally received and dedicated on Jan. 16. Its delineation and colorings are fine, and it harmonizes splendidly with the windows previously installed. The subject is "The Adoration of the Magi."

Rev. W. W. BARKER, formerly connected with the General Board of Promotion, began his pastorate with the First Church, Woonsocket, on Jan. 30.

OUR RUSSIAN BRETHREN, under the leadership of Bro. Joseph Puhovsky, missionary, had an attendance of 150 on Sunday, Jan. 30, at the First Church, Providence, where services are held weekly. At the close of the service, one Russian was baptized and the Lord's supper was observed.

ON JAN. 31 THE EVANGELISTIC committee of the convention, Rev. Charles H. McColey, chairman, and Rev. J. J. Williams of Central Falls, secretary, held an all-day evangelistic conference under the leadership of Rev. York A. King. About 100 were present. The day will not soon be forgotten, and the brethren voted to pray and labor for 1000 baptisms by Easter.

OUR CHURCH AT BLACKSTONE has voted to federate with the Congregational Church, each church maintaining its own organization for the present, and they have called Rev. C. B. Osborne of Pascoag, who will assume the pastorate of the federated church early in March.

OUR CHURCH AT CHEPACHET has voted to federate with the Congregational Church, and Bro. W. E. Dennett is the acting-pastor of the combined churches.

A CALL HAS BEEN extended by the Second Church of East Providence to Rev. F. L. Cleveland of Fall River, Mass. Bro. Cleveland has accepted the call and is expected to begin his pastorate in East Providence on the first Sunday in February.

VERMONT

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

Conference of Baptist Ministers of Vermont

The conference of pastors of the state and others interested in the work of our churches was held at Burlington Jan. 17-18. The expenses were paid by the state convention, and this made it possible for many pastors to attend who would otherwise have been compelled to remain at home.

The sessions opened on Monday evening in the edifice of the Burlington Church. Rev. William Frederick Wilson, pastor, and continued through Tuesday evening. Dr. Davison presided on Monday evening. He asked the question, Why are we here? and in answering it said that the church of Christ is seeing some of its cherished institutions losing ground, and that it must find a solution of its problems, for God has put it here to conquer the world in the name of Christ. If this solution is found, it will be through the combined thought and effort of all who are called to serve. One of the problems is the raising of the $100,000,000, and God must have this in sight before he can do what he wants to do with us and through us.

The first address was given by Mr. Henry Bond. He told of his deep love for the church, and of his desire that it shall find the place in the world's life that God has for it, and that it shall put the emphasis where Jesus did. Perhaps if the church would compare its standards with those of Christ again and make a few corrections, its power would be manifest in larger measure. All through this conference much stress was laid on prayer by every speaker, and by none more than by Mr. Bond.

The second speaker, Rev. Clark Brownell of Brattleboro, conducted a devotional service. He spoke of the need of the prayer power that conforms the life to God and not to selfish ends. Prayer must be a fundamental personal experience with God; it cannot be handled through a middleman. Prayer is always transcendental, and it raises one toward God.

On Tuesday morning Dr. Davison introduced Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Ufford of China, formerly of Fairfax, who are on a furlough. Dr. Ferguson of India was then presented and gave a fine address on the problem of the church of Christ and its relation to the world. Miss Beulah Bates, superintendent of the religious and missionary work among the young people, spoke of her work. Remarks were made by Prof. MacFarland, the new principal of Vermont Academy, which will open next fall. After the introduction of the various state workers, the roll call of the churches was taken, sixty-two churches responding.

On Tuesday afternoon Dr. Aitchison, after a few general remarks, gave an opportunity for the asking of questions; and for an hour and a half the pastors threw them at him in "bunches," and the doctor was there "with the goods."

At the last session the report of the committee on findings was given and adopted. The first speaker of the evening was Dr. Ferguson of India, who spoke on his work and the work of Christ throughout the world. Dr. Aitchison then spoke, taking up some phases of his work and that of the General Board of Promotion. He placed much emphasis upon prayer in its relation to our program. Rev. W. F. Sturtevant of the state convention conducted a closing devotional service. This was one of the best conferences ever held in our state.

FRANK S. TOLMAN.

NEW JERSEY

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE SCHEDULE FOR the New World Movement conferences to be held in this state has been finally arranged. They are as follows: Paterson, First Church, Jan. 31, Feb. 1; Newark, Peddie Memorial Church, Feb. 1, 2; Trenton, Central Church, Feb. 3, 4; Orange, North Church, Feb. 14, 15; Camden, First Church, Feb. 15, 16; Bridgeton, First Church, Feb. 17, 18. For Paterson, Newark and Trenton the team of speakers will consist of Dr. Gilbert N. Brink of the Publication Society; Dr. Emory W. Hunt, president of Bucknell University; Rev. W. F. Stait, medical missionary from Nellore, South India; Mrs. Howard Wayne Smith, president of the Atlantic District, and Mornay Williams, a member of the foreign mission board. Dr. F. W. Padelford, Dr. Emory W. Hunt, Dr. George A. Huntley of Shanghai, China, and Mrs. C. A. Brooks of the European relief commission make up the team for the other conferences.

THE FIRST PEDDIE ASSEMBLY rally for 1921 was held in the Roselle Church on Jan. 18. The assembly "song master," Prof. C. Harold Lowden, led the singing; Rev. C. E. Tilton and Rev. C. E. Goodall gave addresses; Dr. Harry S. Myers of the curriculum commission spoke on "The Value of an Assembly for Leadership Training," and Mr. O. F. Laegeler presented the 1921 assembly program.

THE NORTH JERSEY Baptist Ministers' Conference was entertained by Rev. Frank Smith and the women of the Central Church, Elizabeth, Jan. 23. Dr. Joseph Twomey of the Peddie Memorial Church, Newark, gave a heart-stirring address on evangelism.

REV. WALTER J. SWAFFIELD of the Park Avenue Church, Plainfield, is just completing a series of Sunday evening sermons on "The Great Days in Great Lives." He has shown the texts that were epoch-making in the lives of heroes like St. Augustine, John Bunyan, William Carey, Charles Haddon Spurgeon, George Muller, John Milton, Dwight L. Moody and Robinson Crusoe.

THE CLINTON AVENUE CHURCH of Newark, Rev. Archer B. Bass, pastor, has had a good year thus far. Under the inspiration of the New World Movement, one of its choice young women, Miss Ethel Lacey, realized her long-cherished desire to be a missionary, and she is now in Shanghai, China, the church paying her salary. Benevolences amount to about five times what they did before the campaign drive of last spring. On Nov. 7 the hand of fellowship was given to ten new members, on Dec. 5, to nine, and on Jan. 2, to eight, six of the latter coming by baptism. The church has more than reached its quota of subscribers to Missions, and plans are under way to increase the number of subscribers to the weekly denominational publications. Activities of the Sunday school and the young people's department are numerous and varied. The outlook for the future is bright.

THE MT. PLEASANT CHURCH, Newark, has been co-operating with the Gypsy Smith campaign, and consequently all the ordinary social and business activities of the church were omitted during January. Pastor Powell has been addressing noon meetings and overflow meetings. Plans are being made for follow-up work.

The State Superintendent of Promotion

At the last meeting of the board of managers of the New Jersey Convention, on the unanimous recommendation of the state board of promotion, Rev. Joseph Earle Edwards was called to be superintendent of promotion of the state convention activities. Mr. Edwards has accepted the call and has resigned his pastorate of the First Church, Connellsville, Pa. Mr. Edwards is pre-eminently qualified to work out to a completion, if the Baptists of this state support the New World Movement in an adequate manner, the goal for New Jersey accepted by our convention.

Mr. Edwards is the thirteenth Baptist minister in the family line, running from Absolum Earle, the Oyster Bay evangelist, and I. N. Earle, formerly the Bible lecturer, to Chas. C. Earle, now at the Bethany Church, Wilmington, Del., who is his mother's brother. He was licensed by the Delaware Avenue Church, Wilmington, in 1907, and was ordained in the Hope Church, Wilmington, which church he served while in the seminary, in 1911. He was educated at Bucknell University and Crozer Seminary, and in his school work he made a fine record. He resigned the pastorate of the Hope Church, to become pastor of the church at Greenville, Pa., where his work covering about seven years was greatly blessed. About one year ago he was elected pastor of the strong church at Connellsville, Pa. In the New World Movement activities he led his people in a victory which is known throughout the denomination. He has set a new pace in arousing church members to a realization of God's command for world salvation, in stimulating the people to hitherto unknown liberality in giving of means and time, and in educating the young and middle-aged and old in the spirit and program of our present missionary endeavor as Northern Baptists. Mr. Edwards has the gift of publicity. In devising novel ways for arousing interest in church activities and in the great denominational objectives, he is in a class by himself.

Thomas P. Holloway, executive secretary of the New Jersey Convention, says: "I have known Mr. Edwards intimately since his seminary days, and can confidently assure our Baptist constituency that he knows Whom he has believed and is persuaded that we have a great God who calls for us to enter on large spiritual adventures with a faith that can remove mountains of difficulty and make smooth highways for the activities of the kingdom where stony and broken trails existed before the divine Road-builder accomplished his task."

West New Jersey Association

On Jan. 25, at the Memorial Church of Salem, in accordance with the advice of a regularly called council of the association, Bro. Arthur B. Fowler was recognized as a regularly ordained Baptist minister. He is a graduate of Princeton University and Seminary. He has seen service in Syria as a Presbyterian missionary; and there the question arose as to the baptism of his children—whether the missionary should administer it or the native worker. He went to the Bible for enlightenment, but found none so far as this question was concerned. Instead, he became convinced of the necessity of immersion. Returning to this country, he was later baptized by Pastor H. R. Myers of the Memorial Church. In the afternoon the ministerial union listened to a helpful address by Rev. Geo. R. Baker on "Publicity." In the evening a meeting in recognition of Bro. Fowler's coming into the denomination was held, with an address by Prof. Isaac G. Matthews of Crozer.

NEW YORK

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE LAKE AVENUE CHURCH of Rochester has this fall had a wonderfully successful season of work. The Sunday school, on which the church has been centering, has increased its membership approximately 35 per cent, has doubled its efficiency and has increased its teaching efficiency three-fold. The morning congregations have been greater than ever in the history of the church. The evening congregations have several times overflowed the church building. The pastor has given for the past eight years each fall a series of Fireside Sermons dealing with the value of religion in helping to solve the problems of home life. These sermons have become an institution in the city, and this year in November and December, when the series was being given, people were turned away each Sunday night. At the Christmas White Gift service gifts totaling $2125 were made by the Sunday school classes for various benevolent objects. The gifts for European relief have amounted to $1850. At the close of the Christmas service the committee, on behalf of the men of the church, presented the pastor with an enclosed automobile for his parish work, as a token of their appreciation of his work. The associate pastor, Rev. S. W. Beaven, has been granted a leave of absence for several months to spend the time with his brother, Rev. Webley J. Beaven, at San Diego, Cal. The church observed the week of prayer with special meetings under the heading, "Forward Step Week," closing with a young people's rally at which the pastor presented the claims of the Christian callings and Christian service. A number of the young people of the congregation are considering definite forms of Christian work. The church will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary Feb. 6-13; and as part of the services of that week a dedication service will be held for the new chimes being presented to the church by Hon. Clinton N. Howard in memory of his son, John, who gave his life in service.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL of the First Church, Iion, has met every requirement of the state Sunday-school association and also of our denomination and now stands as a 100 per cent school. Mr. F. W. Coleman has been superintendent for more than forty years. The junior, intermediate, cradle roll, beginners' and primary departments are all well organized. Recently two new young men's classes were formed. The teachers' training class is in its second year, and a new department, made up of about thirty boys and girls just graduating from the intermediate department, is taking up one year's work in teacher training under a paid instructor. Missions are featured in all the work of the school. Ten French orphans have been supported for two years at a cost of $730. The "White Christmas Gifts" for five years have been mostly for the Armenians. The school has pledged $1000 for the New World Movement. The total membership, including the home department, is 810.

JUDGE HARVEY REMINGTON of Rochester has been elected a member of the executive committee of Keuka College. The college buildings are being repaired in readiness for next fall. A splendid faculty of experienced Christian teachers is being prepared. Dr. Homer C. Lyman is to be at the head of the department of Christian leadership and social science; Prof. H. D. Winters is to head the department of ancient languages and history; and Pres. Norton will be at the head of the department of mathematics and science. Already students are applying for admission, and the outlook is encouraging.

THE OPENING MONTH of the new pastors' department of the Bible Teachers' Training School, New York City, has proved a marked success. The group of pastors registered for February is half Baptist and includes ten different states. The courses include three classroom hours each week upon Jeremiah, three hours on Mark, three hours on Revelation, two hours on biblical criticism, and one hour a week each upon personal work, religious education, voice culture, church advertising, and studies in church efficiency.

With additional special lectures by national religious leaders, this makes up a total of at least seventy hours of classroom work within the month.

THE THREE HUNDRED AND EIGHTH MEETING of the Baptist Social Union of New York City will be a dinner at the Hotel Astor on Thursday evening, Feb. 17, and will be in the nature of a welcome to the official representatives of the women's societies who now make New York their headquarters. Mrs. Helen B. Montgomery, president of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, and Mrs. John Nuveen, president of the Woman's Home Mission Society, are to be the guests of honor and the speakers. All women missionaries in the vicinity of New York are to be the guests of individual members of the union. The hope is expressed that the president of every missionary society in the metropolitan area may be present, inasmuch as it is felt that nothing is more vital at the present time than an adequate recognition of the part which the women societies play in denominational affairs.

REV. FRANKLIN D. ELMER is expected to take up his work at Hamilton early in February. He is a graduate of Brown and of the University of Chicago. Since graduation he has been assistant at the Mt. Morris Church, New York City, and pastor at Winstead and at Poughkeepsie. He is connected with a number of our national organizations and has been prominent in religious education and Boy Scout work. It is thought that he will do valuable work among the young men at Colgate. Dr. William M. Lawrence has of late been acting-pastor of the Hamilton Church.

CALVARY CHURCH, NEW YORK CITY, has recently completed a successful drive for additional funds for current expenses. Ten thousand dollars in addition to the present income was the mark set. As a result, for the first time in several years the church will have an income that will cover its large budget. An increase in missionary income was also obtained. New members are constantly being received. At the recent annual business meeting it was voted to allow only members of the church of full legal age to vote in the corporate body. Under the New York state law, contributors to Baptist churches may vote in the corporate meeting of the church unless the latter orders otherwise. Two new departments of church work have recently been organized.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

A REVIVAL CAMPAIGN has recently been conducted at the Union City Church, Rev. H. W. Jones, pastor, by Rev. Harlow W. Parsons, with Albert Heinz and his wife as leaders of the singing. As a result, the church has been greatly stimulated, and forty-six persons were baptized on one day. The church cordially recommends Bro. Parsons, both as a worker in the regular services and as a worker among young people. The annual meeting was held Jan. 3, and showed all bills paid and a balance in the treasury. Eighty-three persons united with the church during the year, seventy of them by baptism.

CARMEL CHURCH, SEAGERSTOWN, Rev. M. V. S. Gold, pastor, reports good progress. An all-day Thanksgiving service was held. At Christmas, the church presented the pastor with a nice knee robe. During the year a new lighting plant has been put in the church building.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE FOLLOWING MINUTE is sent THE BAPTIST by the board of managers of the Baptist Home of Philadelphia: "We are called at this time to notice the passing home of Mary Peltz Weiland (Mrs. Henry A.), who was for many years closely associated with the work of the Baptist Home. She served as vice-president and as chairman of the house committee, and in both of these offices rendered the board of managers and the home valuable service. As chairman of the house committee, she, during the vacation of the matron, gave personal supervision to the housekeeping, spending a portion of each day in the building. She dearly loved the work, and her active and helpful interest continued as long as time and strength permitted. We desire to place on permanent record the appreciation and esteem in which Mrs. Weiland was held by all of her co-workers."

Mississippi Valley

OHIO

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

Dayton Association

The pastors held an interesting meeting on Jan. 10 at the First Church, Dayton. The paper for the day was by Pastor J. M. Cosby, on "How To Interest the Young People in the Church Service." It was helpful and provoked discussion. The reports of the churches revealed various activities.

Pastor Bagby received one by letter and one by restoration at Colorado Avenue. Congregations are good. Pastor J. C. MacFarlane and his young people conducted an evening service which greatly delighted the people at Colorado Avenue.

Pastor Henry Brandt at Troy is much encouraged. The report at the annual meeting revealed that the contributions of the church to missions had increased fourfold. There is a substantial balance in the treasury. More than $100 was given for European relief. Special meetings are now being planned.

Pastor Sloman at Third Street received four by letter and two by baptism and five confessions at the evening service. Bro. Sloman is an aggressive leader for the Baptist young people of Dayton. He has arranged a great rally to be held Feb. 11.

Pastor Slocum of the First Church baptized two persons. The men's Bible class has almost reached the 200-mark in average attendance. The morning congregations are growing. Dr. Slocum's preaching is attracting strangers to the church.

At North Dayton the Bible-school attendance is 296. There is great need of more room, one class of boys being taught on the steps leading to the baptistry. Congregations are excellent. There were two conversions. Some of the workers are teaching a Bible school at a private home for children, with an enrollment of twenty-two.

Pastor J. M. Cosby of Tippecanoe City is seeing a steady growth. The annual meeting was a time of rejoicing. For the first time in years, all indebtedness was paid. The church is ready for special meetings in which it is to have the help of Pastor Fletcher as song leader and Pastor Brandt as preacher.

Pastor Johnson of Linden Avenue has the hearty support of his church, which is becoming a community church to which strangers in the neighborhood like to come. One was received by letter and one by baptism. Pastor Johnson and Pastor MacFarlane exchanged pulpits one Sunday morning. It was a delightful experience for the preachers, and for the congregations also. Pastor Johnson has interested a number of the members in a Sunday evening church-going league. About 150 have signed a card, and there have been some gratifying results.

Pastor MacFarlane at Memorial led the church into a banner year, as the report at the annual meeting showed. The church gave more than $100 for relief work in Europe. Four were received by letter.

Pastor Patt of Sidney finds finances in an excellent condition. This is his second pastorate at Sidney, and he is doing effective work and is beloved by church and community.

Pastor M. F. Scruby at Haynes Street is enlarging the Sunday-school equipment by adding a classroom. He was recently in Virginia for a special meeting.

Pastor Furrow just closed a splendid day at Union by baptizing five persons. He also conducted a meeting at Mt. Pleasant at which eight persons united with church.

Pastor Fletcher at Fletcher baptized nine persons. Pastor Cosby had given the pastor fine assistance in a two weeks' meeting. The church gave $80 for relief work in Europe.

Pastor O. E. Hall at Summit Street has solved the evangelistic question in his own church by setting aside the first three months of each year. Nearly fifty people have consecrated themselves to do personal work, and good results are being realized each Sunday. Four were received by letter and one by experience.

Pastor Albert Read of Xenia received one by letter. PHILIP BAUER.

IOWA

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

A TEN-DAY EVANGELISTIC campaign at the First Church, Pella, Rev. A. C. Droz, pastor, conducted by Dr. Franklin W. Swift, came to a close on Jan. 30. The community, which is overwhelmingly Dutch Reformed, was stirred as it has not been for many years. More than 100 persons professed conversion, and fifty have been received for membership after baptism.

ILLINOIS

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE CORNELL CHURCH, Rev. F. T. Klotzsche, pastor, began the new year with revival meetings. The pastor was the preacher for the first few evenings and then for two weeks and a half Rev. F. M. Dunk delivered the message. The church is revived, and there have been several additions.

SPECIAL MEETINGS were held the first two weeks in January in the church at Villa Grove, Rev. L. E. Ellison, pastor. Rev. Geo. H. Yule was the preacher. There were about forty-five confessions, and practically all these people will join the church. An impressive high-school service was held on Jan. 13.

REV. J. T. FINNAN, pastor of the First Church, Elvaston, Ill., is leaving that field on April 1. He desires to locate in a Baptist church in the suburbs of a large city.

REV. JOSEPH C. DENT conducted evangelistic meetings with the Downer's Grove Church, of which Rev. John Stewart is pastor, Jan. 2-16. Many young people, mostly from the Sunday school, came forward in response to the appeal. Pastor Stewart is appreciative of the evangelist's work.

THE FIRST CHURCH, CHICAGO, is located in a fine residential section of the city at 935 E. Fifth St., and is winning the interest and support of the people of the neighborhood. When the pastor who succeeds Rev. F. E. R. Miller arrives on the field, he will find a well-organized, united and forward-looking people. The membership is 509, and there are no debts. During the past year, $16,789.52 was raised for church expenses and $7,273.05 for missions and benevolences.

CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS AT THE WINNECONNEE CHURCH, WISCONSIN

REV. A. B. MERCER, after a successful pastorate of five years, has left the First Church, Kankakee, for the First Church, Niagara Falls, N. Y. His work and personality have left a lasting imprint on the church and community. Substantial improvements on the interior of the building have been made during the year, and the people are eager to secure the right man to continue the work.

Northern Baptist Theological Seminary

The annual reception given by the seminary on Monday evening, Jan. 17, was an event of more than passing interest. The Baptist ministers' conference of Chicago was the guest of the evening, and a large number of ministers and their wives, with many friends of the seminary from Chicago and vicinity, numbering some 300, were present.

The occasion was made memorable by its being the first opportunity given the public for an inspection of the new seminary building, located at 3040 W. Washington Blvd. A genuine surprise awaited those who for the first time were shown through the building. It had been thought scarcely possible for an institution so recently organized and with nothing in a material way to begin with, to have acquired so splendid a property and been able to finance it successfully.

The building itself, a large, three-story mansion built by a man of wealth, and which at the present time would cost at least $260,000 to duplicate, is thoroughly equipped and finely arranged for the use now being made of it. The third floor of the building, which is one room, is finely adapted for chapel and public services; and it offered comfortable accommodation for all who were present on this evening. In addition to the building, the property includes a large and well-located corner lot.

Following the opening reception, Pres. George W. Taft of the seminary called the conference to order and in a felicitous greeting expressed the gladness the seminary felt in welcoming the guests of the evening. Prayer was offered by Dr. J. S. Bromley of Pennsylvania. The two men present who doubtless had most to do with the organization and successful continuance of the seminary were Dr. John H. Byrtie and the present treasurer of the school, Thomas J. Bolger. Being called upon for remarks, they told of the remarkable way in which the seminary had been led under the spirit of God, and how support had come in a marvelous manner when it was most needed.

There is now a fine body of more than eighty students and an efficient teaching force. Members of the faculty were introduced and responded briefly.

The address of the evening was given by Dr. A. S. Carman, now one of the instructors in the seminary and also president of the ministers' conference. In an able, interesting and enlightening way he discussed the question, "Is the Ministry Worth While?" It was a heartening message to those present. A social hour followed, the visitors being received by the hostess, Mrs. Taft, and served with refreshments. The seminary begins a new year under most favorable auspices.

A VISITOR.

WISCONSIN

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

SINCE THE LATTER part of October Rev. E. G. Hamley has been acting-pastor at Winneconne. Attendance at the Sunday school has increased from twenty to forty, and at the church service from thirty to sixty. The Sunday school at Christmas time gave a fine program to a full house. A picture of the tree and decorations accompanies this note. An orchestra of five pieces helps in a thirty-minute song service on Sunday evenings. A class of candidates is being prepared for baptism on Easter Sunday.

MICHIGAN

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE PARR MEMORIAL CHURCH of Petoskey gave a reception recently to Rev. E. J. Parsons, its new pastor, and his family. Work is opening up well. A boys' Bible class of twenty-eight members and a brotherhood have been organized. A junior chorus choir and a personal workers' band are recently introduced features.

UNION EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS were held in the church at Rives Junction from Jan.

2 to 16. Littrell and Moody were the evangelists. The churches and community were much stirred. Seventy confessions were made. Rev. H. H. Andrews, the pastor, heartily commends these workers.

THE FIRST CHURCH, CADILLAC, is forging ahead under the leadership of Rev. H. S. Grandholm, a young man with a forward-looking program. In October a regional conference of Baptist ministers and laymen was held in this church. On Nov. 19, a B. Y. P. U. meeting was attended by over ninety young people from various parts of the association. The church raised one of the largest Red Cross roll call memberships reported in Cadillac, and responded to the call for help for the suffering children of Europe with $253. The apportionment to the New World Movement has been fully met. Mr. Grandholm has recently held two weeks of special meetings in the mission and plans a campaign in the central church before Easter.

THE FIRST CHURCH, DETROIT, Dr. T. J. Villers, pastor, held its annual business meeting on Jan. 20. The reports showed that $41,650 had been raised for benevolences, $24,230 for current expenses and $4000 for other purposes. New members received during the year were: By baptism, seventy-seven; by letter, seventy-eight; by experience, twenty-two. The membership is now 1725. The church has three missionaries on the foreign field, one on the home field, and two young men studying for the ministry.

NEBRASKA

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE CHURCH AT BROKEN BOW recently held a three weeks' meeting in which the pastor was assisted by Rev. R. Richards, pastor of the church at Ansley. As a result, twenty-seven persons have been baptized and two have been received by letter and two on their experience. Eleven more await baptism. Last year the pastor baptized twenty-eight, and others were received by letter.

WORK AT GRAND ISLAND COLLEGE has been moving along well. The football team boasts of a season without a defeat, and the oratory and debating teams hope to have as good a record. Of the student body, 31 per cent were on the honor roll, which means that they passed their subjects with a rank of 90 per cent or more. The average for our colleges the country over is about 10 per cent. Many notable addresses have been given at the chapel services. Particular mention is made of those given by Dr. Allyn K. Foster, whose work has resulted in a marked change for the better in the life of more than one student.

KANSAS

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

AT WANEGU, Pastor J. E. Naylor and his father, Rev. John Naylor, have been conducting a successful revival. The latter, who was for eighteen years pastor at Williamsville, N. Y., but who has come to Kansas to make his home, did the preaching. On Jan. 23 the pastor baptized twenty-three converts, making thirty who have recently been added to the church.

THREE HUNDRED PERSONS attended the quarterly "get-together" social of the First Church, Coffeyville, on Jan. 27. The report of the chairman of the finance committee said: "The past year has been the best in the history of the church. The First Church is under many obligations to its pastor, Dr. C. D. Eldridge, for this healthy growth. He has ever been on the alert to serve the church and community."

REV. T. H. CLARK, of El Dorado, the missionary for the oil fields, has done an outstanding work among the oil camps during recent months. There have been several conversions under his ministry, and he has done a signal work in visitation among the people.

REV. W. M. MARTIN and wife are just now beginning meetings with Pastor Paul J. Gates at Garden City. The outlook is good for a gracious meeting.

REV. H. D. HUGHES has been backed by the state convention in holding evangelistic meetings in the smaller churches in the northwest part of the state. He has had some good meetings.

REV. J. J. GRIFFIN, field secretary of the southwest district, is now assisting Pastor C. E. Hanes, of Great Bend, in special meetings.

REV. H. G. FRASER, of Ottawa, Mrs. B. F. Tilley, of Emporia, and the director of religious education are now holding brief conferences or institutes in the south central part of the state, in Herington, Peabody, Clearwater, Coats, Protection, Ashland, Wellington, and Anthony.

REV. W. H. LEYBURN, special worker in the southeast part of the state, has been doing a fruitful work during the past several months, coming in touch with the weaker churches and helping to get them going again. He has also helped to start some new interests, as, for instance, at Longton, where a new church has been organized.

REV. WALTER E. TANNER, the missionary in the Southeast Association, has held some good meetings among the churches in that section of the state. He makes his home at Erie.

THE EVANGELICAL MINISTERS of Topeka have taken action looking towards the organization of a community council of religious education, with a view to putting on week-day religious education in the community, to begin by next fall. The same matter is being considered in Kansas City.

Rocky Mountain States

COLORADO

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE FIRST CHURCH, GREELEY, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary on Jan. 9. Of the original twenty members, only one is now living. The Baptists built the first meeting-house in the community and secured the bonus of $500 offered by the Denver Pacific Railway Company. This building, costing $6500, was dedicated in 1871. Rev. W. W. Everts, then of Chicago, preaching the dedicatory sermon. Dr. F. B. Palmer of Denver gave the message in the morning and in the evening; letters from former pastors were read; and there were other services of a reminiscent character. The present edifice was dedicated ten years ago, during the pastorate of Rev. D. D. Forward, at a cost of $43,000. The $12,000 mortgage, representing the last indebtedness on the building, was burned during the present celebration. The present pastor is Rev. D. I. Coon, and the membership is something over 600. More than 100 members were received during the past year. Recently the church sent out its first foreign missionary, Miss Alice Glazier, who has gone to Madras.

AFTER A SUCCESSFUL PASTORATE of eight years with the First Church, Longmont, Rev. J. L. Hedbloom has taken up the work at Brighton, where a church has just been organized and where a new modern building is under construction. Bro. Hedbloom has occupied a strong place in Longmont, being greatly esteemed for his Christian spirit and as a preacher. He will do a strong work in Brighton.

IDAHO

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE PUBLICATION SOCIETY has appointed a Bible worker for Idaho, and Rev. Robert Kaplan and wife are already on the field and actively engaged in the selling and distribution of Bibles.

CENTRAL ASSOCIATION B. Y. P. U. officers recently held a B. Y. P. U. rally in Twin Falls. Many delegates were present, and all report a profitable and enjoyable time.

A SERIES OF KINGDOM rallies under the auspices of the General Board of Promotion is to be held in Idaho, beginning at Pocatello Feb. 4. Other rallies will be held at Caldwell, Feb. 14 and 15, and at Twin Falls, Feb. 16 and 17.

THE BOISE CHURCH is enjoying a period of prosperity and steady growth. Nearly 100 members have been received since Dr. Floyd I. Beckwith assumed the pastorate May 1. Mission study and teacher training classes and a class for personal workers recently begun are evidences of the activity of the church under the strong leadership of its pastor. This church will enter into the city union evangelistic meetings which begin in February and will continue until Easter.

THE WORK AT HAILEY, under the wise leadership of Pastor W. H. Vodra and Miss Mary Ayres, missionary, is steadily forging ahead. Progress is being made so rapidly that the members and friends have offered to pay the share of the pastor's salary assumed by Picabo and have asked that he be released for full time at Hailey. They have a program now in operation which opens the church each night in the week.

PASTOR A. C. LATHROP of Emmett reports an annual meeting in which it was shown that a long-standing obligation had been met and that all departments of the work were in good condition.

THE CALDWELL CHURCH has installed a heating system costing over $1000. Pastor A. F. White reports an ingathering of souls, a spiritual quickening of the church, and all branches of the church life encouraging.

IN A BIT OF SATIRE, "How the New World Movement Killed Our Church," Pastor A. V. Willey of Idaho Falls shows that this has been one of the best years in the history of the church. All departments have a balance in the treasury, and recent remittances on New World Movement pledges amounted to $1418.

Pacific Coast

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED on Jan. 10 by the Ministers' Association of Los Angeles, regretting the removal to Boston of Dr. Seldon W. Cummings, pay him this tribute: "In our general work in Southern California, Dr. Cummings has been one of the leading advisers. Regardless of the fact that he had a large church that called for all his time, he never has refused to meet with boards and committees connected with the larger work, and his counsel and judgment have been great factors in helping to establish the Baptist cause in this great Southwest. There is no man who has done more for the Baptist denomination in Southern California than has our own Dr. Cummings. Not only has he given us his wise counsel, but he has aided us all in real spiritual living and Christian fellowship. Almost every church in our large district has been touched and helped by his strong personality. Memorials of him are scattered over all Southern California, so we shall be reminded of him constantly, and shall miss him in a thousand ways."

OREGON

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

DURING THE YEAR just closed Rev. D. Loree, missionary for the Grande Ronde Association, has been in evangelistic meetings in which sixteen have professed conversion. He has baptized forty-six, most of them converted in meetings held by Rev. M. G. Bentley. He has preached 185 sermons, made 488 visits, traveled 6,998 miles by rail and 3,125 by auto or other conveyance, been in thirty-five prayer meetings, and had a part in wiping out the debt on one church edifice.

WESTERN WASHINGTON

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Seattle, received 253 new members during the year just past, making a present membership of about 1200. At its annual meeting the church adopted a budget of $62,000 for 1921, including $25,000 for general expense, $12,000 for the building fund, and $25,000 for the New World Movement. On Sunday evenings crowds of young people are listening to a series of sermons on the subject, "Love, Courtship and Marriage."

EAST WASHINGTON

A LEAGUE OF CHRISTIAN Stewards in every church by Feb. 20.

The Pullman Church

The Pullman Church entered into a permanent organization in December, 1914. The following April the church called a council "to investigate the needs of a Baptist church in Pullman and ascertain whether the Pullman Baptist Church was properly organized." This council approved the organization and welcomed it into the denomination. Leading officials of the denomination have visited the field and agreed that Baptists need a strong and distinctive work here, where is located one of the great state educational institutions with 2,000 students. The East Washington and North Idaho Convention has approved and aided the Pullman Baptist Church from its beginning.

As a result of careful investigation and a growing conviction of the opportunities and needs at Pullman, the denomination through the convention board has voted to support the work in Pullman in a larger way than ever before. At the state convention held in Spokane in June, a resolution was passed declaring it to be the judgment of the convention that at least $25,000 should be invested in a new building for the Pullman Church. The convention board appointed a committee to co-operate with a similar committee of the local church to select a new site and plan for the erection of a new edifice.

This joint committee has already secured an excellent site, two blocks from the college campus. The house which stood on the corner lot has been moved to the inner lot and fitted into a parsonage, leaving the other two lots clear for the new building.

The church at its annual meeting on Dec. 31 reported a year of healthful growth. Thirty-two new members were added. In the New World Movement the little church was given a quota of $6,400, which meant $125 per capita. It subscribed $7,400. During the year it met promptly all its current expenses. The church school has had a steady healthful growth.

Just now the need of a new building is felt keenly. The old building is poorly located, leaky, fire-scorched, weather-beaten, and unattractive within and without. The church will be seriously handicapped until it does secure an adequate building. The urgent need now is that the denomination shall furnish a sufficient amount of money so that the building enterprise can be carried on without delay. Rev. W. E. Monbeck is pastor.

Statement Concerning the Foreign Mission Society

(Continued from page 36)

New World Movement which are due this year will enable the society to provide for the work of the current year and to make a substantial reduction in its deficit. A shrinkage of any considerable percentage from the full allotment may mean an increase in the society's indebtedness. These facts call for certain explanations.

The large sums called for by the approved budgets of the society for last year and this year are not due to new work or to expansion of old work, but to the increased cost of carrying on missionary work. The high cost of everything throughout the whole world has made it necessary to increase the salaries of missionaries and native workers in all fields, in order to keep them from real privation. Building enterprises to which we are in honor committed have proved far more expensive than we or the missionaries or anyone else could have anticipated. The loss in putting our appropriations into the local currency, especially in India and China, because of unfavorable exchange, has been heavy, though very recently there has been some improvement in this condition. Any considerable reduction in the amount of the approved budget for last year or this year would have meant disastrous retrenchment in the work already under way.

The large and burdensome deficit of $808,023 reported at Buffalo was incurred on a budget approved by the convention and was due to two principal causes: First, the changing of the date for closing the fiscal year from March 31 to April 30, which meant the addition of an extra month's appropriations to the expendi-

WHEN WE JOIN THE CHURCH

BY ARCHIE LOWELL RYAN
AND
GEORGE HERBERT BETTS

A Book Preparing for Church Membership

For classes of boys and girls from twelve to eighteen years of age.

Net. 75 cents, postpaid

THE ABINGTON PRESS

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

- Arizona—* Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phenix.
- California, N.—* Dr. C. W. Brinstead, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
- California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
- Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
- Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
- Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
- District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
- Idaho—* Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
- Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
- Indiana—* Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
- Iowa—424 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
- Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
- Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
- Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
- Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capital Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
- Minnesota—* Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2d Ave., So., Minneapolis.
- Montana—* Rev. G. Clifford Cress, Box 643, Lewistown.
- Nebraska—* Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
- Nevada—George L. Snyder, Box 230, Sparks.
- New Hampshire—* Rev. D. S. Jenks, 92 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
- New Jersey—* Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
- New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
- Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singiser, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
- North Dakota—Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
- Ohio—Rev. Chas. E. Stanton, Granville.
- Oregon—* Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin, Field Promotion Director, 405 Telford Bldg., Portland.
- Pennsylvania—* Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
- Rhode Island—* Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauderdale Bldg., Providence.
- South Dakota—* Dr. S. F. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
- Utah—* Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
- Vermont—* Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
- Washington, E.—* Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane.
- Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
- West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213½ Fourth St., Parkersburg.
- Wisconsin—* Dr. D. W. Hulbert, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
- Wyoming—* Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

tures of the year, and the extraordinary loss on account of unfavorable exchange were responsible for nearly one-half of the deficit. Second, the intensive efforts usually made in the last two months of the year by our society in common with the other co-operating societies and boards of the convention to secure the funds needed to meet the year's requirements were omitted. It was the judgment of nearly all concerned that emphasis upon the customary intensive efforts in the interest of the current budgets might affect unfavorably the New World Movement campaign to secure subscriptions to the $100,000,000 fund during the week of April 25 to May 2. It was also the earnest hope that the immediate cash payment in connection with the New World Movement pledges would more than make up any deficits. The amount so realized in cash payments before the closing of the books on May 12, however, was not sufficient to meet the full requirements, and our society was forced to report and to carry over into the new year a deficit of $808,023.

Receipts of the society from the New World Movement Fund for the first eight months of this year are much larger than ever before for the same period, namely, $687,461 as compared with $371,553 last year and $327,167 the year before. For this generous and encouraging response of the churches the board of managers expresses its grateful appreciation. It should be noted, however, that the total receipts of the society to date, as previously stated, including income not applying on the $100,000,000 fund, represent only 44 per cent of the current year's budget apart from the deficit and but 31 per cent of the total requirements of the year, including the deficit. We need to receive in the four months that remain more than the sum we have received in the past eight months in order to provide for the current year's budget and avoid adding to our deficit. We need to receive more than twice as much as we have already received if we are to provide for the current year's work and the deficit. A serious feature of this situation is the fact that the society is compelled to borrow large sums of money to meet its expenditures and has already paid more than $25,000 in interest on these borrowed funds.

The board has appointed a committee of review which is making painstaking investigation to ascertain whether expenditures at home and abroad can be cut down without endangering the success of our enterprise. We are planning every possible economy short of such as would really cripple our work.

We are confident that Northern Baptists are unwilling that the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society should make any large reduction in the budget which in this new era of high costs scarcely allows the society to maintain its present status in the foreign field. We believe also that the denomination is so deeply interested in the work which this society and all of the other missionary agencies are accomplishing in their respective fields of activity that when the facts are known the necessary funds will be forthcoming. We earnestly appeal to all the friends of our work to make prompt and full payment of their pledges to the New World Movement, and to aid in securing new and larger pledges and large cash contributions apart from the pledges, in order to prevent the necessity for any retrenchment on the foreign field during this critical period through which we are passing.

Such a payment of pledges and securing of new ones would rescue not only the Foreign Society, but all our sister missionary organizations, most of which are struggling with a somewhat similar financial burden. We wish to share alike with them on the established proportional basis.

On behalf of the board of managers and by its order:

FREDERICK L. ANDERSON, Chairman.
For the General Board of Promotion:
JOHN Y. AITCHISON, Director.

At the Regional Conferences

UTICA, NEW YORK

The first of the series of eighteen missionary conferences planned for the state of New York, exclusive of the metropolitan area, was held in Utica, Jan. 31-Feb. 1. The meetings were held in the Tabernacle Church. At all the sessions the attendance was unexpectedly large.

A fine spirit prevailed throughout the conferences. This was due in no small measure to the emphasis which was placed on the devotional hours. These occupied a considerable portion of each session and were conducted by Dean J. H. Vichert of Colgate Seminary, Rev. C. J. Oxley, pastor of the Park Church, Mrs. Norah L. Kenney of Utica and Rev. A. H. Hooper, the new pastor at Poland. The "missionary team" consisted of Rev. R. E. Farrier, Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, Rev. W. R. Taylor of West China, Mrs. Benjamin Starr, Rev. Sumner R. Vinton and Rev. Frank W. Padelford.

At the session on Tuesday morning, Dr. Padelford led a conference on the New World Movement. The progress and the achievements of the movement up to date were outlined, and then an open discussion, with many questions and answers, followed for an hour and a half.

In the afternoon Benjamin Starr conducted a conference on stewardship. Mr. Starr, a business man, is rendering a great service to the churches by his messages on stewardship.

The missionary addresses were given by Mr. Taylor, Dr. Padelford, and Mrs. Montgomery, who was in demand at every session and who made a profound impression. Mr. Vichert gave two of his impressive illustrated lectures which are becoming familiar to so many Baptists.

The conference was most profitable. It cleaned up many questions, and brought new visions of our tasks and our achievements.

CONNECTICUT

The six regional missionary conferences held to date in Connecticut have been marked by spiritual power, with deep interest on the part of delegates. Each conference passed resolutions endorsing the advance missionary program and urging churches to complete their quotas to the New World Movement at an early a date as possible.

MAINE

Reports from the first of the Maine New World conferences overflow with enthusiasm. State Director E. C. Whittemore telegraphed as follows: "Bangor conference of remarkable power. Ministers assert it greatest they ever attended. Will have excellent results." That this was not the report of an over-enthusiastic leader is evidenced by a night letter to Dr. Aitchison: "Pastors and laymen of largely attended regional conference express their appreciation of the genial presence, the Christlike spirit, and great ability of representatives from national headquarters who have brought such informing, inspirational and statesmanlike addresses. Our people were lifted to a higher plane and their vision enlarged. We heartily commend regional missionary conferences as effective agencies to bring results of greatest value to the kingdom of God. This is sent by vote of the conference."

MASSACHUSETTS

The Massachusetts conferences were well and representatively attended. The reports of interest in the New World Movement and of efforts for its success are excellent. In one conference, at the conclusion of the open forum the house voluntarily and enthusiastically voted its confidence in the General Board of Promotion. State Director Reid and the team are co-operating splendidly.

GIVE YOUR PASTOR A NEW BOOK HE READS ALL THE YEAR ROUND

NEW LIGHT ON IMMORTALITY

The Significance of Psychic Research

By JOHN H. RANDALL

Written for the benefit of those without time for an extended study of just what psychical research really means, what it is trying to do and how much has already been accomplished. $1.75

THE PULPIT AND AMERICAN LIFE

By A. S. HOYT

"The parish minister may easily miss the breadth and reach of the influence upon the national life exerted by the army of men of his calling one hundred and fifty thousand strong." Dr. Hoyt. $2.50

A WONDERFUL MORNING

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN. Author of "A WONDERFUL NIGHT"; "THE PERSONALITY OF GOD"; "THE COMING OF THE LORD" etc.

This finely made book is a study of that first Easter Morning which sets forth in poetic language its profound meaning and far-reaching power. A gift book with a many-sided message of re-assurance for the sorrowing. $1.50

JESUS AND PAUL

By BENJAMIN W. BACON

"The best way to understand the nature of the changes in Jesus' version of christianity recorded in the New Testament literature is to study the crucial change from the gospel preached by Jesus in Galilee to the gospel about Jesus preached by Paul, the most momentous change in the history of our faith." Dr. Bacon. $2.50

WHAT AND WHERE IS GOD?

By RICHARD L. SWAIN

"I took yesterday to read your book. You have demonstrated in this work that the profoundest spiritual truths can be put in forms understandable by the common mind. Cloth $2.50—Paper Boards $1.50.

RELIGION AND BUSINESS

By ROGER W. BABSON

(Babson's Statistical Organization)
"Business talk that business men can follow regarding improvements in the greatest industry in the world—the religious business."—Cloth $2.75, Paper Boards $1.50

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

Foster: Christianity in its Modern Expression ..... (Probably) $3.75
Cadman: Ambassadors of God (Paper Board) ..... 2.50
Pratt: Religious Consciousness (Paper Board) ..... 2.50
Rice: The Old Testament in the Life of Today ..... 3.00
Tracy: The Psychology of Adolescence ..... 3.00
McConnell: Church Finance and Social Ethics ..... 1.50
Power of Prayer ..... 4.00

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY
64-66 Fifth Avenue New York City, N. Y.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL

A MAGAZINE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

A Help in Your School — A Joy in Your Home

PRICE, PER YEAR, $1.25
In clubs of six to one address, each per year, $1.00

THE GRADED PRESS

150 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

This Girl Is a Wonder

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00 and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write today. Isabelle Inez, 368 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society

Our Corporate name is

"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"

Executive Secretary, Charles L. White

Treasurer, Samuel Bryant

23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

J. E. CONANT, D. D.

6115 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago

EVANGELISTIC BIBLE TEACHER

Dr. J. C. Massee, Vice-President Northern Baptist Convention and Pastor Brooklyn Baptist Temple, says: "I consider Dr. Conant one of the clearest thinkers, one of the best preachers, and one of the godliest men I know."

Open dates after the last of March

Beware of Contagious Diseases

THOMAS
INDIVIDUAL

COMMUNION
SERVICE

SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES

Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer. Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outfits, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free. DeMoulin Bros. & Co., Dept. 17 GREENVILLE, ILL.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

CROUP OR WHOOPIING COUGH

ROCHE'S HYPERAL EMBROCATION

Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.

W. EDWARDS & SON All druggists or
E. FOUGERA & CO.
London, England 90-92 Beckman St. N. Y.

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

T. WM. LESTER

ORGAN MUSIC IN THE THEATER AND THE CHURCH

WITH the present vogue for organ music in the "movies" and theaters has come the knotty problem of finding a line of separation between the pieces played for entertainment in such places and music suitable and exclusive enough to be fitting in divine worship. If a person has the slightest weakness for a melody, he certainly cannot hear "Humoresque" used as an offertory in church and not be put in mind of a certain popular film-drama of the moment. Certainly this diversion cannot be of any great aid to the religious motive of the occasion! The problem of a more careful differentiation between the types of organ pieces suitable for secular or sacred use is set forth as follows by a writer in Musical Opinion, a London journal:

Organists in America are getting a bit worried because so many of their pet voluntaries are becoming standing dishes at the picture theaters and are thus losing their fitness for church use. Some of us here have met with the same difficulty, and have had to scrap the Rachmaninoff "Prelude" and such popular recital numbers because they have become almost identified with the cinema. But I don't think many of us have been hit as to voluntaries. Of course it all depends on your idea of a voluntary. If you are in the habit of speeding your congregation homewards with the Raff "Cavatina" or the Sibelius "Valse Triste" or the Mendelssohn "Spring Song," you must not be surprised to find your brother at the picturedrome cutting you out. On the other hand, if you differentiate as you should between organ music to be played (a) as voluntaries, (b) at recitals given immediately before or after a service, (c) at recitals in church apart from a service, and (d) at recitals in a concert hall, you will be safe. For your voluntaries will naturally have been of a type for which he of the picturedrome will have no use. It is amusing to note that one of the organ pieces commandeered by the cinema players in America is a certain andantino in D flat to which I fancy most English organists will say they are heartily welcome. A glance at the column of recital programs shows such a poor choice of music that we need not be surprised at the church players finding their field invaded. If they want to hold their own, they must play better stuff.

The extraordinary development of organ music for "screen" purposes, brought about by the building of large and really magnificent instruments, and by the employment of executants of the first class at very liberal salaries, has naturally resulted in a standard of playing that is high and constantly getting higher.

The line of demarcation, as shown by "a," "b," "c," and "d" in what we quote, is clear enough: the trouble will be to get organists to "toe" it.

BAPTIST MUSIC

A LARGE four-manual Austin organ has been installed in the First Church of Birmingham, Ala. The instrument is one of the largest in the South, and the only four-manual organ in the state. The opening recital was given Dec. 19 by the regular organist, Edwin Lyles Taylor, F. A. G. O., who displayed the organ and his own fine equipment in a program which included the "Overture to William Tell," "Spring Song" by Hollins, "The Swan" of Saint-Saens, "Toccata in G" by Dubois, "Christmas in Sicily," Yon, "Fugue in G Minor," Bach, "The Storm," Taylor, and the "Grand March from Aida," Verdi. In addition to his duties at the church, Mr. Taylor directs the musical department of Howard College, in Birmingham.

From the Diapason, the official journal of the National Association of Organists, we clip this report: "One of our new members, Paul E. Thomson, A. A. G. O., sends programs from the First Baptist Church of Dayton, Ohio. They are of fine quality. With a chorus of fifty, he gave John E. West's 'Story of Christmas' Dec. 19. On Dec. 11 he gave a recital, including such numbers as Faulkes' 'Allegro Symphonique,' de Bricqueville's 'Etude for Pedals Alone,' and Shelley's 'Fanfare.' Miss Lucy Markham Chinn, A. A. G. O., one of our most enthusiastic and energetic members, gave at her church, the First Baptist of Frankfort, Ky., the following program in connection with her Christmas service: 'Vivace,' from the 'Sixth Sonata,' Bach; 'Giles Farnaby's Dream'; 'Second Meditation,' Guilmant; 'Praeludium,' Jarnefelt; 'Andante Cantabile,' Dethier."

The new Moller organ recently installed by the First Church of Hutchinson, Kans., is adding greatly to the musical side of the church life. It is a two-manual instrument, with electric-pneumatic action and Lemare type console, and has eighteen speaking stops and an ample supply of couplers and combination pistons. The dedication recital was given by William Lester, organist, assisted by Margaret Lester, soprano, before an audience that more than filled the large edifice. Mrs. J. C. Newman is the regular organist at this thriving church.

Ernest R. Kroeger, A. G. O., gave an organ recital under the auspices of the Missouri Chapter of the American Guild of Organists in the Delmar Church, St.

KEUKA COLLEGE

Keuka Park, New York

A COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

Opens September 21, 1921

President, A. H. NORTON, Ph. D.

DO YOU KNOW!!

THE Business World needs Christian Young People. An efficient Business Training midst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY

Write for particulars Osage, Iowa

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Young Women

Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year. Apply early for September.

Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

Louis, Dec. 5. His program contained the following numbers: "Sonata in F Minor," Mendelssohn; "Ave Maria," Schubert; "Gavotte in F," Martini; "Lamentation," Guilmant; "Serenade Romantique," Mansfield; "Allegretto from Seventh Symphony," Beethoven; "Andante Tristamente," Kroeger; "Melodie du Soir," Shelley; "Toccata in G," Dubois.

REVIEW OF NEW MUSIC

From the Clayton F. Summy Company, Chicago:
"Lazarus," a sacred cantata, by Clarence R. Kaul.

Choirmasters alert for a service cantata marked by reverent warmth of melody, simplicity of outline, and well-knit dramatic interest will do well to examine this thirty-minute-long "meditation on the Miracle of our Saviour, as related in the eleventh chapter of the gospel according to St. John." The cantata is laid out on effective lines, enlists the efforts of a quartet of solo voices, chorus and organ, and is an admirable translation into tone of the incidents of the text. While mostly homophonic in its technical handling and simple in its harmonizations, many definite proofs of its writer's experience and musicianship are to be found in its pages. The orchestra score and parts may be rented from the publisher.

From Arthur P. Schmidt Company, Boston:

"Give unto the Lord, O Ye Mighty," Harold Vincent Milligan.
"Rest in Thee," C. P. Scott.
"Stars of Evening," Paul Ambrose.

The first anthem of this set is interesting in its rhythmic structure as well as in its modal coloring. In the hands of a well-routined chorus with the complement of a modern organ, it should prove extremely effective. The other two numbers are more conventional in their make-up, and probably will be more widely used on that account. Notable in the Scott anthem is the well-set solo for alto. The Ambrose piece is marked by much melodic interest and gives splendid opportunity for choral shading. It is a welcome addition to the list of easy evening anthems. It is set for a four-part chorus of mixed voices, to be sung without accompaniment.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Some Fair Questions for the Investor

THE company: How long established? Has it gone through successfully a period of depression? Is it on a sound basis commercially and financially? What facilities has the plant as to (1) railroad, (2) shipping, (3) power, (4) water, (5) light and heat, (6) close to raw material supply? What is the company's reputation as to credit standing and business dealings? What is the total (1) capitalization, (2) common stock, and (3) preferred stock? Do current earnings justify above capitalization? Kind of bonded indebtedness? Kind of bonds? Nature of sinking funds, if any?

The product: Is it useful? Is it practical? Has it a ready market? Is the demand reasonably steady or subject to the influence of abnormal conditions? Is it sold at a reasonable profit? Is it patented? Is it a secret process in the hands of a few persons? Does demand exceed supply? Will there be repeat orders? Does its price depend on special conditions?

The management: Are active officers experienced, successful, reliable men? What were their previous connections?

Earnings: Is there a published balance sheet? Does it publish a statement covering a number of years? What is the ratio of net quick assets to net quick liabilities? Has the surplus or undivided profit fund shown a steady increase? Have earnings increased? How many times over have bond interest and dividend requirements been earned? Is the balance sheet and earnings statement simply and clearly arranged?

Dividends: When was company established? When was first dividend paid? Have dividends been paid regularly? Any distribution of stock dividends? If preferred dividends have been paid regularly, are the earnings sufficient to allow dividends on the common stock?

Summary: Can you afford to take increased income at the expense of too great risk of your principal?

The above suggestive list of questions is reproduced from an advertisement of the Herkimer County Trust Company, Little Falls, N. Y., commented on in the Burroughs Clearing House for January, and reprinted in the Prentice Hall Digest.

Sunday-School Lessons for Adults

(Continued from page 53)

Men and women like to discuss religious subjects. They covet the teaching concerning the "truth" which is thoughtful and thought-provoking, warm and human. No one flinches from even the sternest phases of the gospel if it is taught in love.

Someone may ask, "Who shall be the teacher?" Practically the largest and best men's classes of our section are taught by pastors. They have the training, the information and the time (?). They should not be asked to undertake this difficult task with all they must do on Sunday. Yet many pastor-teachers find that their supremest opportunity comes with this service.

Vocations Within the Church

By

LEONIDAS W. CRAWFORD

For week-day schools, Sunday schools, colleges, training schools and the like.

Net, $1.25; by mail, $1.35

THE ABINGDON PRESS

EASTER EXTRAORDINARY

EASTER! DAY OF DAYS! is the title of a new service for Sunday schools, of rare beauty and worth. Sample copy mailed for four 2-cent stamps.

Send us your address (and that of others interested) and we will mail free our new catalog of Easter services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for mixed voices, women's voices, and men's voices, also anthems for choir.

HYMNS FOR TO-DAY, new, for the Sunday school and church, voicing the forward-looking spirit of to-day in beautiful songs, new and old. Contains 15 Easter hymns and two Easter services. Price, $75 per 100. Returnable sample copy mailed for examination. Orchestrated.

We make a specialty of religious orchestra music.

Fillmore Music House, 518 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

EASTER FREE HALL-MACK CO. MUSIC

Sample Services of Songs and Recitations to Ministers, Superintendents, and Committees.

Returnable Samples of Choir Cantatas and Anthems.

The Garden of Joseph, new song story by Adam Geibel. 25 cents.

Easter Helper No. 7 (not sent for examination), 15 cents in stamps.

HALL-MACK CO. {21st and Arch Sts.,
ADAM GEIBEL CO. } Philadelphia, Pa.

Harry W. Jones
CHURCH ARCHITECT
Minneapolis

ORCHESTRATED EDITION (Now Ready)

"Popular Hymnal" "THE WORLD'S MOST SERVICEABLE SONG BOOK"

400,000 Copies Published in Two Years
Largest Churches in America Use It.

Write for Circular to
ROBERT H. COLEMAN, Dallas, Texas,
Editor, Publisher and Distributor. Depository also in Chicago.

Rodeheaver's Victory Songs

OUR great gospel song book prepared under supervision of our Mr. Homer Rodeheaver is for general Church and Y. M. C. A. purposes. Hearty approval from song leaders. 70 new songs and 259 old favorites.

Contains 288 pages of music.
Single copies: Manila, 35c; Limp, 40c; Cloth, 50c; postpaid.
Quantities: Manila, 30c; Limp, 35c; Cloth, 45c; not prepaid.

AWAKENING SONGS, 256 pages, same prices as above.
SONGS OF SERVICE, 288 pages, also same prices as Victory Songs.
JOYFUL PRAISE, 128 pages, Limp, 25c; quantity, 20c.
CAMP FIRE SONGS, 22 pages, 10c a copy—$3.00 per 100.
RODEHAVER'S GOSPEL RECORDS, $1.00 each—Ask for list.

Our NOVELTY CONCERT PROPOSITION will interest you. Ask us as to great advantages in this to churches. Ask for catalog and list.

THE RODEHAVER COMPANY

1053 Monon Bldg., Chicago Dept. B, 814 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

My Sister's Keeper?

THERE were 500,000 girls in business in Japan in 1915; in 1920 over 1,500,000. The number is increasing rapidly.

The Christian Commercial School of Tokyo is to be opened in 1922. Cost $50,000.

This is a challenge to the Baptist business girls of America. One-half has been promised.

* * *

Another opportunity:

The Ko Tha Byo—Sqaw Karen High School, Bassein, Burma.

The Karens have given $100,000 for the building.
They ask for $10,000 from us for equipment.

They must have it.

* * *

These enterprises are a part of the New World Movement. The Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society is our denominational agency for meeting these needs.

The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention

276 Fifth Ave., New York City

2.05
AP
Volume II

February 19, 1921

Number 3

The Baptist

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO LIBRARY
DIV OF INT AFF
Urbana Ill

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist (

YOUNG CHINA IN ITS ANCIENT BABY CARRIAGE LOOKING TOWARDS AMERICA

Babies Who Have No Chance

I HAVE seen the tragedy and looked it right in the eye. In many of the villages there were no children--I mean no babies--under one year of age. "Where are the children?" I asked some women. "Gone," was the reply. "Given them away?" I queried. "Who would take them?" was the reply. "Who could feed them? But rather than see our children starve, we will throw them into the wells." The American consul at Tsinanfu told me that as a result the wells had become so polluted in some sections that the water could not be used.

BISHOP W. B. LAMBUTH.

Latest Publications from the Press of the

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

You and Your Church

By JAMES S. KIRTLEY, D.D.

What is involved in being a Christian, a church member, a Baptist? Out of an experience of many years as a pastor, Doctor Kirtley has set forth replies to these questions in such way as to construct a work of great practical value to young people. The volume is especially adapted to serve as a textbook for classes in study of the essentials of the principles, polity and work of Baptist churches. Boards, $1.25 net

A Study of the Holy Spirit

By T. P. STAFFORD, A.M., Th.D.

A well-ordered exposition of the Scripture teaching as to the Holy Spirit, Biblical in method, simple in statement, practical in purpose, this work should find a place not only on the student's shelf, but on the desk of the pastor who aims at Scriptural presentation of so important a doctrine, and in the hands of the church worker who seeks intelligent contact with the source of spiritual power for himself and for others. Boards, $1.00 net

The Ideal Man

By J. P. GREENE, D.D.

In these chapters is the heart of a course in Practical Ethics given by the author in William Jewell College. They pulsate with the virile personality of Doctor Greene. The outcome of wide experience and of intelligent study of books and men, they have the simplicity of light and the vitalizing warmth of eminently Christian humanity of a man who "sees into people and still believes in them." Cloth, $1.00 net

The Stature of a Perfect Man

By P. H. J. LERRIGO, M.D.

A physician's contribution to the statement of natural laws in the spiritual world. Through science "undreamed-of natural secrets have become the commonplaces of popular information." Doctor Lerrigo has drawn upon one department of this widely disseminated classified knowledge in an attempt to indicate the wealth of possibilities of teaching by means of parable the truth concerning the life processes of the soul. "A classification of those laws of spiritual health which parallel the normal physiological processes of the body, and which may perhaps fitly be termed the physiology of the inner life, should be helpful in leading us to a correct understanding of soul health."

Boards, $1.00 net

JUST PUBLISHED

Hymns for the King's Children

A Song-Book for the Children's Division of the Sunday School

Edited by EDWARD M. FULLER

In this collection are 136 hymns, the words being set within the music. In addition, there are eight special services adapted for opening and closing periods for Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas, for patriotic, temperance, and missionary occasions, and combining Scripture reading, song, and prayer in reasonable proportions; ten additional hymns are given in these services.

Attention has been given to the requirements of each department in the Children's Division, and the range of children's voices has been kept in mind. A number of the favorite hymns of the church have been included. Special indexes of hymns adapted to the departments are provided, together with the indexes of titles and of first lines.

Octavo, 165 pages. Price, boards. 40 cents a copy, $35.00 a hundred; delivery charges extra.

The Religion of Jesus

By ALBERT G. LAWSON, D.D.

In method of treatment, descriptive rather than historical or philosophical; in style, addresses, not essays; in matter, Biblical; the work of a lover of good books—these four papers have the charm of sincerity and beauty in expression that well supports their practical purpose. Boards, 75 cents net

The Angel's Lily

By RUSSELL H. CONWELL, D.D., LL.D.

An accurate record of one of Dr. Conwell's most interesting and instructive addresses, in the form of an Oriental parable. Accompanying the lecture are eight chapters giving a history of Temple University. Cloth, $1.25 net

Friday's Footprints

By MARGARET T. APPELGARTH

Truth embodied in a tale enters in at open doors. Here are missionary stories—almost two-score of them—told by a master of story-telling who has so co-ordinated her work and who presents her material in such a fascinating way that to read her chapters is to take a personally conducted tour around the world of missionary interest. Miss Applegarth's charming style in expression of her thorough grasp of facts is most effective to win attention and to lodge information. A worthwhile book for the juniors, and the seniors will not think it beneath them. Cloth, $1.50 net

Send for a copy of our complete Descriptive Catalog.

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

Philadelphia Boston Chicago St. Louis Kansas City Los Angeles Seattle Toronto

Fresh from the Field

The Twin Cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis, have recently held a series of conferences of great value for pastors, church officers and committee chairmen. Dr. Potat and Agar gave ten days to the cities, laying down the principles of stewardship and elaborating the plans and programs of church efficiency. Dr. Agar will return later to put through in the churches an up-to-date every-member canvass for the local church maintenance and the New World Movement.

Dr. John H. Byrne, member and deacon of the Second Church, Chicago, since its dedication in January, 1865, came to the office a few days ago and paid his fifty-fifth subscription to a Baptist periodical. He had first the Christian Times and Witness, edited by Justin Smith, then the Standard and now THE BAPTIST. Although eighty years of age he is yet active practice and serving the denomination in responsible positions.

The Calvary Church, Cleveland, Ohio, Rev. H. Lee McLendon, pastor, has just celebrated its silver anniversary. The church invited the former pastors and their wives, together with the Baptist pastors of Cleveland and their wives, to be its special guests for the occasion. Dr. W. W. Bustard of the Euclid Avenue Church, Cleveland, delivered one of the principal addresses. A special committee of nine arranged for the two days' celebration. The reports at these meetings showed that the church was never in better condition. There are conversions or additions at nearly every service. The church added $400 to Pastor McLendon's salary.

Rev. Geo. W. McDaniel has been with the First Church, Richmond, Va., sixteen years. During the past year the church has voted to move to an up-town site. Land has been secured and a committee is at work on plans for the building which they are planning shall be a credit to the city and denomination. During the year also the members paid in $106,608 on the 75 Million Campaign conducted by the Southern Baptists. The church is vigorous and prosperous and looking forward to the best years in its history.

The Central Church of San Francisco is planning to build soon. Under the able leadership of Rev. D. M. Dawson, the church prospers despite the adverse conditions that prevail in San Francisco. The pastor has had the joy of seeing the mortgage burned, extensive alterations made and paid for, and the membership doubled during his ministry.

Spelman Seminary, Atlanta, Ga., is planning to observe its fortieth anniversary April 6-8.

Rev. R. H. Seitner, pastor of the church at Arco, Idaho, is rejoicing over the results of a revival meeting conducted by District Missionary E. O. Otto. The gains were twenty-nine professions and six others. This gives the church twice its former number of members and will make necessary a larger building.

W. Earle Smith, director of young people's work for the Pacific coast, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First

(Continued on page 96)

The Baptist

Vol. II February 19, 1921 No. 3

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Business Manager: Edgar L. Killam

Committee on Publication:
REV. JAMES M. STIFLER MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WILLIAM A. MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:
PRES. GEORGE E. HERR PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs including every family, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.
CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	66
NEW WORLD MOVEMENT PLEDGES AND RECEIPTS.....	68
EDITORIALS .....	69
PRESIDENT-ELECT HARDING AS A CHURCHMAN, by Albert Sidney Gregg .....	72
VOLCANIC OUTBURSTS, by Violet C. Humphrey .....	73
ADVERTISING THE CHURCH, by Geo. E. Burlingame.....	74
A SUNDAY EVENING WHICH YOUNG PEOPLE LIKE, by Forrest A. Kingsbury .....	75
HOW CUPID BROKE INTO THE GAUHATI SCHOOL, by May A. Nichols .....	77
A NEEDY WORLD CHALLENGES YOUTH, by H. G. Weston Smith .....	78
WHO'S WHO AMONG BAPTISTS, by William B. Lippard .....	80
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	81
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	82
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....	84
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	85
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	86
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	87
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	94
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS, by Lee B. Doty.....	95

And He Is from Missouri

"I WANT to unburden myself. The first thing I want to tell you is that you are giving us a splendid paper. I have asked myself how it could be made any better, and my answer has always been, 'I don't know.' This is quite a confession from a dyspeptic, hypercritical old grouch like me" (David Cole, Kansas City).

What Do You Think of It?

"WHEN W. L. Ferguson, our missionary in South India, was a boy in his Iowa home, the Standard was a regular visitor in that home. His father, John Ferguson, was of good old Scotch Covenanter stock. On Saturday night all books and newspapers were put away for over Sunday. When the Standard first began its visits, the father discussed thoroughly the question of the propriety of letting the young folks read the paper on Sunday. Suffice it to say that the denominational weekly gained a place beside the Bible and hymn-book as good Sunday reading. Yes, and incidentally a missionary was schooled for a great work in a foreign land.

* * *

The young people of the First Church, Trinidad, Colo., have secured in cash almost enough money to provide THE BAPTIST for the reading rooms of about a score of mining camps in the out-lying districts. Do you think the miners will appreciate this evidence of interest on the part of these Christian young folks? It is needless to say that Pastor Heydon has a live church.

* * *

Dr. J. C. Massee of the Baptist Temple, Brooklyn, N. Y., in a recent letter to the editor says: "Permit me also to express my gratification that you have been appointed editor. I wish I might sit down and talk over with you the paper as an ultra-conservative sees it. I must express to you my conviction that the general conduct and tone of the paper has been seriously improved, and congratulate you upon that success."

* * *

"Enclosed find our check for $143—the first installment of our new list for THE BAPTIST." (First Baptist Church, Los Angeles.)

* * *

"I am convinced that Grace Church, Spokane, will put THE BAPTIST in every home by spring." (John R. George.)

The ministers' conference in Spokane subscribed for THE BAPTIST for the public libraries.

* * *

Theodore Maynard, a traveling salesman, found his way to the First Church, Eugene, Ore., on a recent prayer meeting night. He writes that the board of deacons, under the direction of the church, selects a list of non-resident members and sends them THE BAPTIST. He adds: "This is one of the most practical and effective ways of reminding the non-residents of the Christian and denominational tie that binds them to the church. Its spiritual and educational value cannot be overestimated."

Regional Conferences Create New Spirit

By ERNEST L. PRIEST

PROMISES of a new spirit throughout the denomination resulting from the regional missionary conferences are contained in reports from centers where the conferences have been under way for two weeks. Churches are experiencing a renewal of enthusiasm, while interest in missions is being deepened.

From several states, both in the East and in the West, come reports of record attendance at the meetings, and pastors and laymen are taking with them, on their return to their home churches, a broader vision and new courage to meet the challenge. Speakers from the mission fields, both home and foreign, are being given keen attention, while those who are in touch with the great opportunities and needs, both at home and abroad, are making a deep impression upon their audiences.

Fine tribute is paid to the work of Dr. Charles A. Brooks and Mrs. Henry W. Peabody in a night letter from the Northwest which says: "Team meeting splendid response everywhere. Fine and fruitful day in Spokane Sunday. Splendid opening with full house in Seattle tonight. Dr. Brooks and Mrs. Peabody doing wonderful work and winning audiences."

From Boise, Idaho, Rev. W. H. Bowler, one of the field representatives, writes his impressions as follows: "It has been admitted locally at all places that these have been the most largely attended missionary conferences ever held. The Denver meeting was particularly good, and the attendance was the largest we have yet seen. I am sure that in all places so visited the conferences have made a profound impression. If the conferences all over the country are as productive of good as I feel certain our conferences have been so far, then beyond any question these regional conferences are creating a new spirit throughout the denomination."

With almost no exception a wonderful support has been given by the secular press to the conferences, for in the towns and cities where the meetings are being held the local papers are sending their own reporters to interview the members of the teams besides reporting the conferences.

A Word from Wyoming

THE regional conferences are on in Wyoming. On Feb. 1 and 2 one of these conferences was held in the Cheyenne Church. No one who attended that meeting regretted a dollar expended, although some had to travel more than 500 miles to attend. They were mountain-top days, with a practical point directly visible. Dr. Brooks, in his great address on his European trip, left an indelible impression. Mrs. Peabody, Dr. Ripley of Colorado and Dr. Bowler also made their presence felt.

Those who did not go to this conference are not shut out yet. Two more are to be held in the state: In Sheridan, on Feb. 18 and 19, for the northeast section; and in Worland, on Feb. 20 and 21, for the Big Horn Basin. All pastors should attend, and they should bring some new blood with them besides the "old convention-goers." Get more Baptists in Wyoming on fire for the cause! The best way to do this is by putting them in touch with these meetings of power. The speakers at these two conferences are Dr. Rider of Los Angeles, Dr. Lynch from Africa and Mrs. Wadsworth.

A Plea to Baptist Women

WE feel impelled again to urge you to hold special prayer services for the success of the regional conferences. Many of these conferences are now being held in different parts of the country. Prayer will prepare the heart to receive the blessing our heavenly Father is anxious to bestow upon his children at this time. Prayer will also prepare the heart of the unbeliever and the indifferent one to receive His message. The blessing is ours for the asking. Will you ask?

MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY,
MRS. JOHN NUREEN.

Foreign Mission Society Board Meeting

By C. J. POPE

THE announcement of a meeting of any board of managers conveys the impression to the ordinary mind that a mass of matters is to pass in review which is of no particular interest to anybody except to those who constitute the board. Not so are the quarterly meetings of the board of managers of the Foreign Mission Society. The writer has had long experience on convention and college boards. But these meetings are unique in his experience. They are not physically wearisome by being protracted into unseasonable hours. The business to be considered is carefully prepared and succinctly stated. The items have to do with great human values which hold the mind keen and alert. The seasons of fervent prayer warm the heart. The earnestness and care in discussion show that men are conscious of a great trust imposed. Problems are faced with such evident need of God's guidance that there is the constant feeling out for his hand. The emphasis placed upon the salvation of men everywhere kindles anew a passion for souls. The insistence that the work of the missionary is to make the divine Lord supreme and known to men everywhere begets confidence. The reports from the fields fill the heart with a bounding gladness. The presence and addresses of missionaries on furlough fan the fires of devotion. The testimonies of young people applying for appointment open the fountain of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God that his Spirit still draws with irresistible power our strongest and best to the work of saving men. These are great experiences through which to pass in the space of two short days.

The board holds monthly meetings, but those held quarterly are of special importance. The last was in Pittsburgh, Feb. 8 and 9. Dr. Galpin and his people gave every consideration and attention to the meeting in the fine building of the First Church. The sessions were open to the public, as is always the case, and a goodly number attended the afternoon and evening meetings. The secretaries and missionaries gave a vivid bird's-eye view of our missions in Burma, Assam, South India, Bengal-Orissa, China, Japan and Africa. Cheering reports, problems, need of men and equipment, the uncounted millions without knowledge of the Saviour, famine, political unrest, rays of promise of Christianized nations, filled up the picture.

On Thursday evening a remarkable meeting was held in the main auditorium. Drs. W. L. Ferguson of South India, J. T. Latta of Burma, F. P. Lynch of Africa and William Axling of Japan were

(Continued on page 96)

New World Movement Pledges and Receipts

TABLE C

This report is issued as of Jan. 20, 1921, and is compiled on the basis of a form of report adopted by the General Board of Promotion at its annual meeting held in Minneapolis, Dec. 1 and 2, 1920.

I	II	III	IV	V
States in order of highest percentage of payments on pledges:	Amount paid on $100,000,000 fund during fiscal year April 1, 1919-May 1, 1920.	Amount due on pledges to Jan. 20, 1921.	Amount paid on pledges to Jan. 20, 1921.	Percentage paid of amount due on pledges Jan. 20, 1921.
Nebraska .....	$ 62,966.91	$ 88,542.45	$ 87,741.93	99.23
New Hampshire .....	61,800.00	82,347.74	81,860.04	98.22
Iowa .....	130,235.39	206,668.41	202,326.46	97.90
Illinois .....	100,160.00	455,585.10	428,287.65	94.01
Maine .....	65,999.00	133,371.18	116,482.38	87.34
Connecticut .....	56,384.00	191,983.35	166,986.60	86.98
Minnesota .....	90,857.00	148,420.36	127,537.43	85.94
Kansas .....	71,368.00	192,502.22	162,169.56	84.24
Rhode Island .....	23,505.00	132,730.64	109,555.38	82.54
New York Met. ....	*685,887.00	1,283,762.95	1,055,246.04	82.19
New Jersey .....	126,327.88	489,175.05	395,498.11	80.85
New York State .....	374,756.74	778,278.61	606,331.84	77.91
Massachusetts .....	184,941.00	753,157.36	590,187.00	78.36
District of Columbia .....		241,116.40	18,671.68	77.42
Wisconsin .....	37,586.17	107,601.71	81,870.76	76.09
Washington, D. C. ....	26,969.00	74,491.17	56,211.26	75.46
North Dakota .....	5,582.09	35,671.87	26,012.37	73.13
Indiana .....	102,989.39	312,614.86	221,877.01	70.97
Ohio .....	110,056.34	568,217.28	397,661.49	69.98
West Virginia .....	40,237.00	183,204.80	127,548.17	69.62
Washington, W. ....	27,805.00	74,342.09	50,905.77	68.48
Nevada .....	11,790.00	54,811.00	3,720.36	67.88
Oregon .....		88,378.67	60,093.59	67.24
Idaho .....	10,422.00	29,721.64	19,421.42	65.33
California, N. ....		157,030.65	100,670.64	64.11
Michigan .....	93,906.00	348,243.37	221,147.67	63.50
Pennsylvania .....	254,478.07	793,314.82	550,911.00	61.64
California, S. ....	140,328.00	312,265.72	192,271.39	61.57
Vermont .....	38,453.86	81,059.06	49,705.46	61.32
Colorado .....	29,165.00	106,118.55	64,316.34	60.61
Delaware .....	8,311.00	9,086.95	5,609.35	55.13
Wyoming .....	4,513.00	16,105.92	8,859.59	55.01
Arizona .....	9,799.85	37,509.22	20,236.49	53.95
Montana .....		23,563.37	12,487.79	53.00
South Dakota .....	20,000.00	60,291.00	30,443.54	50.49
Utah .....	2,092.00	4,307.34	2,084.74	48.40
Missouri .....		111,797.24	45,817.00	40.98
Totals .....	$3,009,681.69	$8,502,960.12	$6,498,165.30	76.42

* Includes large payments on pledges to New World Movement credited to fiscal year ending April 30, 1920.

The Baptist

An Envoy for Christ

THE Apostle Paul placed a high value upon his calling in Christ Jesus, as should every one who has had a real soul experience. There is every reason for believing that he was sincere in his persecutions of the early Christians. His home training, his college education, his sect affiliation, his dynamic nature all tended to make him a persecutor of whom his victims were in terror. But when Christ spoke to him on his way to Damascus, there came into his life a new vision, a realization that the despised Jesus was his divine Lord. That moment is vital in any man's life when he passes beyond the intellectual conception of the Christ and comes to know him by faith and experience as master of his life.

Paul has many expressions in his various letters to the churches endeavoring to convey in written language the depth of meaning that this transforming experience was to him and might be to them. One of these is found in II Cor. 5:17: "There is a new creation whenever a man comes to be in Christ; what is old is gone, the new has come. It is all the doing of the God who has reconciled me to himself through Christ and has permitted me to be a minister of his reconciliation. For in Christ God reconciled the world to himself instead of counting men's trespasses against them; and he entrusted me with the message of his reconciliation. So I am an envoy for Christ, God appealing by me, as it were—be reconciled to God. I entreat you on behalf of Christ." (Moffat's translation.)

The authorized translation has it "ambassador." It is indeed a great distinction to be named an envoy. Our minister to the Court of St. James or to any other country speaks for our government and is our government personified. Do you wonder that elsewhere Paul refers to the "high calling in Christ Jesus"? Thus it should seem to any ambassador of our Christ.

Myron T. Herrick was named by the President as ambassador to France. He had a high sense of the honor and privilege bestowed upon him and used his large powers, experience and fortune to represent adequately his country in Paris. The great world war came on. He was called upon to assume the responsibility of the embassies for the nations at war with France. Thousands of Americans and others, touring upon the continent, turned to him for advice and aid. He alone of all the ambassadors remained at his post when the threatening drive on Paris came. Later he was relieved and came home assured that he had done a great service to his native land. It leaked out in after months that not only had he performed a prodigious task, expending every cent the United States had allowed him for salary and expenses, but that he had also spent $400,000 of his own fortune.

Does your ambassadorship mean ought to you? Is it a high calling in Christ Jesus? Have you a fellowship with him that you prize above all else? Has he said "go" to you? Where? It may be to a down-town city parish, a rural church, a foreign field, a class of boys or girls, or to be a Christian mother in a home, or a business man. You should know. If you realize that the task is His will, the place to which you go will be the happiest spot in all the world. Are you willing to pay the price?

Blessed Are Those Who Stick to It

THIS is the story of two men. One was gifted with a brilliant mind. He was eternally full of new ideas and always starting something which he seldom finished. The other was patient and plodding, not lacking in thought and ability, but possessing even more the ability to stick to a thing until it was carried through to completion. If the other man dwelt with the stars, this man had his feet firmly fixed on the ground. In at least one instance, the first man was on the point of failing in some great enterprise when the latter took hold of it and achieved a brilliant success. Thank God for the men who dream, but blessed be those who stick to their job, for by them the work of the world gets done!

The qualities of the second man are to be commended just now. We Baptists have a perfect genius for starting things. We launch mighty movements with a whoop and hurrah. But do we always get our second wind? Do we always make the second mile? Or does it happen occasionally that when the new enterprise strikes hard going, when the patient, constructive, unnoticed work needs doing, we get weary and wait for some undiscovered "George" to come to our relief, beguiling our waiting by offering a few criticisms?

There is danger in monkeying with the machinery of any enterprise. Many an automobile engine runs well until the owner tinkers with the carburetor. The same may be said of denominational enterprises. Constant tinkering may easily be fatal to good work. The adoption of a big program is good, but it means nothing unless people are willing to allow sufficient time for its working. To reverse one year the action of a previous year and to start new plans before old plans have been given a real chance is a policy at which any sane business man would laugh in scorn.

At Denver Northern Baptists had a great vision and adopted a magnificent program. Every part was worked out in prayer and with a desire to advance the kingdom of our Lord. The evangelistic, stewardship, publicity, educational and other features were all shaped, as men believed, under the guidance of the Spirit. Progress has been made on the program. The coming months are to show new and striking gains. But in order for the largest success, two things should be emphasized.

The first may be put in the form of an exhortation. Let's stop fussing at our men and our machinery! These men have been given a big task and they are spending their very lives on it. Give them a chance. Let nobody throw bricks! A brick offers no solution. To make changes would be to introduce confusion. To keep men anxious by fussing at them takes the heart out of the best of mortals. Let's say to our leaders: "God bless you. We intend that you shall have every opportunity to bring things to pass. We shall pray for you daily and help you with all our ability."

And the other thing is to remind ourselves of the grace of continuance. We are now to show whether we can ourselves do patient, painstaking work on a great task. The tumult and the shouting dies. But the big job is with us. It can be done. The call of the hour is for people who will stay with it whether the going be hard or easy until the end is reached, for people who will not insist on riding but who will get out and push when a hard place is discovered. Baptist democracy is on trial. Can it be efficient in a big and practical way? Or are we governed by a series of mass meetings which are unable to relate themselves in a vital constructive way with each other? What we do in the next few months will furnish the answer.

What Is Independence For?

FOR better, for worse, we Baptists are committed to individual and local church independence. And we can quote Scripture in support of our rights: "Ye, brethren, were called for freedom." (Gal. 5:13.)

The penetrating question is, What are we going to do with our independence? There are two courses open to us. One is to detach ourselves from the brotherhood, stand off in isolation from it and its work, glorying in our independence. The other course is to use our freedom in surrendering our independence to join the brotherhood in all it is trying to do for the glory of our common Lord. This is the finest and final consecration of our right to be independent. And it is what Paul meant when, to the statement quoted above, he added, "through love serve one another." Or, as Sabatier summarizes the passage, "Made free by faith, make yourself slaves by love."

Religious Book Week Number

DO religious books have the same place in the home they did some years ago? A difference of opinion seems to exist on this subject. Can anything be done to encourage families to give place among the popular magazines, detective stories and the like which litter their library tables, to books on religious subjects? To encourage such a result the week of March 13-20 is to be observed all over the United States as Religious Book Week.

The issue of THE BAPTIST for March 5 will, accordingly, be a Religious Book Week Number. It will contain articles by prominent people dealing with the place of religious books in the home, an article dealing with the minister's reading, contributions by various laymen telling what books they would like their pastors to read and by a number of ministers telling what books they would like their laymen to read. There will also be information regarding the religious books which during the past year have been "best sellers." This will be a live number and you will not wish to miss it. You might do some good missionary work, also, by sending copies to your friends. How many will you have?

Power in the Regional Conferences

REPORTS from the regional conferences are that they are proving to be meetings of great power. New England tells the same story in this respect as comes from the far West. And the states in the middle of the country confirm the estimate of these others.

Interest in the great work of missions is intense. People appear to be hungry to hear of the Lord's doings both in this country and in all the lands in which our representatives are working. They are glad to have the New World Movement translated into terms which they can so readily understand. It is a joy to them to mingle their prayers for the largest success of the work to which Jesus has sent them. And misunderstandings are cleared up not only by the giving of such information as is asked for but also by the clearly-felt presence of the Holy Spirit.

Such meetings as these might well have heralded the beginning of the New World Movement. Now that they have been started, they should at least be annual affairs, and should reach sections which in this first campaign have not been touched directly. Pastors and church members who can possibly attend the gathering which is nearest them should by all means do so. Let all go in a spirit of prayer and with an absolute consecration to the Lord's will as that has been and shall be made known and the result will be a quickening of life which will show itself not only in their own souls but also in the evangelistic movements which are now claiming so much attention in all our churches.

An Alert Christianity

IN many respects the times are out of joint. The great war upset world conditions in an almost unimaginable degree. Drought in China, with its inevitable accompaniment of famine, added to the horror and the suffering. Communism in Russia has made that nation an object of dread to surrounding peoples. All the European nations are struggling to rehabilitate themselves. Even in the United States readjustment has thrown out of work many thousands of men and women, including not only the inefficient but also many skilled workers.

An alert Christianity finds in these conditions its opportunity. By this is not meant that the church has as one of its duties the bringing to world conditions of particular remedies. But Christian men have such an opportunity and the church, through all its ministries, is to inspire and instruct them.

Giving for the needs of China or Armenia or the suffering in Europe should bring these peoples nearer and develop a sympathetic touch in which the impartation to them of our spiritual ideals will be possible. The knowledge of the present and possible effect of a distracted Europe upon our own social and political institutions should lead to an attempt to realize brotherhood on an international scale in a larger degree than in the past. A study of present unemployment and unrest in the United States should not lead, as it is doing in some cases, to a campaign which discriminates against union labor, but should rather work out in a movement for a greater productivity on the part of all workers and for justice to all, whether these are in or out of union relationships.

Men say easily that the gospel of Jesus is the only solution for the world's ills. And that is correct. But the gospel of Jesus is not only to be preached by word of mouth but also to be lived in the sight of all men. And that means that Christians are to carry with them, wherever they go, the spirit of Jesus, and are to attempt to make the teaching of Jesus a living factor in the making of a new world. Was there ever such an opportunity for an alert Christianity. It is not often that the institutions of society are dissolved and remade.

Not in every generation do we start to build afresh. The very unusualness of the situation is a challenge to faith and to zeal.

* * *

The pope protests with ill grace against the presence of Baptists in Rome so long as the Catholic churches of that city are ordinarily so nearly empty and the spiritual needs of its people so feebly met. Moreover, there seem to be many people in Rome and in all Italy who have a real hunger for a true evangelical faith.

* * *

The mood for disarmament seems to have partial possession of Congress. The time, therefore, is opportune for urging upon its attention the desirability of speedy action looking towards the limitation of armaments by international agreement. Your task is with your own congressman.

This Week's Prize-Winners

A Christian Must Be Tolerant

"TOLERANCE is the rarest thing in the world, and the most needed," for intolerance has fathered the horrors of religious and secular injustice through all the ages. The most pitiable tragedies the world has known have followed directly in its train. Intolerance brought the poison cup to Socrates; it nailed the Christ to the cross; it slaughtered his followers on St. Bartholomew's Night, and it swept Germany's brute selfishness into its attempt to wreck the civilization of the world. And nowhere is the menace of the intolerant spirit so great as in the realm of religious thought.

Naturally and instinctively we are conservative with regard to the matter which involves the most vital thing in life—our relation to our Maker; and for that reason it is the hardest thing in the world for man to get outside his own individual viewpoint and inside that of his brother when it comes to a question of doctrine and dogma.

But, if we are to be Christian, we must be tolerant, for there are so many angles of vision, so many ways of voicing the one truth, and so many, many chances to misinterpret our neighbor's view and to do him an injustice. With all the powers of seathing denunciation which Christ could use when the occasion demanded, and positive as he could be in condemnation, yet he was always searching out and meeting with sympathetic comprehension the faintest indication of sincere search for truth, however blundering it might be.

His tolerance, however, did not always leave opinions undisturbed; nor may we always leave our fellow unmolested in what we conceive to be error. But several things ought to be true of our own attitude before we take the responsibility of uprooting our neighbor's views. First, we must be very sure that we have something better to offer than the thing the other fellow already possesses—something better fitted to meet his own particular need. In the light of the history of religious thought, can we always be sure that our own present view is the last word in the revelation of truth? Also, it is only by being able to put ourselves into the place of the other fellow where we can get his angle of vision that we can hope to find any common ground and accomplish any helpful exchange of thought. Are we capable of that? It's not easy! Then, just one slightest trace of condescension, or the "I am holier than thou" attitude will destroy all possibility of anything but rancor resulting from our effort. Have we cleansed our heart of all but love and humility? Finally, if we are sure that our attitude measures up to this ideal, will we always be so very, very sure of the infallibility of our own position on all points, or will we on some occasions be willing to give the other fellow the benefit of the doubt?

Oakland, Cal.

ADELA J. BALLARD.

Let the Bible Teach

MY father believed in George Eliot's religion, and I am much like him," said a student after Fred B. Smith's meetings. He then began to tell what he thought of Christ. "Have you read the life of Christ?" No, he had not.

The ministers of the town were discussing what they would use in the Bible classes which were being formed among the students. One suggested one book and one another.

Why not teach the Bible? We talk too much about the Bible without knowing what is in it. We do much cheap modern moralizing with a single verse of Scripture for a text instead of uncovering the very foundations of morals in the prophetic teaching. We cast suspicion on the Bible by explaining and defending too much. We chop the Bible into mince meat Sunday by Sunday and leave the mind in utter confusion as to its larger contents. We need to teach in larger portions; as some one has said, "We need to take the long view." The Bible will do its own work if people know what is in it. What does the life of Abraham teach, the life of Jacob, the life of Joseph? What is the significance of Amos, Hosea, the book of Jonah, the book of Job? We need to throw away our book crutches as much as possible. People must be stimulated to read the Bible by being made aware of their ignorance of its contents. Give the Bible a chance.

Vermillion, S. Dakota.

CRAIG S. THOMS.

President-Elect Harding as a Churchman

His mother wanted him to be a preacher. He preferred to be an editor. Most editors preach more or less. So did he, and so does he now. His life of loyalty as a layman also has its significance

BY ALBERT SIDNEY GREGG

"WARREN GAMALIEL, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

When Rev. G. L. Hahnawalt, pastor of the Methodist Church at Caledonia, Ohio, repeated these words of the baptismal service, he did not suspect that he was baptizing a future president of the United States.

Warren G. Harding at that time was a lad of fourteen. He had gone forward with others in a revival conducted by Mr. Hahnawalt. One could easily moralize at length on the faithfulness of this village preacher, who has since passed to his reward, but that must wait for another time.

BORN IN A RELIGIOUS HOME

Young Harding had the advantages of a Christian home. His father, Dr. G. L. Harding, was an ardent Baptist, and his mother was an equally earnest Methodist. They kept open house for preachers of all denominations and were looked upon as religious leaders in Caledonia.

Mrs. Harding wanted Warren to be a preacher, and felt that her desire was to be realized when he yielded to the persuasions of her pastor. But his father gave him a taste for a different calling by helping to start a village newspaper, on which the boy became a typesetter and which fired his ambition to become an editor.

After the removal of the Harding family from Caledonia to Marion there were some religious readjustments, and Warren joined the Free Will Baptist Church, of which he was an active member until the Free Will congregation merged with the Trinity Baptist Church. Mr. Harding continued as a member of Trinity and for years has been a trustee of that church.

Mr. Harding, acting as a pulpit committee of one, picked the present pastor of Trinity, Rev. T. H. McAfee, some five years ago, and the way he did it throws considerable light on his religious character.

Soon after his election to the United States Senate he went to Portsmouth, Ohio, at the invitation of a Methodist friend, to give a lecture. He stayed over Sunday and talked to the Methodist Sunday school, after which he said to his host:

"Now, if you are through with me, I would like to visit the church of my own denomination."

"Very well, I will go with you."

They slipped into the service without attracting attention and listened to a sermon on "When a Man Meets His Own Life in Judgment." Mr. Harding was favorably impressed. After the service he talked with the preacher, Dr. McAfee, and thanked him for the sermon. Then he inquired:

"How would you like to come to Marion as pastor of Trinity Church? The pulpit is vacant, and I know our people would be glad to have you serve them."

"I am not a candidate," replied Dr. McAfee, "for my work here is not done; but I would like to preach for you some time."

"That would be fine. We'll arrange the date later."

In due course Dr. McAfee filled the engagement at Marion, with the result that he was given such an urgent invitation that he finally accepted the Trinity pulpit. During the five years that have elapsed, Dr. McAfee has always found Mr. Harding ready to help with his presence, his counsel and his money.

SHE WOULD COMPEL GOD

One Sunday morning soon after the nomination of Mr. Harding for the presidency, Dr. McAfee preached on "Compelling God To Do Certain Things." This rather startling theme was based on the story of Rahab and the spies, in which she made a covenant with them to save her life for hiding them. His main point was that by claiming God's promises and meeting their conditions, a believer could compel God to do certain things.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding heard this sermon and liked it. Even after Mrs. Harding had entered her automobile she beckoned to Dr. McAfee, who came over to the car.

"I want to talk with you some more about what you said," she exclaimed. "It makes me want to pray more than ever."

"Yes," commented Mr. Harding, who was standing by, "she would compel God to do certain things." Just what the "certain things" included he did not say.

Soon after he delivered this sermon Dr. McAfee suffered from a stroke of paralysis which affected his entire right side and compelled him to give up his pulpit temporarily.

RELATIONS WITH HIS PASTOR

Once a week thereafter, whenever he was in Marion, Mr. Harding made it a point to call on Dr. McAfee and cheer him up a bit. He did this all through the campaign, and during the exacting weeks when "leading minds" were visiting Marion to unburden their wisdom on the president-elect. Some times he would take along a distinguished visitor. On one occasion he was accompanied by Will Hayes, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who teaches a Bible class in an Indianapolis Presbyterian Sunday school and who found his wife at a prayer meeting. Not only has Mr. Harding remembered Dr. McAfee in a personal way by visits and letters, but when any good thing was presented to the Hardings a share of it was sent to the pastor. Gifts of fruit especially were thus divided. Dr. McAfee has been steadily improving, but it may be a long time before he is himself again. In order to give him an opportunity fully to regain his health, Mr. Harding has arranged to pay for a pulpit supply for a year. Perhaps these kindly and sympathetic remembrances have had something to do with Dr. McAfee's progress toward recovery.

Mrs. Harding is a member of the Epworth Methodist Church in Marion, of which Dr. Jesse Swank is the present pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Harding frequently attended the Methodist service in the evening. They have always been generous in supporting whatever came along in the work of Epworth Church, and at least twice when the Methodist annual conference was held there, they kept several preachers in their home.

To a former pastor Mrs. Harding recently confided:

"We are praying more since the responsibilities of life are getting heavier."

She also intimated quite strongly that she regards the election of Mr. Harding as an act of providence and therefore a sacred trust.

Incidentally it may be remarked that George B. Christian, Jr., who has been Mr. Harding's secretary for the past six years and who will probably be appointed secretary to the president, is a Presbyterian.

In December a Presbyterian laymen's convention was held in Marion at which William Jennings Bryan was the leading speaker. Mr. Harding was introduced and spoke for about five minutes during the preliminaries. What he said is very significant. His little speech is herewith given as it appeared in the Marion Star of Dec. 18:

"Not that I have a message, but because this meeting is in our city, I wanted to have an opportunity to greet you and say one or two things which give interest to religious work.

"I want you to believe that there is an individual who believes in the reconsecration of a religious republic.

NO CIVILIZATION WITHOUT RELIGION

"I have for my inheritance a Christian belief, and I have in my veins the blood of Christian parentage. I have been preaching to my fellow countrymen the gospel of reverence. I don't believe we can have the highest type of civilization without its religious strain. We need its influence and we need its discipline.

"Sometimes I think the world is adrift from its moorings of religion, and I know it will help if there come a great renewal of faith. I am trying to bring into practice in America the government which emanates from the meeting of minds. I don't think of any higher concept in the world than just government, and I don't see how a government can exist in the world without coming in contact with God.

"I couldn't hope for a happy relationship among nations if there is not the same current of recognition of the Supreme Being. America will take her place in making a world peace and answer every American aspiration without the surrender of one thing we hold dear as Americans. When it comes to an association of nations, I do not think that any association can be successful in which God is not recognized.

"I don't intend to come as the finest example of what a man ought to be," said Mr. Harding in conclusion, "but I rejoice in the inheritance of a religious belief, and I don't mind saying that I gladly go to God Almighty for guidance and strength in the responsibilities that are coming to me."

Volcanic Outbursts

This account of an interesting reaction of nature and human nature—providence also—came from El Salvador under date of October, 1920, in a letter to the veteran secretary of the Home Mission Society, Dr. Lemuel C. Barnes, who has given permission for the readers of THE BAPTIST to share it

BY VIOLET C. HUMPHREY

THERE are no American women here with whom I can visit, and when one comes to visit us it is a great treat. Miss Covington, our missionary from San Salvador, was here last year and we went to the top of the volcano with her and ate our lunch in the crater. It was a two days' trip, a 7000-foot climb, almost all on mule-back. In the crater we found a large cross put there by the bishop of San Miguel. A large number of fanatical women went with the bishop to bless the volcano and ask the Virgin to keep it from eruption. The cross was made of pieces of lava that flowed out of the volcano years ago.

ERUPTIONS DUE TO PROTESTANTS

A few weeks ago the volcano became very active and the priests and people were quite alarmed. The smoke was so dense that no one could get up there. All the saints and the Virgin were called upon to prevent a catastrophe. The priests finally said that the only remedy was to get us out of the country. The ignorant Indians took up with the idea, as also did many fanatical women, so that when Mr. Humphrey went to Guatajagua, an Indian town, to preach he was in some danger. He preached two nights and left the following morning at 4:30, not knowing what the people might do.

The priest called the Indians together and told them to drive him out, with stones, machetes, etc. They went to the homes of the believers to look for him and would not believe it when told he had gone. They were some forty in number. The mayor, who is a believer in the gospel, afterward sent two men to tell Mr. Humphrey of the riot caused by the priest and Mr. Humphrey advised the presidente, who at once sent orders to the governor to suppress all such uprisings and to give our believers liberty of service. The priest is in hiding because the authorities are after him.

This is the second time that a priest has done this. The other priest spent three weeks in jail. He was condemned to three years' imprisonment, but the Catholics got him out on bail and then smuggled him off to another part of the country. We heard that the poor fellow died a drunkard. These two cases have helped to gain us many friends and the believers are more valiant at every attack.

The volcano quieted down for a few days. After the rains had washed away the ashes the cattle were able to eat the grass. The people were quieting down too, and the priest's desires were not realized.

We have many friends among the people in the market, but there are also many fanatical women there. The priest sees that we gain ground daily with them. I go and sit in their little stalls in the market, show them the Bible pictures, and read to them from the Catholic and Protestant Bibles, and even the Catholics, many of them, are my warm friends. When we do not go to the market for a week they say they feel it, as we take them tracts, Manzanas de Oro and Bible verses, pretty cards with pictures, etc. Sometimes we even sing to them. When Miss Covington was here we went and sang together. The priests do not know how to get rid of us.

A CATHOLIC FIESTA

Last Sunday they tried a new way. They celebrated the "Sacred Heart of Jesus," a feast day. At every stand in the market they put palms and tied to the palms the picture of Christ with the bleeding heart on the outside of his body. Candles were burning on each side of the pictures. Ribbons and vases of flowers were all about and the market was trimmed up as if for Christmas. Everybody went to see it, Catholics and Protestants, because it was something new, and several people told me we ought to see it as we might never again see such a fiesta here.

I went with a very earnest Christian woman from Nicaragua. Her son-in-law is a Turk and lives with her. He has a stand in the market. He turned Catholic a short time ago so as not to lose his business. We went in very respectfully, greeting our friends, both Catholic and Protestant, in a most sociable way. Her son has a stand and as he is employed by the Turk, had to be there. He stood in the crowd with his hat on. I said, "Ernesto, remove your hat out of respect for the religion of others. You may offend by not doing so." He took off his hat and we passed very peaceably through the market and were turning into the entrance to go out when some one shouted:

"The devil Violeta! Put her out!"

Others took up the words and the religious feast turned into a "mob of demons" as nearly as one could express it who was on the inside. The people began to throw garbage, parings, cocoanut shells, stones, and anything at hand. The crowd pressed upon me and my friend, and almost sent her on her face in the street. At this I turned about and with my umbrella drove them back. This I did twice. A stone as big as four fists fell at my feet, just brushing my dress. This I picked up and started for a policeman.

HOW LAWLESSNESS REACTS

When they saw me pick up the stone they got out of the way. Five police then came running to our aid. We were not injured in any way. A bit of anaguacate, or something like it, struck me in the temple but made no bruise.

A number of Catholics were struck by missiles from their brethren meant for "the devil Violeta" and they were furious. They went to the police complaining of such "gross uprisings." The padre who was blessing the saint and the articles on the counters did not appear.

On the way home I received several insults but got there safely. The next day I had the honor of a visit from the governor and the chief of police who were very much upset by the affair. I told them that I wanted no arrests made, that only proper education of the masses could do away with such abuses.

Monday the volcano burst out with more smoke than ever and now the Catholics say that it is no good trying to do anything, that the volcano of San Miguel is rebellious and has turned Protestante.

Our services have been much better attended because of what happened at the market. Mr. Humphrey thought at first that I was very unwise to go to such a gathering, but now he says he is sure the Lord led me to go. We have many more friends than before.

Advertising the Church

The demand for the gospel has to be created, and no selling force ever had a bigger task than that of persuading this generation that God has formed us for himself and that our hearts are restless till they rest in him

BY GEO. E. BURLINGAME

A HIGHLY successful business corporation in Chicago, in the early days of its career, announced this program: "Our salesmen will go anywhere, at any time, in any weather, to talk business." This ringing declaration of an aggressive and tireless purpose to reach every possible buyer, was a large factor in the success of the enterprise. Let me quote from a striking display ad in a big city newspaper:

MORTALITY AMONG RETAILERS

"The mortality rate among retailers is appalling. Statistics show that 93 per cent fail. Sixty-three per cent do not last five years. The average life is but seven and one-tenth years. The average jobber lives but seven and five-tenths years.

"Conservatism is the key-note among jobbers. Adherence to old methods and a reluctance to adopt up-to-date, aggressive policies is responsible for the demise of many a promising business.

"Manufacturers—great and small—show even less vitality. Their length of life averages only seven years. It is evident that the majority of business undertakings ultimately fail. Success is the exception, indeed, not the rule."

This diagnosis is authoritative, expert and trustworthy, even as it is astonishing. Consider it in the light of a statement issued by Bradstreet's Commercial Agency, based on statistics:

"Eighty-four per cent of the business failures in the United States last year occurred among firms which did not advertise."

Advertising undertakes to create and stimulate a demand for the commodity involved; to promise a supply to meet that demand; to make known where and how the supply may be found; and to lure the possible customer by every legitimate inducement, until he responds to the advertiser's appeal and becomes a customer.

Business men fail because they assume that sufficient demand exists without any stimulus; that their ability to supply that demand is a matter of general knowledge; and that they have a monopoly of the commodity involved: whereas, in fact, the demand may not exist or may not be compelling; the possible customer may not know where to secure what he desires; and while looking for a supply he falls upon or is lured into another seller's shop. The non-advertiser failed by reason of his presumption—rather his presumptions, his false presumptions, namely, "Everybody wants it; everybody knows I've got it; and therefore everybody will come to me for it." They don't want it until the seller creates the demand; they don't know he has it until he has told them over and over again; and they will not come to him for it if some other seller creates a more compelling lure and makes his own name and place household words to which the ultimate buyer instinctively responds. Eighty-four per cent of the business failures last year were of firms which did not advertise. Presumption, ill-founded presumption, killed them.

BOOKS WITH A MORAL

My mail has just brought me from New York a package of cute little books in red cover, hardly larger by measure than two postage stamps. For weeks a New York City bond house has been running immense dis-

(Continued on page 76)

The City and the Christ

IN haunts of wretchedness and need,
On shadowed thresholds dark with fears,
From paths where hide the lures of greed,
We catch the vision of thy tears.

From tender childhood's helplessness,
From woman's grief, man's burdened toil,
From famished souls, from sorrow's stress,
Thy heart has never known recoil.

The cup of water given for thee
Still holds the freshness of thy grace;
Yet long these multitudes to see
The sweet compassion of thy face.

O Master, from the mountainside,
Make haste to heal these hearts of pain,
Among these restless throngs abide,
Oh, tread the city's streets again—

Till sons of men shall learn thy love
And follow where thy feet have trod;
Till glorious from thy heaven above
Shall come the city of our God.

—Frank Mason North.

A Sunday Evening Which Young People Like

This article tells how the Hyde Park Church, Chicago, is meeting the problem of the young people and the Sunday evening service

BY FORREST A. KINGSBURY

IN SPITE of its peculiar advantages, the city church in a residential district shares with others certain perplexing problems, among them the maintenance of the Sunday evening service and the making of a responsible place for and meeting the peculiar needs of the younger people of the church and community. This sketch describes the way in which one church is seeking to solve these two problems.

THE SITUATION

A survey of the conditions prevailing in the church and community served by the Hyde Park Church of Chicago last autumn revealed these definite factors in the situation: A large body of young men and women, students in the university or Y. M. C. A. college or employed, living as a rule in dormitories or single rooms, and without home life; a large body of young married folk who find in Hyde Park an attractive home neighborhood, but with a limited range of friends; a young people's society serving those of high-school age and slightly older held together largely by the heroic efforts of a faithful few; such abundant leadership among the older members that the majority of younger people (i. e., those under forty) do not find themselves pressed into service as in most churches and do not come to feel a deep responsibility for the church beyond financial giving or rare opportunities for special service, and do not feel that any part of the church is distinctively their own; finally, the prevalence of countless competing attractions of every sort which, except on special occasions, have kept attendance at both young people's society and Sunday-evening service far below the point it should hold.

After detailed consideration of the plan at numerous conferences of representative younger people, and its careful preliminary presentation by Pastor Gilkey on four successive Sunday evenings, the Young People's Church Club of Hyde Park—the "Y. P. C. C."—was launched on the last Sunday of October in an effort to meet the conditions described. The Sunday evening program as now followed, is as follows: Seven to 7:50, meetings of discussion groups; 7:50 to eight, community singing; eight to 8:30, the pastor's half-hour; 8:30 to ten, social gatherings at neighborhood homes.

FLEXIBLE DISCUSSION GROUPS

The discussion groups are nominally six in number and in some cases constitute a transference of classes from the morning Sunday-school hour. One group comprises the young people's society; another consists of young men, two of young women, one of young married people, and one of those whose interests are in literature, art, science, travel, and related subjects, and which is called the "art-geographic" group.

Once a month (sometimes oftener) these groups meet in joint session for a special lecture or musical program; normally they meet separately, or two or three groups in combination, for discussion of some topic of common interest. Each group chooses its own topics, and feels free to conduct its session in the way that is of largest interest and value to its own members. In fact, freedom from an inflexible, externally-imposed program is one of the advantages this plan claims.

A RELIGIOUS ADDRESS

At 7:50 the groups adjourn to the church auditorium for a brief community "sing," under the leadership of the choir director, Mr. Frank Parker, the program embracing patriotic and favorite home songs as well as hymns, and leading into the "pastor's half-hour" at eight o'clock. After responsive reading, prayer and offertory anthem, there is given a brief, distinctively religious address by Dr. Gilkey or Dr. Crandall, which terminates at 8:30, "as advertised." In fact, a public warning is given, three minutes before the end of the discussion-group session and the pastor's talk, by "winking" the lights.

At 8:30 the congregation divides itself into three groups, one consisting of the young married people and the "art-geographics," and the other two of younger unmarried people, and each proceeds to a home in the neighborhood which has been thrown open for the occasion. Here a social hour-and-a-half is spent, with music, getting acquainted, refreshments, and general neighborliness.

Another feature of the Y. P. C. C. is the weekly "newspaper," the two-page "Midge," which is distributed to all comers and which, while primarily a bulletin for announcing the discussion topics and program for the evening and the following Sunday, serves to convey information concerning the numerous week-night parties and social gatherings of all sorts which the groups or the club as a whole foster, and as a medium for such bits of whimsicality or personality or philosophy as will add to the interest of the little sheet.

The Y. P. C. C. is directed by a "council" of some fifteen members, representing the various interests and groups, and which confers each Wednesday evening, at the same hour but independently of the deacons' meeting. The financing of the activities is underwritten by the church, which has guaranteed the young people a definite budget for ordinary expenses. The increase in the offerings above the usual amount received on previous Sunday evenings, along with certain special contributions, provides for advertising and other extraordinary expenses.

THE PLAN BRINGS RESULTS

During the past three months the attendance at the discussion groups and at the following service has held its own or steadily increased, and the evening congregations are larger and more spontaneously interested than before. Many who formerly felt no especial responsibility for attendance now report that they look forward to Sunday evening as an occasion to be missed under no circumstances; enthusiasm for the plan, while not of the "boom" sort, is profound, and conviction is general that the plan is proving a genuine solution of the problems it attempted to meet. The home parties have multiplied acquaintances and friendships many fold, even for those whose acquaintance was already wide; while for the many young people who do not see the inside of a home from one Sunday evening to the next, they are a veritable blessing. The loneliness of the city is not dreaded as formerly; one finds that seeming strangers become genuine friends with common interests. Finally, the younger people know that there is a place in the life of the church distinctively for them and for whose maintenance and prosperity they are responsible.

Of course, few churches are so situated that the bodily adoption of such a program is desirable or feasible. But many of the elements—the evening discussion groups replacing the morning classes, the community singing, the early closing hour, the home parties, the opportunities and stimulus for friendliness—each suggest certain values thereby gained, whether the church be large or small, in city, village, or college town, whether they occur weekly, bi-weekly, or monthly.

Advertising the Church

(Continued from page 74)

play ads and column readers in the interest of a "thrift" movement, and offering to send free to all applicants a supply of "Thrift" books. Here they are: fourteen pages of fresh and terse homily on thrift, and then suddenly at the end you run plump into this final sentence, for which all those newspaper ads and these two million little red books were printed: "The facilities of the Blank Organization are freely placed at the service of anyone who wishes to invest systematically or who seeks information or advice on an investment problem." The name and address of the bond company in full are appended. What has been thus accomplished? First, a veritable thirst for thrift has been created and coaxed and intensified by the cumulative propaganda, all of it modestly signed and frankly owned by the bond company. Then lines have been thrown out, well baited, and every nibble yields a name and address of a possible customer and investor whom the company will file in its mailing list. From this list and the further extension of the clientele thus established, the company will recover its advertising expense and draw its new business.

WHY CHURCHES FAIL

Churches fail for various reasons too numerous to list here. Many of them fail as business firms fail, because they do not advertise. They sin presumptuously, and so their carcasses fall in the wilderness and they fail to enter into the promised land because of their unbelief in printer's ink. They assume that people demand the gospel, and that everybody knows where the church is and what it is here for, and what it offers. They assume that they have more or less of a monopoly of the supply, especially if they are Baptist churches. Fatal errors! for the mind of man, and emphatically the mind of the post-Versailles man, is so consumed with material and temporal and worldly concerns that he does not even realize that there is a gospel, much less that he needs it. The demand has to be created, and no selling force ever had a bigger task than the task of persuading this generation that God has formed us for himself, and that our hearts are restless till they rest in him. Moreover, the church must make a straight road from the buyer to its threshold and light up the whole path until it is a veritable Great White Way of luminous and alluring invitation and appeal along which the awakened inquirer will be led and in which he cannot lose his way.

SET FORTH JESUS CHRIST

The whole philosophy of church advertising is implicit in this trinity of fundamental principles set forth to contravene an evil trinity of fallacy and error. Jesus Christ and his glorious gospel of redemption must be openly set forth to challenge the attention and awaken the interest and compel the inquiry of the unbeliever. His Name must be carried (to use our Lord's own striking words in Acts 9:15) broadcast over the world until it has literally become in every language the Name which is above every name on the face of the earth. The church which thus proclaims him and awakens a desire for him must also be able to reveal him and witness of him through its ministry, its testimony and its fellowship.

The church whose outlook on the world is that of a light-house rather than that of an ice-house (in fact, an ice-house has no outlook) will maintain a perennial campaign of advertising: first, to compel the people to see that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, and that they need him; secondly, to make that particular church a household word in the community and its location as familiar as the postoffice or the bathing beach.

Methods and specific devices are a matter of detail and vary with local conditions—and cost of paper stock and printer's ink! If every church will accept the basic principles and allot a definite and adequate amount in the budget for advertising, the investment will produce thirty, sixty and even one hundredfold for the kingdom.

How Cupid Broke into the Gauhati School

BY MAY A. NICHOLS

SOME time in November a young man wrote to the superintendent of the school asking for a wife. He had a good government position, but if he married a girl from his own village, a Garo, he would have to go to her home and live, as that is the custom among so many of the people here. He asked for an orphan, for then he would not have to give up his position.

He gave several references and the replies were very satisfactory. There was a girl here that had passed the fifth standard who was not a brilliant student and would never make a teacher but who was a fine little housekeeper, and a good Christian girl. She was way past the years when an Assamese girl marries and so it was thought that she was just the one.

THE MAN APPEARS

The week before Christmas the young man appeared and wanted to see the girl. It was arranged that the matron was to send the girl to the cook house for a basin and the young man was to stand by the well and watch her go past. He then had a talk with Miss Holmes, and the young girl was called and they were introduced but never said a word to each other. Miss Holmes did all the talking and then Proba went back to the cottage. The young man said that he would like to hear the tone of her voice to see if it had a sweet or harsh tone. So it was arranged that he was to come to the office the next day and Proba would be there in conversation with Miss Holmes and he could listen outside the window and see if her voice was to his liking. He did some inquiring about her and finally the bunderbus was made, both sides agreeing although they had not spoken to each other, and the wedding was set for Monday of Christmas week.

THE WEDDING GIFTS

Here at Satri Bari the young men are asked to give the money for the wedding dress as most of the girls are poor, and so he gave the twenty rupees. The teachers had great sport buying the wedding dress and they also bought some brass for a wedding present: two plates, a spoon, a bowl for milk and one for water and a sieve for washing the rice in, and some granite cups and

To M—

THE twenty-seventh day of gay and flowery May Will happy wedding Paul's witness;

He has the pleasure true for presence yours to sue

At his the sacred rite to grace.

He thinks it favor great and deems him fortunate,

To find this token of your love,

For joy bliss of union for him and life's companion

Together ask from heaven above.

A WEDDING INVITATION FROM ASSAM
The young man is proud of his bride, proud of his English, and proud of his poetic gift saucers. A fine outfit for a bride, for brass to them is a bank account!

THE TROUSSEAU

Her dress was of native silk and beautiful. It consisted of a mekala or skirt, made of two breadths of silk sewed together and hemmed at the top and the bottom. It was not gathered into a waist band but bound straight around the waist with a deep fold in front. When at work or in the house this is the only thing that an Assamese woman wears. Then she has a ria, a strip of cloth two or three yards long bound closely about the chest and shoulders with the ends hanging down the sides. This ria was of a beautiful cross bar pattern with colored borders. She then had a sador, a broad scarf about the same length as the ria worn over the head, one end hanging down nearly to the feet and the other thrown gracefully over the left shoulder. She wore a white flower in her hair and she did look sweet.

WHAT THE GROOM WORE

The groom wore a white suria or dhoti, a strip of cloth three or four yards long, one end girded closely about the body and the other laid in folds in front reaching down to the feet. He also had a shirt which he wore on the outside, and then a coat. So many of the men, especially if they have been to school and have some education, wear the English coat. Then he had a sador or scarf of beautiful orange-colored cashmere with a fancy embroidered border thrown loosely over the shoulders, crossed in front and the ends thrown back over the shoulders. He wore shoes and stockings. Ordinarily the men do not do this but this groom was no ordinary man. Proba did not wear shoes, for the women never do unless it is wooden sandals when they go out of doors. He wore no head dress although the men often wear a pugori or turban, a strip of cloth two or three yards long twisted and bound around the head.

As this was a Christian wedding all the native Christians were invited. The girls of the school dressed in white marched ahead of the bride with her confidential friend as her bridesmaid (in this country all the girls in the school have one girl as a bosom friend and they always remain true to each other).

THE BASHFUL BEST MAN RAN AWAY

But the poor groom! He had brought a friend from his village but when the latter saw all the girls and noted the plans for the wedding, he was frightened to death and refused to act as best man. So the groom marched alone. The wedding march was played, "God Save the King" was sung by the girls, and then the wedding ceremony was performed by the native pastor. We all had a chance to congratulate the bride and groom. Generally the bride faints and makes a terrible fuss but not so at this wedding. Proba was very sweet and happy and the groom wore a smile that is indescribable.

The tea was furnished by the groom and was served on the lawn to all the guests. We had tea, huge buns, sweets (candy) and oranges. The men all sat on one side of the lawn and the women sat on the other. The bride never ate at all but she took some of the food away to eat by herself, as is the custom. In fact, in the home the women never eat until the men have finished.

As the groom had a leave of absence for a few days they decided to stay and so went to housekeeping in the native guest house on the compound.

Proba embodied such a sweet thought in one of her prayers at the morning prayer circle on the morning of her wedding. She said, "O God, this is a big world and I am only a little light and do not forget me."

It seems that they are the only Christians in the village where the groom is working on a contract job and Proba wrote that every night the natives came and asked them to read to them and to sing out of the green book. The women come so much during the day to see her home, which I am sure is a model of neatness, and to hear about the place where she has been living that Proba says she can hardly get her work done. She asks the girls to pray that she and her husband may be as looking glasses reflecting Jesus Christ to the people of the village. Her husband also wrote saying, "I am very happy with the wife that thou gavest me."

A few more things about the people. The women are very fond of jewelry and wear all kinds of rings on both the fingers and the toes. They have any number of bracelets and anklets, ear ornaments and often a ring in the nose. They put their money into jewelry rather than into the savings bank. The hair is very black and dressed with lots of cocoanut oil, combed straight back and twisted in a knot behind. They have a way of twisting the hair up so that they do not need hair pins.

A Needy World Challenges Youth

A young person, filled with the great idea of God's kingdom and possessed with the ambition to spread it abroad, has before him the greatest opportunity which the world holds for man

BY H. G. WESTON SMITH

THE NAMES and pictures of the young people who have given their decisions to enter some form of specialized Christian service are featured not because they have done something that is more than they should have done, but rather to let all of you young people in the territory of the Northern Baptist Convention know something of the way in which a few of the far-seeing ones of your number are estimating the opportunities ahead of them.

It is the strongest and best of the high-school and college students of today who are most needed in the work of promoting the kingdom of Jesus Christ. If you look upon yourself with the desire to do the biggest and most-and-longest-to-be-enjoyed things, then you must think seriously of the call to Christian leadership. Some of you New Jersey young people who have been to Hightstown for the summer assembly, you strong folks from Idaho and Washington and California and Colorado and Pennsylvania and Maine—it is positively the greatest enterprise that has dawned upon the vision of human folks!

"The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart;
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart."

The day of the real power of the gospel message is only dawning. What some have believed to be the twilight before the setting sun is only the twilight that quivers before the dawn of a new day. The real effectiveness of the gospel is destined to be recognized more and more with each passing year. The leaders in every phase of life are having their bright hopes dashed to earth so universally, if their bright hopes are not undergirded by the essentials that Jesus gave, that they are finding the gospel an absolute necessity.

I begged these young people whose pictures appear on the opposite page to tell me something to report to the young people of the Northern Baptist Convention. They rebelled against it. They said that they did not want their pictures and words shown to everyone. But the rebellion was quelled, and they made the following statements—in the same spirit in which they would make them in our young people's meeting on Sunday evening or in the quiet of my study:

"We often hear the remark: 'Women set the standards which others follow.' Suppose, then, that each one of us seriously asked the questions: What are my standards? Would it honor me if someone else would follow them? Are my standards Christ's? Unfortunately, many answers would be in the negative. Today the great need of the

Only One

ONE small life in God's great plan,

How futile it seems as the ages roll,

Do what it may, or strive how it can,

To alter the sweep of the infinite whole.

A single stitch in an endless web,
A drop in the ocean's flow and ebb!

But the pattern is rent where the stitch is lost,

Or marred where the tangled threads have crossed;

And each life that fails of its true intent

Mars the perfect plan that its Maker meant.

—Susan Coolidge.

world is Christian women ready to instill Christ's principles into those who do not have them. From every hand the call comes for young women who will dedicate themselves to a life of service either at home or abroad. Are we willing to answer this call of Christ and the world?"

MARY COOK.

"Today as never before the world calls and challenges men who are strong in body and who are looking for hard things to do. No field appeals like the mission field to a live manhood and womanhood: adventure, work, pleasure, travel, world vision, new associations, and many other phases of life face those willing to stand in the open and say, 'With God's help I'll go.' The world calls. Nations are calling."

HARRY V. THOMAS.

"If the world is to be won to Christ, it must be won by Christian preachers and teachers. The preacher sets up ideals. The teacher acquaints oncoming generations with the great ideals that are proclaimed by the preacher. Preacher and teacher unite in transforming the world. The minister of the gospel of Jesus goes hand in hand with the religious educator. What life can be lived better than the life that is given to lift mankind Godward?"

HAYDEN L. STRIGHT.

"These purposes show how some of our time is spent: To protect girls and women traveling alone; to give girls clean and wholesome fun; to assist girls in securing employment; to maintain an open Christian home for all girls on Sunday afternoon; to extend to all girls the privileges of the 'opportunity school,' club and library, and to provide all sorts of good times."

GLADYS MAY WINEOW.

Young People Believe

In Christ's Great Enterprise!

DO YOU?

Money? Talents? Strength? Consecrate Them to God!

Five in a Church of 380 Members

In or Preparing for Specialized Christian Service, And Several Others Seriously Considering It.

HAYDEN L. STRIGHT, A. B.
Specializing in Religious Education,
Boston University

HARRY V. THOMAS
Senior, Bucknell University. Headed for Johns Hopkins. Medical Missions

GLADYS MAY WINEOW
Overseas Work with "Y. M." Now in "Y. W." Social Service,
Minneapolis

Read the testimonies of these young people as reported on preceding page, by their pastor, Rev.
H. G. Weston Smith,
Greenville, Pa.

MARY COOK
Senior, Thiel College. Christian Service, Foreign or Home

Picture and name of the fifth student withheld. She is in high school and
"ready to serve
where, all in all, it seems best to serve."

God, Give Us Others!
And Make Us Worthy of Those Thou Hast Given!

JOSEPH CLARK

Joseph Clark

FIFTEEN Baptist missionaries now on the foreign field have completed forty years of service. Among these is Rev. Joseph Clark, the pioneer of Belgian Congo, who recently celebrated his fortieth anniversary as a missionary in the Dark Continent.

Mr. Clark is a native of Scotland. Early in life he was left fatherless, and, like other boys in similar circumstances, his education was acquired only after long years of strenuous work and study. From his earliest years he felt himself called to foreign mission service, and in 1879, after his graduation from Harley College in London, he sailed to Africa. In 1884 the Livingstone Mission was transferred to American Baptists and Mr. Clark became its mission treasurer. During his third term of service he toured the interior of Belgian Congo and opened the mission station at Ikoko. Conditions at that time were entirely different from what they are now. There were no maps and no guides whom a missionary could trust, and the region was in possession of cannibals. Often in touring Mr. Clark was misled by false guides and his goods were stolen, and many times his life was in danger. His Scotch ancestry may account for his tenacity during those early years of hardship, but only an over-ruling Providence can explain the preservation of his life. In 1915 the headquarters of the work at Ikoko were transferred to Ntondo, a station fifteen miles south, where climatic conditions are more healthful.

This Baptist is today known far and wide throughout central Africa as a friend of the African, a remarkable missionary and an unashamed ambassador of Jesus Christ. Last year on his field 112 converts were baptized. During his long service Mr. Clark has seen the work make encouraging growth each year, until today more than fifty native evangelists and teachers are under his direction and more than 500 church members are enrolled, while thirty-three Sunday schools are maintained with an enrollment of 1500 pupils. During Mr. Clark's last furlough in America, a translation of the Gospels

Who's Who Among Baptists

A Review of Contemporary Denominational Biography

BY WILLIAM B. LIPPHARD

which he had completed before leaving Africa was set in type and published under the direction of a capable Christian assistant, whose parents were members of the cannibal tribes in control of the region when Mr. Clark first came to Ikoko.

Frank King Singiser

LAST October the First Church of Troy, N. Y., celebrated its hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary. Few churches in the United States can show a similar record of service for the kingdom. This historic church has recently called as its pastor Rev. F. King Singiser, a man of world experience, who begins his work in March.

Mr. Singiser is a native of Pennsylvania and a graduate of the University of Rochester and of Rochester Theological Seminary. Following his seminary course he served as pastor at Montevideo, Minn. and as principal of Windom Academy from 1906 to 1909, and then went to Pittsburgh as pastor of the Knoxville Church. Both he and Mrs. Singiser from their earliest years have been deeply interested in foreign mission work, and when in 1913 an opportunity of service in Burma was presented to him, Mr. Singiser heard and answered the call, sailing in the fall of that year for Rangoon, where he became pastor of the largest English-speaking Baptist church in the Orient, serving also on the faculty of Judson College. During the war he was active in recruiting volunteers in India for the British army and was a member of several important government commissions. He has traveled extensively in Asia, visiting mission stations of the leading Protestant denominations in India, China and Japan, and has thus secured first-hand knowledge of missionary problems.

FRANK KING SINGISER

In the fall of 1919, owing to health conditions in his family, he returned to America. Immediately upon his arrival he was engaged for active deputation service, visiting practically all sections of our constituency and presenting most effectively the cause of missions at conferences, associations and conventions. Because of this efficient service he was appointed metropolitan director of promotion for the New York District in 1920, and he has filled the difficult position with unusual success. During his sojourn in America Mr. Singiser has constantly been looking forward to renewing his work in Burma, and until a few weeks ago was hoping to return to the Orient in the spring, but family conditions have made this impossible. The metropolitan board has graciously released him for his work at Troy, while the church returns the courtesy in permitting him to serve the board throughout the spring campaign.

Frank Peterson

FIFTY-FIVE years ago, after serving in the Ninth Iowa Cavalry, a Swedish youth named Frank Peterson received his honorable discharge from the Union Army and entered Chicago University, including its Divinity School. He had come to America from Sweden as a boy five years of age and with his parents had settled in Rock Island, Ill., in the days when there were no railroads west of Chicago. In 1875 he was ordained and became pastor of the Swedish Baptist Church of Worthington, Minn. He has accordingly completed forty-six years of service in the Baptist ministry. In view of the strenuous work which he has done in recent years, Dr. Peterson is evidently still in the prime of life.

In 1881 he became pastor of the First Swedish Church of Minneapolis. During the ten years of his pastorate, this influential church grew so rapidly that al-

FRANK PETERSON

(Continued on page 95)

The Bulletin Board

THE BABIES LIVED

Dr. G. A. Huntley of Shanghai tells of the amazement of the natives in Kinkwa when babies were bathed. Dr. Huntley and other representatives of our Foreign Mission Society were given the use of one of the largest temples in the city, for their health lectures and demonstrations. The mandarin had made the attendance of school children compulsory. The use of mosquito netting to protect infants was explained. Charts on feeding were shown and the necessity for bathing was explained in a lecture. At one session a request was made for a real live baby to use instead of the manikins. Three women offered their babies. These were bathed and returned to their mothers. A local paper published as news the item. "The three babies which were bathed in the public meeting in the temple three months ago are still alive and apparently well, in spite of their treatment."

RELIGION IN AMERICA

Rev. S. W. Hughes, who recently made a visit to the United States, has been giving the London Baptist Association his impressions, some of which are of concern to us. He thinks that America is a very religious nation, and that this is going to count in the future of the world. It has gained much from the tremendous interest in Sunday-school work. It is important to notice, he says, that while the Roman Catholic Church has advanced, that advance is not to be compared with the great Protestant advance of the last ten years.

Nobody can visit America, he thinks, without realizing the weaknesses of the religious life there. Prominent in this particular is the divorce of spiritual doctrines from the ethical and social expressions of the gospel. America has produced too many millionaires. American religious life stresses denominationalism too much. There is a great lack of effective co-operation between the various branches of the church. Whatever critics might say about the National Free Church Council in England, there is no doubt that America wants something very much like it.

CHICAGO Y. M. C. A.

Exceptional progress in religious work was one of the outstanding items in the annual report of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. as issued by L. Wilbur Messer, the general secretary, for the year 1920. This report showed that the total attendance at religious meetings in 1920 was 170,931, a gain of 45 per cent over 1919. The number of men and boys to "begin or renew the Christian life" was 2946, an increase of 941, or 47 per cent over 1919. The number of workers supplied to churches and church agencies was 2552. The enrollment in the Association's schools was 4489, a gain of 20 per cent over 1919. The increase in the average daily attendance at the various "Y" buildings in 1920 was more than 13 per cent. The report shows that during the year the occupancy of the Y. M. C. A. hotel on Wabash Ave. has averaged 97 per cent capacity and that through the social service of the hotel 1491 men and boys were given financial loans to the amount of $6043, of which 90 per cent has been returned.

COMPOSITION ON DRINKING WATER

"Water to drink should be most clean and we can get nice water from in the wells rivers tanks and streams. We should keep our cooking pots clean with water. We get diseases by using the dirty water. Rainy water is pure so it is nice to collect it when we get a chance. From the water of seas we will get salt. Water is used for many purposes, especially for navigation, cultivation, washing cooking and drinking. Some people spoil the good water by washing their dirty clothes in it so we should check them. The English people became great by the sea alone. We get good fishes from water. There are factories established by the help of water. By condensing water we get ice. If we consider farther about this matter we come to the conclusion that every work is done by the help of water." (Written by an Indian school girl and submitted by Mrs. E. N. Harris.)

A THWARTED PLAN OF MASSACRE

At an evening meeting held in the Ongole district not long ago, Rev. J. M. Baker and his gospel band greeted the natives who came in crowds. The latter listened to the first speaker with interest, and then quietly one by one they left their places and disappeared, there being finally almost no women and children left, and about half the original number of men. There was a tenseness and a feeling of unrest dominating the people. The meeting finally came to a close, and after a word of greeting to the men standing near Mr. Baker started for home, lighting his way along the dim path with a lantern. Suddenly a Christian lad appeared at his side from out the darkness, and whispered that the big Ryot had ordered an armed crowd to prevent the passing of the band through the town street. Making the lantern gleam its brightest and clutching the heavy Clough staff firmly in his hand, the missionary strode forward, signalling the Christian boys to fall in behind him on the path, and started a victory hymn. The boys joined in, and when a bend in the road revealed the waiting mob, the song was at its height. There were perhaps twenty-five Christians, and at least four times that many in the Ryot's mob, yet the little band pushed onward, and as they reached the mob, it slowly parted, leaving clear the center of the town road. As if in a trance those men stood rooted to the spot, their eyes wide with wonder, their hands gripping loosely their clubs, and their tongues silent as the grave! "On and past we went," writes Mr. Baker, "like the children of Israel through the Red Sea. You ask what was or is the meaning of such action? The Ryot does not know; his hirelings do not know; none of us know. Of this only are we sure—a bloody massacre was planned by a man mad with hate, but it ended in shame and chagrin to all who had a part in it and brought home to that Christian group in added force the glory of God's care!"

A HIGH-PRICED BIBLE

One of the highest prices paid at a recent auction sale of books in New York City was $3700, which was given for Martha Washington's family Bible. This book was printed at the Clarendon Press, Oxford, England, in 1783, and has her autograph in three distinct places in the volume. The fly leaves at the front of the book contain the manuscript record of Lawrence Lewis, George Washington's nephew, and his wife, Eleanor Parke Custis, Washington's adopted daughter, and the births of their eight children.

POLITENESS PRIZES

Sometimes Americans adopt ideas which have been "made in Germany." This appears to be the case of the politeness prize which was first offered for a week by a German newspaper, but which recently has been exploited by a Chicago newspaper. Each day a prize of $50 was given to the politest person the reporter met. And the story on the following day was real "human stuff." There are those who say that the prospect of this prize has made a difference for the time in the manners of various classes of people in the great city. Those who do not secure a prize will perhaps do well to remember that politeness is its own reward.

AMONG THE MONO INDIANS

Mr. Brendel has been working thirty years among Indians in Oklahoma and California. He has learned to see things with the Indian's eyes and to put things in a way to be understood by utterly uneducated heathen. For the past seven years he has been working with a particularly needy group of Indians. In the early fifties the Mono bands as well as other tribes were driven by white man back into the mountains where they had no means of self-support. The social as well as the moral emancipation of the Mono has been the task undertaken by Mr. Brendel as well as by the women missionaries who began the work.

The Chimney Corner

The Quintessence of Silence

HIS eyes shone with a startling blueness whenever his hand strayed into his trouser's pocket to feel a particular something newly lodged there. Suddenly he noticed that the very street-car wheels knew all about it, for they hummed a disconcerting little tune as they rolled along the tracks: "Found a little ring, found a little ring!" they mumbled monotonously. "It's gold, it's gold! When it's sold, when it's sold, what'll I buy? what'll I buy?"

He looked around the car in an agony of guilt to see what the other passengers thought of a little boy who found gold rings on the sidewalk and went straight down-town to sell them. O, why were the tell-tale wheels shouting about it so noisily? Surely the mayor or somebody ought to put his foot down, for what's the use of practically owning a whole city if you can't keep secrets to yourself. It was embarrassing (yes, that was the word—embarrassing!) to have small private thoughts put into words so publicly.

Yet—

Well, actually! how curiously deaf people were. Not paying a bit of attention—like granny: when you told her the news, she kept right on knitting and might break out any moment with the most inappropriate remarks. This the lady across the aisle was now doing: "If I get three-quarters of a yard and cut it bias, I think I'll have enough, don't you?"

Imagine talking biases—whatever they might be—when the air was buzzing with: "Found a ring—It's gold—When it's sold, what'll I buy?"

Ah, well! it was a good thing they were not noticing, for people with gold rings that didn't belong to them might—yes, indeed, they really might be clapped into prison. It was uncomfortable to consider: also there was the equally uncomfortable thought of somebody's finger feeling cold and chilly, and somebody's eyes missing the beautiful accustomed glitter of sunlight on gold. "It's gold, it's gold. When it's sold, when it's sold, what'll I buy? what'll I buy?"

"O, keep still!" groaned Harry, miserably.

"Hub?" muttered the quiet Gray Man beside him, dropping his newspaper to stare at the startled blue eyes raised to his.

"I—I beg your pardon," stammered Harry. Horrors! was he aiming to call everybody's attention to himself? But, no, part of them continued talking biases and part of them were lost inside of newspapers in spite of singing carwheels: "When it's sold, what'll I buy? what'll I buy?"

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Well, what should he buy? That was the question. Gold rings ought to be worth—well, $10? A young fortune! One could go to Washington to spend the whole day for less than that and come back in the evening with flowers for mother. But, of course, having been to Washington once, the best of that thrill was lost forever. Something else—

Most boys would have bought baseball bats and been done with it. But Harry knew—and now you and I know, too—that he did not care for things like that. If you must get down to facts, things like Mr. Tyness made pleased him more: with trees in front, and rain-puddles reflecting blue patches of sky, and cows meandering home at sunset time. Why, yes, pictures. What did you suppose, when father was a painter himself? Of course he will feel obliged to tell you how father died years and years before he was born—even before the beguiling Betty was born; but this can hardly be true, as you must already have guessed. A mere matter of years and months is nothing when you are only eight and have important things like gold rings lurking in your trouser's pocket.

Always coming back to that little gold ring: What'll you buy? what'll you buy? Well, supposing there was $10 worth of ring, why not buy—a picture? O dear little funny new thought, what delight! A picture all one's own, to hang on the empty, empty wall opposite the bed, to stare at in the time between getting awake and getting up!

Still, there were other pictures in the house: father's, now; and Mr. Tyness's. What would they get to thinking if they saw that their pictures were not enough for such a little little house? Dragging in somebody else's $10 splashes of color, eh?—O, how rude that would be! Impolite was no word for it! Certainly a picture would not do—no, not even to cover the peeled place on the empty wall.

W-e-l-l, there was always food. How about quarts and quarts of something or other, very cold and delicious, for such warm summer days? Nice. But brief—much too brief! Surely he ought to choose something that would last, $10 being so unpleasantly scarce. No sooner had he stipulated this with himself than the Bias Lady across the aisle raised her lorgnette to read her shopping list, and all his dreams dropped dead in Harry's mind, for through a sickening spasm of sudden insight he knew exactly what to buy.

Granny, now. Can't you remember how she has been sitting for years and years at the window, side-view, like Whistler's "Mother"? Surely you've seen her fumble with the newspaper, then fumble with her spectacles as she murmured: "Sake's alive! I must be getting me new specs, though Emily can't be laying by $10 any too easy these days. But to be both deaf and blind—sake's alive!"

Well, "Emily" needn't do that laying by, for here's $10 right in his trouser's pocket—all but the mere changing of it into crinkly dollar bills. And if the ring should be worth a trifle more, maybe—But it was Main Street at last, and he stepped solemnly off the car. The wheels were silent as he did that stepping, and he was grateful. For there were policeman at intervals all up and down Main Street—amazingly keen-looking persons—and when once your mind is screwed to the point of turning a gold ring into spectacles for granny, policemen had better not come interfering.

The great problem now was where to take his treasure, for he never had had experience in selling gold rings to advantage before—but of course you have guessed that already!

Besides, he wandered along in a pleasant day-dream. Since it was a settled fact that it must turn into something as unromantic as spectacles, he clutched it in his fingers and pretended all the things he really would rather have it become. But he does not wish those things to be named here—not even after all these years! Moreover, they were not the things you might guess a small boy would crave. But finally he dropped the dreams—deliberately. It was as if you had heard him say to himself, "When I cross the next curbing there must be an end to all this fuss."

Fuss! You notice how lofty a soul he was developing even at the age of eight? For the "fuss" covered all those legitimate things he wanted with such abandon: the things he does not even wish named for your benefit. He put them away from him, as you and I put Satan on occasion. Get thee behind me, sir! But he will not always "get"—at least, not for me; and he would not for Harry. Subconsciously the other images shimmered enticingly underneath each pane of granny's spectacles-to-be. But he tried not to peer through.

Then he found the Very Store. He says he knew it was the proper place because the old gentleman leaned over the counter, and he was wearing a skull-cap. It seems that, according to Harry, a skull-cap is a symbol of symbols to show you the spot to sell gold rings.

"I have something to sell," said Harry calmly, as if he had done this rash thing for years, and he proceeded to fish up the ring from his trouser's pocket—deep down it was, where gold rings ought to be.

The old gentleman laid it on the palm of his hand, and somehow, even then, Harry says he knew. But he watched in silence as the clerk gravely reached for a bottle and a little feather. Very little feathers, like very little straws, show which way the wind blows. The feather went first into the bottle and then on the ring.

The old gentleman handed it back to Harry: "It is brass, my boy," he said collectedly.

But Harry was not collected. He scattered—or, rather, spectacles scattered, and all those dear queer things he will never mention in so many words. Away they flew to the unhappy hunting grounds of sad lost wishes—and all because one small brass hoop looked so supremely golden.

"Are you sure?" asked Harry, weakly.

"Absolutely," he replied, corking the bottle, ready for the next customer with a gold ring.

"Thank you!" Harry managed to say, and he even bowed as he turned to walk out—with the ring in his pocket, mind you! But I must not fail to mention his undercurrent of deep thanksgiving that he had had wit enough to choose this particular old gentleman. Skull-caps had certainly proved the symbol: without them there might have been some flippant young person to wink and nod and snicker when rings turned brass in the twinkling of an eye at the touch of a foolish feather. There was balm in Gilead in the dignified words he had exchanged, and in the respectful lowering of polite eyes to cork a bottle rather than to pry into how it felt when all is not gold that glitters.

Harry stood on the street. A policeman chanced to walk toward him. "I am not afraid now," he sighed to himself, sadly. He had not realized how sweet the thrill of fear could be.

Then he remembered granny. Sweet old soul, she was never to know of all this, of course; but he must do something for her to make up for what was to have been. There were eight pennies in his pocket—the other—pocket. Three of them must be kept for the long ride home in the trolley; the other five should be for granny.

Now surely you have observed that there is no place where 5 cents can cut as wide a flourish as in a five- and-ten cent store. Even the unsophisticated Harry knew that much, and his eyes sought for a familiar redness of front along Main Street until they found it.

Once inside he did some tall thinking: how this must be a special tribute—something sure to please a lady whose ears and eyes were almost useless. Ah, of course—there was her nose—

So presently he asked for the sweetest smell there was, please—for 5 cents. The girl with the side-puffs stopped patting them long enough to hand him a tiny bottle labelled, "Orange Bridal Wreath."

"That's the swellest we got," she said with a bored yawn.

He took it and went out into the mid-day rush of traffic. But it was as if he were stranded on a desert island. Waves of disappointment swirled around him; he was cut off from hope. To be taking granny "Orange Bridal Wreath" made life hardly worth the living.

But granny said she liked it—just in that flat unsurprised way; and then she put her wits together and thought that this was really a signal honor he had conferred on her: for was it a birthday? or a holiday? or any known anniversary? Well, then, something more was demanded of her in the way of gratitude, so with some emotion she assured him that she had never smelled anything so very, very fragrant. But Harry noticed that she corked it without putting so much as a tiny drop on her handkerchief. No, this was not like spectacles would have been, although he had spent his last penny on her.

All his life he remembered the bitter sharpness of that silent moment. Yet in the sight of his little guardian angel this was an odor of a sweet smell—a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing unto God. And I think it was written in heaven over against his name.

The Young Reserves

The Log of the "Flying Pig"

CHAPTER III

OF course I supposed I would wake up with the sun on the morning we were to leave for our canal-boat trip, but breakfast was actually on the table before anyone thought of me. And there I was, asleep! Bill was so disgusted with me. I said nothing, although I could have spoken volumes, for I don't mind telling you in confidence that once he slept through a whole circus parade that went past our house, and never saw a single elephant or clown or bare-back rider or anything—which was a noisier, more exciting thing to miss than a tame breakfast! I hurried into my clothes and really missed nothing, after all, for downstairs everything was at sixes and sevens, as the saying is, because Agony had collapsed into the most comfortable kitchen chair and declared she was "like to die most any moment."

This was rather dreadful. But in a whisper mother explained it to us: "She's really frightened stiff about going on the boat, poor dear. I'm afraid she's decided that the only way to escape the boat will be to appear sicker than sick, so we might just as well make up our minds to go without her and not laugh at her fears, although I'm sure I don't know how we'll get along without her."

Opening my napkin quietly and jabbing into my orange I said casually, "Haven't you forgotten about ME? Didn't I have cooking lessons all last year and get an 'A' for my apple sauce? Well! I'll cook for forty days and forty nights and think nothing of it!"

Father choked. He does that sometimes, whenever I offer to do unusual things in an offhand manner—the kind of things children ought to offer to do in a family like ours, where there isn't much money but a great deal of love. Dear mother always takes these sudden offers so differently. This time she looked at me for a startled moment out of her beautiful eyes, and then said; "All right, Peggy, you may." And I could see she really hadn't taken me into account before, so I began to feel very important indeed until Bill called me the "chief cook and bottle-washer," which made me wonder why, at sublime moments, boys always say something supposed to be funny.

After breakfast I washed up the dishes, and kissed Agony on her nice brown cheek. "Cheer up, old dear," I said hopefully. "I'm going to be cook on the trip, and you can have a lovely time at your son's wife's house being just as sick as ever you want to be! Only I'd perk up and be well if I were you. And, please, how do you make snow pudding for Sunday dessert? Is it the same recipe in summer as in winter?"

"Land sakes, Miss Peggy," she groaned, "surely your ma ain't goin' ter let a little whiffet like you cook for all them big eaters? You'll be wore to a shadow!"

I kissed her again on the other cheek, and thought that home missions really does begin at home half the time. Then I collected all the cook-books and the long-handled spoons and the alarm-clock. These I wedged into my trunk around the brim of the straw hat I painted yesterday. And at eleven o'clock we locked the doors of our dear, dear home, waved good-bye to the envious neighbors who would have loved to be Noahs themselves, and climbed into father's Ford. A truck had taken our boxes and trunks about breakfast time, so off we started for the "Flying Pig."

I fairly throbbed all up and down inside me, I was so thrilling. Timothy, too. He kept remembering the most absurd things all the way along and kept shouting them at father. "O, I forgot, I just must take two fwogs into our ark," he cried. Father drives a little as if he were the wild west wind when once he's away from traffic, so after Timothy's fourth reminder he called over his shoulder that we'd have to worry along without two frogs, or two crows, or two bees, or two spiders, or two anything else that he might remember before we reached the canal.

And finally we reached it. There aren't words in the dictionary to describe that boat! I shall never forget when I first saw it. My throat felt as if I had swallowed marbles, I was so excited; and it seemed to me that the top of my head must have blown off, I felt so cool and exalted up there where by hair-ribbon ought to be!

I was a mite disappointed because it was not red and green, with giraffe's heads poking out of the port-holes, as in toy arks; but of course after the first moment of dismay I realized how utterly absurd I had been to expect such Bible quaintness. Our ark was a sunburned

(Continued on page 93)

The Devotional Life

How God Loves Us

By ARTHUR S. BURROWS

SINCE the beginning of time, God's thought toward our sinful race has been love. The evangelist John voiced the fullness of God's love: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God sent not the Son into the world to judge the world; but that the world should be saved through him." Twenty-one wars still proceed in our world. Six leading European nations also still contest for territory and for supremacy of the seas. Yet will the pierced Hand of Calvary prevail over the mailed fist.

Divine love is the only conquest of the human heart. God is love. Human life is sin-stricken. The trail of the serpent is seen throughout the ages. Our world has suffered sin, deception, transgression, affliction, sorrow, inhumanities, wars, the confounding of the civilization of one century by the barbarism of the next century, tears, helplessness, and cries in the night! Amid all has been heard the voice of the gospel of the Redeemer: God so loved the world!

Who can fathom the depth of God's love for us in the little word "so"? God loves us with everlasting love, and with loving kindness would he draw all mankind unto himself. God is rich in mercy toward all them that call upon Him in truth. Human dogmatism condemns heathen and pagan and materialist and rationalist and sinful man and outcast woman. God sees every soul through the compassionate eyes of his Son, Jesus Christ. Here is the infinite yearning of God, our Father: "All souls are mine: look unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved!"

"His is the eye that never sleeps beneath the wing of night;
His is the ear that never shuts when sinks the beams of light;
His is the arm that never tires when human strength gives way;
His is the love that never fails when earthly loves decay."

The first religious teaching of the human mind was that there is no remission of sins without the shedding of blood. From the beginning of time blood sacrifice has dominated human religion. The pagans of Hinnom Valley gave a living child to the fire god, Moloch. The priest of Llama in Tibet performed perilous self-sacrifice by disembowelling. Both of these were the ignorance of superstition, and yet were worship. Christ's death on the cross defines God's love for the world. God so loved that he gave his Son. Christ so loved that he gave himself. The cross of Christ is not spectacular: it is infinite purpose to bear away the sin of the world. It is not tragedy: it is atonement—to bring the sinner unto God with repentance and faith. The human peril is sin: the wages of sin is death. God commended his love toward us while we were yet sinful: Christ came to seek and to save the lost. Salvation is the difference between perishing and eternal life: mind perishing; rectitude perishing; morals perishing; love perishing; the way lost; hope lost. Salvation is love: not that we loved God, but that he loved us and gave his Son to die for our sins.

You may have refused the love of God many times and in many ways: yet God still loves. People reject the peace of God: yet God says, "Whosoever believes on Christ shall not perish, but have eternal life." Our Lord commissioned his disciples to preach the gospel to every creature. Imagine Peter asking, "To every creature, Lord?" "Yes, I mean that you are to offer salvation to every creature." "To them that crowned thy head with piercing thorns, Lord?" "Yes." "To the Roman soldier who pierced thy side?" "Yes." "To them that spat in thy face?" "Yes." "To them that struck thee and mocked thee?" "Yes, Peter, to everyone." "Whosoever believeth hath eternal life."

What is believing? It is taking Christ at his word. Judge Pollard of St. Louis says that it is greater to save one sinner than to punish the ninety-and-nine. Our Lord means just what he says. Sinners are either perishing or being saved. Christ seeks souls to save them. One great sinner said, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew within me a constant spirit." Whoever can pray like that will try to live the forgiven life.

When is the divine forgiveness? "Now is the acceptable time; now is the day of salvation." Love is now. Forgiveness is now. A man served his one-year sentence for crime in Columbus, Ohio. Eighteen years after, a full pardon came to that man, signed by Pres. Benjamin Harrison. Somehow it had been delayed. Divine pardon is immediate. When one receives divine forgiveness, it is given for the asking. The evidence is that the soul begins to work out that salvation by repentance, studying and applying the principles of the gospel. In a New York cemetery is a headstone on which is inscribed, "Forgiven!" No sculptor's art embellishes the stone: only the word "Forgiven!" No revelation of human frailty: just the word "Forgiven!" No date of birth nor of departure: but that soul rests in God as revealed by the one word, "Forgiven!"

The power of the divine love is the sure salvation of the believer on the Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. An apostle asks, "If God spared not his own Son, but freely delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" Noble old John says, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the children of God." A waiting martyr says, "The perfect love of God casteth out fear." Earnest Jude declares to the church, "Keep yourselves in the love of God."

Everyone ought to believe the gospel and receive the love of God. God sent not his Son to condemn, but to save. The purest treasure of the soul is the love of God. The intellect cannot comprehend God. God comes to the believing heart with heaven's dawn. He transforms the honest mind with spiritual renewal. He dwells within the conscience by the Light of Life. God so loves. Let him love you.

To Whom Shall the World Henceforth Belong?

TO whom shall the world henceforth belong,
And who shall go up and possess it?

—To the Great-Hearts—the Strong
Who will suffer no wrong,
And who shall go up and possess it?

—To the Men of Bold Sight
Whose souls, seized of Light,
Found a work to be done and have done it.

—To the Valiant who fought
For a soul-lifting thought,
Saw the fight to be won and have won it.

—To the Men of Great Mind
Set on lifting their kind,
Who, regardless of danger, will do it.

—To the Men of Good Will,
Who would cure all Life's ill,
And whose passion for peace will ensue it.

—To the Men who will bear
Their full share of Life's care,
And will rest not till wrongs be all righted.

—To the Stalwarts who toil
'Mid the seas of turmoil,
Till the Haven of Safety be sighted.

—To the Men of Good Fame
Who everything claim—
This world and the next—in their Master's great name—

—To these shall the world henceforth belong,
And they shall go up and possess it;
Overmuch, overlong, has the world suffered wrong,
We are here by God's help to redress it.

—John Oxenham.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for March 6

JESUS AMONG HIS FRIENDS

Matt. 26:1-13. Golden Text: Mark, 14:8

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

Matthew and Mark put the anointing two days before the passover, or after the temple incidents and teaching; John puts it six days before the passover. Probably the report of Mark is correct because his gospel follows chronological sequence, while John's gospel was written to prove that Jesus was the Son of God, and hence follows evidence rather than the sequence of events. Luke omits mention of this anointing, but he vividly describes another anointing by the sinful woman (Luke, 7:36-50).

The Lesson Taught

The two paragraphs constituting the text of the lesson present a striking contrast. Jesus is not only among his friends but also in the midst of his enemies.

Jesus among His Enemies

The Romans had no direct interest in Jesus. They were neither enemies nor friends,—they were indifferent. If they took any notice of what was going on, they doubtless regarded it as a Jewish affair which would soon blow over like other affairs of a similar nature. It is true, Jesus was crucified under Pontius Pilate; but Pilate was the political tool of the Jewish leaders, and so far as Pilate was concerned Jesus was put to death by Roman soldiers to satisfy the demand of the Jewish authorities. The real enemies of Jesus are described by Matthew in verses 1-5 of the lesson. They were Caiaphas, the high priest, and the other priests and elders who constituted the Jewish Sanhedrim. For more than a year they were organized to bring about the death of Jesus. But he had just as systematically kept out of their reach. His return to Jerusalem was both their opportunity and embarrassment. He was going in and out of the city openly. Each day in the temple courts he predicted the downfall of Jerusalem, offered himself to the people as their rightful Messiah, pronounced judgment upon the leaders and doom upon the institutions of Israel. But they feared to do anything openly because Jesus was looked upon by many of the people attending the passover as a prophet. Hence the leaders plotted in secret, and discussed the question how they might best accomplish their ends by the under-ground route. All the time Jesus knew that they would bring about his death by persuading the Roman governor to crucify him. But he went calmly on from day to day teaching the people, healing the sick and preaching the gospel of the kingdom. His supreme hour had come, and he was conscious of it. The plotting leaders little thought when they faced the embarrassment of taking Jesus openly during the feast that they would receive help from an unexpected source. They had not counted on Judas.

Jesus among His Friends

When enemies are powerful and subtle, and determined to accomplish their purpose against one, it is good to have friends. It is a relief to turn away from the heartless religious leaders sitting in the ornate council chamber and coolly planning to put an innocent man to death, and find ourselves in Bethany with true friends like Lazarus, Martha and Mary. Again we find Martha expressing her love for Jesus in her own practical way, for John tells us that they made a supper, and Martha served (John 12:2). But Mary was the poet of the family. Martha had foresight and she thought of the supper; but Mary had insight and thought of the anointing. The foresight of friends is wonderful. It is a reflected ray from the light of God's providence. We all have been the recipients of pleasant surprises born out of the foresight of friends and loved ones. But how few have insight to see the heart, to sympathize with the soul as it passes through the deep waters, and yet does not reveal by outward signs of distress that anything is wrong. The disciples had hind-sight. Again and again it is recorded that they interpreted the events of the life, death and resurrection of our Lord after the events had taken place, but they did not once anticipate an event or participate in the experiences through which the Master was passing.

The truest and most spiritual friendship is illustrated by Mary. Hers was the insight of love. Months before she had sat at his feet, loving and listening and learning, while practical Martha lost her poise and courtesy in the annoyances of the household. Now that the supreme hour of Jesus approaches, Mary with true insight anticipates it with her supreme gift of love. She anointed him for his burial. Martha doubtless thought that Jesus would come often to Bethany and partake of her hospitality; and the disciples had neither imagination nor common observation. The precious ointment given to Jesus at the promptings of love was regarded by them as a waste of money. Blind to the approaching crisis in the life of their Master they did not appreciate the fine action of Mary. But Jesus appreciated it, and never sweeter words fell from his lips than when he said, "She hath done what she could, and whosoever the gospel is preached in the whole world, that also which this woman hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her." The words of praise were earned because Mary expressed the insight of love in seeing, in part at least, what no one else saw—the approaching death of her Lord. But she doubtless saw beyond his death to his glorious resurrection, for had not he said to her when he raised her brother from the tomb, "I am the resurrection and the life." As the flowers had died to make the fragrance of the ointment possible, so the death of Jesus would issue in the eternal fragrance of the resurrection.

Adult Class Activities

By F. F. PETERSON

IS the adult class a selfish organization? Does it do enough to warrant all the special privileges it often receives? There are some Sunday-school workers who constantly criticize it. "Should the class give but half or one-fourth of its income to the general work of the school?" is a perennial question. "I can't get any teachers out of that men's class," is another objection. It is only when we see how much these classes constantly accomplish that their true value can be appraised. If the class gives but one-half of its money to the school, it is probably expending the rest wisely. There are many classes which do furnish teachers for the school. In fact, these adults are true exemplifications of the spirit of Christianity that we only have what we give away and only keep what we share.

The activities of these classes fall naturally into evangelism, church, community and world service. One men's class maintains an open-air Sunday afternoon service in a slum section the year around. A baby organ is put on a truck, eight or ten male singers and a good speaker furnish a forty minute service of power and influence. Gospel bands formed in the class often go out to churches and school houses and hold meetings. Some men's classes are responsible for shop and factory noonday meetings. The Baraca secret service and personal evangelism with unconverted members of the class have been most fruitful. Scores of women have been brought into the church through the women's classes. One woman's class increased its membership from eight to 125 in five years and was instrumental in bringing scores to Christ and into the church. Not only did the women do this but they also built this group solidly into the church life. There should be a strong evangelistic committee connected with every adult class.

Fifteen hundred gallons of stout, brandy and whisky were sold in one year in a dry city through the local drug stores. The men's classes cleaned up that situation. They now are engaged in law enforcement. Old ramshackle buildings had become not only an eyesore but a moral menace in the centre of the town. The

(Continued on page 93)

Young People's Work

Topic for March 6

THEY KINGDOM COME. III. IN MY CHURCH
Matt. 6:7-15 (Consecration Meeting)

In January we dealt with the coming of the kingdom "In My Heart"; in February, "In My Home"; and we now have the topic, "In My Church." We have the same Scripture lesson as used February 13. The subject treated in the text is prayer. Again and again we come back to prayer as a vital and necessary thing in the lives of individuals and institutions.

1. The task of the church: Certainly its first business is not of self-preservation. It is a "serving" institution. Mr. Fosdick says: "Still another familiar source of a religious life divorced from practical goodness and daily usefulness is the segregation of the church, setting it apart from life, as though God dwelt in a temple instead of living in the struggles of humanity." (See Hosea 6:4-6.) The church is an aggregation of individuals. It is no abstract thing. In order that the tasks be done, each and every member must have an evangelistic passion coupled with a truly sacrificial spirit.

2. The loud-mouthed critic: The failures of the church furnish ammunition for her critics. When a minister goes wrong, some enthusiastic worldling shouts, "Look at the church." Occasionally a man leaves the pulpit and begins to proclaim the hypocrisy of the church. Such departures from the ministry find as a basis one or more of the following reasons: 1. A realization of the fact that he is not a God-called man. Common honesty demands that he quit. 2. The reaching of a theological and philosophical position which makes it impossible to accept church practices, modes of thought, etc. When a man can no longer preach the truths of the Bible and minister to human needs through the church, he should quit. 3. A breakdown in morals. The man who thus leaves the ministry should keep his mouth shut and quit raising the cry of hypocrisy.

3. Within the family: The best of families sometimes have their little difficulties. This is true of the church. A fine spirit of devotion to Christ will overcome difficulties; but there are still a few people living in the world who feel that their main business is to make trouble for the preacher and buck advance programs, always keeping on hand the necessary "live coals" to start the fires in case combustible material should come within their range. May our heavenly Father give sufficient grace to our pastors and churches who are so afflicted!

4. Onward with Christ: The kingdom of God is coming in and through our churches. The New World Movement of Northern Baptists is an illustration of a great people advancing under the leadership of God's spirit to meet the heartbreaking needs of the world. Unitedly we pray that the great Head of the church shall lead us through these troublous days to great achievements for his name's sake.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organization, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

News

OHIO

W. A. Holmes writes:

"While our Ohio work moves steadily forward, we fall short of our ideals. Religious education is being emphasized in state and associational meetings. Our state convention meeting at Norwalk in May was marked by a fine rally of our young people and a supper with messages by different people, including Dr. James A. White, and a stunt by the W. W. G. girls.

"Ohio was largely represented at Buffalo, and our delegates in the Toronto B. Y. P. U. A. convention numbered 130. We are all joining with the Cincinnati young people in great preparations for the Cincinnati B. Y. P. U. A. convention of 1921. Wish all of you could be there. Let the Ohio director know beforehand, and he will plan a 'get-together' meeting.

"Our assembly was a great success, with over 800 enrolled and a fine program. The courses included work for Sunday-school workers, young people's society leaders, mission circle workers, and pastors. We granted 140 certificates for attendance and note-book work. Many more took notes, but hesitated to hand in their books for examination. We expect to be in line on the three years' cycle of work.

"Our Ohio B. Y. P. U. and Ohio Life Service League, organized in connection with the assembly, are doing good work. The Life Service League now has almost 200 members.

"Five Denison (Baptist college) gospel teams are doing a great work in churches over week-ends. Every team has been carefully trained on the points of endeavor in our young people's work.

"Our teacher training campaign has been fairly successful, but we hope to get many more classes organized this winter. Some of our churches are finding the 'church night' plan successful. Our people are well represented and in a few cases surpass others in the work in city training schools. Week-day religious education is being agitated. We promoted seven new church vacation schools last summer with fine success and expect to have more this next year. We have more interest in missions in our schools and larger missionary giving.

"Two big institutes recently held—one in Toledo and one with the Rio Grande College were highly successful. At Rio Grande, a small Baptist school, almost every member of the faculty and almost every student were present day after day. "Best wishes to all for a bigger and better work this coming year."

IOWA

At seven o'clock Thanksgiving morning the Baptist young people of Des Moines gathered together at the Calvary Church for a prayer meeting. Rev. H. O. Meyer of the Calvary Church presided, assisted by Dr. Best of Forest Avenue and Rev. A. G. Lagerquist. The young people of the Swedish Church furnished a chorus choir. At the close of this witness meeting, Mr. Meyer asked for the report of the nominating committee which had been appointed on Nov. 9 at a rally meeting at which Dr. James A. White, our B. Y. P. U. A. secretary, had presided. The names presented for officers of a new city union of Baptist young people were as follows: Mr. Wm. H. Scheel of Calvary Church, president; Mr. A. R. Colvin of First Church, vice-president; Miss Birdie McRae of Forest Avenue Church, secretary; and Mr. Albin Lindquist of Swedish Church, treasurer. A constitution drafted by the committee was carefully considered and adopted, and the officers recommended were elected to office.

The new officers gave short speeches, and after a short business meeting the whole assembly was served breakfast by the Calvary young people. Everyone seemed to feel that he had received a spiritual uplift by participating in the formation of this most needed organization among our young people.

Rev. H. O. Meyer was elected advisor for this new organization.

MONTANA

"The work in Montana, like Pilgrim of old, is moving forward in spite of crop failure and the closing of our copper mines, etc. Some of our churches have been obliged to close, but still there is a spirit of optimism. Many of our schools cannot afford libraries, and so we have the state workers' library. In this way our officers and teachers may keep in touch with new methods and ideas. This year we are especially working to interest the people in the church vacation school and hope in this way to accomplish much" (Charles H. Burrill).

No large success is possible without the spiritual undergirding of conscious and developed co-operation from God. Prayerless plans will be as ineffective as currentless motors. * * * There are two conditions of success: the sense of universal obligation and unflinching fellowship with God.—William Horace Day.

Our Own Folks

Philadelphia Letter

By ARTHUR C. BALDWIN

The principal Baptist happening during the last month has been a well-planned program of two-day conferences given by our local promotion board. Life work was the particular theme. The city was divided into three districts and the two-day program given in each. Dr. Raymond M. West was assisted by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery and Franklin P. Lynch, M. D., of Mukimvika, Congo. Life work became an immediate issue with several hundred of our choicest young people.

Probably there is something to be said on the score of pressure and of the utility of many decisions made under such circumstances. Yet we make drives for other kinds of work. When we need armies and vast funds we go directly to the ones who can help and ask for their enlistment. Where are the hundreds that our foreign missions need during the next few years to be found? Often life decisions are made before the college period. We must reach homes, parents and young people of high school age with the facts of the great call and opportunity. This was the purpose of these conferences. The appeal was given clearly and with great wisdom. Only the years can tell how effective it was. If such conferences are multiplied the country over, your correspondent believes they will prove a great power.

Baptists are favored here also by the presence during the same week of Mr. Henry Bond, who addressed groups of churchmen concerning the church's financial affairs. Mr. Bond is a prince, a layman, ordained of the Spirit, who speaks with authority. Dr. J. Y. Aitchison and Dr. Hugh A. Heath addressed the ministers' conference. Dr. Franklin P. Lynch and Dr. George A. Huntley, missionaries, made many addresses among the churches. It was a rich week.

Baptist Work in the U. of P.

The Baptist work in the University of Pennsylvania continues to encourage us. There are something like 300 Baptist boys registered as such at the Christian Association. This is a smaller number than several other denominations. However, in the Christian work these Baptists have a very large place. The third Sunday of January, about seventy young men went to Reading under the auspices of the Christian Association. They made addresses in every church, attended the young people's meetings and altogether made a decided impression for Christ. Seventeen of the seventy boys were Baptists. Some of the most effective addresses were made by Baptist boys. We are told that the most effective student committee in the university is the Baptist committee. We rejoice not because it is the best, but because it is effective. It has a little informal prayer meeting every Tuesday at a morning hour. An average of ten attend, and not the same ten by any means. At the open house in the Chestnut Street Church in January, Dr. A. K. Foster made a strong address to 125 young men and women.

This great and growing work needs added support. Mr. Igler, student-pastor, should have what other student pastors have or are promised in the near future—a Baptist house near the campus. One of the pressing demands here is $15,000 for a Baptist home to house this important work.

Buffalo Letter

By E. H. DUTTON

New Hebrew Mission Building

On Jan. 18 the new Hebrew Mission Building of the Buffalo Baptist Union was dedicated. A week's services were held, led by visiting Christian Hebrew leaders. The building is a substantial handsome, square, brick structure in the heart of the largest Hebrew settlement in Buffalo, and is splendidly adapted to the various forms of work contemplated, including facilities for chapel services, auditorium, gymnasium, class work of every sort, dispensary, and living quarters for the missionary and his family. The immediate field of opportunity for Supt. A. B. Machlin and his volunteer helpers is a community of 20,000 Hebrews, less than 2000 of whom are connected with any synagogue. It is hoped that Baptists throughout the country who have been contributing to Jewish work will assist in the developing of this enterprise under the auspices of our own denomination and administered most carefully by the Buffalo Baptist Union. The cost of the property, together with additions and improvements, is a little more than $15,000. The budget to be provided for 1921 is $5500 for operating expenses and $2500 on account of the indebtedness upon the property. The outlook for a great work is promising.

Prospect-Hudson Neighborhood House

On Feb. 3 the new Prospect-Hudson Neighborhood House was formally opened and inspected by the Baptists of Buffalo. The property consists of a large brick building formerly used as a church, which provides an auditorium, a gymnasium, and reading, game and club rooms, besides an apartment for the women missionaries; and a two-family house adjoining, occupied by one of our missionary families and the family of the janitor. It is located in the center of the best residence and business section of the district, the population of which is made up of approximately 25,000 Italians and 5,000 people of other nationalities. It is midway between the Prospect Avenue and Hudson Street Baptist churches—the only Protestant churches serving this great needy neighborhood. The members of these churches contributed liberally toward the expense of reconstruction and equipment, amounting to nearly $7000. The original cost of $17,500 has been assumed by the Buffalo Baptist Union; but it is hoped that our general societies will assist in the final payments in connection with the service program projected for the entire district, which is peculiarly a Baptist mission field. The head worker is Miss Julia Morey, and her assistant is Miss Margaret Denton. Both of these girls are graduates of the Chicago Missionary Training School, class of 1920. Rev. H. J. Vander Linden will be responsible for the young men and boys. In this great Italian district the missionary work of Rev. G. Basile, who comes to Buffalo from New Haven, Conn., will center largely in the Neighborhood house.

The Herald

The January issue of the Herald of the Baptists of Buffalo is an attractive six-page sheet reporting on the interesting features of the work of the Buffalo Baptist Union.

In "Connecting Links" an announcement is made that several strong churches have formally adopted weaker churches or missions, by which action they will establish a relationship securing for the weaker group adequate supervision and personal service.

Mention is made of the hearty response of the Buffalo churches to appeals for contribution for European relief, the Lafayette Avenue Church giving $1143, the Parkside Church more than $500, and the Hamburg Church more than $132.

The Baptist Union Choral Society also is described: an institution unique in the activities of our city mission organization. Members of the choirs and singers from all of the churches of the city meet together each Sunday afternoon at four o'clock for half an hour's program by one of the choirs and forty-five minutes of musical work for everybody under the direction of Mr. R. H. Fountain, leader of the choir of the Delaware Avenue Church.

The ordination of Mr. John Muntz took place on Jan. 20 in the First Church, Rev. E. M. Wadsworth preaching the ordination sermon. Mr. Muntz for years has been one of the most devoted and helpful laymen in the Baptist churches of Buffalo. For the rest of his life he intends to devote himself entirely to the work of a pastor, having assumed charge recently of the Baptist work at Forestville, N. Y.

The First Church, following up its great campaign, provided more than $50,000 for its long-standing indebtedness; and has now purchased a parsonage and put $2000 at the disposal of the pastor for an automobile and its up-keep. A number of persons are awaiting baptism, and the serious purpose of the membership is to reach a goal of 100 new members before Easter.

Des Moines University

The above is the new name of Iowa's Baptist college. After much delay and many conferences, the consensus of opinion seemed to crystallize on Des Moines University. At the annual meeting of the Iowa Convention held at Keokuk in October, it was voted by the delegates to ratify the recommendation of the college board of trustees to amend the articles of incorporation and call the new college—which is a merger of Des Moines College, Highland Park College, Burlington Institute, Sac City Institute, and the Baptist interests of Central College—Des Moines University. The necessary changes have been made in the articles, and the institution is proceeding under the new name.

L. D. Osborn, formerly president of Des Moines College and for the past nine years head of the extension department of the University of Colorado, has been serving the college as dean since the first of October. Recently the trustees elected him as chancellor of the university, and he has accepted the position. He will have charge of the internal affairs of the college.

After more than nine years of strenuous work in behalf of education in Iowa, Pres. John A. Earl is taking a much-needed rest from college duties; and as the best rest is a change, he is serving the First Church of St. Paul, Minn., as acting-pastor for the winter.

J. R. Vaughan, the business manager and treasurer of the university, is a tower of strength. Under his able administration the business affairs of the college are in excellent condition despite the fact that money stringency and the slump in business have seriously affected the income.

There are at present 721 students in the different departments. A strong faculty ably assists Chancellor Osborn in his arduous task. The buildings are being steadily improved, new equipment is in evidence, and the spirit of the university is its greatest asset.

Handwork Exhibits

More and more are we convinced of the educational value of the handwork exhibits at the Northern Baptist Convention, and our Des Moines exhibit promises to be no exception in this particular. However, it has seemed best in the opinion of our leaders to raise the standard of efficiency, and after careful consideration they have decided to submit the following regulation:

1. No piece will be received at the Northern Baptist Convention except through a state worker or the chairman of a state handwork committee. While each state is free to arrange as seems best, we suggest the following plans:

(a) That the local school hold an annual exhibit of all handwork. This can best be done by departments, allowing each to present its material in the most attractive way. This might be accompanied by a demonstration for parents and friends, and should be a real event of the year. It will serve as a splendid incentive to the children if announced in advance.

(b) The best piece in the local exhibit should be sent to the association gathering under plan of the association director, who will help the amateur to give it careful study.

(c) Competent judges will decide the pieces to be forwarded to the state exhibit from which the twelve shall be chosen for the national exhibit.

2. If you send more than twelve pieces, the twelve for award must be indicated. Do not expect others to select the twelve for you.

3. All pieces must be uniformly mounted (cardboard seems best for this) and must bear the name, address, age, grade, name of church, school, town, and state. Printed forms to be filled out will be sent to the state elementary director and the state director of religious education, who will forward them to the local school.

4. Each piece must have a sheet attached containing a written statement as to the amount of work done by the teacher and that by the pupil. Only so can fairness be assured.

5. Each piece exhibited will be stamped by the American Baptist Publication Society as a mark of recognition.

6. The children making the twenty best pieces will receive a letter of acknowledgment from the national office of the American Baptist Publication Society. We reserve the privilege of retaining these twenty pieces.

7. The state winning highest honors will receive a beautiful silver cup, to be returned a year later. Any state winning the cup for three years may hold it permanently.

8. The state winning second honors will receive honorable mention.

9. While the work of the intermediate department will not be considered in making awards, we welcome a limited amount of choice material from each state and will make honorable mention of the best.

10. Handwork in the form of devices will be gladly received, but without reward.

How the award is made: 1. The points of efficiency are: (a) Neatness; (b) completeness; (c) accuracy; (d) expression of the pupil; (e) proper grading of the pupil; (f) originality. 2. The twenty best pieces are determined first. After this careful examination it is possible to determine accurately as to the best state exhibit. 3. Variety of material will be considered.

All material should be in the hands of the state director of children's work not later than May 15. No assurance can be given to exhibits sent later than June 1.

Important Documents Given Away

The Northern Baptist Convention has on hand the following publications. It becomes necessary to dispose of them as quickly as possible on account of changes which must be made by the American Baptist Publication Society, which attends to the distribution of these documents. If you wish any of these documents, you may have them for the price of the postage.

The Handbook of the Convention for 1919—404 regular copies, and twenty-eight interleaved. Postage 12 cents.

Pamphlet on "Relations of Baptists to Other Christian Bodies," 12,000 copies. Postage ten cents per hundred copies.

Annals: 1909—fifty-six paper; 1910—123 cloth and forty-four paper; 1911—forty-seven cloth and five paper; 1912—one cloth and forty-one paper; 1913—thirty-nine cloth and 188 paper; 1914—sixty-three cloth, 110 paper and five interleaved; 1915—fifty cloth and sixty-two paper; 1916—three cloth, thirty-four paper and six interleaved; 1917—145 paper; 1918—one cloth. Postage 28 cents.

All orders for any of this literature should be sent to the American Baptist Publication Society, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, enclosing post-office money order for postage.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST.

Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Mississippi Valley

OHIO

THE FIRST BIRTHDAY of Station F Alumni Association was celebrated on Tuesday evening, Jan. 25, at the Ninth Street Church of Cincinnati. Supper was served by the Berean Philathea Class, Miss Butler, teacher. The speakers of the evening were Dr. J. F. Herget, pastor of Ninth Street Church, Mr. Horace Drake, superintendent of the home Sunday school, and Mr. Rudy Abrecht, who is connected with the Y. M. C. A. at Hamilton, Ohio. The annual business meeting was conducted, and officers elected for the year 1921. This alumni association was organized on Jan. 29, 1920, the members, who now number over fifty, being former and present workers of Station F Sunday school of the Ninth Street Church.

"Get-Together" of Toledo Association

At the First Church, Toledo, on Feb. 2, more than 200 Baptists, all but forty of whom were from the Toledo Association, had a "get-together" meeting under the auspices of the association and of the Toledo Baptist Union. E. H. Voss spoke on "What I Expect of a Pastor." Rev.

L. B. Stiver, speaking of "Happenings at the Second Church," told of forty conversions secured in the quiet normal workings of the church. Dorman Richardson spoke on the young people's work in the association; Rev. T. G. Erler spoke on "What Can Toledo Churches Do for the Outside Churches?" Rev. Albert King Morris spoke on "The Church and the Times"; and John D. Rhoades spoke on "Building Up the Weaker Churches," proposing the organization of teams of laymen who would go out in groups of five and hold a Saturday and Sunday meeting with pastorless churches. W. Jasper Howell, moderator of the association, was toastmaster.

IOWA

THE BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION of Des Moines started its 1921 city program with a big rally and social at the Forest Avenue Church Friday evening, Jan. 28. Approximately 300 young people, representing the different Baptist churches of the city, were present and pledged themselves to get behind the city union and its proposed program. It was the first quarterly rally and the beginning of a contest between the different societies of the city. At the next rally, a large banner will be presented to the society doing the most effective B. Y. P. U. work during the intervening time, and this banner will be contested for at every quarterly rally hereafter.

Mrs. EMILY MALCOLM WHITNEY, for many years a faithful and consistent member of the church at West Union, died at Fayette on Jan. 20, at the age of ninety-three.

NEBRASKA

THE EVANGELISTIC NOTE has been dominant in a large number of Nebraska churches this winter. Dr. Wilson Mills has been giving continuous and most successful service. The Eudell churches, Loup City, Pawnee City, Maxwell and Glenvil already rejoice in great victories and the calls continue to come in for the help of this man who is much beloved in the state. Chaplain White is another who has done heroic service. No church has been too small for him to visit and no task too hard for him to conquer. Just Bro. York, Bancroft and Gould when Secy. P. O. Silvara closed his work as field secretary to take the important field at Arnold. This will become a demonstration center for rural work, and much should be heard of this pastor and church in coming days. The other field secretary, Rev. G. L. Sharp, has been given enlarged responsibility as assistant to the state secretary. Rev. I. W. Edson becomes a district missionary.

New Church Edifice at Norfolk

The First Church of Norfolk recently dedicated its new church edifice after many years of looking forward to its erection. The campaign was started in 1916, while Rev. J. S. Harris was pastor. In October, 1917, Rev. F. W. Benjamin became pastor, and with the assistance of Dr. Divine the first campaign was completed in April, 1918.

This is the only church in the neighborhood, and the meeting-house is in splendid repair; but there are only two or three members left. The outlook at the present time is hopeful for building up a strong interest in that place. A theological student is supplying the church every Sunday.

A MID-WINTER MEETING of the Wabash Valley Association was held at Olney the middle of January. The attendance and interests were good. Mrs. W. P. Topping of Elgin, Mrs. Peterson of Chicago, Dr. A. E. Peterson of Chicago, Rev. L. H. Koehler and Supt. E. P. Brand of Normal were present from outside the association. The churches of the association seem to be doing good work. One field is yet pastorless which is willing to give fine support when the right man can be secured to take charge of two churches.

A MEETING OF THE PASTORS and laymen of the Bloomington Association was held on Jan. 31 in the Y. M. C. A. building in Bloomington. After dinner, about three hours were spent in addresses and discussion. Dr. Potat of the General Board of Promotion was present and gave a helpful address and answered many questions.

ALL THE MISSIONARIES and evangelists of the state convention are kept busy at this time and seem to be having good success wherever they hold a meeting or conduct an every-member canvass. The outlook for the denomination in the state is bright at this time.

Chicago Ministers' Conference

The program for the three months beginning Jan. 1 is as follows:

Jan. 3: Rev. A. E. Peterson, on "Illinois and the New World Movement."

Jan. 10: Dr. Howland Hanson, on "Our Baptist Faith: Is It To Continue an Inspiration or To Become an Inquiry?"

Jan. 17: Dr. A. S. Carman, at the evening session at the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, on "Is the Ministry Worth While?"

Jan. 24: Rev. Henry Topping of Japan, on "Japan's Attitude towards America."

Jan. 31: Union meeting with the Church Federation, with Dr. C. L. Goodell as speaker.

Feb. 7: Prof. John F. Lyon of the McCormick Seminary, on "Some Outstanding Books of 1920 for the Minister's Library."

Feb. 14: Dr. Josiah Sibley, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, on "The Responsibility of the Church for Religious Education."

Feb. 21: A symposium on "Soul-Winning," conducted by Rev. A. H. Gage and Rev. J. W. Hoyt.

Feb. 28: Prof. Gerald B. Smith of the University of Chicago, on "Tendencies in Modern American Theology."

March 7: Rabbi Tobias Schanfarler of Kehilath Anshe Mayriv, on "What the Jew and Judaism Stand For."

March 14: Dr. Carl D. Case, on "When Is a Minister Justified in Leaving the Ministry?"

March 21: Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the M. E. Church, on "The Mission and Work of the Modern Church."

March 28: Rev. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, on "The Minister's Alertness."

April 4: "The Most Embarrassing Moments in My Ministry," by several of the brethren.

April 11: Bishop Chas. P. Anderson of the Episcopal Church, on a topic to be announced later.

NEW CHURCH EDIFICE AT NORFOLK, NEBRASKA

now he is surprising everyone by the way he has turned despair into hope at Red Cloud. Evangelist Hayworth has held meetings at Wellfleet, Grace Church, Omaha, Ansley and Osco, and in every place the churches reported splendid meetings. Pastor R. Richards of Ansley has shown remarkable gifts along evangelistic lines, going into the rural fields near his church with the gospel message and winning many to Christ and the church. He recently helped Rev. L. R. Bobbitt of Broken Bow in a meeting in which over fifty confessed Christ.

TWO PASTORS, A. F. HOWELL and C. A. Irvin, rejoice in enlarged houses of worship. Secy. Fowle helped Bro. Howell in the dedication at Guide Rock Jan. 2, and Bro. Irvin at Wilsonville Jan. 9. Wise use of money invested and houses well adapted to social and religious work made the people rejoice in what they had done.

NEW PASTORS: C. E. HAMILTON at Chadron, A. O. Broyles at Beatrice, J. M. Cornelius at Glenvil, E. A. Powers at Lewellen, J. A. Leonard at Juniata, B. J. Minort at Alliance, and W. H. Hughes at Sumner, all enter their new fields of labor full of hope and with the enthusiastic support of the people. Every man faces a great field; every church has a good pastor.

CHANGES CONTINUE in the list of state convention workers. The state had hardly become accustomed to the absence of Actual operations were not started until the spring of 1919, and the uncertain labor conditions did not make for fast work. The original plans were drawn by Harry Jones of Minneapolis. While it is not a large building, it will take care of 500 in the auditorium and will accommodate a Sunday school of from 500 to 600. At the time of dedication, pledges were given by the members to cover the balance of the cost of the building, including a pipe organ. The church property, including the lot, is valued at approximately $60,000.

Since Bro. Benjamin's coming, the membership has steadily increased. During 1920, forty-two members were taken in, twenty-five by baptism. On the first Sunday in 1921, twelve persons presented themselves for membership, and fifteen more are ready to come in.

ILLINOIS

THE WAUKEGAN CHURCH, of which Rev. W. C. Rutherford has been pastor for about five years, is perhaps doing the best work in its history. As the Sunday school crowds the capacity of the building, it is hoped to put on additional Sunday-school rooms in the near future. The auditorium is large and will accommodate the church for many years to come. Bro. Rutherford and his wife are highly esteemed by the people.

SUPT. BRAND RECENTLY spent a Sunday night with the Russell Church—on the extreme northeastern border of the state.

KANSAS

THE WEST SIDE CHURCH, WICHITA, reports a successful meeting held under the direction of the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. H. Hickerson. There was no sensationalism in the methods. Much personal work was done by the converts and older members. Forty were added to the church, thirty of them by baptism. The membership is now over 500. It is rich in young people. The church now worships in its Sunday-school unit, which has a seating capacity of 700. In the future it will add an auditorium, seating 1200. Rev. Edgar Hays Cook is entering upon the second year of his pastorate.

PASTOR C. T. ILSLEY and the church at McPherson are rejoicing in success. The annual meeting was held Jan. 3. All bills for 1920 are paid, and a balance is in the treasury. The close of the associational year showed an even hundred added to the church, sixty-seven of them by baptism. Special evangelistic effort will be put forth before Easter. The growing Sunday school made necessary the remodeling of the church, a gallery seating 100 being built. Including repairs on the parsonage, $1800 was required, and this has all been paid.

REV. E. B. EBEL, until recently pastor of the First German Church of Boston, is now a professor in McPherson College. He is giving monthly lectures on personal work and soul-winning to the young people of the McPherson Church, and, with his wife and two sons, is greatly increasing the working force of the church.

REV. W. A. HOLLADAY reports that Peabody raised $150 for European relief at Christmas. Ten were baptized recently as a result of the meetings conducted by Rev. Geo. F. Barton.

THE NEWTON CHURCH had its meeting and supper December 30. All reports indicate substantial growth during the year. One hundred forty persons were present. The total raised by the departments for all purposes was $7,459.93, $3,553.32 of which went for benevolences. Pastor Alpha Ingle is leading this church in a three months' new membership drive ending Easter Sunday. This is his fourth year at Newton.

ON FEB. 9, 1920, the pastor of the Hays Church preached at Ellis. On March 18, the Ellis Church was organized. In its membership were seven members of the old church, to whom nine others were added by letter and twelve by baptism. On Jan. 9, 1921, a $3,000 building was dedicated free of debt. This is the basement of a building which, when completed, will be worth $23,000. Rev. Farum St. John, of Denver, preached the sermon, and Rev. H. MacD. Thompson, who led in the organization and building enterprise, raised the $1,100 which was still owing.

REV. BENJ. F. TILLEY of Emporia is assisting Pastor O. F. Potter of Bronson in a meeting. Pastor Potter assisted Pastor Tilley in a similar service at Emporia recently, leading in the singing while Pastor W. A. Elliott of Ottawa did the preaching.

THE WORK AT GOSHEN has been greatly revived lately under the leadership of Rev. T. H. Southall of Coats. He had the assistance of Rev. Mr. Nanoe of Oklahoma recently in an evangelistic campaign there, with a large number of conversions, mostly young people. They are now planning to organize a B. Y. P. U. and so help to conserve the work. The church will call a man for full-time work as soon as a suitable person can be secured.

REV. R. L. MEIGS, the new pastor at Ashland, is building himself into the life and work of the church and community. He came into the state from Oklahoma and is attacking the problems at Ashland with vigor and purpose.

MR. H. A. MANEWAL, a layman of the Ashland church, is proving himself to be an effective evangelist. He recently assisted in a meeting at Santana and had more than forty converts, mostly adults. It is understood that since we do not have a church there a number of them will join the church at Plains.

EDIFICE OF CALVARY CHURCH, OMAHA, NEBRASKA, NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION

REV. H. LEROY GOODWIN, until recently pastor of the Milton Church, is in special meetings at Harper. There have been several conversions. The church has been without a pastor for some time and will likely call Mr. Goodwin when the meeting is over.

REV. M. G. BARLOW is encouraged with his work at Wellington. The carpenters are at work on the interior of the fine new church building, and it is understood that it will soon be completed.

REV. W. R. SMITH of Lorraine has recently become pastor of the church at Valley Center. This is one of the struggling churches in that part of the state, but the interest is reviving now.

THE CHURCH AT STAFFORD is growing nicely under the leadership of Pastor W. H. Briggs. There have been fifty-four additions since the first of December.

REV. B. S. SUNDSTRUM of Sterling has the assistance of Evangelist Schuessler and helpers in what is proving to be a great revival for the community. Early in the meeting there were some forty or fifty conversions.

AT GYPSUM, Rev. J. D. Watkins, pastor, fourteen were baptized during January and five have been approved for baptism. Four deacons have recently been ordained, making six in all. Attendance at all services is increasing, and the outlook is hopeful.

MICHIGAN

DR. ANTHONY C. HAGEMAN, who has been director of the financial campaign for Hillsdale College, has been elected acting-president of the college in place of Dr. J. W. Mauck, who is to spend the winter in California. Dr. Mauck has served the college for almost twenty years, and every body in the city and all the friends are sorry to have him give up the active management. Dr. Hageman was born at Independence, Iowa, in 1873, left school at the age of fourteen, and was for ten years engaged in business. Then he spent three years in the academy, four years in Des Moines College, and three years in Rochester Seminary. In 1919 he received the degree of D. D. from his college. Since he left the seminary he has been engaged in the pastorate and in general denominational and educational work.

AFTER EIGHT SUCCESSFUL YEARS, Rev. B. McDermand has closed his pastorate with the Jefferson Avenue Church, Detroit. The church has grown from a membership of thirty to one of more than 300, and the Sunday school has grown from forty to 200. Mr. McDermand has been successful in attracting men to his services. He is to continue to live in Detroit. The Jefferson Avenue and Clinton Avenue churches are to merge and erect a new building.

THE FIRST CHURCH, LESLIE, has had a good year. The U. of M. evangelistic band was with the church in November, and there were a large number of decisions for Christ. Some have been baptized. A large ingathering is expected before Easter. The church has thirty tithers and has paid in about $750 on the New World Movement. The Sunday school has an average attendance of about 100.

PASTOR WM. E. HALL, of Prescott, finds a bunch of "busy bees" at his Twining center. With a seating capacity of seventy-five, the average attendance at the Sunday school is sixty and at the church service seventy.

MUSKEGON HEIGHTS has purchased a new parsonage, where Pastor Lyons is happily settled. He finds a hopeful spirit prevailing, and things are going in the right direction. The Sunday school has nearly reached the 200 mark.

GROWING CONGREGATIONS have cheered the heart of Pastor Archie J. Graham at Manton. General repairs on the church have been made, and a new pipeless furnace and a baptistery add to the comfort and joy of the people.

THE REAL FUTURE of the church at Marquette rests with the fine band of young people who are being trained by Pastor Roy E. Whittemore.

NORTHVILLE has received twenty-one new members into the church during the first year of Rev. H. Grimwood's service. Church and Sunday-school attendance has doubled, and the benevolent contributions are ten times the amount given for the past several years. The women bought a new furnace and have $1,000 banked as a starter toward a future church home.

REV. F. I. OSBORN baptized seventeen into the Morenci Church recently. Three others have joined on their Christian experience.

THE BELDING Sunday school feels specially honored in the fact that its superintendent, Fred L. Warner, has been chosen speaker of the house of representatives of Michigan. W. A. Biss is the leading and pushing pastor.

SINCE REV. I. M. COMPTON came to the Alpena Church from Brattleboro, Vt., he has created a new optimistic atmosphere. New members are coming in, the Sunday school is growing, and the women have reorganized, a live missionary society being the result.

THE COMMITTEE for the Michigan Baptist Summer Assembly has made preliminary announcement of some plans. The place is Kalamazoo. Dates are July 21 to 29, inclusive. The attendance should be all who can attend, and more.

PASTOR LAWRENCE MEAD, who was recently ordained at Grand Ledge, is continuing his splendid work there. The Sunday school has an attendance of over 270, while the average number at the prayer meetings has been 125.

A ROYAL WELCOME was extended to Rev. E. J. Parsons by Parr Memorial Church Petoskey, and, in fact, by the city, regardless of creed. At the reception, the schools, churches and business men of the city voiced hearty welcome.

SIXTY-FIVE MEMBERS of the Morenci Church sat down at the annual supper, which was followed by roll call and reports from the several departments. Rev. I. G. Nickerson's heart was rejoiced by the encouraging features of the year's work.

INDIANA

PASTOR E. A. SZULZ, who is entering on the seventh month of his pastorate at Madison, is rejoicing in the progress of the work. For nine successive Sundays here have been additions at nearly every service. Up to date twenty have been baptized, six more are awaiting the ordination and twenty others have been received by letter. The Sunday school has set as a goal an attendance of 500 by Easter and the goal is almost reached. A general conference is to meet here March 1-4, when a large attendance from the churches of the neighboring towns is expected.

Atlantic Coast

NEW YORK

THE WASHINGTON HEIGHTS CHURCH, New York City, reported at its annual meeting that the largest amount in its history had been raised for both benevolences and current expenses—$8000 for the former and $15,000 for the latter. Rev. Harold Pattison, pastor of the church for the past ten years, is one of the popular preachers of Washington Heights. Sunday mornings Dr. Pattison is speaking on the great foundation beliefs of the Christian faith. In the evening service a series of biographical addresses is being given, including addresses on Lincoln, Washington, Franklin and Roosevelt. The Good Friday service is always one of unusual interest and helpfulness. Seven ministers of different denominations take part in the service, each giving a brief address on one of the seven last words from the cross. The Boy Scouts celebrated their first anniversary by a "father and son" dinner Feb. 11. New members are received into the church at each communion. Without special appeal or offering $300 was voluntarily given by the audience a few Sundays ago to aid the starving children of Europe.

MAINE

DR. ALLYN K. FOSTER, student secretary of the Board of Education spent four days, Jan. 23-26, at Colby. On Sunday afternoon he addressed a gathering of students which filled the college chapel to overflowing; on Tuesday evening he addressed the student Christian association; on Wednesday evening he visited each of the Greek letter societies in their halls and made brief addresses. Each day he spoke at the chapel exercises and to selected groups of students, and held conferences with individual students. Dr. Foster won the interest and respect of Colby men and women from the start, and his visit has greatly stimulated the religious life of the college.

TWO NEW NAMES have been added to Colby's roll of missionaries. Mrs. Clara Winslow Moldenke, '13, recently sailed with her husband for India, where they will serve under the direction of the Lutheran church. Norman W. Lindsay, '16, recently entered upon work in Algiers, North Africa, under the direction of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Foreign Missions. His labors will be among the Kabyles, the native white race of Algiers.

NEW JERSEY

THE FIRST CHURCH, Bayonne, is enjoying continued numerical growth and spiritual prosperity under the leadership of Pastor C. H. Rannels. At the January business meeting all obligations were reported met, with a balance of $335.85 in the treasury. The church therefore ordered electric lights installed in the parsonage. Baptisms have been frequent. Sunday, Feb. 6, was a red letter day; the Bible school had its highest record of attendance in recent years, five received the hand of fellowship at the communion service, and one was baptized at the evening service, while the attendance at both church services was exceptionally large.

ON MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 31 the Camden Association held a recognition service for Rev. Thomas N. Martin, the new pastor of the Fairview Church, Camden. Fairview is a permanent village built by the government during the war to house the workers of the New York Ship Building Corporation of Camden. There are about 5000 people in the town, and the only religious work besides the Baptist is done by a small Methodist group meeting over a store. The Baptist work has a good building and a pastor. The Home Mission Society and the state convention jointly erected the building and placed the pastor on the field.

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP of Pastor David A. MacMurray, the annual business meeting of the First Church of Asbury Park was held on Feb. 2, 125 attending the supper and meeting. The report of the pastor for the various departments of the church showed a steady advance all along the line, each department well organized, and a bright outlook for the future. For the first time in the history of the church the current expenses for the year have been met by receipts from the envelope and plate collections, without the necessity of taking up a special collection. The allotment for the New World Movement of $31,056 has been accepted, the church indebtedness of $17,500 added to this allotment, and a plan adopted to divide the $48,550 into four equal amounts. The first quarter was oversubscribed by $1200. The remaining three-fourths will be undertaken—one-fourth each year—during the coming three years.

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston West Baptist Association Institutes

A committee consisting of Prof. J. P. Berkeley of Newton, Evelyn Griffith of Sharon, Rev. Miles W. Smith of West Roxbury and Dr. C. H. Halliwell of Norwood has planned for three associational institutes for Sunday-school workers in February and March. The first begins Feb. 10, at the First Church, Norwood, and includes the churches of Norwood, Dedham, Sharon, Canton, Foxboro and Westwood. Prof. Berkeley, Rev. F. F. Peterson, state director of religious education, and Miss Gertrude Hartley, assistant director, constitute the faculty. Prof. H. K. Rowe of Newton will deliver the concluding address.

On March 2, 9 and 16 the second institute will be arranged for the churches of Newton, West Newton, Newton Center, Needham, Brookline, Brighton and Hill Memorial. The place of meeting will probably be at the Newton Immanuel Church.

On March 23, 30 and April 6 a third institute will be held for the churches of Jamaica Plain, Hyde Park, Stratford Street, Jamaica Plain German, Dudley Street, Ruggles Street and Center Street churches at some central place. The Boston West Sunday-school Convention and the Massachusetts Baptist Convention are co-operating.

A State Religious Education Program

The department of religious education of the state convention has completed a program for the state which will be put into operation at once. The conspicuous feature will be institutes and conferences both with individual churches and with groups of churches in the larger centers.

On Feb. 15th, at the Clarendon Street Church, the initial meeting for organization of a Baptist workers' union was held. This union will include all the valuable elements contained in the old Boston Baptist Superintendents' Union with the addition of many more modern and vital principles of present-day religious education. The constituency will be the pastors, superintendents, Sunday-school officers and teachers of the Baptist churches of the seven associations in the eastern part of the state. The program covers a meeting each month of educational classes, followed by an address delivered by some conspicuous Baptist educator and closing with conferences on special phases of Sunday-school and religious educational work.

There will be organized five or six commissions which will make special investigation of important matters relating to religious education, and about which some fuller experimentations need to be developed and decisions made before being adopted by the churches.

A city school of religious education will be launched about March 15 for the Sunday workers of the four Boston associations. The second semester will come in the fall and early winter. Special emphasis will be laid upon Bible study, denominational history and developments, religious education and missions.

The state programs include institutes at North Attleboro, special courses for high-school pupils at Melrose and a three days' institute at Leominster in March.

For the young people of the state, the study of three books during the year is planned. "How We Got Our Bible," by Smythe, is the one to be used this spring, to be followed by a study of the "Gospel of Mark" in the fall. A state organization for the young people is being perfected.

As in other years, the daily vacation Bible school will have a large place in the summer's work. During May and June, a school of instruction for D. V. B. S. leaders will be held. Funds have been appropriated by the American Baptist Publication Society to maintain more than double the number of schools of last year.

Rocky Mountain States

MONTANA

AT WHITETAIL, under the leadership of District Missionary I. B. March, the last note has been paid on the edifice debt and the congregation is entirely free from financial obligation.

AT HAVRE forward strides are being made. Rev. Frank D. White is leading the church in a complete reorganization and church edifice campaign. A remodeled building has been redecorated and is being furnished with oak pews. No debt has been created.

AT ROUNDUP Rev. Russell B. Thomas has the joy of seeing the beautiful brick edifice which has stood in an unfinished condition for three years now being completed. A modern baptistry, furnace and other features are installed. The church has worshiped in the basement but hopes to get into the main auditorium by spring.

AT BUTTE First Pastor C. A. Cook is leading the church to a great victory. Less than four years ago, when Dr. Cook was called, the building debt was over $24,000. The balance unpaid at this date is less than $2000. Eight hundred dollars of this is subscribed. While the city is suffering from an intense industrial depression, the church goes forward to new victory.

THE CHURCH AT MILES CITY has been pastorless since July 1; yet it has enlarged its building, paying cash for improvements. Regular services have been maintained by the members. Forty new members have been received into the church during the last three months. At the present time Mrs. G. V. Woolsey, a talented and consecrated laywoman, is acting as supply pastor under regular appointment by the state convention board.

AMONG THE NEW PASTORS that have not been reported hitherto are Mrs. G. V. Woolsey, Miles City, Rev. J. H. Spencer, Laurel, Rev. Frank D. White, Havre, Rev. Randolph Rector, Lewistown, and Rev. Erik G. Gronlund, Swedish Church, Great Falls.

REV. J. S. UMBERGER, an evangelist from the department of evangelism of the Home Mission Society, has been in the state since Aug. 1. Successful meetings have been held at Whitetail, Roundup, Lodge Grass, Pryor, Valier, Dillon and Kalispell. He is engaged for meetings at Anaconda and with churches in the Bitter Root Valley. Many candidates for baptism have resulted from these meetings and valuable members received at every point.

SINCE SEPTEMBER the convention has had a general field missionary in the person of Miss H. Mary Sundell, an appointee of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society. Miss Sundell has done constructive work at Glasgow, Great Falls, Swedish, Great Falls Negro and Eureka churches. She goes on March 1 to Butte and Anaconda for a survey of the city missions in those two cities, with special attention to the foreign-speaking and Negro work.

IN RESPONSE TO A CALL published in our denominational papers, Secy. Cress has received large quantities of bedding and serviceable clothing for needy families in destitute sections of the state. This has been forwarded promptly to our district missionaries and distribution has been made intelligently. The mildest winter in many years has lightened the lot of the Montana farmers who have suffered greatly in recent years from drought.

PLANS ARE ALREADY UNDER WAY for the annual meeting of the state convention with the First Church, Butte, May 17-19. Mr. Sumner Vinton, with his marvelous pictures, Dr. W. B. Hinson of Portland, with his "Quiet Hours With Jesus," and many other splendid features will fill the program. Rev. and Mrs. D. L. McGriff, Negro workers at Great Falls, will render many of the old Negro "spirituals," as they did last year at Helena to the delight and edification of all.

Pacific Coast

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE FIRST CHURCH OF VAN NUYS, Los Angeles, was organized about five and a half years ago with thirty-eight members; it now has 150. Rev. Carl Bassett assisted the pastor in meetings in December, as a result of which there were seventeen additions to the church. The church doubled its apportionment in the New World Movement. The Sunday school sent $100 to the European relief fund, and the woman's society also remembered the Near East and Chinese sufferers. The new house of worship will not comfortably seat the congregations, and a larger edifice will be needed soon.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHICO, under the leadership of Pastor Berry, is making for itself an enviable record. This church now consists of 247 members, all of whom are loyal to their church and denomination. Every day in the week some part of the building is in use for some of the church activities. A teacher training class, with an enrollment of forty-one, is being taught by the pastor. Eleven of these recently took the Publication Society examination and all secured a rank of A or A plus. By co-operation in the New World Movement the church is now giving, and without apparent effort, double its former contributions to missions. Pastor and people are united in a plan of evangelism, and there is a steady ingathering of new members. An orchestra furnishes music Sunday evenings and on special occasions. Special meetings are to be held the latter part of March.

REVIVAL MEETINGS, continuing for three weeks, began on Jan. 2 at Oroquieta. As a result, three members were reclaimed and one was added by letter, two by experience and twenty-two by baptism. Others are waiting baptism. Rev. C. C. Van Gorkom is the pastor.

AT THE FIRST CHURCH, OAKLAND, 139 members were received during the past year, making a present membership of 966. The church raised $16,000 for current expenses and $12,000 for benevolences. The mid-week meeting averages from 150 to 200 in attendance. The enrollment of the Sunday school is 750. The women's auxiliary reports 1300 calls made and $1600 pledged towards the New World Movement. The church voted to send the pastor to the meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines with expenses paid, and this is to be an annual feature.

Annuities

Annuity Bonds are issued by all the Boards and Societies of the Northern Baptist Convention.

For information, including rates, write to the Society or Board concerned

or to

The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention

276 Fifth Ave., - - New York

Write for this Booklet

For Christian investors. You receive regular, generous, non-taxable life income. Your money helps a Christian enterprise.

Ask for Booklet F American Bible Society
25 Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society
Our Corporate name is
"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"
Executive Secretary, Charles L. White
Treasurer, Samuel Bryant
23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

The Log of the "Flying Pig"

(Continued from page 83)

brown, and across part of the enormous deck father had put up the jolliest striped awning, under which set our own five wicker porch chairs; and even our old Nantucket hammock was there, swinging from its iron supports.

There was a darling little gang-plank slung across from the bank to the deck—very, very narrow, however, and father had to carry Timothy over.

I never in my life wanted to be in so many places at once. I longed to go with Bill to meet our mule, who was carelessly switching his tail, looking bored to death and utterly indifferent as to how we looked! But more than the mule I wanted to see inside our ark, so I stepped carefully along the gang-plank. You mustn't suppose all canal-boats are like ours, for mother says ours is a "glorified" one; which means that down in the cabin the muslin curtains at the funny port-hole windows and the grass rugs on the floor all came from our own home; and the bunks in their cretonne covers were especially chosen to look gay and summery. I flew around like a squirrel in a cage, for everything was brand new to such a "land-lubber." Father was really rather disturbed at me, because when he was midway of moving a heavy box down into the cabin I stooped to kiss the back of his neck, crying, "You're the grandest dear that ever was born!" Of course I meant because he was starting us on this marvelous adventure.

Father choked (remember my telling you how often he does?), and our new hired man who was at the other end of the heavy box winked at father and said: "Now ain't brats the killingest?"

Brats, indeed! I walked off in my most dignified way and inspected the kitchen. It was about as big as a minute—or two minutes at the most! I don't believe Agony could have fitted into it at all.

Mother is the most methodical person, and several days earlier she had arranged things in the most convenient fashion on tiers of cunning little shelves that ran across one wall of the "kitchenette": jams and jellies, highest up; cereals and coffee and cocoa, next shelf; canned vegetables—just a few, for of course we hope to buy these in little villages along the way, all fresh from somebody's vegetable patch. I thought that nothing could be greater fun than cooking in such an amusing play-kitchen. Then to prove I was responsible for satisfying six hungry stomachs (I never counted in the mule—more about him later on, alas!), I ran for my alarm clock and discovered it was noon. So without saying a word to anybody, I sliced a whole loaf of bread and buttered the slices. Then I selected a jar of strawberry jam from a shelf and made sandwiches. I put the sandwiches on a plate, and the plate on a tray, on which I also arranged six glasses, filling them with milk. Then I walked gingerly up the two crooked steps to the deck, balancing the tray in my hands. And there was mother just throwing herself down in a porch chair as if she were too tired to open her eyes.

"Luncheon is served, madam!" I announced in a delightfully stiff butler-ish voice, and she jumped wide awake in a minute to drink some milk and nibble some sandwiches. She said afterwards that everything tasted like nectar and ambrosia. Doubtless you don't know what they are. I don't myself. Only it's an educated way of saying "the best stuff I ever ate."

We all sat around on deck, under the gay flapping awning, and gobbled. The hired man gobbled louder than any of us, but we pretended not to notice. I kept wondering if he still considered me the "killingest brat," now that I had fed him in time of need.

Right in the middle of our silent meal Timothy drew himself out of his glass of milk—I do wish he wouldn't try to get right inside it, like the dormouse into the teapot in "Alice in Wonderland"—and cried (with a comical white mustache of milk all around his lips), "Muvver, did anybody remember to bwing a dove into our ark?"

Isn't he too queer? Of course he's only four, and he can't get over the fact that if we're being real Noahs we'll need a dove to be sent out scouting.

At two o'clock we did what Bill called "weighing anchor." Only that is absurd, since there was no anchor: the ark was tied to a tree on the bank, and Jake simply untied it. Then he slapped the mule, and the mule flapped her ears, and off we started. A jolly little breeze rippled the awning; dear little blue waves lovingly patted the sides of our ark; and as I unpacked my trunk I kept wondering if anybody else in the whole wide world ever had such a curious adventure as Bill and I were sure to have—although how could I know so early in the trip what pesky things mules were, or how meals-for-six three times a day would actually seem to come due every other hour, or how frightfully astonishing a real flood could be? But (as they say in grown-up books) we are getting ahead of our story! Next week there'll be real news.

Adult Class Activities

(Continued from page 85)

men's and women's classes secured their demolition but not without some fight. Ten per cent of the votes in local primaries were thrown out because of defective ballots. Classes inaugurated a campaign of education by leaflets distributed to all voters. When an extravagant city government proposed a fine city hall at the expense of adequate school facilities, men's classes used their influence in securing better school buildings. All political candidates are given hearings during the prelude period of some classes. There should be a committee on community welfare in each group of adult classes.

No better service in the church is conducted than the monthly men's and women's night the second Sunday of the month. The men furnish the music. The women are the ushers. The committees canvass for new members for the classes and converts for the kingdom. The boys' and girls' camps during the summer are sponsored by some classes. All Scouts and boys' and girls' clubs are maintained by others. Often the two largest men's and women's classes become the visitors in the every member canvass. The number of teachers and substitute teachers which can be secured from these groups is limited only by the patience and tact exhibited of the Sunday school officials. Young men's classes especially are often loathe to surrender any of their members for this service. But co-operation can be secured in time. There should be a committee on church co-operation in each adult class.

Space will not permit further enlarging upon the benefits which accrue through the adult classes. Fresh air funds, Red Cross drives, Near East Relief, missionary support and many local philanthropies result from their service. But again there must be the utmost democracy, candor, co-operation and sympathetic leadership if success is assured. They live by the service they render and their service is valuable in His sight.

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

Arizona—* Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phoenix.
California, N.—* Dr. C. W. Brinstead, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
Idaho—Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
Indiana—* Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
Iowa—24 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capital Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
Minnesota—* Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2d Ave., So., Minneapolis.
Montana—Rev. G. Clifford Cress, Box 643, Lewistown.
Nebraska—* Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
Nevada—George L. Snyder, Box 230, Sparks.
New Hampshire—* Rev. D. S. Jenks, 92 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
New Jersey—* Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singiser, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
North Dakota—Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
Ohio—Rev. Chas. E. Stanton, Granville.
Oregon—* Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin, Field Promotion Director, 405 Tilford Bldg., Portland.
Pennsylvania—* Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
Rhode Island—* Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauderdale Bldg., Providence.
South Dakota—* Dr. S. P. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
Utah—* Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Vermont—* Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
Washington, E.—* Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane.
Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213½ Fourth St., Parkersburg.
Wisconsin—* Dr. D. W. Hulburt, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
Wyoming—* Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

VISUAL INSTRUCTION

by Balopticon and Acme
"Movie" Projection

LANTERNS SOLD AND RENTED

Our Slide Library includes the "S.S. Times Page Cartoons." Special slides made to order from your pictures or negatives.

Write for Bulletins

GEO. W. BOND SLIDE CO.

Rm. B. 6 E. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

IT IS A BURNING SHAME that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old, under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. and Mgr., 1509 Insurance Exchange, Chicago.

Baptist Department
Mutual Ins. Corporation
Furnishes Protection
AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM
No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company. Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured. No agents. Deal direct.

THE RULES OF THE GAME

By
FLOYD W. LAMBERTSON

Will help boys and girls of eleven and twelve years to connect religion with everyday life and conduct.

Net, $1.25; by mail, $1.35.

Teacher's Manual:

Net, 90 cents; by mail, $1.00.

THE ABINGDON PRESS

KEUKA COLLEGE

Keuka Park, New York

A COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

Opens September 21, 1921

President, A. H. NORTON, Ph. D.

HIGHER EDUCATION

HOME STUDY

Courses in English, Spanish, Mathematics, Chemistry, Drawing, Education, Business and in 35 other subjects are given by correspondence. Begin any time.

The University of Chicago

29th Year

Division 29 Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU KNOW!!

THE Business World needs Christian Young People. An efficient Business Training midst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY
Write for particulars Osage, Iowa

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year. Apply early for September.
Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

T. WM. LESTER

SOME EASTER SUGGESTIONS

A western reader writes for some assistance in the choice of his Easter music—more specifically, a list of cantatas possible and effective when done by a chorus-choir of untrained (that is, not professional) singers, with organ and piano accompaniment. A good quartet of soloists is available, as are a few solo instruments (violins, violoncello, cornet and clarinet). A list of short choral works to be given during Lent is also asked for. Works by American composers are to be given the preference.

Of cantatas suitable for the lenten season I would suggest:

"The Man of Nazareth," Rogers; "The Thirteenth Psalm," Bargiel; "Galia," Gounod; "The Conversion," H. A. Matthews; "The Triumph of the Cross," Matthews. Published by G. Schirmer.

"Galilee," Andrews; "Out of Darkness" (Psalm 130), Gounod. Published by H. W. Gray Company.

"Lazarus," Kaulf. Published by Clayton F. Summy Company.

For the Eastertide, choice could be made from the following list of successful works, which have been used quite widely during the past few seasons:

"The Glory of the Resurrection," Spross; "The Great Miracle," Grimm. Published by John Church.

"The Risen Christ," Otis. Published by Clayton F. Summy.

"The Resurrection," Venth; "The Triumph of the Greater Love," Lester. Published by Carl Fischer.

"Alleluia, Hail with Gladness," Galbraith; "Christ Triumphant," Huhn; "Darkness and Dawn," Peace. Published by A. P. Schmidt.

"The Resurrection," Stone; "When Christ Arose," Jordan. Published by White-Smith Company.

"The Light of God," James; "The Golden Syon," Lester; "The Paschal Victor," Matthews. Published by H. W. Gray.

"The Resurrection," Stanford; "The Crucified," Nevin; "Eastertide," Borch; "Christ Triumphant," Clough-Leigher. Published by Ditson.

"The Life Everlasting," Matthews; "Death and Life," Shelley. Published by G. Schirmer.

MUSIC IN THE CHURCH

THE following editorial reprinted from the Church Times of London, England, presents some ideas relative to the purpose and place of music in the church. The viewpoint is so sane and definite that we are glad to aid in giving it wider circulation:

"A critic has taken us to task for dwelling so much and so often on church music. He says that people who stay away from worship will not be brought in by music, however good. We do not recall ever having said that they would. But there is another way of considering the question. Is there any reason why we should incur the risk of keeping people away or of driving others out by reason of the musical atrocities to which they must submit if they come or stay? The case of the well-disposed but musically sensitive person cannot safely be disregarded. Nobody—not even our critic, we should think—would for a moment contend that the church services, musically considered, come anywhere near to the ideal. To improve them would certainly be worth while; even the extra trouble it involved would be well expended. For there is no use in singing if it has no joy in it; still less is it right to cause pain that could so easily be spared them to people whose nerves are jarred by uncouth sounds and whose taste is offended by musical ugliness. It is in the interest of the regular worshiper that we go on demanding reform. Good music—by which we do not necessarily mean elaborate music—we desiderate, not as a lure to attract the 'blue-domer' and other 'varriers from church,' pious or otherwise, but as an uplifting aid to worship and devotion."

REVIEW OF NEW MUSIC

From the White-Smith Music Publishing Company, Boston: .

"Easter Morning," Malling.

"Easter Morning," H. L. Baumgartner.

To the organist who is in search of effective service numbers for his Easter service we advise attention to the above publications. They are churchly in mode and mood, and quite fitting for the purpose intended—that of providing adequate and fitting preludes to divine worship on the occasion of the celebration of the resurrection.

The piece by the well-known Danish composer is the more straightforward of the two. Beginning with a characteristic figure for a soft reed stop on the swell, developed into a melodious theme on the great manual (registered for soft flute), it suddenly bursts out with all the majestic volume of the full organ. Then follows a development section where both themes are presented, closing with a massive climax that well represents the joy inherent in the thought of Easter morning.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO.

Baltimore, Md.

CHURCH, CHIME AND PEAL

BELLS Memorials a Specialty

Harry W. Jones

CHURCH ARCHITECT

Minneapolis

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6 cents per word per insertion; cash with order.

Great opportunity to help boys and girls of East Tennessee and Western North Carolina by giving books to start library in denominational academy. Send only good books of recognized worth or cash with which to buy them. Make inquiries, Watauga Academy, Lowell Q. Haynes, Principal, Butler, Tenn.

An opportunity for a consecrated man or woman to aid in a wonderful educational and religious work. Recommendation by your pastor necessary. Several state representatives needed. Address Service, care of THE BAPTIST.

Consecrated and experienced chorus director, personal worker and soloist (with harp) would be glad to help any pastor holding his own revival. 3036 Perry St., Denver, Colo.

For Sale: Beautiful home one block from Des Moines College. Write Wm. H. Dreier, Iowa Falls, Iowa.

The second number is more diversified in its material and more pretentious in the program suggested. Five illustrative sub-headings provide a skeleton narrative. It is suggested that they be printed on the program or bulletin for the aid of the congregation: (1) "Hush of the Early Morning;" (2) "The Walk to the Sepulcher;" (3) "The Fright of the Women;" (4) "Speech of the Angel;" (5) "Return of the Women from the Sepulcher." The music is well set for organ, is of no great technical difficulty, and is poetically illustrative of the subject headings. Altogether, this number is a worthy novelty that deserves use both for its utility value and for its poetic content.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Stock in Mortgage Companies

A FUNDAMENTAL difference exists between investment in stocks and investment in mortgages or bonds. In buying stock, the investor simply acquires a share or partial ownership in the business; the company is under no obligation to redeem any stockholder's shares and his only course, in case he wishes to get his money back, is to find a purchaser and sell his stock. On the other hand, when one buys a mortgage or bond, he obtains a debt of the company which issues it—in other words, the promise of the company to pay the holder a certain sum of money at a certain time, with a certain income, meantime, in the form of interest.

If a company fails to pay interest on its indebtedness, the bondholders have an immediate remedy; they can foreclose on its property. Occasionally the bonds allow the company a few months grace, but not usually. Dividends on stock, however, may be omitted whenever the directors of the company deem it wise to discontinue them for any reason, either to conserve cash resources or because earnings have fallen off. In such case, the stockholder has no recourse: he cannot compel the directors to declare or pay a dividend.

Because bonds and mortgages have a claim on the assets and earnings of a company superior to its stock, the price of the latter, when there is a market for it, fluctuates according to the earnings of the company. Much depends on the management. If the company has been built up around the personality of a strong leader, the prudent investor will make sure that he has capable lieutenants who may be expected to carry on successfully in case of his death.

From the foregoing, it will be seen that, unless one has means sufficient to justify taking some risk of loss, it is far better to confine one's investments to good mortgages or bonds, at an assured rate of return, than to venture his funds in non-redeemable stocks, usually with some uncertainty as to income.

Who's Who among Baptists

(Continued from page 80)

though two other churches were organized out of colonies of the mother church, the total membership at the close of his pastorate was 600, whereas there had been less than fifty at its beginning. Since 1890 Dr. Peterson has been in secretarial work, serving first as district secretary of the Foreign Mission Society for the Northwestern District and later as joint secretary for the Home and Foreign Mission societies—the first joint representative so appointed—and since 1919 as general representative of the Board of Promotion. His service thus covers a period of years notable in the denomination for its honored leaders, such as H. L. Morehouse, H. C. Mabie, S. W. Duncan, J. N. Murdock and others.

Dr. Peterson has also served the denomination in a wider capacity, through his membership on numerous boards and committees, including the Minnesota State Convention, the Pillsbury Academy, the Bethel Academy, which he has served as chairman since 1903, and the Swedish Baptist General Conference, of whose board of directors he is president. It is a long, faithful, efficient and honorable record which he holds—a joy to his contemporaries and an inspiration to the younger denominational leaders.

Obituary

GEORGE HITE WILLIAMS

George Hite Williams, who departed this life to be with Christ Jan. 4, 1921, was born in St. Clairsville, Ohio, April 24, 1851. With his parents, he moved to Iowa in 1856 and settled in Homer, where he grew to manhood. He was married in July, 1871, to Miss Harriet Brewer. He was converted, when nearly forty years of age, in a series of special meetings at the Homer Baptist Church, conducted by Rev. Adam Groesbeck, now a missionary in China. He was baptized early in 1891 by Dr. John A. Earl. Brother and Sister Williams lived the simple and noble life of farmers, and raised their children, who are now all members of the church, under those healthful conditions. In January, 1903, they moved to Fort Dodge, Iowa, where Mr. Williams was called to act as secretary of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company, which position he held up to the time of his death. His connection with the First Church, Fort Dodge, Iowa, began soon after he moved to the city. He served the church at different times as deacon, trustee, treasurer and Sunday-school teacher. Never did a church have a better treasurer. He was one of the best of Sunday-school teachers, an ideal deacon, and an efficient trustee. He was a worthy Christian brother, greatly beloved and highly esteemed, a true husband and father, and a successful farmer and business man. His gifts to his church and the missionary work of our denomination were most generous. Besides the bereaved widow, Mrs. Harriet Williams of Fort Dodge, the two sons, J. Frank and George H., both of Duncombe, Iowa, and the two daughters, Mrs. C. E. Mulholland of Kanawha, Iowa, and Mrs. Homer White of Alliance, Neb., his departure will be deeply mourned by the entire church and the community. Thursday morning, Jan. 6, funeral services were conducted at his late home by his pastor, Rev. B. M. Osgood, and in the afternoon, with appropriate committal service, his body was laid to rest in the mausoleum of the Webster City, Iowa, cemetery.

B. M. O.

MUSIC FOR EVERYBODY

BY MARSHALL BARTHOLOMEW
AND ROBERT LAWRENCE

The Organization and Leadership of Community Music Activities

ILLUSTRATED

Net, $1.00; by mail, $1.10

THE ABINGDON PRESS

EASTER EXTRAORDINARY

EASTER! DAY OF DAYS! is the title of a new service for Sunday schools, of rare beauty and worth. Sample copy mailed for four 2-cent stamps.

Send us your address (and that of others interested) and we will mail free our new catalog of Easter services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for mixed voices, women's voices, and men's voices, also anthems for choir.

HYMNS FOR TO-DAY, new, for the Sunday school and church, voicing the forward-looking spirit of to-day in beautiful songs, new and old. Contains 15 Easter hymns and two Easter services. Price, $75 per 100. Returnable sample copy mailed for examination. Orchestrated.

We make a specialty of religious orchestra music.

Fillmore Music House, 518 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

EASTER FREE

HALL-MACK CO. MUSIC

Sample Services of Songs and Recitations to Ministers, Superintendents, and Committees.

Returnable Samples of Choir Cantatas and Anthems.

The Garden of Joseph, new song story by Adam Geibel, 25 cents.

Easter Helper No. 7 (not sent for examination), 15 cents in stamps.

HALL-MACK CO. } 21st and Arch Sts.,
ADAM GEIBEL CO. } Philadelphia, Pa.

JUBILATE

THE JOYFUL HYMNAL
FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

8 Great Departments for all singing uses

Thousands of satisfied schools have enthusiastic, helpful singing using JUBILATE.
PRICES TO SUIT $25—$32.50—$35—$40
According to binding.

Send for returnable sample NOW. Note change of address
HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Phila., Pa.

In writing to our advertisers mention The Baptist.

MOUNDS PARK SANITARIUM

Earl and Thorn Streets

MIDWAY HOSPITAL

Snelling and University Avenue

MERRIAM PARK HOSPITAL

(FORMERLY COBB)

Iglehart and Cleveland Avenues

DEPARTMENTS

General Surgery Medicine
Neurology Obstetrics
Eye, Ear, Nose
and Throat

SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA

LABORATORIES

Radium Blood Chemistry
X-Ray Basal Metabolism
Serology Pathology
Electrocardiograph

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES

Foreign Society Board Meeting

(Continued from page 68)

the speakers. Each address had a distinct individuality, and each speaker showed that he had a statesmanlike grasp of the conditions in the empire which he represented. They were all in the full manhood of life, vigorous, sane, fervid and intelligently alert. It was a striking exhibition of the leadership which we have in these lands.

The same impression was produced again on Wednesday morning when Drs. C. A. Huntley and A. F. Ufford of the East China Mission told of the work there, emphasizing especially the striking changes in social customs and the attitude of the increasing student classes toward political and social policies—all due to the leavening influence of the gospel of our Lord.

The dimensions of the work done by the society can be imagined from the fact that the treasurer, Mr. Huntington, paid out over the office counter during the month of January more than $300,000.

Probably the most impressive moments were when four young people presented themselves for appointment to foreign service. Mr. Paul F. Cressey, who will be graduated from Denison in June, was designated to teach in the academy at Hangchow, China, for a term of three years. He will then return for further preparation. He is a great-grandson of Jonathan Goings. Mr. George E. Blackwell, who is a graduate of Colgate University and of Newton Theological Institution, and who is now pastor at East Freetown, Mass., will go to South India or Burma. One of our vigorous young pastors and his wife were appointed to the charge of the English-speaking church at Moulmein. The testimonies of these young people, the charge given them by Dr. F. L. Anderson and the prayers of consecration filled an hour long to be remembered. A young layman who had come in from a neighboring church said that nothing had so "gripped" him in all his life.

These were some of the outstanding features of the meeting. It was a sample of what takes place every three months. Lincoln, Neb.

Fresh from the Field

(Continued from page 66)

Church, Ontario, Cal., and will begin his work March 1. This is one of the finest fields in the state for aggressive effort. Bro. Smith is preeminently a young people's pastor and will have here large opportunity.

The pastor of the Roselle, N. J. Church has been preaching an effective series of sermons based on the first two chapters of Mrs. Montgomery's book "The Bible and Missions."

Rev. W. E. Matthews, Broadway Church, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been chosen president of the Baptist Union of Western Canada.

The students of the Newton Theological Institution are offering their services for evangelistic campaigns in the churches during their spring vacation, March 13-20 inclusive. They will be sent out in teams of from two to four men, including an experienced preacher and also a singer as far as this is possible. Entertainment for the men will be the only expense to the local churches. Pastors desiring the services of one of these teams should apply at once to Paul E. Alden, 73 Institution Ave., Newton Center, 59, Mass.

The year 1920 was the biggest and best of all the years for the First Church, Shreveport. There were 408 additions to the membership, giving a present membership of 2032. The cash contributions for the year amounted to $187,287.79.

During January there were forty-two accessions to the First Church, Denver, Colo., all of whom came through the regular meetings without special services. During the eight and one-third years of the pastorate of Dr. A. H. C. Morse, 1600 new members have been received.

A Reception and a Farewell

BY WILLIAM B. LIPPHARD

TWO EVENTS of unusual interest to Baptists and of international significance occurred in New York recently. At a special meeting of the foreign mission board on Jan. 25, eleven missionaries, seven being new appointees, were present who on the following day sailed for their respective fields. Their departure is another answer to the call of the New World Movement for the consecration of life as well as of means in carrying out our larger denominational program. A solemn and inspiring farewell service was conducted by Dr. Carter Helm Jones, vice-chairman of the board. At the same meeting, Foreign Secy. J. H. Franklin introduced Rev. Charles Padfield of the Congo Bololo Mission, Rev. C. E. Wilson, secretary of the English Baptist Missionary Society, and Mr. Thomas Penny, a member of its board of managers, who had recently arrived from London for special conferences regarding the work of Baptists in Africa, in India and in the Bahama Islands. Rev. Robert Dubarry, secretary of the French-Speaking Baptist Union, who has been in America for several weeks and who shortly returns to France, was also in attendance.

Dr. Charles L. White extended the

An Open Letter to Pastors

IN an open letter to pastors concerning the Stewardship Period, Jan. 17 to Feb. 20, Dr. E. M. Poteat, after suggesting study groups, special sermons, paragraphs in church bulletins, etc., says:

"A goal which I am trying to fix attention on is: A League of Christian Stewards in Every Baptist Church.

"Such a League in your church, formed after careful study and prayer, will quicken its entire life. Take your own course in forming it, but help yourself by forming it, and hearten us all by reporting what you have done, to your friend and brother. E. M. Poteat."

The Stewardship League of the Northern Baptist Convention

I desire to be enrolled in the League of Christian Stewards. I agree regularly to set aside a definite proportion of my income, as God prospers me, to be used in my church, my community, and in all the world, for the purpose of advancing the kingdom of our Lord. (II Cor. 9:6, 7.)

Date .....

Signed .....

(Fill out and return to Rev. E. M. Poteat, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City.)

greetings to the visiting Englishmen on behalf of the denomination, while Mr. Mornay Williams, senior member of the board of managers, welcomed them on behalf of the board. Mr. Williams paid tribute to the British hospitality which he and Mrs. Williams enjoyed during their recent year in England. As was to be expected from a statesman, ex-Gov. Carl E. Milliken of Maine emphasized the international significance of the meeting and showed how the United States and Great Britain were holding the world steady at this hour of fearful turmoil and unrest. On behalf of the pastors of Greater New York, Dr. David Miller of the Sixth Avenue Church of Brooklyn welcomed the visitors, and called attention to his own happy ministry in America since coming from Scotland. In her address, Miss Nellie G. Prescott of the Woman's Society spoke particularly to the missionaries about to sail, and assured them that the prayers of the Baptist women of America would follow them to their new fields. Secy. J. C. Robbins emphasized the remarkable administration of the British government in India, assuring the visitors that the flags of the two nations were enshrined in the hearts of all our missionaries among the 315,000,000 people who live in India. He told what had been done by missionaries in recent years, particularly during the time of the war, and to the young missionaries he said: "India has been called the jewel in the crown of the British Empire. It is your privilege to help make India a jewel in the crown of the King of Glory."

Dr. Jones then introduced the four visitors. Mr. Padfield called attention to Baptist success the world around—due to keeping the supremacy of Christ to the forefront. Baptists of England are proud of co-operation with American Baptists, and he confessed that he had never been so proud of being a Baptist as on this occasion. Mr. Penny, a Baptist deacon. in a remarkable address gave his impressions of America. He expressed his astonishment at the bigness of America's heart in meeting the needs of the stricken people in Europe and now the needs of those suffering from the China famine. He told of the loyalty of British Baptists to their missionary needs, stating that in response to the challenge of their own recent Victory Campaign, in the face of difficult conditions, they subscribed 18,000 pounds more than had been requested. Mr. Wilson called attention to the enormous task which confronts missionary activity in British India, Africa and in the Bahama Islands—the three great fields in which the American Baptists co-operate with English Baptists. The Bay of Bengal, surrounded as it is with Baptist missionaries, has well been called the "Baptist Bay," and the great Congo River may well be described as the "Baptist River of Africa."

The last speaker was Dr. Ola Hanson, a member of the party sailing on the following day. He had seen thirty years of service among the wild mountain tribes of the Kachins. When he began service they had no alphabet, they were warlike and troublesome, and gave the British government considerable anxiety. Today they have a written language, thousands of them worship the same Christ as we worship at home, and no tribes in India are more loyal to the British administration. The benediction was pronounced by Dr. John M. Dean of the Calvary Church. The party of eleven missionaries sailed from New York on Wednesday.

6.05
34P
Volume II

January 26, 1921 UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY Number 4

FEB 26 1921

The Baptist

Published Every Week

by the Northern Baptist Convention

CHAPULTEPEC CASTLE—THE HOME OF MEXICO'S PRESIDENTS

Following Baptist Trails in Mexico

AT present Mexico is at peace and little is heard of the operations of bandits. With the fall of Carranza, all attacks upon trains ceased. We cannot expect the country to be delivered at once from all its evils, but there is encouraging improvement. The only real assurance of permanent redemption is in the building up of strong groups of believers with a Christian conscience. Baptist progress in the republic is vividly depicted in C. S. Detweiler's article appearing in this issue.

Fresh from the Field

The First Church of Nampa, Idaho, is in search of a pastor. It is a good church of 200 members. Any interested may address Mr. Wm. Edmunds.

Rev. Parker Smith, pastor of the First Church, Parker, S. D., is to help the First Church, Holyoke, Colo., Rev. Frank E. Gray, pastor, in special meetings, beginning March 6.

Dr. Loren A. Clevenger has just completed a series of meetings with the First Church, Wakefield, Mass. As a result of his wise methods of evangelism a training class of thirty-five is now being conducted by the pastor. The church has been quickened and there have been numerous adult conversions. Rev. Fred-eric S. Boody has led this strong church for seven years.

Rev. W. F. Wagner has been holding special meetings recently in the First Church at Arthur, Ill., of which he is pastor. On Feb. 1, ten had been received for baptism. He has been assisted in the music by Bro. S. R. Stine and wife from Nashville, Tenn.

More than seventy churches have recently availed themselves of the services of the General Board of Promotion and added a stereopticon to their equipment. The saving to the churches has been a considerable item but the increase of power made possible by adequate equipment means greater thoroughness in doing the work of the church.

Rev. Carl D. Case, pastor of the First Church, Oak Park, Ill., has installed a bus line that runs every Sunday morning from Humphrey Ave. and Jackson Boulevard to the door of the auditorium in the Masonic Temple.

Rev. A. A. Todd, pastor of the First Church, Jacksonville, Ill., died on Feb. 15 after a two weeks' illness of sleeping sickness. He had been in the ministry for more than twenty-five years.

Mr. Horatio N. Brockway, father of Miss Meme Brockway, so well known in the elementary work of our denomination, died on Sunday morning, Feb. 6, while attending church in Los Angeles.

Word has come of the sad death of Rev. Chester Shaw on a train in Iowa on Feb. 15. He was the older son of State Supt. Shaw of S. Dakota.

Rev. F. Allison Currier is now in his fourth year as pastor of the First Church, Millinocket, Maine. Congregations have so increased that it is now necessary to increase the seating capacity of the church. The gallery of the church is therefore being finished and will add about 100 seats and also furnish some additional class rooms for the Sunday school.

The offering of the Second Church, Chicago, for the European relief was $824. There may be others in the state which did even better but reports of them have not reached this office.

Evangelist Edwin S. Stucker of Ottawa, Kansas, with his associate, Foster C. Jones of Whiona Lake, Ind., will assist Pastor H. C. Whitcomb at the Calvary Church, Omaha, Neb., from Feb. 20 to March 6. These evangelists are not now engaged for later dates.

Rev. W. D. Goble of Fitchburg has been called to the First Church Cambridge, Mass.

Rev. J. A. Moe has just finished his second year at Urbana, Ohio. Conditions are prosperous and attendance at all services much increased over previous years. Gifts to missions have been doubled and the budget for current expenses, which is 40 per cent more than in other years, has been subscribed. A go-to-church campaign, leading up to Easter, is under way.

Rev. J. G. Grace began work with the Chicago Heights Church, Ill., on Feb. 13. He was formerly pastor at Ogunquit, Maine.

Dr. Wilson Mills of Kansas City directed a series of meetings in the Pawnee City Church, Neb., just before the holidays. Seven boys and girls from the Bible school made decisions and three adults were received by baptism and one by experience.

Pres. Arthur J. Roberts announces that the amount of the "Christmas Fund" at Colby College for 1920 is $5980. This fund is contributed yearly by the graduates and friends of Colby towards the current expenses of the college, and has served to lessen the annual deficit, or to meet that deficit in full. The number of contributors this year is reported to be unusually large, which is one of the most encouraging features of the report.

What Some Churches Are Doing

A Department of Methods

Some Useful Church Committees

THE First Church, Morrill, Kans., last summer adopted a new organization for the sake of greater efficiency in its work. It appointed at that time a committee on religion education, a missionary committee, a reception committee and a publicity committee. The committee on religious education is sub-divided into five smaller committees whose duties are specified as follows:

The duty of the committee on organization is to promote and effect organization whenever and wherever needed.

The duty of the committee on study courses is to determine the material of instruction in all departments of church education.

The duty of the committee on worship is to study and prepare plans for improving the character and quality of worship.

The duty of the committee on social service is to oversee and direct the plans of expressional activities for community betterment.

The duty of the committee on recreation is to supervise athletics, excursions, play and all social activities.

The duty of the missionary committee is to disseminate missionary literature, quicken missionary interest and zeal and cultivate the missionary spirit of the church in every way possible.

The duty of the reception committee is to receive strangers and see that no one goes away without a cordial greeting.

The duty of the publicity committee is to promote methods and plans of advertising.

The finance committee is to be composed of the board of deacons, whose duties are clearly outlined in the New Testament scriptures.

The duty of the board of ushers is to see that the audience is easily, conveniently and comfortably seated with the least possible disturbance.

A letter was sent to each member giving the names of these committees and their members and containing the reminder that the success of the organization depends on the support of each individual member.

Prayer-Meeting Helps

A WELL-KNOWN pastor says that an experiment tried in his church showed such desirable results that he recommends it strongly. His people are very sociable and the minutes preceding the opening of the meeting are generally characterized by a buzz of animated conversation. It occurred to him that possibly the devotional spirit would be encouraged if his people were to avoid the general conversation. He asked them to try it during the week of prayer, and they did so with most agreeable results. The difference in the tone of the meetings was marked, and the advantage was so apparent that they agreed to follow the same plan during the second week of meetings. It should be added that the pastor suggested to his members in the church bulletin and from the pulpit on Sunday that they spend the time in quiet meditation and silent prayer and in that way be more ready for the public devotions to follow. * * *

One pastor succeeded in building up a live and large church prayer meeting in a simple way. He frequently put public emphasis on the necessity of church prayer; and then followed this up by talking with his members about it and getting them individually to promise that they would promptly take advantage of the opportunity given at the next prayer meeting. He would thus get a number of his members into the habit of public prayer and his meetings would be full of interest from the good start thus secured.

Laymen in the Pulpit

THE following communication from J. D. Morse of Gifford, Ill., was received in connection with the editorial contest. But it is more properly concerned with methods, and the editors have permission to use it here. In his accompanying letter the writer says of the idea "It is workable in small churches, as we have tried it out here."

"What a wonderful opportunity! Think of it—an editor of such a paper as THE BAPTIST! How we swell with pride. Then we hear Paul say, 'And some are puffed up,' and down we come again. But that, after all, is the price we pay for grasping our opportunity—and a small price it is considering the many advantages.

"Now, then, Mr. Pastor, suppose you borrow the idea from THE BAPTIST and invite some of the members of your congregation to occupy your pulpit some Sunday evening, and you, Mr. or Mrs. or Miss Member of the congregation, as the case may be, or all three of you, grasp your opportunity. Fail? Sure; but you have done something, and the next time you are asked 'I'll warrant you will be better prepared—at least, you will better appreciate your pastor's position.'"

The Baptist

Vol. II

February 26, 1921

No. 4

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves

Business Manager: Edgar L. Killam

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER      MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE      MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
Mr. WILLIAM A. MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs including every family, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrears if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	99
WHAT SOME CHURCHES ARE DOING .....	99
EDITORIALS .....	101
THE THREE GREAT THINGS IN LIFE, by Ransom E. Olds .....	104
FOLLOWING BAPTIST TRAILS IN MEXICO, by Charles S. Detweiler .....	105
A PLAIN STATEMENT OF CHINA'S PLIGHT .....	107
FINDING THE MARK, by Geo. E. Burlingame .....	108
THE ADRIAN PLAN OF EVANGELISM, by Thomas J. Hopkins .....	109
BILL-BOARDS AND BIBLE TEXTS, by Albert Sidney Gregg .....	110
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	111
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	113
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	114
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....	116
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	117
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	118
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	126
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS, by Lee B. Doty .....	127

How One Business Man Has Fun

"I FEEL that THE BAPTIST is getting to be a wonderful paper and a regular assistant pastor. One of my greatest delights is to 'corner' a member and preach THE BAPTIST. I can do it with so much satisfaction, for I know how much they will enjoy the fifty-two visits when they have decided to give me their subscription" (J. O. Ernsberger, manager of the Lansing Company, San Francisco).

He Introduced Them to The Baptist

"WE direct the reading of large numbers of our patrons without ever seeming to do so," said a librarian in an up-to-date public library. "By the use of book displays, bulletin boards and personal suggestion, we determine which books and periodicals will have the largest use." Who can measure the influence of such a librarian in a community, especially upon the youth of that community?

We have letters from time to time in which we find the plaintive note, "Our young folks do not read the paper. They are not interested in good things as we wish they were." Some folks seem to think that the last word has been said when they have told us what some other folks don't do.

Some folks don't read their Bibles. Is the Bible at fault? Do they need a different kind of a Bible to suit better their taste? Is it the Bible or the folks which need changing?

It seems to the man about the office that the author of the plan below has his head for some purpose besides holding his hair. There is no whine here.

Some few of a large list of subscribers to THE BAPTIST in El Paso, Ill., thought they would not renew because some of the young people did not read the paper. Pastor Hines did not argue with them in order to change their minds. He did away with the alleged reason for the impending tragedy. He introduced into his young people's society a "journal report." Each week there is assigned to some young person the task of finding the best current or special article in our periodicals bearing upon the work of the denomination or kingdom. A report is made at the meeting the following Sunday.

The plan has resulted in more variety in the meetings. It has led many of the young people to read the paper regularly. On a recent Sunday night there were four spontaneous references to THE BAPTIST by those taking part in the meeting. The older folks are pleased. The subscriptions are renewed. All of this goes to show what can be done to encourage helpful reading.

"Do You Mean Business?"

"Do You Expect To Go Ahead and Raise the Balance of the $100,000,000?"

IN answer to the timely questions raised by some of our most devoted and influential business men, we wish to say, "Yes, we do mean business. We are going ahead to raise the balance of the $100,000,000!"

1. Because the need for the $100,000,000 is not less, but far greater today than it was when the Survey was made over two years ago.

2. Because Northern Baptists have the money and are abundantly able to give the full $100,000,000 and more. When all our churches respond in proportion to their means, as about 1800 churches have already done, we shall reach the goal.

3. Because there is an increasing number of people who, together with our missionaries, share the conviction that through our united efforts in the New World Movement we are developing a richer sense of the presence and power of Christ.

4. Because back of every dollar of this need is the work; back of the work, the workers; and at the heart of the work and the workers is Christ, whose redeeming love is yet to be revealed to countless multitudes of men, women and children.

5. Because Northern Baptists are not quitters. While some have been slow to start, it is inconceivable now, since all our churches have had time to learn the spirit and purpose of this movement, that any should fail to do their full part. Has not the hour for united action struck?

J. Y. AITCHISON,
General Director.

Note: Next week this page will contain a chart showing the increase in giving on the part of many churches which have subscribed their quotas in full, and also a chart showing the amount which would be available to date had all our churches responded on the same pro rata average of giving.

What N. W. M. Success Means

By HELEN E. SCOTT

TO the workers on the various mission fields, those paragraphs published each week in THE BAPTIST which report the progress of the churches in the New World Movement are of keenest interest. It is truly a vital matter with us as we wait in the midst of these rich opportunities—wait for the equipment and reinforcements which are dependent upon the success of the denomination in this great movement.

Here in Osaka (Japan) the changing conditions of the past few years have landed us in the midst of a great industrial population—the greatest in the East. With thirty miles as a radius and a central point in Osaka as a center (about half a mile from our home), the circle drawn would contain the largest population of any similar area in all the Orient.

Last year (1919) there were born in Osaka 33,714 babies; but when you know that during the same year more than 11,000 children died, under five years of age, can you not imagine some of the heart-rending conditions which exist here?

As we have mingled with the young people who come in throngs to this great city to make a living, leaving their home ties behind, with all the restraints of the old life, we have found them eager for friendship and hungry for better things than they have known heretofore. And we long to lead them to a knowledge of the Friend and Saviour of their souls.

As we missionaries have been summing up the situation,—present and immediate future—we believe that we must lay plans at once for an institutional church in Osaka, one which shall be open to these people every day in the week.

Today in this most strategic center the need is tremendous, the opportunity glorious; but even in this critical hour we must wait for the word to advance—wait until the gifts of the Baptists in America make it possible.

Pledges and Receipts

IN the statistical table printed last week, there were five blank spaces in the first column showing the amount paid during the fiscal year April 1, 1919-May 1, 1920. The figures for these states are as follows: District of Columbia, $11,336.97; Nevada, $561.62; Northern California, $25,500.63; South Dakota, $20,000; Missouri, $1122.16. These figures give receipts from Jan. 1 to May 1, 1920. The Board of Promotion has been unable to secure from these states a report of their receipts prior to Jan. 1, 1920. With the addition of these sums, the total amount paid to May 1, 1920, amounts to $3,057,253.09, and this amount should be substituted at the bottom of the first column for that printed.

The Best Conference Ever

MRS. W. L. THOMPSON, president of the Columbia River District, writes of the regional conference recently held there: "I think these conferences were the best planned, the best carried out, and the most helpful of any conferences we have ever had in Seattle. The conference team arrived Monday at 11:45 a. m. At 12:30 we had a little reception and luncheon for the Baptist women of the city in the social hall of the First Church, and Mrs. Peabody talked to us inspiringly about the great program of the New World Movement. There were about 200 present. At 2:30 she spoke in the auditorium to the women of all denominations, on our union colleges and schools in the Orient. They were two wonderful addresses. In the evening at 6:30 Mrs. Shank gave a beautiful dinner party—eighteen covers—for the whole team. We had a delightful time of Christian fellowship. At 12:15 Tuesday Mrs. Peabody spoke to the student volunteers in the university. At 1:30 there was a luncheon at the Japanese Woman's Home, the luncheon having been prepared by a cooking class of Japanese women under the direction of Miss Esther McCullough, the English teacher. All these appointments were outside of conference hours, so you can see how busy the woman member of the team was."

Detroit Also

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "The regional missionary conference for Detroit has proven a great educator and blessing. We marvel how the team can bear up under the strain of the service the members are called upon to render. The whole program of the New World Movement was stressed, but especially the central purpose of evangelism. State Director Hudson is making himself a vital part of all these conferences and at the same time keeping up his administrative work at Lansing. He is a wonderful worker and is accomplishing remarkable results."

Four Automobiles

FOUR automobiles already made possible by the New World Movement for the Woman's Foreign Mission Society workers in Mandalay, Burma; Mahbubnagar, India; Gauhati and Nowgong, Assam. Hear what they say over there about these cars!

Mandalay: Over 250 girls in the girls' normal high school this year (a record breaker!). Only 110 are boarders; therefore 140 must be brought to and from the school each day. The Buddhist schools have autos, and now we are to have one.

Mahbubnagar: An ambulance to bring in the very sick patients from the surrounding country in place of a big basket swinging from a pole resting on the shoulders of two coolies.

Gauhati: A Ford touring car and a covered trailer. So now the high caste girls will come to school, for they can thus come in purdah and so not be defiled.

Nowgong: School or no school is the question. Its answer depends on covered conveyance to and from school. Caste must not be lost. Over 200 children were in attendance last year, and that number can be doubled with the auto.

How To Use the Book of Remembrance

FIRST: Use it. Any use of it is better than none at all.

2. Doubtless the form of publication in monthly instalments, a month in advance, in Missions is an obstacle to its regular use. But we need not on that account content ourselves with running our eye over it when Missions comes and then forget it.

3. Its name implies that it is a reminder. It invites us to keep our work and our workers in mind and to carry them on our hearts to the Throne. And it invites us thus into a great fellowship of prayer.

4. But it cannot keep us in mind of these things unless we give it a conspicuous place. A good place for it is in the Bible we use in family worship and in our private devotions. The brief Bible studies might be the starting point for further study of the passages cited, and this should lead on to a greatly amplified prayer life.

5. Above all, and of more value than anything else, is the power of unit prayer. In no other way can we grow a sense of comradeship with our missionaries round the world and with our Lord and theirs. In no other way can we develop the fellowship of all our people at home and abroad, which is the condition of the blessing of God on all our work.

"The Ever-Living Christ"

A New Easter Exercise and Pageant

IN addition to a beautiful order or service entitled "The Ever-Living Christ" and a simple exercise to be used at Easter at the close of the foreign mission period in the Sunday schools, a pageant of extraordinary merit is being printed for those schools which are looking for something more elaborate.

It is divided into two parts. Part I represents the three Wise Men who had followed the star of Bethlehem, coming to Jerusalem to inquire about Jesus, of whose mighty deeds they had been hearing. They

(Continued on page 128)

The Baptist

The Secret

IN ONE of our northern cities is a Bible class numbering more than 2000 young women. A few years ago it enrolled less than a dozen. When asked how this growth had been brought about, the leader laid emphasis first upon prayer. She said in substance that she never undertakes anything without talking about it with her Father in heaven. It is as natural for her to talk to him as to her earthly father, and when she does so she is as conscious of his nearness as she is at other times of the bodily presence of her father in the flesh. So first she talked this matter through with God. Then she got the young women in the class to join with her in prayer for four minutes each morning and evening. "The rest," she added, "was easy." Admittedly this leader has many exceptional qualities. But her secret is one which any Christian may possess.

The idea of this teacher is that anything is possible with God. Nothing is too hard for him. And the seemingly impossible becomes a fact when men and women live in his spirit and form all their plans only after seeking his will. Prayer is the key which unlocks the door to power. It is the inner secret of success in all religious work.

If individual Christian lives are to be rich and complete, if plans for winning men to Christ and to the church are to show real results, if the great aims of the New World Movement are to be attained, it will be because we are all in the attitude of prayer. He who touches the throne will at the same time touch the heart of man. Jesus prayed. He prayed often. He spent whole nights in prayer when important events pressed him. The disciple is under no less necessity than his Lord. When we appreciate that at the best we are human and finite, that our greatest resource is God, that the task is his and that we have the high honor of being workers together with him and that whatever is done must conform to the divine plan if it is to succeed, our constant striving will be to come into harmony with him and to know his will for us.

Sometimes it happens that our own plans and purposes bulk too large in our minds, that we take upon our own shoulders too great a share of responsibility, that Christ and his power and will have too small a place in our calculations. Then we should stop until we recognize again our inability, impotency and unworthiness, our tremendous need for God and his righteousness and power. It was not an incidental command that Christ gave his disciples that they were to tarry at Jerusalem until filled with power from on high. That is a perpetual command. We fail when we neglect it. We bring disgrace rather than honor to his name when we rush on in our own conceits, even in a worthy cause. Every individual and church needs power, not man-power nor financial power, but divine power—the power which alone the Holy Spirit can give and does give when we comply with the divine requirements.

No man can observe the movings in the churches of our Northern Convention without seeing that there is an increasing recognition of this fact. Now and then the feeling is expressed in some significant utterance. Our churches are engaged in a magnificent program. But programs get us nowhere unless they are filled full of God. Organization is of little avail unless it is organization of individuals and churches which are in touch daily with our Father above, which know what it means to be "in Christ" and which are serving men here and abroad because they are looking on the world with their Lord's eyes and are touched with his compassion.

The modern world loves crusades. It delights to tilt with vast evils and to solve age-long problems. Will it stop long enough to hear the Christ saying, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you"?

A Federal Department of Education

SIGNS multiply that the Knights of Columbus are to be active in politics, especially in lobbying for or against measures which are approved or disapproved by the Roman Catholic priesthood.

An instance of this may be seen in the reported statement of Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty that a nation-wide protest is being organized against the Smith-Towner education bill. This bill provides for a federal department of education and appropriates $100,000,000 for the promotion of educational activities in the various states. Of the total, $7,500,000 would be used in a fight against illiteracy and a like sum would be spent for the Americanization of foreign-born residents; $15,000,000 is set aside for a federal program for training teachers and $20,000,000 for health education.

Mr. Flaherty asserts that the bill is an attempt to introduce politics into education and finally into religion, constituting in the latter phase a menace to the parochial school system of the Roman Catholic Church. "Under the cloak of introducing a socialistic paternalism in the federal government," he says, "the measure aims ultimately to have all private and public education at the mercy of a federal bureaucracy. It is absolute Prussianism and expensive Prussianism. This bill, if enacted, will simply provide another large crop of political plums. The Knights of Columbus oppose it not so much on religious as on patriotic grounds. It will bring about collision between church and state, which is just as much to be avoided as a union between the two."

In answer Senator Smith of Georgia asserts that the only opposition to the bill comes from certain organizations within the Roman Catholic Church. "This bill," he says, "seeks only to Americanize aliens resident in this country, to secure teachers for rural schools, and to properly safeguard the health of school children."

The fact that there is almost unanimous approval of the bill on the part of educators all over the country, that the various states see in it no attempt on the part of the federal government to assume functions which do not properly belong there, and that the aims set forth are admittedly excellent, has long before this convinced most of us that the bill should pass. The purpose is not to lessen democracy in education but to increase real democracy. Its intent is to give American children everywhere something like equality of opportunity in education, to see to it that the scholar in the little country school stands nearer on a level in this regard with his cousin who has all the advantages of the big city school. In the past there has been a ridiculous disparity in this regard and remedy can only come through some federal legislation such as is proposed. The further purpose to give illiterates in this country a greater opportunity can be opposed only by those who in some way find illiteracy or inability to speak the English language an advantage to their organization.

The words, "a menace to the parochial school system," touch the heart of the opposition. But we do not believe that intelligent Catholics wish to admit that educational standards in their schools are not now or cannot be made high enough to conform to any standards which may grow out of such a federal experiment. And we are sure that Protestants will not relish the covert threat contained in the hint about a possible collusion between the church and state. They will hardly agree to an understanding under which trouble will come if in any respect the wishes of a hierarchy are opposed.

The only opposition to this bill seems to be ecclesiastical. If there is to be lobbying by the Knights of Columbus against it, there may be others who will feel like showing their senators and congressmen that the country as a whole approves of the ends sought. Such a bill should not be defeated because those who believe in its purposes are silent.

The Road to Interracial Trust

DR. DATTA is one of India's great Christian leaders. In a recent letter to an American friend, he is reported to have said: "There is hardly any interracial trust and goodwill."

How well he has characterized present conditions! A list of countries where his statement is true would read like the contents of an atlas. Whatever interracial trust there is has come from the personal devotion to Christ as Lord of those who now possess the spirit out of which comes abiding goodwill. Such trust is not political nor economic but religious. It is not merely religious; it is Christian. It is not merely nominally Christian; it is found in those and comes from those who in a vital way hold Christ as personal Lord.

The New World Movement is a positive, progressive effort enlisting all Baptists who desire interracial trust in a campaign to secure additional Baptists, to per-sue all to have Christ as Lord and to send the news of Christ as Lord to all who do not know him.

The peace of the world is endangered as we hesitate to complete such pledging to the movement as is necessary if we are to do our estimated share. The success of various attempts of governments to disarm and of organizations of many kinds to bring peace and harmony among nations are largely limited by the amount and quality of interracial trust which we can make virile. An ounce of positive, active belief in Christ as Lord is worth a pound of nominal Christian belief. The races call. God waits for us.

The Question of Immigration

WHENEVER the question of immigration comes up in Congress there begins a debate which makes clear the fact that there is yet much misunderstanding of the subject. There are several possibilities and all of them need consideration.

First, there is the policy of leaving the law as it is. "Economic forces have guided our immigration thus far. Let us go on as in the past." Some are saying, "When hard times come, immigration automatically stops and many return to their foreign homes."

Second, there is the policy that would stop all immigration for a number of years. "Let us keep them all out and Americanize those who are here."

Third, there is the policy of regulation. "Let us admit, only as many as we can employ and assimilate." When bad industrial conditions develop, reduce immigration and if need be, absolutely stop it. This is a flexible or elastic plan.

As the discussion proceeds, this third plan seems to be finding increasing support. It has two forms. The first, embodied in the Johnson bill of February 4, 1920 (H. R. 12320), would leave decisions as to the amount of immigration to the Secretary of Labor under certain restrictions.

The second form is that sponsored first by Congressman Welty in May, 1920, and in December, 1920, somewhat changed, by Senator Sterling (S. 4594) and Congressman Vaile (H. R. 15164). All three bills propose an Immigration Board which shall make scientific investigation of facts as to industrial and economic conditions and as to assimilation. The board is directed to admit annually from each people only so many as it believes in the light of the facts can be wholesomely assimilated and steadily employed without endangering normal American standards of living and labor.

Selfish considerations often enter into the matter. Thus employers may wish unrestricted immigration because it will furnish cheap labor, while organized labor may wish restrictions so that wages may be kept up because workers are scarce. It is conceivable that some churchmen, also, might wish immigration to be without restraint because of the annual additions which come thereby to the church population of certain communions.

Present indications are that Congress will not approve a stopping of immigration. And yet some form of restriction is sure of passage if not at this Congress, then at the next session. At the present writing much favor is given the plan which would admit each year a number of immigrants equivalent to a fixed percentage, say 5 per cent, of the number of people from that country now living in the United States. There have been among our missionary-statesmen for years men who have been urging just this plan.

The essential question is that of assimilation. Experience in the war proved that many people come to the United States and never become in any respect Americans. They form parts of foreign communities in the nation, and are therefore a constant menace to American institutions. There is room in the United States for all who can within a reasonable time take their proper place as Americans: there is no room for those who cannot. The open door should be forever closed to those who look upon America, not as an opportunity for life and freedom but as a field upon which to exploit old-world ideas and hatreds. The plan finally adopted should take due notice of this. America must be true to itself even if in so doing it is compelled to close its gates to millions who wish to pour through them.

Stop the Leaks

THE church covenant generally adopted by Baptist churches in the territory of the Northern Convention has this final pledge which each church member solemnly takes:

"We moreover engage that when we remove from this place, we will as soon as possible unite with some other church where we can carry out the spirit of this covenant and the principles of God's Word."

This Week's Prize-Winners

The Stewardship of Knowledge

FORAGING through the shelves of a great university library my eye fell upon the caption, "The Moral Obligation to be Intelligent." The emphasis is in point. There is a compelling spiritual obligation as well that Christians be sympathetically intelligent as to the facts concerning God and his world.

We are stewards in this regard quite as much as concerning time, talent or possessions. Poor stewards indeed are we if we sit back in sluggish indifference or pre-conceived prejudice, unwilling to look all the facts in the face. As disciples of the Great Teacher it is ours to seek out the facts, whether they be ugly or beautiful, and let their reality have access to our consciences. One of the flimsiest excuses ever uttered by the human tongue is: "I didn't know!" Though courtesy restrains us, we always feel inclined to say, "Why didn't you know? That was your business!" The sin of those unfortunates, who when called into account hear Him saying: "I was hungry and ye gave Me no meat," is openly betrayed by the empty excuse, "When saw we Thee hungry?" They hadn't been cordial to the facts as they were. They hadn't been zealous to be good stewards and keep in touch with the real things. Eyes had they but they saw not! The church of God will go forward, conquering and to conquer, in the measure in which her people are moved by the spiritual obligation to be intelligent.

Malone, N. Y.

IVAN M. ROSE.

In the case of thousands of members of Baptist churches, there is an appalling disregard of this obligation. In most cases, the people themselves are responsible for this. And yet it is possible that an occasional pastor is not guiltless in a matter which is causing a serious leak in our denominational numbers.

No one who professes to be a Christian will dispute the value of the church and of church membership, but this judgment is based upon a vital active membership and not upon a non-resident type of fellowship. Membership in name only is a travesty upon a sacred relationship honored of God. There is need of a clear recognition of the fact that such membership, even for sentimental reasons, is a loss rather than a gain both to the church and to the individual. In the long run, pastors and deacons will be doing good service by encouraging all non-resident members to affiliate themselves at once with churches in the places of their residence.

* * *

There is a suspicion abroad in the land that the small group of men who control the production of films for commercial moving picture houses have inspired much of the current talk about "blue Sunday laws" and the indignant outcry against such, in order that in the reaction they may be able to bring about Sunday legislation which shall help to line their pockets with gold. The mere suspicion should help to make Christian people as "wise as serpents" in dealing with this whole matter.

Smiling Back at God

"AT the heart of all our trouble and sorrow let unconquerable gladness dwell."

In a framed snapshot before the writer stands a man with white head bared, and hat held high in a long-familiar and characteristic salute of glad recognition. The little camera caught a smile which it had taken a long life of discipline to perfect; a smile radiating cheer and courage and strength; a smile which bore the slow, sure reflection of the Source of all its joy.

Under its earlier influence a little child stood one day before a closed door swallowing the tears of the helplessly misunderstood, and struggling to control the muscles of her face and achieve a smile. Hesitating, she stood hand on latch. "This must be what it means to become a woman," she told her small self, and passed through the door, head up and smiling.

There are many closed doors through which we must inevitably pass, doors of pain, sorrow and adversity; and there are those who watch our progress and judge somewhat of our God by the smile we gave Him in passing. Is it one of everlasting endurance and patient resignation, or are we giving our Father—even though it be through tears—the smile of courage and trust and "unconquerable gladness?"

"Where grows the golden grain?"

In a furrow cut by pain."

Newton Center, Mass.

GRACE MITCHELL EVERTS.

The Three Great Things in Life

Ransom E. Olds, a well-known automobile manufacturer of Michigan, in the authorized interview which is given below, urges that employers revolutionize the world for good. He says he lives for the good that he can do

AS a manufacturer employing thousands of men, I believe that the only way to revolutionize the world for good lies in the hands of the heads of industry and employers in these United States. The reason why America has been so wonderfully successful is because we have had men who wanted to do great things. The American business men are a hard-working class of men. To reach success, their minds are on the job, not for eight hours per day, but in most cases night and day. I have become more tired and weary over business problems than I ever did while working at the bench.

A SLOW START

My father and mother endowed me with the principle of the Golden Rule—to live and let live, to deal with men as I would like to be dealt with if I were in their places. When I started to learn my trade at 50 cents per day for the first year, and later when I finally secured a foothold in business and had seven men working for me, I had to borrow many times and do without money myself in order to pay them. Little by little I took up the slack in the rope, and finally, after years, began to see daylight. When I could see enough daylight ahead to support a wife, it was my good fortune to marry a devoted, Christian-principled girl, and we started out together on life's pathway. She had always attended church, but I hardly knew what the inside of a church looked like. While working at the bench I agreed with all my fellow workers and pals that the church-going people were a lot of hypocrites and only wanted to get me in for what they could get out of me; but to please my wife—which every married man should try to do—I went with her to church.

DISCOVERS GOOD CHURCH PEOPLE

I went to church four or five years before I could really believe that there were so many good people inside of the churches. Gradually I became convinced that their guiding thoughts and teachings were to do good—to help those that were worthy of help and good fellowship. I tried to make myself believe that this could not be true, but finally just had to see the real meaning of the work of the church and the teachings of Christ. Then it dawned on me that I was doing wrong to stay on the outside and that my place was on the inside—to take my part and lend a helping hand. I finally wanted to belong to such a wonderful organization for good and right teachings and counted it a great privilege.

We have heard a great deal about

Love—Labor—Religion

I BELIEVE in three great things in life—love, labor and religion:

Love—that divine gift that annihilates time and distance and disposition, and that gives to us the way to forget self while doing for others. It is in us before we come into the world, is all that we can take out, and is the best we can leave behind us.

Labor—the honest endeavor of head, heart and hands, through which we give expression to a desire to accomplish something worth while in the world.

Religion—faith in the ever-presence of God, the Source of all good: our Hope and Comfort that gives us courage in life, destroys the fear of death, and has prepared a greater reward than anything we could conceive of here on earth.

Ransom E. Olds.

the troubles between capital and labor. If all on both sides were Christian-principled men, do you suppose you would hear anything?

In my acquaintance with the business world I have been brought in contact with thousands of manufacturers and business men from Maine to California. I find that about nine-tenths of them are Christian men. Now, suppose that all of our employers in the States would put up a notice to their employees to the effect that their companies would favor church-going or Christianprincipled people. Would not this be a wonderful starter for good?

I am not in favor of forcing religion on anyone. Whether any man, woman or child should become a church member or a Christian is entirely for him to decide, but I do believe that we should use our influence to get him to know the truth and to see what the church is doing for the world and the people of this land of ours. To meet the church members as brothers and sisters on an equal plane would give him a different look at life and would help him to be happy and contented and to learn how to apply the Golden Rule. The church society has not always been perfect, but generally nine-tenths good is a fair average.

THE WORLD'S ONLY HOPE

The only hope to save the world from its present chaos lies in getting the people to see or realize what true Christian principles will do for them. Our schools and colleges are teaching too much the idea that the world owes men a living. It should rather teach that the world owes them nothing without honest work and endeavor on their part. Not until they understand this are they entitled to promotion or success. It is the only permanent foundation to success and a life worth while.

Mr. Employer, let us all arrive at a common basis where we can let our light shine and use all the influence we have for the good of all. Let us benefit our employees by showing them the way.

JOY IN CHRISTIAN DEEDS

All there is in life for me now is the good I can do the world. I could have retired perfectly independent years ago; but the joy I get in business is to furnish a livelihood for men who want to help themselves honestly. The army of men coming from our factories—knowing that I am helping them to earn an honest living and to get ahead in the world—is more to me than all the dividends I receive. I want to help the honest man and those that are ready to do the right thing. I want to help the upright man to succeed, that he may properly care for his family and loved ones. The wonderful joy I have in doing Christian deeds is my happiness.

SALTILLO—WHERE THE MEXICAN BAPTIST SEMINARY IS LOCATED

Following Baptist Trails in Mexico

The Baptists of Mexico are a Bible-loving folk, well grounded in the fundamental doctrines of our faith. In the building up of such strong groups of believers with a Christian conscience lies the country's hope

BY CHARLES S. DETWEILER

WE entered Mexico at Nuevo Laredo, which town, since the advent of prohibition in the United States, has more than ever taken on the appearance of a rough frontier settlement. Non-conforming Americans who cross the line in search of personal liberty have made this and other border towns notorious for drinking and gambling. But the forlorn feeling of finding ourselves in these uncongenial surroundings was soon dispelled by the hearty greetings of our Baptist pastor and, a few hours later, by meeting our church members in their weekly prayer meeting. There were sixty or seventy people of like faith, many of whom were poor in this world's goods, but able to share with their American visitor the things of the spirit.

Senor Cavazos, their pastor, has been twenty-nine years in the service of the Home Mission Society, and during that time, on his meager salary, has succeeded in raising a family of eleven children, who are with him heart and soul in the cause of Christ. Certainly his family is a great reinforcement to his ministry. If we were to count in the number two sons-in-law, he could claim thirteen children, and in addition there are some grandchildren. An unmarried daughter is principal of the large public school of Nuevo Laredo, and a son-in-law is a prominent merchant. All of this easily leads one to meditate on the far-reaching results of our missionary enterprise in the formation of a new Christian community with new institutions and traditions.

The day before my arrival Senor Cavazos had returned from a visit to some of the Baptist churches along the railroad line, in company with our general missionary, A. B. Rudd. From Monterey northward to the border and eastward to Tampico is the section where the Baptist cause is strongest and where our churches have been longest established. One village, Santa Rosa, is practically Protestant. In Villadalmia the mayor and several of the leading citizens called upon Dr. Rudd on the occasion of this visit and asked him to give a temperance address at a meeting which they would organize.

EFFORTS TOWARD SOCIAL REFORM

Though one sees no immediate prospect of the triumph of prohibition in Mexico, it is interesting to observe the first efforts toward social reform. One day the following notice appeared on the front page of the leading paper of the capital:

MUSIC VERSUS BULL-FIGHTS

Tomorrow—Tuesday—at 7:30 p. m., in the amphitheater of the National Preparatory School, the distinguished artists, Carmencita Perez and Senor Taltavul, under the patronage of the National University will give a concert of Spanish chamber music. The public of this city, which each Sunday affords the shameful spectacle of crowded grand-stands applauding like demons the cowardly martyrdom of a noble animal, ought to attend the concert of Tuesday night in order to begin the process of purging their soul from its villainy. The members of the Spanish colony ought to patronize this concert, which for a few moments will redeem the Spanish name from its infamous connection with bull-fighting; and those who are fond of good music ought to go to listen to the first-fruits of an art which tomorrow will invade the world with a force like that of Russian music, for these two races, the Slavie and the Spanish American, are the only two youthful races—the two races of greatest importance for the future of humanity.

JOSE VASCONCELOS.

Rector of the National University.

On another page of the same paper there was a carefully prepared article on the cost of the lottery to Mexico. There are nine authorized lotteries flourishing in the republic, and figures were given to show that a total of twenty million pesos, or ten millions in American money, are spent by the people of Mexico each year on these lotteries. When one considers the wretched condition of the public schools and the neglect of public works for lack of funds, these twenty million pesos represent an inexcusable drain upon the resources of the people.

Monterey is the strongest evangelical center in Mexico. Here are three self-supporting churches, of which the Baptist is the oldest and strongest. It was a pleasure to attend its well organized Sunday school in the morning and to speak to a crowded house in the evening. Out of this church have come our leading pastors. Although our church is the strongest, we have by no means the best or largest building. The church has outgrown its present quarters and is collecting money toward a new building. In addition to a budget of about $2500 per year for pastor's support and missions, the church raised last year $1000 extra toward the new building which they ought to have in the near future.

Saltillo, the next important station on the railroad, is in the territory of the Southern Baptist Mission. Here is located the seminary for training young men for the ministry for both Northern and Southern missions. This year there are thirty-nine students in attendance. On Wednesday night we spoke in the church to an interesting congregation. Besides the usual complement of church members, there was on one side of the church our fine body of young ministerial students, and on the other side, by special invitation, an equally large representation from the Methodist girls' boarding school. It is not surprising that some of our young men after graduation find their wives among the girls of this school.

NEED OF ADDITIONAL SCHOOLS

As a result of our three years' experience in the support of one common Baptist seminary, we have come to the conclusion that it is necessary to establish a boys' preparatory school, because most of the young men who come to the seminary require considerable academic work before they are ready for their special biblical studies. It was the sentiment of all the leaders of our work that as soon as possible we should have a similar school for the training of young women as teachers and Christian workers. When one sees the difference on the mission field between those pastors whose wives have been educated in Christian schools and those who are not so fortunately married, one can appreciate the wide outreach of our work, which includes the building up of Christian homes as well as Christian churches.

All of the cities of Mexico have had a phenomenal growth during the last ten years. Due to revolutionary disturbances, multitudes have flocked in from the country. It is estimated that Mexico City has now a population close to a million. There are but three evangelical denominations carrying on an active missionary propaganda—the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist, and we regret to state that the Baptist is the weakest numerically of the three. The Methodist is the strongest in number and equipment. It has two churches, one of which has a congregation that is more than twice as large as any other in the city. We Baptists could not ask for a better location nor a better field—in a large district that includes all classes of people. Our only regret is that our equipment is so small that we are not beginning to meet our opportunities. After one-third of a century of effort in the capital we have nothing to show save a church of about 300 members. We are not ashamed of the church. It is made up of people of unusual intelligence and influence. In our membership are a number of public-school teachers, two young men who are medical students, two who are civil engineers, one who is chief government statistician, one who was a general in the revolutionary army, and one who is now a leading senator in the present congress. The church maintains a number of missions, and each Sunday morning one of the officers of the church reads off a long list of members, assigning three or four young people to attend and help at one of the seven or eight missions in the outlying suburbs. Our Sunday school is not larger because we have no more room for expansion. The evening congregation now fills the church building. It is hoped that help can be secured to enlarge the present building. In the crowded tenement district in which the church is located, there is an urgent call for some form of social settlement work in the name of Christ. Here are hundreds of children roaming the streets without schools and without playgrounds. What might be accomplished if only we had a medical clinic and a kindergarten and a day school! And then, in addition, the playground activities furnished by the Y. M. C. A. in co-operation with us! It is high time that we Baptists wake up to our opportunities in this great city and fill a larger place in it.

BEST EQUIPPED HOSPITAL IN MEXICO

One does not have to move long in missionary circles before hearing the praise of our Puebla hospital. A prominent member of the government recently took his wife from the capital to Puebla to put her under the care of Dr. Conwell. He said that he had heard that we had the best equipped hospital in Mexico as well as the best surgeon. After looking over our plant, he readily conceded the former claim. He left his wife, he said, and hoped that after her treatment was completed he could confirm the second statement. We have no doubt of the result. This hospital is making friends for us and breaking down rapidly the opposition of the Catholic clergy.

In Puebla also the Woman's Society has a day school and the beginning of a normal and Bible training school. Our church here is flourishing and is a source of embarrassment to us because of its insistence upon the need of a larger building. Building operations are costly, and we shrink from the large expenditure that is necessary if we are to put our work on a proper basis in this city; but some day soon we must face the issue. A good hospital and school create evangelistic opportunities, and a large church building thus becomes a necessity.

From Puebla we went still further south to Tehuacan, and met an interesting congregation of the common people, mostly of Indian extraction—earnest, simple-minded souls. Everyone, with a Bible open, was following the speaker as he expounded the Word. Indeed, were we to carry away one outstanding impression of the Baptists of Mexico, we would say that they are a Bible-loving folk, well grounded in the fundamental doctrines of our faith.

At present Mexico is at peace and
(Continued on page 110)

Interesting Prayer Experiences

A LAYMAN asks if THE BAPTIST wishes stories of interesting conversions from those who are not ministers.

We surely do. The only reason that we do not send personal letters to a multitude of such men and women is that we do not have their names. We hereby give a general and also personal invitation.

On another subject also we wish short stories. Have you a story on "An Interesting Prayer Experience"? If so, write it out in from 250 to 300 words. Rewrite it until you have told your story in the most vivid way. Then mail it to us. After a few such are on hand, we shall print them.

There are whole volumes of inspiring material of this kind in the minds of our church members. Will you not share with the rest of us? This is a part of your Christian service.

THE EDITORS.

A Plain Statement of China's Plight

The following statement is prepared especially for the readers of THE BAPTIST by the China Famine Fund. If desired, relief contributions may be sent through the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City, marked, "For China Relief"

THE famine that has devastated five provinces of northern China and doomed some 15,000,000 people to death by starvation, unless helped by the outside world, is rapidly approaching its worst phase.

Two and a half months of bitter winter weather, endured without warm clothing, without fuel and shelter and without nourishing food, has undermined the resistance of the majority of the sufferers to the point where only actual relief carried on by outside nations can save them.

CHURCHES THE ONLY HOPE

Church co-operation reached a high level, which is sure to be maintained till the famine calamity is overcome, in the nation-wide observance of China Famine Sunday—a day observed in thousands of Northern Baptist churches with special prayers for the victims and collections in their behalf. The greatest hope for the starving Chinese is bound up in the churches of the United States, which through their mission work have developed an interest in and a feeling of responsibility toward China. But so tremendous is the need that to save the situation in China every church and

A FATHER SELLING HIS SON FOR THREE BALLS OF DOUGH

Sunday school member in the nation would have to assume the stewardship of one hungry Chinese.

The relief work undertaken by the American Committee for China Famine Fund—the committee of 130 representative men and women appointed by Pres. Wilson—for a long time has functioned with remarkable efficiency. Churches and auxiliary societies, merchants' associations, national clubs, and Chinese groups have organized committees to co-operate. An all-American committee has been appointed in Peking to take charge of all funds raised by the committee here, to apportion it among the various field relief societies, to audit it and account for it. Funds are being cabled to this committee, and money is turned into actual relief within a few days' time.

MISSIONARIES ARE RELIEF WORKERS

The personnel of the relief societies working in the field is comprised almost entirely of missionaries. So much depended on having the right sort of people working in this capacity that the relief societies sent an appeal to missionaries all over China asking them, where possible, to come north and give assistance. The response to this appeal furnished an adequate number of workers.

These societies—six in number—were operating to their full financial capacity before the appointment of the American Committee. But because of the tremendous scope of the work their efforts were greatly limited. Now with the backing of the American Committee, they are every day broadening their work, making each dollar allowed them save a life for a month.

The North China International Society for Famine Relief last September surveyed the entire famine district, and the result of its investigation has formed the basis for all relief efforts now being carried on by the various societies in the field. This survey showed that there were in the famine area 14,284,000 persons wholly dependent on relief efforts, these sufferers being divided among the various provinces as follows: Chihli Province, 8,076,500; Shantung, 3,106,000; Honan, 2,508,500; Shansi, 451,000; Shensi, 106,000.

RECEIVING FOOD AT AN INTERNATIONAL FAMINE RELIEF COMMITTEE STATION

The committee men in Peking report that China is doing her utmost for her stricken people. Railway tariffs have been raised, and the increases applied to relief. The Chinese merchants of Shanghai alone have contributed over $2,000,000 to relief work. Chinese merchants of the Straits Settlement are reported to have given $1,800,000 for the help of suffering countrymen. Li-Hsun, late governor general of Kiang-si, left $500,000 for this purpose. And the Chinese students throughout the country have borrowed the American "tag day" in order to save the lives of famine victims.

The last-named effort shows how thoroughly the Chinese who have attended school in America have picked up our customs. At a "tag-day" held in Peking recently by the students of thirty-five colleges, 300,000 tags were distributed. Airplanes dropped appeals. There was an automobile parade and half a dozen other kinds of parades. Everything done was typically American, including the manner in which passers-by were button-holed and made to give to the famine fund.

AMERICA THE NATURAL HELPER

Millions have been raised in China, but the extent of suffering is so great that native relief efforts will not cover one-tenth the need. Help must come from the outside world, and the greatest part of this help must come from America.

It is fitting that America should assume the major part of this burden, as there has been a relation of friendship between the American and the Chinese people and their governments which the Chinese have never extended to any other people or government. America, through her mission efforts, has given to the Chinese for purposes of education, and health some $12,000,000 in a single year. She has built hospitals, schools and churches. She has assumed a great responsibility toward China. The holding of this responsibility demands its fulfillment.

The Chinese did not look abroad for help until they found themselves unable to cope with their situation. For three seasons the Chinese farmers, who comprise nearly 90 per cent of the population of the stricken area, struggled bravely against adverse conditions before they admitted defeat. A single crop failure in China precipitates a condition which would be termed famine in any country of the Occident. Yet the Chinese have known three of these failures in succession, following closely upon a flood that did damage estimated at $100,000,000.

A condition unparalleled in world history has followed. An area containing more than 100,000 square miles is as barren as a desert. Forty million people are without nourishing food, protective clothing, fuel or shelter. Of these, 14,000,000 are doomed to perish within the next couple of months unless we save them. The death rate has mounted into thousands per day.

RELIEF ON THE WAY

For more than six months the bulk of the people have subsisted on leaves, grass, chaff and bark. They have tried to emigrate, but adjacent provinces, in self-protection, have been compelled to turn them back. Winter has immeasurably increased their sufferings. In their despair they are now killing their children and committing suicide. In many instances people are driven to such a point of desperation that they are selling their children as the only means of saving their lives.

Percy C. Leslie writes: "Children are being sold—usually girls, of course; and a wife has been reported to us as being sold for 40 cents. One family of five parted with a girl for $5 and started out in search of some place and plan to live. The mother became so disheartened that she beat to death her two remaining children and then took her own life. The man, driven to extremities, returned home and hanged himself. So perished the entire family."

And this is typical of a hundred reports which have come from reputable sources in the famine area. Distress such as has never been known in this country and hardly in any part of the world before is spread through five great provinces. Unless America comes quickly to the aid of her sister republic, what Charles R. Crane, American minister in Peking, has described as "the world's greatest calamity" is inevitable.

Finding the Mark

BY GEO. E. BURLINGAME

THE Naval Ordnance Department announces that the mathematicians of the department have worked out a formula effecting a slight change in the form of the projectile used in the six-inch naval gun, with the result that the range of the gun is increased by two and a half miles.

One of the problems which perplexes and baffles the preacher is how to make his preaching of the gospel effective. If it constantly or frequently falls short of the mark, a careful study of the problem of formulating the message may result in such changes in form as will increase the range of the projectile.

That prince of preachers, Paul, persistently formed his message around the cross. "The word of the cross is to us who are being saved the power of God." The heart of his gospel was "the word of reconciliation."

The first disciples who ever followed Jesus were led to him by a testimony concerning his sacrificial atonement for sin. The amazing paradox of a Lamb bearing a burden inconceivably great—the sin of the world—inspired faith in those two pioneer Christians who heard John speak and followed Jesus. Many and diverse, even derogatory and discreditable, were the opinions expressed concerning Jesus in the days of his flesh. John the Baptist with rare spiritual insight discerned his true character and declared the real significance of his presence among men: "Behold, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world."

The Adrian Plan of Evangelism

An outline of the plan used in a successful evangelistic campaign is presented here. The writer believes that right methods will bring results anywhere

BY THOMAS J. HOPKINS

REVIVAL! This is what the churches of Christ need all over the country. The First Church of Adrian, Mich., has just experienced such a blessing, and the plan pursued is here outlined by the pastor with the modest hope that it will encourage other leaders and churches to engage in similar efforts. All ages have felt the impact of the evangelistic spirit, and people ranging in age from ten to seventy-six have made profession and have been or will be baptized. Many Baptists who have been associated with the church for years in labor and worship, but who for some reason had not transferred their membership, have done so in recent days; and so have Christians of other communions who had worshiped with the church for long, but had never united with it.

GETTING READY

Such meetings are always preceded by preparation. Realizing this necessity, the pastor came home from his August vacation with definite plans for the whole year, including the series of meetings which have just closed. A continuous effort was made to deepen the spiritual life of the church, especially in the mid-week meetings and Sunday services. In the week-day services several series of studies were given: one on "The Prayers of Jesus," intended to strengthen the prayer life of the people; and another on "The Social Life of Jesus," selected to show how the Saviour introduced religion into the common relationships of life. And the pastor preached on such subjects as, "Can We Know God?" "The Hand of God in Great Hours," "The Cost of Discipleship," "Redeeming the Time, or, The Present Opportunity," and "The Untroubled Heart." Coming closer to the time of the special effort, he preached on such topics as, "The Cross and Crown of Evangelism," "The Uttermost Service," and "The New Year and the Old Vow." He gave snatches of such sermons to the Bible school also and in the young people's societies, so that by the time the series of meetings began the whole church was aroused and ready.

At the business meeting immediately preceding the special services, the pastor asked the church whether it felt like asking all organizations, societies and individuals to give the meetings the right-of-way by having no conflicting gatherings or social functions. The church went on record with a strong request, which was cheerfully acceded to. Then the minister asked all such organizations to call an early meeting for the purpose of deciding in what definite way they would assist the services. Window cards were placed in the stores, hotels and other public places, and invitation cards were given out for the use of all. A large young people's choir was organized; the Bible-school orchestra was asked to assist with the music; and the church requested one of its own members who leads the singing in the Bible school to take charge of the music during the special effort. And all was set for a home talent revival.

The services were held in the large chapel, and the first night it was filled with people. Special musical numbers were provided for each meeting, and always some gospel hymn was impressively rendered, for such meetings are not very well served by classical music and vocal gymnastics. The pastor began calling for groups at the first service, and several leaders stood and announced the ones that were present in a body. Each night this was repeated, and there were always several organizations in attendance. This feature helped to assure the large audiences.

PREACHING TO THE CHURCH

Before the meetings began the minister stated that, God helping him, he was going to preach to the consciences of men and women, and he did this. His messages for the first few nights were to the church, on such subjects as, "The Permanent in Pentecost," "Are There Holes in Our Nets?" and "Binding the Hands of Jesus." After some of these discourses the pastor called for testimonies, but insisted that anyone who could not say more than, "I have been a Christian for forty years: pray for me that I may ever be faithful," should remain silent till he could find a testimony which was a leaf from some recent experience. He said, "People ask, 'What is the matter with the prayer meeting?' I say that nothing is the matter with it. It is the people. When they have something to say, the mid-week meeting will be the most interesting spot in town. When a man can get his nose out of the newspaper long enough to read his Bible a few minutes before he starts to prayer meeting, and meditate upon what he has read and pause a bit to pray, such services will take on new life, and people who neglect them now will be unable to stay away."

FISHING FOR MEN

By this time we were ready to turn our attention to the unsaved. The pastor selected a number of people to meet with him for conference. He said that he wanted personal work to be unobtrusive; and therefore he advised that people be seen between services, or that the workers come to the meetings with those they wanted to help, or that they take a seat by the side of a friend to whom a word could be said at the proper time. The pastor assured the audience that he wanted to be absolutely fair with everybody, and that no one would be embarrassed in any way. The result was that people attended the meetings who had never been seen before in such gatherings.

It is the minister's judgment that sinners cannot be made to appreciate the gospel till they are made to see the law. One man has said that this generation needs to make a pilgrimage to Sinai. With that statement the writer is in fullest agreement. Men need to see once more the cloud which was the frowning brow of the Almighty, the lightning which was the flashing of his anger, and to hear the thunder which was the utterance of his deep emotion. So the pastor preached first on such topics as, "Are Your Sins Forgiven?" "The Great Separation," and "The Leper and the Lord." After people were under conviction, he cheerfully turned to such topics as, "The Storm-Still of the Mind," "Taste and See, or, Tested by Experience," and "The Miracle of the New Man."

It was not long till Christian people began reconsecrating themselves, giving public evidence of it by standing or by lifting their hands. Christian people who had not as yet identified themselves with the church and whose attachments were outside the city were urged to give the pastor their names to be read from the platform, if they intended to transfer to the Adrian church. Several did this, thus putting their larger influence with the church in its effort to reach the unsaved. It was not long before the outsider began to move also. The meetings were intense, not with excitement, but with interest. The Spirit's presence could be felt in every service. One night a traveling man, a Gideon, not only said "Amen" himself, but led the audience in saying it with him. The interest was high when the meetings closed, which will make it incumbent upon leader and people to sound the evangelistic note in the regular services of the church up to and including Easter.

AT THE END

The results of a meeting such as the Adrian church has had cannot be fully tabulated. The pastor has as yet made little effort to count heads, but there will be a large number. A class will be formed out of the junior department of the Bible school, and all who go through with the study and conferences and exhibit sincerity, coupled with understanding, will be baptized later on and added to the church. One of the best results is the fact that the church is now more fully committed to evangelism as presented and accentuated in the effort. The Adrian church is and has been for a long time a good church, and has always done good work; but such evangelism has not been one of its tried and trusted methods. The city itself, while it is a place of churches and church-goers, especially on Sunday morning, is comparatively indifferent to evangelistic efforts. Most of the churches are practically deserted at night, which is the best time for reaching the outsider. This pastor has always believed that the normal mood of a church should be evangelistic, that the church should be winning people all the time and that, in addition to this it should make special efforts at seasonable periods in each year.

Now the few who in the church had the evangelistic passion have multiplied into an army. This preacher believes that any other church can be similarly led with tact and persistence and sound methods. One cannot blame churches for not wanting certain kinds of revival efforts. Would anybody want them? There are kinds of evangelism which need redemption themselves. Such brands have hurt the splendid business of soul-winning. But here's to the pastor who has the fine ideal and who adheres to its claims till the object of his desires is crystallized in a change of conviction and attitude on the part of God's people, whose hearts are right and who only need to be shown. The normal utterance of the church is, "My heart's desire and prayer to God * * * is that they may be saved."

Following Baptist Trails

(Continued from page 106)

there is little heard of the operations of bandits. It is a remarkable fact that with the fall of Carranza there ceased at once all attacks upon trains, and since that time it has been possible to travel freely in all parts of the republic without fear of assault. What has become of the bandits? There are whispers that some of them are occupying positions of importance in the new administration. It would not be strange if the new president should follow the tactics which Porfirio Diaz used so successfully, and convert many of these bandits into officers of the law. We cannot expect Mexico to be delivered at once from all its evils, but there is improvement enough to encourage us.

Bill-Boards and Bible Texts

BY ALBERT SIDNEY CREGG

A FITTING use has been found for some of the bill-boards in Cleveland. They now carry gospel messages in place of advertising that has little to do with the gospel. The boards vary in size from 10x50 to 20x30 feet, and the letters are two feet high. They are illuminated at night by overhead lights set in reflectors. It is estimated that a quarter of a million people see these texts each twenty-four hours.

It is impossible to go along the streets where these bill-boards are located without noticing them. The main bill-board is in the midst of theater advertisements and is easily visible from the Public Square, which is the center of all things in Cleveland. It bears the selection: "WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY?"

"THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH, BUT THE GIFT OF GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE THROUGH JESUS CHRIST, OUR LORD"—Romans 6:23.

There are other boards with texts on them at Woodland Avenue and Fifty-fifth, Euclid and Fifty-fifth, and at Euclid and Ford Drive. Additional locations are under consideration. Each board bears a different text, which is changed quarterly.

The expense of this undertaking is borne by a person of wealth whose name has not been given to the public. F. M. Barton, editor of the Expositor, made the contracts with the bill-board people and pays the bills. He has been warned that if he tells who is doing it there will be no more money forthcoming. He says that it will cost about $5000 to keep the texts on the boards for a year. A similar plan of "bill-board" preaching is being carried out in St. Louis and Philadelphia. One effect in Cleveland has been to draw the fire of critics who think the sign-painter has misquoted the Bible, and of others who are sure the texts were chosen for their especial benefit so they would quit their wicked ways.

The Bulletin Board

The Blue Law Clamor

A sane editorial in the Philadelphia North American on the Sunday question closes thus:

"The clamorous cries that are heard about a threatened revival of the blue laws and passage of a constitutional amendment to enforce a Puritan Sabbath are merely propaganda by the liquor interests and the promoters of commercialized amusements. Their warning that the crusade may follow the course of the triumphant prohibition movement is absurd. Prohibition was for years the demand of the religious forces, but it came to realization only when the overwhelming facts of economics had created an irresistible sentiment in its favor. There is not, and will not, be any such force behind any blue law program."

Have You Read the Bible?

Some time ago the British Weekly contained a discussion on the subject, "Books We Think We Have Read," in which something was said about Bible reading. Dr. A. T. Robertson of the Southern Theological Seminary thereupon wrote that he had placed the matter before his large New Testament English class, 250 in number, and found that less than one-third of them had ever read the Bible through. Probably the same thing is true of the students in our colleges. How is it with the active members of the churches? Certainly preachers and Christian workers should have an accurate working knowledge of the entire Bible.

Unexpected Result of Prohibition

Complaint comes from St. Louis that as a result of prohibition there are not now enough dead bodies for use in the medical colleges of that city. Fewer paupers have died in the cities than in any previous years. This winter also there have been fewer unidentified drunks frozen in the alleys back of saloons, where they had been kicked after their money ran out, or in the park, where they had stopped to rest. So the schools find it hard to get bodies for dissection purposes.

On the Defensive

A writer in a recent number of Unity tells of attending church during the summer months of 1920 at a summer resort on the Maine coast and hearing sermons by ministers of many different faiths. Some of them were orthodox and some were liberal. After a time he became aware of an interesting but disquieting feature which seemed to mark all the sermons. "In their preaching," he says, "they were men who were on the defensive. These preachers seemed to think it their duty to defend, to justify, to vindicate. Through their utterances sounded the note of alarm. . . . We remember with gratitude one preacher who, with clear eyes set to the front, offered his message without apology." He is convinced that this experience throws some light on "how terrific has been the assault of the modern mind upon the traditional tenets and practices of Christianity, and how successful has been this assault in beating down even the best defenses of the church." He concludes by asserting confidently that the churches and ministers are not defeated unless they will themselves have it so.

Do You Want Foreign Student Speakers?

The foreign student council of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. is prepared to furnish speakers from among its foreign students for churches, schools and civic organizations. Competent speakers from many different countries are available, for missionary societies, young people's organizations and Sunday schools. As a rule, notice should be given about ten days previous to the meeting. In most cases these speakers do not expect more than carfare, or, if their address is given in connection with a dinner, the courtesies of such an occasion. Address L. C. Hollister, Room 1600, Central Y. M. C. A. Building, Chicago. Phone Central 6789.

A Call to Repentance

The editor of the Business Chronicle, a financial journal published at Seattle, Wash., is the latest to essay the role of John the Baptist. Listen to him:

"What a sick world needs just now is an old-fashioned religious revival and a baptism of pentecostal fire. A little more regard for the sacredness of contract, and then a lot of self-denial and intelligent expenditure of both time and money. Kick out the sociological quacks, read the Sermon on the Mount, and go back to work. All will yet be well—for those who survive."

This advice was not directed at preachers, but it may have some significance for them.

Send for a Copy

The Program Number of the Bible Society Record contains a fascinating report of the various agencies in all parts of the world of the American Bible Society. This number is intended for popular distribution. A copy will be sent free to any one making request. Address the American Bible Society, Bible House, Astor House, New York City.

Gospel Ship Has Electric Lights

Recently Rev. John A. Foote, temporarily in charge of the gospel ship on the Inland Sea, Japan, wrote: "The greatest need at this time is an electric lighting plant for the boat. A new set of awnings which are necessary can be made from the old sails, but the electric lights must be purchased. It is a real need, and we are hoping that through the kindness of some one it will be met before long." It is gratifying to note that this appeal was heeded. Shortly after Mr. Foote wrote the letter, Mr. B. S. Pearsall, a prosperous manufacturer of Elgin, Ill., came forward with an offer to equip the ship with an adequate electric lighting system.

Baptists in Siberia

There are not less than 450 Baptist churches in Siberia, with a membership within the Siberian Baptist Union of 200,000 to 300,000. In many villages the whole adult population is seeking baptism, expelling the priests of the Greek Church, and pleading with the Baptist leaders to send preachers to take their places.

What Will Baptists Do about It?

In Himeji, Japan, the Baptists have one of the most beautiful schools in any country. Unfortunately, it is being rapidly hemmed in by a government school and a large factory which has recently installed powerful motors. This makes it impossible, because of the noise and crowded conditions, for the school to remain longer in this location. A fine piece of land has been secured in another part of the city at a reasonable price. The Woman's Society has been able to meet more than half of the cost, but must have immediately $6000 to complete the purchase. To insure the future permanence of the school, which is one of our strongest evangelizing agencies in Japan, it has been necessary to incur this expense.

Regarding Russians in Germany

More than 100,000 Russians, formerly war prisoners, have remained in Germany. At least 100,000 more have fled from Russia to Germany since the war. Among these people something like 200 converts out of the war camps are now preaching the gospel. Perhaps tens of thousands of Russians were converted in the war camps. The Evangelical Tract Society in Kessel furnished five Testaments and other literature for every Christian war prisoner returning to Russia.

A Wonderful Achievement

Published figures show that the missionaries of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Convention baptized 95.5 per cent as many converts during the last seven years as they baptized in all the years since the board was organized up to seven years ago. From 1845 to 1903—fifty-eight years—there were 10,586 missionaries of the board commissioned. During this time they established and worked in 38,793 home mission stations, and baptized 82,742 persons. During the next ten years—1903 to 1913—practically the same missionary force was in the field, at work in 27,498 stations, and their labors resulted in the baptism of 187,299 converts. During the last seven years—1913 to 1920—almost exactly the same number of missionaries have been at work in 25,094 stations, with 255,210 baptisms to their credit!

In the first fifty-eight years Southern Baptists contributed for home missions $3,520,000. During the next ten years they gave a total of $3,584,000. Within the last seven years the total grows to the amazing sum of $5,337,000! In other words, Southern Baptists have during the last seven years given three-fourths as much to home missions as they did in the sixty-eight years preceding.

"A Great Heart of the South"

We have just received and immediately read "A Great Heart of the South," which is a biography of Dr. John Anderson, a medical missionary to China. It is a charming book by Mr. Gordon Poteat, teacher of New Testament in the Baptist Seminary at Shanghai. It is easy to read and will enlarge the heart of anybody who reads it. We commend it to young and old, and believe that it will prove a better missionary document than almost any missionary study book. This young man was a genuine missionary before he went to China. He is a real human and a true man. His work was cut short by accidental drowning before he had been two years in his chosen life work, but his influence survives. The book is priced at $1.25, and is published by Doran.—Baptist Record.

Religious Book Week

The suggestion is made that during Religious Book Week, March 13-20, pastors should preach on some theme showing the influence on character and life of religious reading, and should perhaps name to their congregations the five books which have influenced them most, or perhaps an even larger number, which people would do well to own and to read. Many great men have acknowledged the influence of particular books in their lives, and stories concerning these might be used in the Sunday school or the young people's meeting. People's reading is of the first importance, and the church has an opportunity, if it will use it, to help shape the character of such reading.

After Thirty-seven Years

The following paragraph from L. W. Cronkrite paints so vividly the progress of Bassein, Burma, that one cannot help but feel the thrill of it as he reads:

"Just thirty-seven years ago the writer left Bhamo in upper Burma, where he had spent his first two missionary years laboring among the Kachins, work then wholly new, and where he had witnessed the first two baptisms ever ministered among that people. In December, 1883, there were just eleven Kachin Christians in the world. There were no books in their language; there were no schools; the natives had no idea of sanitation and cleanliness, and their bodily untidiness was almost indescribable. This year at Mandalay I met 208 delegates, men and women, all neatly dressed, from the Kachin church of today—and there were more than a thousand other Kachin Christians in the hills whence these delegates came. They now have much of the Bible in Kachin and I saw them use a Kachin hymn book with 370 hymns in it. They have a dictionary, a grammar, school books and a newspaper.

At the convention there was a choir delegation of twenty-one young people from the Lahu country, the section near China, and very far away, who had walked 300 miles, in addition to having a long ride on the train, to attend the meetings. Can you grip this next—you good people who were never out of sight of a church steeple? (Only a score of years ago almost nobody knew that such a race existed.) Twenty years ago there was not a Christian Lahu on the planet, nor ever had been. Today our Lahu church has over 12,000 members! Across this country of Burma our God is marching on!"

Chicago Tract Society

The annual meeting of the Chicago Tract Society was held on Jan. 17. The new secretary, Rev. G. K. Flack, who takes up the work as successor to the late Dr. Jesse W. Brooks, was introduced. Emphasis was placed upon the need of suitable literature in all foreign languages to counteract the dangerous propaganda by radicals and revolutionists as well as that gotten out by false religious teachers, many of whose standards of morality and whose practices are far below the American ideals and Christian standards. During the year, thirty-two missionaries, speaking twenty-seven languages and distributing Christian literature in thirty-eight languages, have been in the employ of the society.

Dr. Garvie on Training Ministers

Dr. Garvie, in his speech at the opening of the new Congregational Theological College at Edinburgh, made some rather daring suggestions about the future training of ministers. He had, for example, come to the conclusion that ministerial training hitherto had been too linguistic. With all respect to Greek and Hebrew, it was possible to claim so much of the time of the student for linguistic studies that other studies that were important to fit them for the ministry were allowed to fall into the background. A much larger place should be given to practical training, and especially to training men to be effective preachers without a manuscript. Dr. Garvie also attached great importance to the study of social problems. The church would need to be ready to stand in jeopardy and to take hazards in dealing with the great social problems of today if it was to exercise its influence on the world.

Lenten Preaching

The Continent (Presbyterian) has an interesting editorial in its issue of Feb 17 on the subject, "Shall We Observe Lent?" It notes the common objections that the season is a Catholic observance, etc., and finally concludes:

"From whatsoever cause it may be, Lent today appeals singularly to the imagination of the American masses. Asked at 'Lenten services' to listen to the gospel of man's need and Christ's salvation and the saved man's debts of duty, the people are found readier to hear than at any other period of the yearly calendar. And surely it would be a sad shortcoming for any church, when men are prepared to listen, not to have anything to say—or stubbornly to reserve what it knows it ought to say for some other occasion of its own whimsical choice. In a word, if in your community people seem to expect churches to hold special services during Lent, then by all means hold them."

Baptist churches are very generally using the season before Easter as a time for special evangelistic services.

Forty-two Nationalities in the University of Chicago

The present year marks the largest enrollment of foreign-born students in the history of the University of Chicago. There are 463 such students, representing forty-two countries. Russia leads with 100, while China comes second with seventy-five. Canada and the Philippines follow next in order with forty-four and thirty-nine respectively. Other countries represented are: Japan, thirty-four; England, twenty-seven; Germany, eighteen; Hawaii, eleven; Poland, eleven; Sweden, ten; Italy, seven; Scotland, seven; Bohemia, seven; Austria, seven; India, six; Greece, six; Norway, five; Mexico, five; Rumania, five; Finland, four; Hungary, four; Armenia, three; Syria, two; France, two; Palestine, two; Porto Rico, two; British West Indies, two; Turkey, two; Denmark, two; Ireland, two; and Guatemala, Alaska, Lithuania, Slovakia, Panama, Costa Rica, Egypt, Korea, New Zealand, Belgium, Spain, and Caucasia with one each. Efforts are being made by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. of the university through their friendly relations committee, co-operating with churches and other agencies, to extend all possible courtesies to these students. It is hoped that in this way they may come to know the best things in American life and become better acquainted with one another.

Shortage of Episcopal Ministers

The Living Church devotes a recent editorial to the matter of the shortage in the ministry. Apparently the Episcopal Church is suffering from the condition which afflicts other denominations. We quote:

"The shortage is acute. According to the figures in the last Living Church Annual we have 5987 clergy, of whom not to exceed 5000, and probably less, are engaged in parochial and missionary work; and we have 9031 parishes and missions to be served by these 5000. Worse still, last year's gain in parishes and missions was 445, while the gain in clergy was but twenty-seven. The fact that the clergy are aided by 3139 lay readers makes it possible for fairly regular Sunday services to be maintained in nearly all the parishes and mission stations, and the clergy divide themselves among the layman churches and give the sacraments as frequently as they can. It is a makeshift, but it keeps things going; how inadequately appears from the fact that our communicant list scarcely grows at all, and in many dioceses the increment does not equal the annual loss by death and otherwise."

In 1916 the five eastern seminaries of this church had 256 students; today they have 179 students.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for March 13

THE LORD'S SUPPER

Matt. 26:14-30. Golden Text: 1 Cor. 11:26

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The Lord's supper, as it is popularly called, was instituted on Thursday of Passion Week according to the accepted chronology. The next day Jesus was crucified. Thursday was also Passover Day. The Passover was to the Jews what the Fourth of July is to modern Americans. It was their national birthday commemorating deliverance from Egyptian bondage, and observed for generations and still observed by all loyal sons of Israel. It was natural, therefore, for Jesus to merge the commemorative supper of the Passover into the commemorative supper of the new covenant.

The Lesson Taught

The Lord's supper is a symbol of commemoration and communion.

Commemoration

All language is made up of symbols. The letters of the alphabet were originally symbols, and words are symbols. The soul seeking to express itself needs symbols which words cannot supply. Therefore the richest language of the soul is found in the two ordinances of the church—baptism and the Lord's supper. The Lord's supper is the language of commemoration. The broken bread and the wine poured out are a perpetual memorial of the sacrifice of Jesus which culminated on the cross. When Jesus said, "This is my body," he doubtless meant that the bread was to be commemorative of his body; and when he said, "This is my blood," he intended that the wine should speak to them as a memorial of his blood. It is deeply regrettable that religious teachers became such literalists as to take the wine for the actual blood of Christ, and thus foisted upon a large section of Christendom the crass magic of the mass. It would be as sensible to say that the stars in our flag are the actual states. Paul caught the true significance of the supper when he wrote to the Corinthians instructing them to observe it "in remembrance of Christ."

It commemorates the eternal law of sacrifice which reached its highest historical expression in the cross of Christ, and it is a memorial of the new covenant which superseded the old covenant of Moses. It speaks the language of grace. It is the pictorial representation of that text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor that ye through his poverty might become rich." It is a monument of love incarnated in Christ, and of righteousness revealed in Christ, and of redemption wrought in Christ, and of Christ himself freely and joyfully giving his life for the salvation of mankind. All other commemorations pale before this one. Christ-mas and Good Friday and Easter and Ascension and all other holy days in the ecclesiastical calendar may be chronologically commemorative of great events in the life of our Lord; but the sacred and orderly observance of the Lord's supper, with its simple elements and rich symbolism, is spiritually commemorative of the very heart of God.

Communion

It must ever be remembered that the Lord's supper was originally an oriental symbol. Social eating and drinking among orientals meant more—incalculably more, than it could possibly mean among western races. It meant with them the closest bond of friendship. That is the reason the early Christians were exhorted "not to eat with a brother who walked disorderly." In the light of the sanctity and fellowship symbolized in the upper room supper, the treachery of Judas was all the more devilish. No wonder the disciples in consternation and dismay exclaimed, "Lord, is it I?" when Jesus made the startling statement that one of the men eating with him was a traitor. Judas by eating with Jesus violated every law governing an oriental guest. His spirit and act were the quintessence of treachery. The Passover was an honored institution of fellowship, and the Lord's supper instituted on the night of the Passover feast symbolized the closest communion among men. Therefore, as the record has it, "Satan entered into the heart of Judas" at the supper, for nothing but the Evil One will account for such a diabolical act.

"The breaking of bread," in the church of the Acts of the Apostles, was the symbolic expression of the fellowship of believers with one another, as "the prayers" were the expression of the fellowship of believers with God (see Acts 2:42). But the fellowship or communion was the one great thing which the coming of the Spirit at Pentecost had produced. Paul in writing to the anti-social members of the church at Corinth reminds them that "the cup of blessing which we bless is a communion of the blood of Christ, and the bread a communion of the body of Christ" (1 Cor. 10:16): that is to say, it is a fellowship based upon the sacrifice of Christ. This fellowship is the type and norm of universal brotherhood which is so much in the mouths of men today. No fellowship is possible or permanent apart from the sacrificial spirit. The sacrificial spirit is incarnated in the bread and wine of the communion. Therefore the Lord's supper in the calendar of church events should be the one solemn and joyful service of public worship through which the true fellowship of the Spirit finds utterance in the fitting and expressive language of the soul.

When Is a Sunday School Graded?

By F. F. PETERSON

THERE seems to be considerable confusion in the minds of many of our Sunday-school workers as to what constitutes a graded church school. The mere grouping more or less loosely of pupils of the same size or approximate age is not sufficient. Use of the new uniform lessons does not make a graded school. These lessons are confessedly a compromise between the old uniform and the graded idea. They do not recognize with enough detail the essential mental and spiritual differences existing in the various stages of child development. Mere abbreviation of Scripture passages and changing of the subject of the lesson do not in any case alter the heart of the lesson, which may be splendidly adapted to one age and not to another. In an attempt to select only such lessons as may have universal application, the committee has greatly restricted the range of biblical truth presented. The graded school uses other lessons than these.

It must be confessed that the present graded lessons may not be the final word on curriculum. But for actual results in biblical knowledge, scope of truth taught and spiritual results, experience shows them to be superior to any other lessons. In the next few weeks there will be discussed the value of the graded school, the methods of grading and the changes necessitated by such grading.

At the outset we should know when a school is graded. A school is graded when it is departmentalized. The departments of a graded school are as follows:

Cradle roll—to the fourth year; beginners'—four and five years; primary—six, seven and eight years; junior—nine, ten and eleven years; intermediate—twelve (optional), thirteen and fourteen years; senior—fifteen, sixteen and seventeen years; young people—eighteen to twenty-four years; adult—those matured.

This graduation is called the three-cycle plan. Formerly the twelve-year-old was considered in the junior department. But with this child developing more rapidly, today it is thought wise to put him in the older group with which he is associating more and more.

(Continued on page 128)

The Chimney Corner

The Madonna of the Corn-cobs

YOU will not be connecting corn-husks with prodigal sons from this time on, for when once Chee Moo has slipped into your heart, as into mine, you will feel with an unforgettable thrill that it is not every day one may meet a madonna face to face; and you will know she is a madonna even if she is not exactly as Raphael painted them: for who is to say that the baby must always be held in the crook of an arm, with a softly veiled head bending over him? If Chee Moo chose to strap hers on her back, it was simply from custom immemorial, and also because her arms had other duties.

The mother of a savior—ah, if a high hope, a poignant dream, an endless pain—"Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born, And not within thyself—thy hope will be forlorn. The cross of Calvary thou lookest to in vain If within thyself it be not raised again."

And Chee Moo, like the Virgin Mary of old, "kept all these things and pondered them in her heart."

Aside from this mysterious pondering, her life was essentially different from 10,000 other Chinese mothers, married in their middle teens. But it is well to bear in mind that the source of the brooding dated back to a short cycle of stupefied days in a mission school. Utterly unwilling to attend, she had nevertheless been swept inside those doors. Convinced that learning was beyond her, she simply "sat"—a stolid, solid little lump of Chinese clay. But there is a Potter who can mould anew; and in those six short months, unseen by human hands, he did his skillful best with Chee Moo. Not that she ever could actually read or write or add—there was barely time to master such practical arts; but as long as she lives she will never forget the surprise of that moment when she first saw a roomful of other girls reading—Chinese girls like herself—and not only reading straight ahead, but knowing enough to turn the page at the proper time. Now that was learning for you! The crisp flapping of those pages did as much for her soul as the magic of hymns, the fragrance of cleanly lives, and the quiet hum of prayers. The teachers were patient with one so utterly clumsy and hopelessly dull. She lacked the skill to put into words those strange desires surging in her heart. No one knew the polished beauty growing underneath her crude exterior, like some rare mother-of-pearl. So when she failed to return the following term, the teachers said it was as well: the new girl who filled her place was clever.

Braced by this short contact with a new world, Chee Moo was married into a stiffly conservative family. She was much complained about: her feet were ridiculously big; her trousseau was lamentable; her tongue-tied lips belied the queer light in her eyes—bah, what a choice the go-between had made! And her first child was a girl. The bored father named her Slightly Undesirable, as a delicate hint to the gods about female children in general. Then came a second daughter. Wrathfully he named her One Too Many, and beat Chee Moo for pampering the little cooing bundle surreptitiously. Then in regular yearly succession came three other daughters: Big Nuisance, Another Mouth and Miserably Mocked—this last because the tantalized family had given a gorgeous feast to the gods shortly before the arrival of number five, and when one has paid good cash, one expects a return.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Yet Chee Moo, at the age of twenty, surveyed her five plump daughters with secret pleasure. Not a day passed but she concocted sweet visions of these little creatures writing on sheets of paper, crisply flapping the pages of books, tilting back their yellow faces and singing of the gentle Jesus—but with every vision she wondered how it should ever come to pass. Her own career in education was considered a fatality. The family would hardly countenance turning out five more such incompetents. Then came the birth of Wonderful Ability; in her eyes exactly such a gurgling, cooing bundle as the other five had been, but the grandparents and the proud father and the very neighborhood went wild. A son! A son was born! "And his name shall be called Wonderful . . ." There was a feast such as had never been under that roof-tree, with quaint presents—caps trimmed with little looking-glasses to drive away the evil spirits, and small shoes with furry cat's paws to keep the little boy from slipping. It was all sheer nonsense to Chee Moo, who said patient, tender prayers to the unseen god of the Christian school, and who regarded this sixth child with curious envy. Ah, those five other unloved babies, were they not exactly as precious?

And then one day, in the midst of the perpetual admiration which fawned around his tea-rose face, Chee Moo saw astonishingly the unutterable advantages of having a son: he could become—a savior—nothing less. Over and over she considered it. The word of an elder son, was it not almost law? Well, as he grew up she would breathe into his ear such opinions, such desires, such visions that he would save the five little unloved daughters from her own wasted fate. She would fill him full of argument for female education, full of seasoned judgments, until he would put his honorable foot down hard, refusing to let five stupid, empty-headed sisters idle useless days in an inner courtyard. O, she would find the words, never fear—the very words. True, she was stupid; but there were years and years ahead. With zealous passion she clutched him to her breast, and the others failed to notice that the wistful brooding in her eyes came only as she watched her aimless daughters hobbling on bound feet round and round that inner courtyard.

And then, the famine! She had not counted on any grimmer foe than family opposition. But hunger proved no respecter of madonnas with pondering hearts. Cruelly the fall and early winter wrenched prop after prop away from her brooding. First there was no rice. Then there were no beans. The family pig was led to market and sold. There was no tea, and no soup. They sold the cooking utensils and the furniture. They chopped up the wheelbarrow for firewood, and burned the very gate-posts. It grew ghastly. For weeks she foresaw the inevitable verdict: "There are too many hungry mouths under this roof-tree." That could only mean that Miserably Mocked must be sold—

"No! No!" she cried, "I will eat a little less myself."

"You can't eat less than you are eating now," they taunted her with fiendish spleen, for by January, 1921, there were only corn-cobs left. One ate them mashed in a bowl, with leaves and roots—unsavory, watery, horrible! It was the result of no rainfall, two harvests failing.

Patiently she pleaded, guilefully, and then frantically, but to no avail. With horror in her heart, she saw the wan little Miserably Mocked carried off in a basket. There was food the next day, such as it was—almost the last for sale even in the near-by town; but she could not swallow anything so dearly purchased. The horror of it was that she knew too well that there were four girls left. Girls were coin in the realm. She used to stand in the doorway and watch them—their quaint pig-tails dangling down their backs, their ragged clothes unbelievably patched (actual garments had long since been sold), their pinched little faces so appealing.

"I've got an awfully all-gone stomach," One Too Many would whisper to her mother, rubbing a puny hand over the all-gone spot.

"S's'h!" the poor woman would hiss in an agony of fear. "Can't you make believe you've had an honest-to-goodness bowl of rice, honey? Just close your eyes all four of you, and gulp hard—hard!"

Like this—as if it were a mouthful. Then think of something else right away. Pretend you're little schoolgirls, in a row—bright little pupils in the school of the Christian's God. Here's a bit of bark to chew on, but don't—don't tell the Honorable Ones of your hunger. They might—"

Her voice trailed off. She could never put this dread into words. Yet the four little sisters understood. So they huddled closer together in the wintry sunshine, shivering, their arms around Wonderful Ability—he who was to be their savior, if—

It went from bad to worst. One cannot eat such food forever. All through that village, and a hundred others, people drowned themselves in wells, and children died, among them Big Nuisance. The Madonna of the Corn-cobs had such a stricken look on the day when the missionary came to inspect that village, officially, that he made particular inquiries of her, and the dream of a life-time was told brokenly. "They were to have been scholars," she wept, pointing to the little weakened children.

With warm sympathy he comforted her with the wonder of heaven where the Son of God would have already gathered such little wandering souls to teach them himself. This was news she had not dared to dream; but pain lingered in her eyes. There were still three left on earth—starving bits of humanity.

"I know!" he said, and hurried away to send his report post haste to America. Even as he wrote it a whimsical verse of Stevenson's chanted in his ear:

"It is very nice to think
The world is full of meat and drink,
With little children saying grace
In every Christian kind of place."

Ah, but were they? Were they?

And at the end of his report, as a tragic reminder of fifteen millions about to die before spring, he added:

"Who gives an alms feeds three: Himself, the hungry neighbor, and Me."

puffy cereals from boxes that need no cooking. Sometimes for supper we would "hitch our ark to a star," as father called it, and go off into the cool sweet woods for a picnic supper. It was like a little slice of heaven-on-earth in there, with the sleepy birds twittering sleepily and the sunset turning the ferns into gold leaves. In our church there are two dear old shut-in ladies to whom I take magazines and nasturtiums from the garden and things like that when I'm home. As I feared they might be missing me a wee little bit, on one picnic I took two tin boxes with me into the woods, lined them with soft damp moss, and then filled them with tiny ferns growing right out of the moss. Mother helped me pack the boxes properly, and then we sent them to my Old Dears by parcel post. And would you believe it, those ferns lived until after Christmas?

Daytimes were exactly as much fun as evenings, only busier. Father and Bill played ball along the mule path with Jake. Then in clean shallow places in the canal we'd all go in bathing. Mother and Timothy picked flowers on shore, so that we always had a centerpiece for my meals; and sometimes, if we couldn't tell the name of a certain flower, we couldn't have another mouthful until we'd looked it up in the botany! This was great fun, for we were always ravenous at meal-time. Bill filled specimen boards with the queerest bugs that ever walked on six legs (or four, or however many they have). I don't like bugs very well, and I hate to see the beautiful moths skewered with a pin. But Bill loves them so himself that he is never cruel, and I think that if he never becomes a detective he will make a wonderful naturalist—like David Livingstone, you know, who walked into the deepest jungles in the heart of Africa and had more adventures than anybody else I ever knew. I suppose, of course, you've read "Livingstone the Path-finder," haven't you?

So we spent brim-full days and wonderful nights, until one noon when Timothy drew himself out from his glass of milk, leaving a comical white mustache around his lips as he said to father, "Say, Mr. Noah, I'm waiting for that flood!"

We were so amused! But that night it didn't seem nearly so funny, for it was suddenly like the story in the Bible—the rains descended and the storms blew and beat upon that house (boat). This was toward midnight. We were awakened by hearing the wicker chairs blowing around over the deck like giants fighting each other; and then the awning flapped wildly, and the wind began rolling cans and cups off the shelves in my neat little kitchen. We flew around closing port-holes and lashing the chairs together, while the rain slithered against the deck and awful thunder banged against more thunder up in the sky. We huddled together in the cabin, and I was afraid it might be the end of the world. I cried. But just then the frightful

(Continued on page 127)

The Young Reserves

The Log of the "Flying Pig"

CHAPTER IV

NO doubt you are a boy reader and wishing that Bill was writing this story instead of me. I don't want to seem at all conceited, but maybe you won't mind me so much after you cast your bright blue eye (that's quoted from a professor father knows) over the following abstract from Bill's "log," first page:

"June 25—Set sail on canal boat the 'Flying Pig,' 2:17 p. m., thermometer registering 87° (F.). Ship 30x73 feet. Draws two feet water. Cabins small; deck space fair. Mule has fleas. Kicked me with hind legs."

The rest of Bill's "log" is exactly as jerky and technical. Who cares about thermometers anyhow? But Bill's diary is simply plastered with temperatures, for he insists that is very important from a sailor's point of view. I know there is much room for improvement in what I write, but at least I manage to make real sentences in between the periods.

Both Bill and I had supposed our ark would travel rapidly—that the banks would really fly past, so that we would grow dizzy watching them! But with one provoking mule ambling lazily along the tow-path, the banks can simply be memorized before they disappear. Indeed, the following is one of our favorite games after supper: We sit on deck side by side. Father indicates two trees fairly far apart, and when we come to them we are "all eyes" trying to see everything there is to see. Then father whistles, we shut our eyes, and each tells what he saw. You would suppose we would all see exactly the same things, but our lists vary amazingly. Mother is the most observant of us all, but Timothy manages to spot the most tucked-out-of-sight objects. Once he saw clothes-pins on an empty clothesline, way off across some vegetable patches, and another time he saw a robin getting a cherry off a tree; but his dearest queerest "sights" are fairies sprinkling diamonds on top of the waves, or little angels dabbling up the sky with sunset dyes!

Bill and I are keeping bird lists of the birds we see. Here is mine (perhaps you recognize the same birds when you see them): Crow, robin, flicker, woodpecker, swallow, bluebird, yellow warbler, wren, swallow (they sit on the telegraph wires and look exactly like notes of music on a score! Don't you suppose that if we played them on the piano they would sound like "Praise God from whom all blessings flow?" I do!), goldfinch, cat-bird, phoebe, cedar wax-wing, owl, oriole, grackle (they sound exactly like rusty wheelbarrows creaking along!), bobolink, gull, and sparrowhawk. Bill's list is even longer because he does not have to do the cooking!

I may as well tell you about my adventures as a cook and get it over with. I'm not proud of myself. In the first place, cook-books tell the most "whopping" lies—really they do! Wouldn't you suppose that minute muffins and minute tapioco could be made by a hop o' my thumb, in the twinkling of an eye? Not a bit of it! I know, because I've been trying all the recipes that sounded quickest; but they take hours—simply hours, and taste peculiar when they're done. So mother came to my rescue and said we were to live on fresh vegetables bought from some "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" in the villages through which we pass; also quarts and quarts of fresh milk, fruit, and all the things that make people healthy (and wealthy and wise!). Breakfast was no trouble at all—just fruit and one of those nice

The Devotional Life

My Father Knows

"Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."

By WILBUR FISK TILLET

(This new hymn on God's providence is especially adapted to being sung to the familiar tune by Geo. C. Stebbins entitled, "Saved by Grace," which is found in many hymnals.)

MY Father knows my every want;
No help he ever fails to grant
When'er I seek his mind to know,
His will to do, his love to show:
He knows, he knows, my Father knows,
And safe his child where'er he goes.

My Father sees my every need,
His watchful eyes scan every deed;
Nor can I wander from his sight
Whose presence fills my life with light:
He sees, he sees, my Father sees,
And from all ill his child he frees.

My Father hears my every cry,
His listening ears catch every sigh;
Nor can I call to him in vain
Whose power and love my life sustain:
He hears, he hears, my Father hears,
No prayer of faith escapes his ears.

My Father cares, he cares for me,
However low my lot may be;
However great, however small
My burdens be, he cares for all:
He cares, he cares, my Father cares,
His children's burdens all he bears.

My Father loves with love so strong,
It fills my heart with grateful song;
Nor life nor death nor depth nor height
Can hide me from his loving sight:
He loves, he loves, my Father loves,
And safe his child where'er he moves.

My Father knows, my Father hears,
My Father sees, my Father cares,
My Father loves because he knows,
And knowing all, his love o'erflows:
He sees, he hears, he cares, he knows;
With love for all his heart o'erflows!

A Wise Son

"A wise son heareth his father's instruction." Proverbs 13:1.

THE nation has no asset greater than a generation of wise sons.

Behind a generation of wise sons must be another generation of wise fathers and mothers.

Some sons do not profit greatly by listening to the instructions of their fathers because their fathers do not incarnate wisdom in their own lives.

The world quickly marks the son who is wise enough to listen to the instructions of a good father or mother.

Sons may think they know more than their fathers, only to wake up later to find that they knew a damaging amount of worthless things.

Son, listen! If your father has lived a valuable life, allow him to tell you how he did it.

Son, listen again! If your father has made a miserable failure in the sphere of the best things of life, let him warn you, and save you from making as big a fool of yourself.

Father always has something worth giving a son, but only a wise son has sense enough to receive it.

Son, do not go out into the world and buy father's experience. Let father give it to you.—Allen A. Stockdale in Association Men.

Which Is His Body

"The church, which is his body."—Ephesians 1:22.

IT is a deeply solemn thought, and one quick with inspiration and hope, that the Spirit of the living Christ seeks re-incarnation in the fellowship of those who believe in him. In vital reality he would be embodied in the corporate life of our own day. His Spirit would be the breath and motive of all our movements, "the very pulse of the machine." The scriptural metaphor is no remote figure of speech, dimly hinting at the wonderful possibilities of the children of men. It is literally and scrupulously true. The Word is even now seeking to become flesh. The divine Spirit is seeking and claiming human forms in which to manifest his truth and grace. And this mystic embodiment is to begin with his church. The church is to be to the living Christ what the human form of Jesus was 2000 years ago. The church is to live Christ, to express Christ, to give Christ's Spirit visibility in human life and service. The features of its face are to be the lineaments of his countenance. Every line is to be a sign, and the sign is to be rich and weighty in divine significance.

It is an overwhelming claim, and even to whisper it seems a grim presumption. But nevertheless it is true, and the truth can make us free. The embodiment may be only partial, and this because the human surrender is mean. The Lord's consecration may be full while ours is only fragmentary and broken. There may be little or no room for him in the inn. But however incomplete is the embodiment, it is nevertheless most real. The grace of the Lord Jesus can be seen in his church. His holiness may be seen in many a stalwart virtue. His love may be seen in countless campaigns of chivalry and eagerly accepted sacrifice. Christ's pity can be felt in its compassion. His Spirit, going out after that which is lost, can be seen in countless midnight quests, and in prolonged search upon the mountains. The church has her failings, she has her reluctances, she has her petty meannesses, she is often wayward and indolent, and she has many sins, but whosoever will look frankly into her life will find the presence and the goings of the Son of God. He is embodied in countless fair and strong lines of character, and every virtuous feature is the shining of his face. But our risen Lord is in his body, the church, in order that through the church he might become embodied in everything. That is the vast and majestic purpose of the incarnation. He embodied himself in humanity, in order that humanity might embody him in every human interest. In the completed work of his passion everything is to be his body. Every form of human intercourse is to be his body; his will is to be its pulse; its kindling love is to be its inspiration. Common labor is to be his body just as all his own earthly labor was his Father's business. Daily work is to be directed by his Spirit, and all its counsels and purposes are to be drawn from his wisdom. Yes, the lines of labor are to reveal the countenance of the Lord. Such is the process and progress of the incarnation. It is the filling of earth's water-pots with heavenly wine. It is the seizure of all the forms and fashions of human activity and so charging them with his Spirit that they vibrate with his life and express the riches of his truth and grace.—J. H. Jowett.

A Spiritual Magnet

IT is related of Fenelon that he had such communion with God his very face shone. Lord Peterborough, a skeptic, was obliged to spend the night with him at an inn. In the morning he rushed away, saying, "If I stay another night with that man I shall be a Christian in spite of myself." Fenelon's manners were full of grace, his voice full of love, and his face full of glory. The invitation, "Come to Jesus," was in every act. He was a "spiritual magnet." "That," says the Record of Christian Work, "is what God wants us all to be. That is what we all can be, by just yielding up all to him and letting him live again in us. Under no other condition can this transforming power fulfil its mission to our souls. Are you ready for it?"

Prayer

THERE are men moving toward us, money being loosened out for our use, strong wills that are beginning to bend, hearts softening in the inner heart of them, keys already turning in doors that are about to open, as a result of prayer, of which today the praying ones know nothing yet by actual outer experience. A perfect network of unseen lines—in some cases stretching clear around the globe—is converging toward each one of us who prays, weaving out the answers to our petitions. Let us practice more the looking at things we cannot see through faith's eyes.—S. D. Gordon.

Young People's Work

Topic for March 13

WHAT IS REAL RELIGION?

James 1:19-27; John 17:3

"And in this consists the life of the ages—in knowing thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

1. James' definition: "The religious service which is pure and stainless in the sight of our God and Father is to visit fatherless children and widowed women in their time of trouble, and to keep one's own self unspotted from the world."

2. Obedience a test of real religion: "But prove yourselves obedient to the message, and do not be mere hearers of it, imposing a delusion upon yourselves. For if anyone listens but does not obey, he is like a man who carefully looks at his own face in a mirror. Although he has looked carefully at himself, he goes away and has immediately forgotten the sort of a man he is. But he who looks closely into the perfect law—the law of freedom—and continues looking, he, being not a hearer who forgets, but an obedient doer, will as a result of his obedience be blessed."

3. Guarded conversation another test: "If a man thinks he is scrupulously religious, although he is not curbing his tongue but is deceiving himself, his religious service is worthless." What a lesson for the gossip in a modern church!

4. Something practical for every day: Mr. Fosdick says: "There are people who are religious, but whose piety does not involve goodness, nor their faith justice, nor their worship humaneness. * * * With the religious part of their nature they believe that God loves all men, while with the practical side they themselves neglect, mistreat and condemn men. We still need the advice which was given to David Livingstone by an aged Scotchman: 'Now, lad, make religion the every-day business of your life and not a thing of fits and starts.'"

5. A backward glance: Prof. Rauschenbusch says: "Religion in the past has always spent a large proportion of its force on doings that were apart from the real business of life, on sacrificing, on endless prayers, on traveling to Mecca, Jerusalem or Rome, on kissing sacred stones, bathing in sacred rivers, climbing sacred stairs, and a thousand things that had at best only an indirect bearing on the practical social relations between men and their fellows."

6. Looking ahead: "We have on the one side appalling human need, and on the other an immense amount of religious motive power and zeal which are not harnessed to the problems of human welfare. Even yet one of mankind's most insistent needs is the interpretation of religion in terms of service and the attachment of religion's enormous driving power to the tasks of service" (Fosdick).

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organization, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

News

DETROIT, MICHIGAN

"Four years ago Detroit had two Negro Baptist churches. Today we have no less than twenty-eight. Most of these churches are under the pastoral care of men without any training, general or theological. Their ignorance is appalling. My department invited the men in charge of these churches to meet the director for an hour of study preceding their regular weekly conference on Tuesdays. The course followed was an adaptation of the one offered by our correspondence division under the title, 'Practical Evangelism.' The interest in the study was so great that upon the request of the class the time was changed to Thursday so more time could be given. We now spend three hours together instead of one. The first period is given to a lecture on some practical subject and corresponds to a course in homiletics; the second hour is a continuation of the class in 'Practical Evangelism,' and the third and longest period is given to a consideration and outline of the 'Great Doctrines of the Bible.' From fifteen to twenty men attend this class regularly. Their hunger for knowledge is gratifying, and the interest in the class leads the education committee of the union to place value upon this unique type of work. Already three of the younger men have enrolled for resident study in schools adapted to meet their needs" (Arthur V. Allen).

WEST VIRGINIA

"Since my prolonged illness of last spring and summer, I have stressed teacher training in West Virginia, with the result that fifty-nine classes have reported as active within the past twelve months. Twenty-four of these came during and since the October drive. Other classes are in sight, and our goal for the year is 100 such classes.

"For years we have also stressed the standard of excellence, and last spring reported thirty-six schools as having reached the goal. We have an assembly that has been a splendid factor in our denominational work for a dozen years, and last year we launched also a 'Baptist girls' encampment' to supplement the assembly" (A. B. Withers).

NEW JERSEY

"New Jersey had one very successful major institute at Camden, N. J. At least three minor institutes are planned, with several intensive institutes on vacation Bible schools and junior society methods.

"Our summer assembly was a great success. Our total registration was 285, with 222 full-time delegates, and 155 of these received certificates. Our assembly program for 1921 is about ready for publication. We have acted favorably on the suggestions put forth by the committee on the standardization of the summer assembly.

"Leadership training has taken on new life in New Jersey. In 1919 we had but six Baptist leadership classes, reporting thirty-seven pupils. In 1920, up to the time of the leadership training enlistment campaign, we had eight classes with an enrolment of fifty-three pupils. Today we have thirty-one definite classes with an enrolment of 284. In addition to this, ninety-four are preparing for leadership in fourteen community schools, making a total of 384 enlisted and actually engaged in leadership training.

"New Jersey had eleven vacation Bible schools, and hopes to have twenty-five next year. Work in general is hopeful" (O. F. Laegeler).

ILLINOIS

L. H. Koehler writes as follows:

"Two churches, working over my suggestions relative to too many topics and testimonies in proportion to study and service, arrived at the following:

"1. Y. P. meet at 5.30 for good social time.

"6.00-6.20—Luncheon of cocoa, sandwiches, etc.

"6.20-7.00—Study classes—two classes for fall period and four for winter period. Texts: 'Christianizing Community Life,' 'Following the Sunrise,' and 'Making Life Count.'

"7.00-7.25—Meeting for worship, prayer, and testimony.

"2. A combination evening service:

"7.00-7.10—Devotional service.

"7.10-7.35—Study classes, five in number, with average attendance seventy—in small town where thirty had been a very large attendance in the society. Bible: Life of Paul. Doctrinal: 'The People Called Baptists.' Training: Standard teacher training course. Evangelism: 'Studies for Personal Workers.' Missionary: Travelogues through mission fields.

"7.35-8.00—Devotions and business. Secretary report on each class, and a brief report or review from three members of each class.

"8.00-8.30—Sermon by pastor to all."

Our Own Folks

Pittsburgh Letter

By FREDERIC TOWER GALPIN

The Mid-yearly Meeting

At the mid-yearly meeting of the Pittsburgh Association held with the Lorenz Avenue Church, Rev. A. P. Mihm of Temple Church, South Side, was elected clerk. He may be addressed at 75 Onyx St., Mt. Oliver Station, and succeeds the popular Rev. W. Ward West of Sheraden, who insisted on being replaced. Very warmly received was the morning address of Rev. A. J. R. Schumaker, our director of religious education, and the afternoon speech also of Executive Secy. Chappell. The evening speaker, Rev. Floyd L. Carr, new pastor at Wilkinsburg, rendered distinguished service in helping the delegates to plan large things for the Master in intensive efforts leading up to Easter. Bro. Carr himself has a class of about seventy personal workers meeting each week. Others specially called on to speak during the day were the pastor of the entertaining church, Rev. Leonard J. Ramsey, Rev. H. J. Whalen of Greensburg, Rev. F. W. Stanton of Knoxville and Rev. Royal N. Jessup of Shady Avenue, who conducted the convention prayer service. Mr. Henry E. Cole, the chairman, pressed into service during a symposium on the New World Movement Mr. Frank H. Robinson and Rev. Ralph Safford, Rev. Eugene Neubauer and Rev. Charles E. Decker. Dr. W. A. Stanton, orphanage and home secretary, spoke in a happy vein. The audience had the privilege of meeting Miss Leta Stevens, new Americanization secretary, lately come from New York City, and heard with delight of progress made at Forty-sixth Street and Rankin under Miss Lulu Wimpelberg and Miss Luella E. Adams and of the gratifying response to Rev. W. P. Wheeler, first settled pastor at Saltsburg.

The business reports revealed that the association grants aid to a greater number of pastors than ever before, twenty-seven in all, eight of whom are foreign-speaking. Thus $1300 per week is expended. Swedish First Church has been aided to secure an adequate house of worship, and the Slovak Church at Creighton to improve and beautify the interior of its edifice. Steps are taken for a new work at South Library and at Homestead Park, located west of that city. Lorenz Avenue has made such valiant headway through the years that to it, in the person of Dea. Ben I. Davis, eminent labor editor and devoted trustee of the Lorenz Avenue Church, the association presented a deed to the Lorenz Avenue property, which had been held since the inception of the work under the First Church.

Evangelism

Evangelist H. Edgar Shade reports thirty-one professions at Oakmont, his boyhood home, obtained in a short series early in the year. Turtle Creek, M. Neilson, pastor, has received eight new members and has a growing B. Y. P. U. and Sunday evening audiences. Mt. Washington's pastor, Charles Embrey, baptized five recently, and twenty more are in a preparatory instruction class. Five of the young people of that church are away at school studying for the ministry. Carron Street African Church, situated a few blocks west of East Liberty Station, has been much helped by Evangelist T. S. Johnson of Boydston, Va. In the early stages of the series, twenty-four conversions are recorded. Waynesburg, Dr. A. J. Morris, pastor, has arranged for special meetings with Evangelist W. J. Cambron, whose headquarters are near Cincinnati, at Fort Thomas, Ky. Mr. Cambron, in his last meetings near Parkersburg, W. Va., saw seventy-two start the Christian life, most of whom were men. Carrick, just over Pittsburgh's corporate boundary line, also has had a far-reaching revival. Saltsburg received five by baptism. Rev. J. E. Norcross is called to assist in protracted meetings at Wilkinsburg. State Director A. B. Strickland made a fine and valuable impression by his excellent conferences on evangelism. Rev. J. C. Longanecker has been chosen as district evangelist for the Beaver Association.

Y. M. C. A. Americanization

The man in charge of Americanization activities among Italians of the East End is Mr. Rocco Cerchiari, a Colgate graduate and valued member at Shady Avenue Church. Several of the people of that church assist him from time to time in Friday night community meetings held in East Liberty Carnegie Hall.

Lay-Predaching

Two men of Greensburg, Mr. J. J. McIndoo and Hon. J. G. Walkinshaw, now look after Big Sewickley, which interest Dr. George Bailey helped to a new lease of life over a year ago. Their pastor, Dr. H. J. Whalen, says, "I believe in such workers. It is only thus that some fields may be looked after. But for God's sake let us keep them laymen, not ordaining men, however excellent, who go off somewhere for a six weeks' course—men that we would respect more and who would do greater good as laymen." Bro. Gibson, a mill-worker of Ambridge, likewise serves New Sewickley, near Rochester.

Ministers' Meeting

Rev. J. A. T. Marsteller becomes the new president, just after having filled a term as vice-president. Notably strong papers were given in January by Dr. C. E. Hemans, Homestead's pastor and former state superintendent in one of the Dakotas. His theme was "The Labor Problem—Its Solution." He gave his hearers the benefit of his own investigations in the great industrial center where he labors. He feels that some mill-workers are misled by a portion of their leaders. Rev. A. P. Mihm, in a homiletic paper full of good things, deprecated the tendency to twenty-minute sermons. "A short sermon tends to produce a short conscience," Dr. N. D. Hillis, Rev. James E. Darby and Rev. A. M. Gregg are announced as coming speakers.

Detroit Doings

By A. H. FINN

Evangelism is uppermost in the work of all Detroit churches. I cannot attempt to give a roll call: Birkett reports fifty new additions, and Wyandotte nearly as many; Highland Park is in the midst of a large ingathering; Beulah reports seventy new members within the past three months; Woodward Avenue and the First Church are having constant additions; First German, Scotten Avenue and many others—every church, in fact, is reporting gracious results from faithful ministry and earnest prayer.

The work among the Negro Baptists is prospering notwithstanding the industrial reaction. All churches are crowded. The Detroit Baptist Union is doing everything within its power to aid in housing these needy congregations. Already eight congregations have received aid, no less than $100,000 being involved.

Work on the new building (the chapel and Bible-school unit) for the proposed Jefferson-Lakeview Church, which is a consolidation of the Clinton Avenue and Jefferson Avenue churches, is being pushed, and the building is expected to be ready for occupancy in May. Dr. C. M. Carter will be the temporary during the amalgamation period. More than 200 unknown Baptist families have already been discovered in this new residential district. This promises to be one of the strongest churches in Detroit.

The Hudson Avenue Church has called Rev. Robt. White of Brantford, Ont., as pastor. He comes March 1. Many will remember his good work in and about Philadelphia. The Hudson Avenue people have a great building project on, with a change of location to Grand River and Clarendon.

The Maranatha Church has called Rev. Mr. LaRue, but the date of his coming has not been announced. Rev. W. R. Swartwout is serving as ad interim pastor.

Our Polish Mission has been organized into a church of approximately 100 members, with Rev. Jos. Rzepecki as pastor. The pastor is doing a fine piece of work.

The Hungarian Mission east of Highland Park is now housed in its own property, the title being in the possession of the Detroit Baptist Union, which made the purchase possible.

Bethel is the chosen name of the newest Baptist church in the Detroit metropolitan area. It is located in one of the newest residential sections north and west of the Royal Oak Church, on Monier Road. Sunday, Feb. 13, its new house of worship was dedicated. The church was organized in September, lots were purchased in October, and in November a start was made on the chapel. The building was crowded on dedication day. In the morning, Rev. George Dawkins, pastor at Royal Oak, who had been shepherding the new flock, preached. In the afternoon the Detroit Baptist Union officers had charge of the services, with Rev. Z. D. Brown of India and the choir of the Royal Oak Church as the special attraction. In the evening Supt. Gleiss preached.

Light on Two Racial Problems

BY AUGUSTINE S. CARMAN

An event in recent Chicago Baptist history throws welcome light on two ominous race-problems which have been outstanding features even in this time when world problems are endemic. One is the problem of the Jew, and the other is that of the Negro.

Antagonism to the Jew

Antagonism to the Jew is not of Christian origin, for it far antedates the Christian era, appearing in all its virulence in pre-Christian Rome, Alexandria and other ancient cities. Just now, however, the Jew is being charged with responsibility for pretty much everything, from Bolshevism to the boll-weevil; and in that startling new book, "The Rising Tide of Color," we are notified that the colored races constitute a threat to all civilization. Chicago has first-hand evidence tending to mitigate both fears.

activities. With its pastor, Dr. L. K. Williams, it stood sturdily for sanity and peace during the race riots of 1919, and the church held a continuous prayer meeting during those days of peril.

Jewish Temple Now Negro Church

The Pilgrim Church has just entered a splendid edifice, formerly a Jewish temple, the Kehilath Anshe Mayriv. The pastor, Rev. S. E. J. Watson, ministers to about 2000 members, and the church is adding about 1000 annually. Since May 1, 1920, there have been 2112 accessions. This church, like the Olivet, is doing powerful service for the right development of the race at a critical time, and the recent transfer of the temple property gave striking evidence of a noble spirit on the part of its Jewish owners.

When these Orthodox Jews sought a new location, they were offered by a business firm $75,000 in cash for the property without its pews, fine carpets and splendid organ. One of the members proposed ident of the congregation, a layman, offered the closing prayer, thanking God for establishing them in a congregation and blessing them for thirty years, and praying that the divine blessing might accompany them to their new temple. Then he prayed that the same blessing might rest upon those representatives of an oppressed race who were to succeed them. This noble spirit characterized all of the complicated negotiations and was matched by the courteous spirit of Dr. Otto and other representatives of the Executive Council.

This second great enterprise mediated by our Executive Council on behalf of our host of Negro brethren, and involving the largest cash transaction ever undertaken by the council, is a splendid achievement in itself; but it is even more significant for its welcome light on the two momentous racial questions and for its incidental revelation of an unexpected spirit of religious comity which warms the heart and should quicken the conscience.

Activities at the Fifth Avenue Church, New York

A Striking Contrast

An interesting feature presenting a striking contrast was witnessed at a recent communion service in the Fifth Avenue Church, New York City. Dr. Stephen Smith, who reaches his ninety-eighth birthday this month, was received into its membership. Dr. Smith has been one of the prominent surgeons of the country. He had been baptized by his son-in-law, Rev. Walter Mason, formerly a missionary in Assam, a number of years ago, but had not become a member of any church. He made an interesting and discriminating statement to the officary of the church, viz: "I wish to join a church which will allow me the freedom of interpreting Christ for myself. I may not interpret him exactly as you do, nor agree with Luther or Augustine; I may see him a little differently from the picture held by some writers of sacred Scripture. But I must study him with such faculties and aid as God has given to me; I must experience him for myself and be loyal and obedient to such light and experience as I have." He was assured that the church was welcoming just such adventurers of faith.

At the same service the pastor, Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, baptized and received into the membership of the church, John D. Rockefeller, 3rd, Nelson Rockefeller and Laurance Rockefeller, three young sons of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. These lads surprised the committee of deacons not only by their knowledge of the Bible and real experience of religion, but by their interest in and acquaintance with missionary biography and service. They are naively original in the exercise of prayer and give evidence of becoming worthy successors to consecrated Christian parents and grandparents.

Splendid New Building

The Fifth Avenue Church began its building enterprise just as the war became imminent. Had the work been started a year sooner, or had the war been delayed six months, the church would now be in its new building. The increase in all prices will make the building cost just twice as much as the original estimate. Without reckoning the land value of the new site, the building, completely furnished, will cost $1,160,000. The value of the land is $460,000. The site is paid

EDIFICE OF THE PILGRIM CHURCH (NEGRO) CHICAGO

One of the optimistic facts is that a Jewish citizen of Chicago, Julius Rosenwald, has for several years been giving $25,000 to each American city which would add a reasonable sum toward the establishment of a Negro Young Men's Christian Association, and that the country is already well dotted with the institutions resulting from his wise philanthropy.

Largest Baptist Church in the World

Another fact is that the heart of Chicago's black belt has now acquired, under the leadership of the Baptist Executive Council, two institutions exerting more direct, widespread and powerful influence for the proper development of the Negro race in this region than any other human agency. They are two Baptist churches, representing the denomination with a larger Negro constituency than all others combined. Indeed, the Olivet Church, with some 10,000 members, is the largest Baptist church in the world; and with its two great edifices, its four simultaneous audiences, and its score of paid workers, it is a marvel of varied religious and social that they should try instead to dispose of it to some congregation, even if not of their own faith, which would use it still for the worship of God, and that they should give to such a congregation the organ and other equipment, worth $25,000 or more. This was favored by the congregation. The Pilgrim Church and our Executive Council heard of the opportunity and had begun negotiations when another denomination offered $85,000 in cash for the property. The Jewish brethren, however, refused to consider another offer while negotiations with the Pilgrim Church were pending, even extending the option of the latter when through no fault of theirs it had expired. At length, through the pledging by members of the Executive Council of their own securities to the amount of $23,500 as collateral for a loan, and by the direct gifts of the church, the council, the state convention and the Home Mission Society, the splendid property was secured at the original figures.

The farewell service at the temple came on the last Jewish sabbath of 1920, which was our Christmas Day. The pres-for, and $760,000 is in hand for the building. On Monday night, Feb. 7, the church enthusiastically voted to raise the balance of the money and complete the church building as soon as possible. Mr. Rockefeller and his family, besides giving dollar for dollar on the church subscription, have donated a Laura Spellman Rockefeller Memorial Fund of $212,000. Work of construction is already under way at the corner of Park Avenue and East Sixty-fourth Street, the site of the new building. A church plant furnishing adequate modern facilities for all the varied activities is provided for in the plans.

The financing of this building project has gone on without in any way hindering the benevolent and missionary work of the church. The treasurer of benevolences reports $210,804.94 paid during the year to the New World Movement and $19,950 for other benevolences.

An interesting incident of the annual dinner of the men's class held on Jan. 21 was the wholly unexpected action of the men present in making an offering to the Hoover Relief Fund of $2103. This contribution was made immediately following the address of Mr. Herbert Hoover, one of the speakers of the evening, who later announced that Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the toastmaster, had made a contribution of $1,000,000.

Visitors Welcome

The people and ministers of the Fifth Avenue Church greatly appreciate the privilege which is theirs from week to week of greeting the many visitors to the city who attend the Sunday morning services of the church. The men's class also shares this opportunity and gladly welcomes the men as they come to New York from all sections of the country. It will be an added pleasure when the new building is completed to continue to extend the hand of fraternal greeting to the Baptist friends who come to the city.

Wisconsin News and Notes

By ROBERT W. SHAW

The Baptist Annual

The Wisconsin Baptist Annual is just off the press, and it is a splendid production. Owing to the increased cost of printing, some items formerly published were omitted this year. But the value of the annual was not lessened by the omission. The summary for the year shows a substantial increase in the membership of the state, considerable of the gain coming by baptism. However, more than 7000 of the members, or almost a third of the entire number, are reported as non-resident. But to offset this, no doubt there are many unattached Baptists in Wisconsin who should be attached to some of our good churches. The Sunday schools show a gain in the home and cradle roll departments, though some loss is reported in the main schools, due mostly to the fact that churches did not get their reports in on time. When will Baptist churches come to know the value of getting their reports to the proper departments on time?

Dr. Ashworth's Going

On Feb. 15 Dr. Robert A. Ashworth and family left for Yonkers, N. Y., where he assumed the pastorate of the Church of the Redeemer. For the past three weeks not only the Baptist people, but others too, have been trying to make them understand that they will be missed in Milwaukee and Wisconsin. Dr. Ashworth's long pastorate and his interest in everything that was for the good of the denomination and the kingdom of God have made it difficult for his friends to surrender him to another state. And the same thing can be said of Mrs. Ashworth. The women's organization held a reception for Mrs. Ashworth and presented her with a string of pearls. And the city union, the Baptist ministers, the general ministers' organization and the First Church all expressed their appreciation of Dr. Ashworth by giving him receptions and gifts. Dr. H. O. Rowlands will act as stated supply at the First Church until a pastor is called.

REV. JOHN ALEXANDER FREY

Interesting Pastoral Methods

Dr. W. T. Dorward of the Tabernacle Church, Milwaukee, has been developing interesting methods in his pastoral work. On Sunday he announces that he has certain evenings open "with or without." "With or without" means with or without supper, with or without Mrs. Dorward. He is finding access into many homes for an evening in which he finds time for a real pastoral visit instead of a call. Out of this has come an interesting series of sermons on "The Hard Sayings of Jesus." He picks these up in his evening visits. So far he has given sermons on "Go Sell What Thou Hast," "The Rich Man, the Camel and the Needle's Eye," "The Saying on Eternal Sin" and "The Door Was Shut." He says that his people are deluging him with hard sayings of Jesus, and he has his preaching job cut out for months.

The South Church

This is the church in Milwaukee where the writer ministers. It is in its forty-sixth year, and what a history it has had! Some of the ablest men in the denomination have served it; but for the past eighteen years it has steadily declined in membership, due to the encroaching factory districts and the incoming of new Americans. A recent survey shows twenty-four nationalities in the neighborhood of the church. It is in the polyglot section of the city. But for the past six months the work has gone forward with so much interest that we are all amazed. Today the church is touching as many people outside the church as in its membership. On a recent Sunday the annual "Go to Sunday School and Stay for Church Day" was observed. The goal for the Sunday schools—there are two of them—was 250, but the count showed the goal exceeded by thirty-two. The Milwaukee City Union and the home mission societies are co-operating in trying to bring back to this church its former glory. What was once considered a useless field is coming to be seen as the greatest mission field in Milwaukee. We are going forward with courage and believe that great results will be achieved in this co-operative work.

The City Union

The work of this society has gone forward rapidly this year. In fact, the Baptists of Milwaukee are now fully awake to their great opportunity in city mission work. But the Baptists of Milwaukee are few in number and made up of people in the ordinary circumstances of life. There are foreign-speaking opportunities without number in addition to those in the newer sections of the city. And nearly every Baptist church in the city could do a bit of real missionary work if it had the workers and the funds. Our tasks challenge us in Milwaukee.

The Grace Church

This is the baby church of the city; but today its opportunities are increasing in a residential section. Recently it took steps to raise funds for a new organ, and most of the money has been pledged. Pastor Phelps and his wife are doing a substantial work in their neighborhood.

Some Evangelistic Meetings

A number of evangelistic meetings have been held in the state. Pastor Kamm of Milwaukee assisted Pastor Reitz at Berlin in a good meeting. Pastor DeVries of Wisconsin Rapids reports that the Taylor and Roth meetings resulted in sixty decisions. Eighteen have been baptized and others have been received by letter. Pastor Soltys of the Christ Polish Church recently had a four days' spiritual uplift meeting, Pastor Schilke of Pound doing the preaching. This work now goes forward in the English language as much as possible.

Rev. J. A. Frey Visits North Dakota Churches

Rev. John Alexander Frey of Riga, Latvia, Russia, who is now in America, is spending six weeks with the Baptists of North Dakota. During the first three weeks of his stay Mr. Frey visited eighteen of the larger churches of the state. During this time he delivered forty addresses, speaking before the state university, and various other educational institutions of the state, as well as at gatherings in the churches. Liberal offerings were made in all the churches to cover the expense of bringing him from New York to North Dakota.

North Dakota Baptists have been delighted with the wholesome messages of Mr. Frey, who has suffered financial losses, as well as been exiled to Siberia for two years, and several times imprisoned in his native country. Mr. Frey speaks with authority on present conditions in Russia and Europe. He is at present spending some time with the Russian churches of North Dakota.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

REV. SAMUEL JOHNSON of Hartland has accepted a call to the First Church, Winsted, Conn., and will enter upon his duties April 1.

THE FIRST CHURCH, RUMFORD, observed its quarter-centennial on Feb. 6. Addresses were given both morning and evening by Rev. Clifton D. Gray, president of Bates College.

ALTHOUGH THE FIRST CHURCH, Atlantic City, Rev. Hinson V. Howlett, pastor, had made other plans for Christmas giving before the relief for European Baptists was announced, the people made a free-will offering of considerably over $100.

THE REGIONAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCES held at Portland, Bangor and Houlton were of remarkable value. The pastors of the state, despite the high rates of fare on the railroads, were present in large numbers and were so impressed with the magnitude and the urgency of the world task that they went home with a new determination that their churches should keep in the front line. The Maine team consisted of Dr. Franklin, Rev. R. M. Crawford and Mrs. Mary Bloomer of the Woman's Home Mission Society. Dr. Franklin made the people feel that Christianity is a world matter which concerns every church and every Christian. Mr. Crawford gave the most vivid and thrilling pictures of real paganism, while Mrs. Bloomer gave a brilliant and encouraging story of what home missions, especially as administered by the Woman's Society, are bringing to pass. The conferences will mean a deepening of the spiritual life that will register itself in increased mission support. Dr. E. C. Whittemore, promotion director for Maine, had general charge of the conferences.

CHINA RELIEF: Many Maine churches are responding to the call for aid. The United Church, Lewiston, leads in the amount, having raised $971. Waterville raised over $400. The Christmas offerings for European Relief now amounts to over $7000.

WASHBURN: This live church with a live pastor, Rev. Raymond W. Cooper, is moving forward in every department. Congregations are large, and the Sunday school and the C. E. Society are the largest in their history. Eleven have been baptized recently. The church has subscribed over $3000 to the New World Movement and will continue to canvass.

CARIBOU: Increasing audiences greet the pastor, Rev. J. H. Trites. Plans are being considered for the erection of a building for the Sunday school.

PRESQUE ISLE: Pastor Ranger is gladdened by the increase of interest and conversions among the young people. The splendid new parsonage is proving of great service in the work of the church. A recent visit of Director of Religious Education Henderson was highly appreciated.

CHARLESTON: The coming of Dr. T. J. Ramsdell, pastor-elect, is eagerly awaited. Dr. Ramsdell has served important churches at South Paris, Caribou and Calais ably and always helpfully. He has been prominent in all the denominational work of the state and has been president of the convention. A thoroughly trained student himself, Dr. Ramsdell has always been interested in the schools and will find a field of congenial service in Higgins Classical Institute. And, by the way, Maine schools are pretty well pastored just now, with Kingsley at Hebron, Converse at Pittsfield, Speed at Houlton, Finnie at Lewiston, while Waterville, though pastorless, has the virile and searching sermons of Prof. Hannay.

VERMONT

REV. WILLIAM FREDERICK WILSON, pastor of the First Church, Burlington, has been away, with Mrs. Wilson, for a two weeks' rest at the Bancroft Inn, Plainfield. He has just returned rested, refreshed and strengthened. During his absence the pulpit was supplied one Sabbath by Rev. Austin T. Kempton, who preached in the morning and in the evening delivered his drama sermon, "Paid in Full" before a large audience. The second Sunday Principal Raymond McFarland supplied the pulpit, speaking on "The New Vermont Academy." The church has sustained a very great loss through the death of two of its members. Mrs. Helen S. Phelps had been a member of the church for fifty-eight years, was formerly a teacher in the Bible School and president of the Ladies' Aid Society, and was a loyal worker and generous giver. Miss Reta Luella Baker, a young woman in her seventeenth year, had been a member of the church nearly six years. She was of a sweet, cheerful disposition and was an all round, willing worker in the Sunday school and Young People's Society.

THE FIRST CHURCH, BENNINGTON, reports 1920 as the banner year, as shown by reports at the ninety-fourth annual meeting. The receipts as given by the treasurer, Dr. F. S. Pratt, showed a total of $14,313.15. The church school is thoroughly graded and holds monthly teachers' meetings. Fourteen members of the school attended summer conferences. A very successful school of missions was held in December, which was the fourth one thus far planned and conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. G. Towart.

THE HUNTINGTON CHURCH, Rev. Thomas Adams, pastor, has suffered a very great loss through the death of Deacon Romeo A. Norton, who had been a member of the church for forty-one years and six months, church clerk for thirty-seven years and deacon for thirty-four years. His death was caused by a fall on the ice when he received injuries from which he died very suddenly.

THE RANDOLPH CHURCH, Rev. F. S. Tolman, pastor, has recently received three by baptism.

REV. E. J. SMITH, pastor of the churches at Fair Haven and Hydeville, is proving himself the right man in the right place. At the annual meeting of the Fair Haven Church held recently, gains were shown along all lines. The reports showed an increase of twenty-four in the membership, while the financial condition was the best ever, the church having raised $2898 for current expenses and over $700 for missions. The pastor was presented a check for $100 as a mark of the appreciation of the church for his services. The Hydeville Church also presented the pastor with $50, and has raised during the past year three times as much money as ever before.

THE NEWPORT CENTER CHURCH, Rev. George H. Chambers, pastor, has suffered a severe loss through the death of one of the efficient young members, Mrs. E. B. Dickinson. She was one of the singers in the choir, a worker in the Sunday school and was always present at the services of the church.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Union Church, St. Johnsbury, Rev. A. S. Woodworth, pastor, showed all departments of church work in an encouraging condition, with all bills paid and a small balance in the treasury.

THE EAST RANDOLPH CHURCH, Rev. Frank Place, pastor, recently received six by baptism—three men and three women.

THE DEPARTMENT OF MISSIONARY and religious education of the Vermont State Convention, under the direction of Miss Beulah B. Bates, is accomplishing a splendid work. Fifty-five Sunday schools used the graded home mission stories and eighty-five Sunday schools are now using the foreign mission stories. Fifty-three churches have already entered the reading contest. There are now about 550 individual readers and over 1500 inspirational and missionary books have been read. To illustrate: the East Dover Church, Rev. C. O. Dunham, pastor, has forty-seven resident members. This church has thirty-eight readers who have read 130 books.

MASSACHUSETTS

REV. HERBERT S. JOHNSON is supplying the pulpit of the First Church, Brookline, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. C. Archibald, who is seeking the restoration of his health on the Pacific Coast.

DR. ALEXANDER BLACKBURN closed an acting-pastorate of four months with the First Church, Lynn, on Feb. 13. Four were baptized on that day. He hopes that a good pastor for the church is now in sight. Dr. and Mrs. Blackburn left Boston on Feb. 16 for a trip which will include portions of the South and the whole Pacific Coast. He can be addressed for a time at Palo Alto, Cal.

OVER IN EVERETT, the Glendale Church is having a unique experience of continuous blessing under the acting pastor-ship of Dr. Edward P. Tuller. Dr. Tuller has just completed his third year of an acting relationship that has proven active beyond anything they had expected. Sometimes a church gets the notion that an acting-pastorate is merely marking time until something active can happen. But other churches like this one at Everett have learned the permanent value of a minister fully equipped with brains, training and seasoned experience. In an acting-pastorate, meddlers are apt to be quiescent, thinking the relation is but temporary. Meanwhile a strong man will break into a pace of freedom and advancement, and the church get blessed in every way, as has this church at Everett.

RHODE ISLAND

REV. FRANK GARDNER, pastor of the church at Phenix, has recovered from his illness and has already held a series of evangelistic meetings with Evangelist Lewis E. Smith, preacher and singer. Eight were received for baptism and five by letter. Bro. Smith always leaves a feeling of desire for more of his services.

PASTOR AND MRS. YEOMANS of the Wickford Church tendered a reception to the thirty-six new members received during the year. The church has again increased the pastor's salary.

BRO. E. L. THORNTON of the Allendale Church reports that the work is progressing and that since he began his labors with the church eight have received the hand of fellowship, six of them by baptism.

REV. F. L. CLEVELAND of Fall River has accepted the call of the Second Church, East Providence and began his labors with the church on Feb. 3.

THE CHURCH AT HOPE VALLEY has called the Rev. F. S. Struthers who was formerly at Blackstone, and it is expected that he will accept and begin his labors with the church soon.

REV. C. L. CHARRON of Lowell has been appointed the French missionary for Woonsocket and Manchaug and began his labors on Feb. 6.

REV. AUGUSTUS DEVOS, who has been French missionary at Woonsocket for eight years, has been transferred to Providence. Mr. Devos will have not only Providence, but the surrounding suburbs under his care, and it is expected that he will conduct services in several churches in the near future.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

ORDINATION SERVICES were held at the First Church Bradford, Feb. 3 for Mr. F. W. Rollins, pastor of the church. The council was organized as follows: Moderator, Rev. W. C. Myers of Concord; clerk, Mr. Walter Fox of Penacook. After careful consideration the council voted unanimously in favor of ordination, and adjourned for the afternoon session. At the service of ordination in the afternoon the Scripture was read by Rev. H. I. Kemp of North Sutton; the ordination sermon was by Rev. W. C. Myers; the ordination prayer by Rev. H. L. Caulkins of Hopkinton; charge to the candidate by Rev. E. J. Abar of Contocook; charge to the church by Rev. D. S. Jenks, secretary of the state convention. Mr. Rollins has formerly been engaged in evangelistic and pastoral work in Maine. He recently came to the Bradford church from a pastorate with the church at Kenduskeag, Maine.

REV. J. BRUCE GILMAN, for twelve years pastor of the First Church at Nashua, resigned Feb. 13 to accept the pastorate of the church at New Brunswick, N. J. New Hampshire is sorry to lose Mr. Gilman. For a long time he has been identified with important denominational affairs in the state. He is at present first vice-president of the state convention and would naturally in due time have served as president. The church at Nashua has continuously prospered and grown since Mr. Gilman came as pastor. Under his ministry the church has become the largest Baptist church in the state and the Sunday school the largest of any denomination in New Hampshire. Mr. Gilman closes his work in Nashua March 31.

CONNECTICUT

THE VALUE OF THE EVERY-MEMBER canvass idea has been demonstrated in the experience of the First Church of New London. The church constituency was canvassed in the interest of the church school with the result that seventy-six new scholars were received in one month and the steady flow of new scholars continues. The attendances at the school are the largest in its history being over twice the average of a year ago. The pastor, Rev. Chester H. Howe, has formed the children into a "Go-to-Church Band" which has enlisted the attendance of a large percentage of the children at the morning service of the church. The evening services have grown in popularity until the crowds have overflowed into the galleries of the church.

NEW YORK

Fiftieth Anniversary at Lake Avenue, Rochester

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Lake Avenue Church of Rochester was celebrated Feb. 6-13. Addresses were given by Dr. Henry C. Vedder of the Crozer Theological Seminary, Mrs. Wm. A. Montgomery, Dr. C. A. Barbour of the Rochester Theological Seminary, and by the pastor of the church, Dr. A. W. Beaven. Messages were read from Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur and Dr. Johnston Myers.

On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 6, in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Kemp, a service was held to mark the inauguration of the Boulevard Branch of the Lake Avenue Church. The new chimneys which had been presented to the church by Hon. Clinton N. Howard in memory of his son, who gave his life in service, were dedicated in the evening, Mr. Howard giving a memorial address on, "A Voice from the Sea."

Members who have come in during the past year pledged approximately $7500 to the building fund as their gift to the anniversary exercises.

The services have been of deep interest to the church and to the community as well.

An Old Church Being Remade

There has been a real revival in one of the difficult fields in New York City. The Strong Place Church, one of the old churches, was formerly wealthy and aristocratic, but is now surrounded by foreign-speaking people. Most of the members live long distances from the church. With fine loyalty and grim determination the "faithful few" decided to remain in the old place and meet the new situation by ministering to the new people. A community work was begun, especially among the children by means of a recreation room, playground, daily kindergarten, industrial school, children's meeting and other activities. These avenues of approach gave entrance to many homes.

In January Rev. H. Wyse Jones, state evangelist, conducted services for three weeks. There were some beautiful conversions. Eighty-two people went forward to confess publicly their sense of sin and their acceptance of Jesus Christ as Saviour. There were many genuine rededications, and nineteen young people gave their lives to Christian service.

The church recently purchased lots for a fine large building for Christian institutional activities, and expects to do an extensive and intensive community work.

Pastor Floyd H. Adams and his people are deeply grateful for all these blessings and appreciate the co-operation of the numerous friends of this historic church. During the special services a fine fellowship was expressed by other Baptist churches sending delegations of members on various nights to add numbers, enthusiasm and spiritual power.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE CALVARY CHURCH, Taylor, Rev. Claude G. Langford, pastor, held three weeks of special services in January. Dr. Joseph A. Bennett of Philadelphia was the preacher, and he greatly commended himself by his strong message and sane methods. On Jan. 30 thirty-one candidates were baptized, and many others have been received for baptism. The church has been doing large things and will almost immediately spend $10,000 in a new building to accommodate the growing Sunday school.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Wellsboro is engaged in a "campaign of personal evangelism," which began Feb. 6 and is to culminate Easter Sunday, with the avowed object of winning at least fifty persons to Christ and into membership in the church. Under the pastorate of Rev. C. W. Maceorge the church is prospering. The Sunday school has passed the 300 mark in attendance and all departments of church life are active.

SUMMER ASSEMBLIES this year will be as follows: Factoryville (Keystone Academy) July 4 to 11; Ridgeview Park, July 11 to 18; Collegeville, Aug. 22 to 29. Efforts are being made to have these assemblies of the highest order in both their educational and recreational aspects. Bible-school and young people's workers are urged to plan to attend.

THE CHURCH AT BANGOR, Dr. David R. Francis, pastor, is preparing for a series of evangelistic meetings in March. Four young people were baptized and received into the church recently. The death of Deacon Albert Strunk is a great loss to the church in its spiritual and financial work.

THE CHURCH AT MANSFIELD is expectantly awaiting the coming of its new pastor, Rev. D. J. Griffiths, who begins his work in March. He will find the church in splendid condition, in no small part due to the work of Dean Arthur T. Belknap, of the Normal School, who has been stated supply. Prof. Belknap is a real addition to our Baptist forces as he has had wide experience both as a pastor and educator.

PASTOR G. ALBANESE of the Scottdale Italian Mission is much encouraged with the condition of the work; $1200 has been raised and expended in improvements to the chapel. Two new members have been received recently and six more are under preparation. Mr. Vittorio Aghetto, who graduated from Colgate University this year, has been called by the Home Mission Society to work in New London, Conn. He is the third member of this little mission to go into missionary work.

THE CHURCH AT ST. PETERS is rejoicing in a successful series of evangelistic meetings in which Pastor Jas W. Kirby was assisted by Rev. Frank Kates of Philadelphia. Nine indicated their desire to live the Christian life.

REV. T. L. JUSTICE, of the East Brandywine Church, has resigned to accept a call to a church in the South.

THE CHURCH AT SMITHPORT is rejoicing in the return to the pulpit of its pastor, Rev. Noble I. Mack, who has been laid aside because of a surgical operation.

REV. J. WILSON BROWN closed his pastorate with the Galeton Church Jan. 30. Twenty were baptized at the service that evening.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

SINCE REV. D. M. LENOX took charge at Coraopolis last November, the work has moved steadily forward. Renovated and redecorated, the building never presented a handsomer appearance. On Friday, Feb. 11, a house warming was held with Mr. W. C. Chappell of the Pittsburgh Association as the principal speaker. Although no money was solicited, the entire amount needed for the new improvements was provided, 80 per cent cash.

AT SWISSVALE new electric lights and interior decoration have made the house of worship more attractive. The people are loyally following the leadership of Pastor N. J. Mecklem.

THE PASTORATE OF REV JOSEPH YULE at Crafton has opened encouragingly; twenty-three new members having been received in recent weeks. The church is filled at the Sunday services.

AT FORD CITY a revival is in progress conducted by the pastor Rev. A. B. Bowser.

UNION CHURCH, SOUTH SIDE, PITTSBURGH, though without a pastor, meets its financial obligations regularly. Eight hundred dollars has just been forwarded in support of the New World Movement, and a recent offering for European relief brought $250.

AT THE ALLISON AVENUE CHURCH, Washington, Rev. L. L. Bradley, pastor, earnest preparation is making for the evangelistic meetings to be conducted by Dr. Whalen of Greensburg, March 7-20.

A BROTHERHOOD was recently organized at the Sewickley church under the leadership of Mr. C. T. Wuertemberger. The church has doubled its giving through the New World Movement. For the Hoover fund $189 has been raised. Rev. J. S. Stone is pastor.

SIX NEW MEMBERS have just been received by Pastor L. F. Taylor into the Tarentum church, five by baptism. The church contemplates building in the near future.

A THREE WEEKS' REVIVAL has just closed at the Johnston Avenue Church. There were ninety conversions, and the church has been quickened. Feb. 6 marked the first anniversary of the pastor, Rev. W. Spencer Skinner. He has received into the church eighty-three members, sixty-seven by baptism.

THE SWEDISH CHURCH of McKeesport reports a visit from Rev. and Mrs. John Steffan as having brought great inspiration to all, old and young.

DURING THE MONTH OF JANUARY the church and Sunday school at Canonsburg, Rev. W. J. John, pastor, raised $70 for the Baptist Orphanage and Home and $200 for the Near East relief fund.

FIVE CANDIDATES were recently baptized by Dr. James S. Braker at the First Church, McKeesport. The church is preparing for special evangelistic meetings. A tithing club of 100 is being organized. Last year $22,000 was raised for all purposes, $12,000 for "others."

A RECEPTION was held at the Mt. Lebanon Church, Thursday evening, Feb. 10, for the new pastor, Rev. A. F. Purkiss and his wife. Rev. W. C. Chappell represented the association and Dr. F. T. Galpin brought the greetings of the First Church, the mother church, while Rev. M. B. Sloan and Dr. H. W. Ewalt welcomed them on behalf of the church. Pastors of other denominations in Dormont were present and expressed the cordial welcome of neighboring churches.

NEWS ITEMS FROM WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, and especially from the Pittsburgh Association, should be sent to Rev. A. J. R. Schumaker, 832 Bigelow Blvd., Pittsburgh.

WEST VIRGINIA

THE TWENTIETH STREET Church, Huntington, has during the past year received eighty-seven new members, fifty of them by baptism. The Bible school had an average attendance of 462 and raised for all purposes $1000. The men's class taught by the pastor had during January an average attendance of ninety-six. In the new year attendance upon the whole school ranges from 650 to 685, the largest so far. Church expenses are promptly met and benevolences are larger than ever before. A new building is greatly needed.

Mississippi Valley

OHIO

REPORTS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Tippecanoe City Church, Rev. J. M. Cosby, pastor, showed all bills paid for the year and the discharge of a note for more than $1200 which had been standing against the church for several years. The pastor closed his first year's service with the church on Jan. 30, on which day the hand of fellowship was extended to twenty, making twenty-eight received during the year. A series of special meetings ended on that same day. The Bible school had an attendance of 112 recently.

AT GRANVILLE recently the church witnessed a new demonstration of "international Christianity." Young people were baptized as follows: Mr. Isami Nakamura, a Japanese student in Denison University; Miss Laura Sellers, a school-teacher recently graduated from Denison; Watson Rogers and Edward Marshall, sons of missionaries whose parents are in Africa and Burma. At the same time an offering of $400 was taken for China relief.

THE TENTH ANNIVERSARY of the pastorate of Rev. Herman Lang at the First Church, Ashtabula, was observed with elaborate exercises on Jan. 30-31. During these ten years Mr. Lang has baptized 308 people and received ninety-eight by experience and seventy-two by letter. The present membership is about 500. Soon after the beginning of his work in Ashtabula, Mr. Lang led in the erection of a new church plant which is now estimated to be worth at least $80,000. An evangelistic campaign is now under way.

THE FIRST CHURCH, HILLSBORO, has received since the first of October nineteen new members, the result of personal pastoral work. During the past year the Sunday-school attendance has increased over 50 per cent. This church, which was one of the first to exceed its quota in the New World Movement, has given $162 to European relief and $106 to the China famine fund. A boys' club, known as "Comrades of the Cross," is a feature of the work. An orchestra is being formed out of this club.

ON FEB. 13 a revival closed at the New Lexington Church. The pastor, Rev. Chas. Walsh, held preparatory services for five evenings after which Rev. Hugh King of Jackson, Miss., preached for nine evenings. The results are a quickened church and eleven baptized, most of whom are the heads of families. In the last three months the church has raised $1800, one-half of which is in cash, towards the securing of a parsonage.

REV. CHAS. E. STANTON has resigned as director of promotion and will on March 1 enter upon his new duties as assistant pastor of the Sandusky Street Church at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Portsmouth Doings

On Jan. 11 the First Church gave a reception to the new pastor, Rev. Stewart Tillis. Congregations are increasing. A male chorus and orchestra have been organized. Conversions are frequent.

On the same evening, Calvary held its annual roll call and business meeting. All current expenses have been met and there has been a marked increase in gifts for missions. There are frequent candidates for baptism. Mr. and Mrs. Kayser were presented with a library table at Christmas. The new church edifice will soon be completed.

Rev. Robert Allbaugh is just completing his first half year at Immanuel Church. During this time thirty new members have been received. A thorough canvass for the New World Movement is soon to be made.

William H. Overstreet, a member for seventeen years of the First Church, and now pastor at Sciotoville, was ordained at the latter place on Nov. 15 last. The sermon was preached by Rev. E. E. Barnhart, and others who had part in the services were Rev. Robert Allbaugh, Rev. L. N. Kayser, Rev. S. P. Sapp, Rev. F. P. Chase, Rev. M. H. Bridwell and Mr. T. D. Smith. Twelve new members are reported from this church. A missionary society has been organized. On Jan. 27 evangelistic services were begun under the leadership of Rev. Chas. E. Neighbor of Elyria.

IOWA

THE BOONE CHURCH, at a recent meeting called for the purpose of presenting the needs of the church in the line of repairs, subscribed $3000 to take care of the work. Members who were unable to be present will be given an opportunity to subscribe. The repairs, which include a new steel ceiling, hardwood floors and decorations, will be made prior to the installation of a new pipe organ, which will arrive in May or June.

MINNESOTA

THE QUARTERLY MEETING of the Women's Baptist Missionary Union of Minneapolis, was held at the Elim Swedish Church Feb. 9.

MISSOURI

REV. ALVIN G. HAUSE, who went from the Kansas City Baptist Theological Seminary two and a half years ago to the Maywood Church, Kansas City, reports that the church is making rapid progress along all lines. The B. Y. P. U. is a 97 per cent society, winning the city B. Y. P. U. banner at the recent quarterly rally. The Bible-school attendance has increased from seventy-five to 200 during this pastorate. Recently at a combined Bible-school and decision day service twelve boys and girls above the junior age surrendered to Christ. Pastor Hause conducts children's services two Sunday mornings each month. The rapid growth of the Bible school is making imperative a new building or an addition to the old one. The Sunday night evangelistic services constantly bring conversions, and baptisms are frequent. Mr. Hause was a newspaper man before being called into the ministry.

NEBRASKA

THE REGIONAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCES held in Omaha, Lincoln, and Grand Island the week of Jan. 24-29 were a great inspiration. Dr. Brooks, Mrs. Peabody, Dr. Bowler, and Rev. Henry G. Smith were the speakers from outside the state. Dr. Brooks as team leader stirred every one mightily by his message on Europe's need. Mrs. Peabody not only spoke to splendid denominational and inter-denominational groups of women, but captivated all in her addresses in the general meetings. Dr. Bowler is always a welcome visitor in the state. He glows with missionary enthusiasm. The reports of the findings committee are being sent to all the churches of the state and serve to crystallize and make permanent the impressions of the conferences.

REV. HENRY G. SMITH of Berwick, Ill., was in the state and helped in the conferences. So delighted was the Second, formerly East Lincoln, Church with his message that it extended a call to him to become pastor and he will take up his work there March 1. The field has great possibilities.

DR. CASSIDY of SIOUX CITY is conducting special meetings with the Grand Island Church. Already he has won the hearts of his hearers and some have decided for Christ.

REV. E. H. CLARK, formerly of Montana, is now located at Albion where a large opportunity is presented in this fine county seat town.

THE REMOVAL of REV. SAM MILLER from Peru to Union leaves this church in one of our normal school towns without a pastor. Many removals have left this church few in numbers, but it is a determined band of workers and the state secretary feels that something must be done to continue work in this strategic place. Kearney is another of our normal school towns without a Baptist pastor, but it is hoped soon to have a man to lead in the work.

REV. R. B. FAVORIGHT is about to leave Fremont for Jersey City, Ill. This helps to repay Illinois for the men it is giving to Nebraska, but Nebraska will miss this splendid brother. No pastor had a more united church back of him than Mr. Favoright.

REV. W. H. HUGHES has accepted the call of the Sumner Church, after capturing the hearts of the people in an evangelistic campaign rich in spiritual results.

REV. J. D. BRIGGS has been asked by the Oxford Church to return to Nebraska after spending some time in Missouri. All hope he will come and stay.

REV. W. F. ROBBINS of Central City has the sympathy of all in the loss of his fifteen-year-old son, Mark. He was a fine Christian boy, a volunteer and power for right in school and church. With Mrs. Robbins in the hospital, Bro. Robbins' cup of sorrow seems overflowing, but his Christian faith does not waver.

REV. C. F. HOLLER of Trinity Church, Omaha, is holding a splendid revival campaign at Blair. Rev. C. F. Foreman has been pastor here for six years and has done a great work.

THE BUILDING SPIRIT is abroad in Omaha and almost every church is laying plans for an enlarged building. Calvary is now in the basement of the new building which will be rushed at once to completion. A simultaneous evangelistic campaign of the Baptist churches has done much to strengthen them. Pastor Barton of Immanuel Church is meeting with great success in the use of moving pictures to help in building up a mid-week educational program.

POLK, AN AGGRESSIVE RURAL FIELD, is showing great progress under the leadership of Pastor Neal. Forty-seven new members were received last year, over $6000 was raised for local work, and over $14,000 has been pledged to the New World Movement. The church believes that THE BAPTIST, which goes into every home, is a great aid in the general advance.

FAIRBURY is more than happy under the leadership of Bro. Wyrick. It reports: "Best prayer meetings in years. The pastor insists and demands that people come to church. He is right. If they come, they are interested, contribute, and souls are saved."

ILLINOIS

REV. CHARLES DURDEN was formally installed as pastor of the First Church, Galesburg, on Feb. 10. Dr. W. H. Geistweit, a former pastor of the church, preached the sermon.

THE FIRST CHURCH, FREEPORT, Rev. Frank G. Sayers, pastor, has been enjoying an almost constant revival since September. The pastor has been preaching expository sermons of an evangelistic type and has been supported by a well-trained chorus. A special campaign is to be conducted from April 3 to 17 by the Harry von Bruck party. The church recently gave $447 to European relief and $100 to the Chinese sufferers.

REV. D. L. LAMKIN, pastor of the Olney Church, writes of some great meetings which have just closed there, in which he was assisted by Bro. Hoekstra of Fairfield, who led the singing: "Though the services stopped, the revival has gone on. In all, I have baptized about thirty, and others will be baptized next Sunday night."

THE BEREAN CHURCH of Chicago on Sunday Feb. 6, entered its new house of worship, a building costing approximately $65,000 and erected largely by the people themselves. Berean is one of the large Negro congregations of the city, having upwards of 1000 members. Dr. W. S. Bradden, the pastor, began work with this church when it was a small company of about fifteen. He saw in the completion of this building the fruitage of twenty years of faithful service. The dedication sermon was preached by Dr. Benjamin Otto, superintendent of the Baptist Executive Council of Chicago.

THE CHURCH at GIRARD has had its full measure of prosperity for the past months. Fifty members were added to the church during the past year, twenty-eight of the number by baptism. At the annual meeting which was held recently over $1600 was raised, and this amount has now been increased to practically $2000. The house will be thoroughly renovated. Best of all, two of the young people have dedicated their lives to definite Christian service. One of the number is now in college preparing for the foreign field. Rev. Jesse R. Hastings is the pastor.

SINCE OCT. 1 there have been added to the First Church, Clinton, 139 members, seventy-nine of whom came by baptism. Two large Bible classes have been organized, together with a woman's missionary society. Rev. Stephen B. Dexter, formerly associated with Dr. Biederwolf, the evangelist, has been pastor during this period. The walls of the meeting-house have recently been refrescoed, and the interior woodwork refinished. A new era of usefulness seems to be opening before this church.

THE WOMAN'S MISSION UNION met with the Hyde Park Church on Feb. 8. The program was unusually interesting. Following the opening exercises, literature was presented by Mrs. Replinger. Reports were given by committee chairmen, and a program rendered showing the advance of the Children's World Crusade, conducted by Mrs. C. H. Parkes, Belden Avenue Church, and Mrs. J. J. Ross, Second Church. A demonstration was conducted by Mrs. Edwin S. Osgood and children of the Hyde Park Church. Four hundred and fifteen women were served at luncheon. The afternoon program was as follows: Dr. A. E. Peterson spoke on "Things You Want To Know." Mrs. H. E. Goodman announced that the Golden Jubilee was to be held May 15 and 16 in Chicago in connection with the Central District, the mission union acting as hostess. The address of the afternoon on the subject, "A Pocket Full of Gold," was given by Rev. A. C. Bowers, missionary to Assam. The devotional hour was led by Mrs. M. S. Lamoreaux.

MICHIGAN

REV. J. E. LITTELL is in his fifth year as pastor at Plainwell. The Sunday-school enrollment is 355, and 100 names are on the cradle roll. The B. Y. P. U. has eighty-seven members. Receipts from all sources last year were $5300, with $5160 expenditures. Of this, $2200 is on the New World Movement pledge.

TWENTY CONVERSIONS resulted from the evangelistic meetings conducted by Rev. Thomas Marsh of Pontiac at Capac. Pastor George Waid feels a new spirit of consecration and devotion, and heartily expresses his gratitude for the sane, practical and helpful meetings.

THE WORK at ST. CHARLES is being revived under the faithful work of Pastor A. P. McDonald. The Sunday school has gone over the top by eighteen, and it is hoped to keep the record up. The women recently gave a supper for themselves and their friends, with no charge for it.

STATE DIRECTOR OF EVANGELISM F. L. Currey has just closed a gracious revival campaign at Charlotte. Large crowds attended the services, many being turned away. The interest was intense and about forty accepted Christ. Mr. A. E. Greenlaw, soloist, assisted during the campaign.

AT THE FIRST CHURCH of Otsego, some eleven have been baptized recently, and several have been received by experience and restoration. Rev. J. R. Estes of the First Church, Muskegon, was with the church for two weeks and rendered splendid service. The prayer meetings are fine and the congregations large. Several more are to be baptized soon.

Woman's Mission Society of Michigan

The executive board of the Woman's Mission Society of Michigan met on Feb. 8 at the Woodward Avenue Church, Detroit. Mrs. N. H. Bowen emphasized the coming conferences in Michigan. Leaflets regarding the Easter thank-offering will be sent out soon. It is hoped that a leaflet and gift box will be placed in every Baptist home. Boxes may be secured from the state promotion headquarters free of charge, and all money received through the boxes will be credited on allotment. Every Friday noon all officers and office helpers at promotion headquarters meet for prayer. The Central District annual meeting will be held in Chicago the week of May 18, and the East Central and Northwestern districts are invited to attend. Miss Howell, children's secretary-director, reported having secured Mrs. C. H. Wilbur of Jackson as associational secretary. The home box and supply committee reported goods and money to the amount of $437.85. The foreign committee has sent $120 in cash and a barrel of fruit to the home for missionaries' children. Three shipments of White Cross work overseas and three to home centers were reported. Mrs. C. H. Brennan and Mrs. Lloyd W. Bates were chosen trustees to fill vacancies. The resignation of Mrs. T. J. Villers was accepted with regret.

JANET BURGESS.

KANSAS

PASTOR SOUTHALL is doing a fine work with his church at Coats. The church is greatly overshadowed by a large Methodist church, but more and more attention is being given to our Baptist work there.

PASTOR G. H. BRANHAM is wonderfully pleased with his work at Clearwater. He has a good new building with a comfortable parsonage and is building himself into the work splendidly. He had the assistance of Evangelist Bennett and Singer Ream recently.

PASTOR E. H. H. TUBBS of Protection is winning his way into the hearts of his people. The church there is in great need of a new building. Protection is in the midst of a rich growing community, and with a large Baptist constituency we should soon have a strong church there.

SPECIAL MEETINGS have been on in Onaga lately. The pastors took turns in preaching. The Christian people were greatly refreshed and there were a number of powerful conversions. Rev. B. Smith Harvorth is the pastor of our church there. He has not been ordained yet.

PASTOR J. P. WOODS has become well entrenched in the interests of his people at Anthony. He conducted a splendid evangelistic campaign with the church recently, with more than forty conversions.

REV. R. S. CHITTUM is doing a substantial work at Wilmore and is encouraged with the outlook. He is greatly handicapped now, since his wife has had a slight nervous shock and is not for the time able to help in the work.

PASTOR E. H. COOK of the West Side Church, Wichita, had the assistance of Rev. J. H. Hickerson in special meetings recently.

FIELD WORKER W. H. LEYBURN has held a successful meeting since the first of the year with the Pleasanton Church. There have been several professions and a number of additions to the church.

PASTOR O. L. WEIR has had Evangelist Montgomery in special meetings for two weeks since the first of the year. A goodly number of people took a stand for Christ, and most of them came into the church.

THE ALTAVISTA CHURCH, Rev. J. E. Woods, pastor, closed on Feb. 6 a three weeks' revival conducted by Horace W. Cole of Hutchinson, assisted by Chester Guthrie of Manhattan as singer. Sixteen were baptized and twenty-six were received into the church. Of special power were men's meetings conducted in different places of business and daily chapel services at the high school. Among those converted were the pitcher and catcher of the Sunday baseball team.

Pacific Coast

WESTERN WASHINGTON

THE WORK OF THE Liberty Park Church, Spokane, has taken on new life since the coming of Pastor Charles McHarness, who left a successful pastorate at Weiser, Idaho, last May. The field, however, had been made fallow by the work of Rev. F. E. Hudson, who for four years labored faithfully with the church, and who is now on the sick list, residing with his son in Portland, Ore. In nine months the resident membership has increased from sixty to ninety, and the Sunday school has increased 80 per cent, 177 being in the school on a recent Sunday. Every Saturday evening about sixty boys gather at the church to study electricity, photography, cartooning, athletics and wireless telegraphy, the courses being handled by competent teachers who have donated their time. Sunday morning the "Go-Get-'Em Club" of boys is out early to invite boy friends to the Sunday-school service. Ten persons received the hand of fellowship on a recent Sunday, and several are awaiting baptism. The church subscribed $5000 to the New World Movement.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

BRO. A. D. ELLINGTON, formerly a Methodist, was ordained at the Grace Church (independent), Los Angeles, on Feb. 1. He is to work under the American Sunday School Union. Five new members have been received into the church since the first of the year.

SAN DIEGO HAS BEEN GREATLY stirred recently by meetings conducted by Mrs. Aimes S. McPherson. The greater part of the time she has occupied a down-town building which seats about 3000 people. She has also held services in various churches, including the Baptist. Several thousand claim to have been converted during these services. Mrs. McPherson was born in Canada and was for several years, with her husband, a missionary in China.

REV. J. HARVEY DEERE, pastor of the First Church of Pomona, gave the hand of fellowship to eleven persons on Feb. 6, and baptized twenty at the evening service. Rev. F. O. Belden assisted Dr. Deere in special meetings for a few weeks with excellent results. Dr. Deere entered upon his third year as pastor with a hopeful outlook. This church is one of the strong and aggressive churches of the state.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE CHURCH AT FOWLER has been holding evangelistic meetings under the leadership of Dr. J. E. Conant, assisted by Mr. C. A. King, soloist. Large crowds have been attracted every night, and on one evening there were thirteen baptisms.

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

- Arizona—* Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phoenix.
- California, N.—* Dr. C. W. Brinstead, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
- California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
- Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
- Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
- Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
- District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
- Idaho—* Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
- Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
- Indiana—* Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
- Iowa—424 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
- Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
- Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
- Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
- Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capitol Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
- Minnesota—* Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2nd Ave., So., Minneapolis.
- Montana—* Rev. G. Clifford Cress, Box 643, Lewistown.
- Nebraska—* Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
- Nevada—George L. Snyder, Box 230, Sparks.
- New Hampshire—* Rev. D. S. Jenks, 92 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
- New Jersey—* Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
- New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
- Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singiser, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
- North Dakota—Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
- Ohio—Rev. Chas. E. Stanton, Granville.
- Oregon—* Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin. Field Promotion Director, 405 Tilford Bldg., Portland.
- Pennsylvania—* Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
- Rhode Island—* Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauderdale Bldg., Providence.
- South Dakota—* Dr. S. P. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
- Utah—* Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
- Vermont—* Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
- Washington, E.—* Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane.
- Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
- West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213½ Fourth St., Parkersburg.
- Wisconsin—* Dr. D. W. Hulburt, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
- Wyoming—* Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

THE VACATION RELIGIOUS DAY SCHOOL

Teacher's Manual of Principles and Programs

By HAZEL STRAIGHT STAFFORD

Net, $1.00; by mail, $1.10

THE ABINGDON PRESS

EASTER FREE MUSIC

Sample Services of Songs and Recitations to Ministers, Superintendents, and Committees.

Returnable Samples of Choir Cantatas and Anthems.

The Garden of Joseph, new song story by Adam Geibel. 25 cents.
Easter Helper No. 7 (not sent for examination), 15 cents in stamps.

HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts.,
ADAM GEIBEL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

JUBILATE

THE JOYFUL HYMNAL
FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

8 Great Departments for
all singing uses

Thousands of satisfied schools have enthusiastic, helpful singing using JUBILATE.
PRICES TO SUIT, $25-$32.50-$35-$40
According to binding.

Send for returnable sample NOW. Note change of address
HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Phila., Pa.

KEUKA COLLEGE
Keuka Park, New York
A COLLEGE FOR WOMEN
Opens September 21, 1921
President, A. H. NORTON, Ph. D.

DO YOU KNOW !!

THE Business World needs Christian Young People. An efficient Business Training midst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY
Write for particulars Osage, Iowa

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year. Apply early for September
Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

CROUP OR WHOOPIING COUGH
ROCHE'S EMERALD EMBROCATION
Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
W. EDWARDS & SON All druggists or
London, England E. FOUGERA & CO.
90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

WILLIAM LESTER

FOR THE CHOIRMASTER

CONTINUING our suggestions for Easter music, we list below some numbers that have been used so widely as to stamp them as worthy of recommendation.

First we list vocal solos with piano or organ accompaniment:

"Day of Days," Van de Water; "The Angel's Message," Loud; "A Song of Victory," Read. Published by Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.

"Christ the Lord Is Risen," Foerster.
Published by Clayton F. Summy Company,
Chicago.

"He Is Risen," Stewart. Published by John Church, Cincinnati.

"Sing the Resurrection Day," Lester;
"Christ Triumphant," Terry. Published by H. W. Gray, New York City.

"Angels, Roll the Rock Away," Scott;
"The Women at the Tomb," Warner. Published by Huntzinger and Dilworth, New York City.

"Shout, Ye Seraphs," Ward-Stephens;
"As It Began To Dawn," Coombs; "As It Began To Dawn," Harker; "Easter Even," Bartlett; "Resurrection," Andrews. Published by G. Schirmer, New York City.

Of solos with obbligati of cello or violin we choose:

"Be Ye Glad," Ambrose. Published by A. P. Schmidt, Boston.

"Behold the Risen King," Dressler. Published by Oliver Ditson.

"Easter," Shelley; "Come, See the Place
Where Jesus Lay," Bartlett; "Easter
Dawn," Woodman. Published by G. Schirmer.

"Behold, I Shew You a Mystery," Maxson; "The Angel's Easter Song," Schnecker.
Published by the White-Smith Company,
Boston.

Effective duets are to be found below:

"The Conqueror," Coombs; "Easter Vespers," Shelley. Published by G. Schirmer.
"Christ Victorious," Roberts. Published by Theodore Presser, Philadelphia.

"The Resurrection Light," Stewart. Published by White-Smith.

"Rejoice, Rejoice," Lester. Published by Carl Fischer, New York City.

"We Declare unto You Good Tidings," Huhn; "God Hath Sent His Angels," Galbraith; "Glory, Glory to Our King," Marston. Published by A. P. Schmidt.

Carols for the Easter season are not as plentiful as for the Christmas time.
The most usable are as follows:

"Christ the Lord Is Risen Today," Evans;
"Easter Carol," Adams. Published by Clayton F. Summy.

"Ring Jubilant, Ye Pealing Bells," Norris; "O Bells in the Steeple," Norris; "Alleluia, Christ Is Risen," Norris. Published by G. Schirmer.

There are several series of carol booklets published by the firms of H. W. Gray, B.
Schirmer, Novello, etc., that afford a mine of good material for responses and interludes for Easter.

Easter anthems with which I have had good success are listed below. The first series is suitable for chorus-choir use:

"He Is Risen," Lansing. Published by A. P. Schmidt.

"A Joyous Easter Song," arr. by Dickinson; "The Risen Christ," Noble; "I Am the Resurrection," Kinder; "Why Seek Ye the Living," Converse; "On Wings of Living Light," Matthews; "By Early Morning Light," arr. by Dickinson; "An Easter Hal-lelujah," Vulpius-Dickinson; "All Hail, Dear
Conqueror," Adams; "I Heard a Great Voice," Cobb. Published by H. W. Gray.

"Awake, Glad Soul, Awake," Lester.
Published by White-Smith.

"Now Is Christ Risen from the Dead,"
West; "Him Hath God Exalted," Simper.
Published by Clayton F. Summy.

"Jesus Lives," Spinney; "Victory," Shelley; "Light's Glittering Morn," Parker;
"Christ, Our Passover," Schilling. Published by G. Schirmer.

Somewhat more elaborate are the following:

"O Sons and Daughters," Andrews; "Behold, Ye Despisers," Parker; "In the End of the Sabbath," Targett; "Most Glorious Lord of Life," West. Published by H. W.
Gray.

"The Lord Reigneth," Sowerby. Published by the Boston Music Company.

"As It Began To Dawn," Bochau. Published by Clayton F. Summy.

"Yes, the Redeemer Rose," Mansfield.
Published by A. P. Schmidt.

"When the Sabbath Was Past," Bartlett;
"Hail, Dear Conqueror," James; "There Stood Three Marys by the Tomb," Matthews. Published by G. Schirmer.

For the organist, a few occasional pieces are:

"March on Easter Themes," Andrews;
"Transcription of Worgan," Lutkin; "The Ebon Lute," Lester. Published by H. W.
Gray.

"Easter Morning," Malling; "Easter Morning," Baumgartner. Published by White-Smith.

"A Song of Gratitude," Cole; "Easter Morning," Dunham. Published by A. P.
Schmidt.

"Paeon Heroique," Diggle; "A Song of Joy," Stebbins. Published by John Church.

REVIEW OF NEW MUSIC

From the Boston Music Company, Boston:

"Arioso," Bach-Engel.

This beautiful Bach melody, harmonized and arranged by that fine musician, Carl Engel, and then transcribed for organ by Edward Shippen Barnes, should prove a welcome addition to our stock of sincere, appealing, convincing short organ volun-taries. If your congregation shies at the august name of Bach, try them with this bit of noble music. They will come back for more. Of no great technical demands, and not overly elaborate as to registration, here is something much worth while.

From the Clayton F. Summy Company,
Chicago:

"Unto Thee, O God, Do We Give Thanks," Rogers.

"Praise the Lord," Wooler.

"Christ the Lord Is Risen Today," Waith.

"Christ the Lord Is Risen Today," Evans.

"Now Is Christ Risen from the Dead,"
West.

"A Psalm of Eastertide," Hull.

"As It Began To Dawn," Bochau.

Here are a series of anthems either written specially for Easter or of such joyous spirit as to be suitable for that season.
The first two are good, sturdy choruses of the traditional English school of Gadsby, Stainer, Goss, et al. type, easy in point of technique, and obviously designed for the chorus-choir. The two settings of the Wesley text are more in the nature of carols—short, brilliant, march-like numbers worthy of use as processions. With the three last titles we come to consider the

This Girl Is a Wonder

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00 and has made a fortune.
Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write today, Isabelle Inez, 368 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6 cents per word per insertion; cash with order.

Walter Monroe Jennings, Evangelist and Bible Teacher, Single or union meetings.
Box 272, Mt. Vernon, Wash.

Experienced Worker with Boys open for a position as assistant pastor or director of activities in some large church. Address
B. W. S., THE BAPTIST.

specifically Easter numbers. The West anthem is brilliant, melodious and easy, with graceful solo interludes. The Hull product is a trifle more unconventional, quieter in musical guise and sentiment, and of no particular difficulty. Perhaps the best of the series is the closing title. Here is a splendid composition, giving fine opportunity for dramatic expression, yet not presenting any troublesome corners to turn, in spite of its frequent use of modern harmonizations. With the suggested addition of a harp or piano, it should gain greatly in effect.

From the White-Smith Music Company, Boston:

"Rejoice in the Lord," Clough-Leighter.
"Awake, Glad Souls, Awake," Lester.
"It Is a Good Thing To Give Thanks," Waghorne.

The three are effective anthems fitting to the Easter season. All are quite modest in their demands vocally, melodic in texture, and diversified by appropriate solo bits, stirring in the devotional message set forth. The first two titles are effective for both quartet and chorus. The last is on broader lines, more adapted to larger choral masses.

The First Church of Lincoln, Neb., is putting in a large three-manual organ from the factory of George Kilgen and Son, St. Louis, Mo. Dr. John Mills Mayhew is the organist of the church, and he is responsible for the specifications of this instrument.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Speculating Made Easy

AN EASTERN reader of THE BAPTIST recently read a pamphlet issued by a brokerage house which set forth the possibilities of increasing one's income by putting up stocks or bonds as margin for the purchase of additional securities. Our friend now owns about $3000 worth of marketable stocks and a bond, all listed on the New York Exchange, and asked for further particulars. In reply, it was suggested by the broker that he send his present holdings to the latter with an order to buy additional shares in three companies and purchase a good railroad stock. The transaction would require about $11,000, which the broker would carry as an account on his books, holding as security the purchased stocks and those furnished by the buyer. Assuming that all the companies continue dividends at present rates and that the purchaser would not have to pay over 8 per cent on his $11,000 indebtedness to the broker, the figures indicated that his income would be increased $135 per year, not to mention the "profit making possibilities in the market" which the broker did not fail to suggest.

This is a typical speculative operation. All of the stocks which the broker advised purchasing are in well-established dividend-paying companies. He went on to show that it would require an average drop of ten points before the purchaser would be called on to furnish additional collateral. The comparative conservatism of the speculation was dwelt upon, with the inference that later on the ample margin might justify additional purchases.

Now for some of the contingencies that the broker did not mention:

In the first place, when a broker receives securities from a customer on a marginal transaction, he has implied power to pledge these securities for his own obligations. In fact, the bulk of stock exchange transactions are financed by the brokers' borrowing from the banks and giving the latter as security such stocks or bonds as the brokers may have in their possession. Now, in case the broker becomes insolvent, the bank, being in possession of these securities, may sell them to satisfy the broker's indebtedness, and has a claim superior to the original owner who has entrusted his securities to the broker. The writer has in mind a number of cases where purchasers on margin have been caught in such a predicament and now hold merely a claim against the bankrupt brokers' estate.

But granting that the broker is responsible, what else may happen? It must be borne in mind that the broker carries the customer's indebtedness on an open account. It is, in effect, a demand loan: the broker is under no obligation to carry it indefinitely. If circumstances require it, he may demand that the customer pay the amount due and take up his stock. For the ordinary purchaser, especially one who has already used most of his resources, this necessitates arranging for a loan at the bank—not always an easy thing to do, especially when banks are discriminating as to what loans are essential and what are non-essential. The broker is bound to give only "reasonable" notice, and if the purchaser fails to pay his account and redeem his stock, the broker may sell it, being accountable to the owner for whatever surplus is realized.

While 8 per cent would appear to be an ample rate for the broker to charge his customers, the rate sometimes is much higher. In New York the law provides that demand loans of $5000 and upward on stock exchange collateral may be made at any rate. It has been known to go over 100 per cent, and within the past few years there have been several occasions when it has been over 20 per cent. Stock exchange rules do not permit a broker to charge a customer less than he himself pays in interest. The result has been that many a speculative account has seen its theoretical "increased income" turned into a loss in recent years through high charges for interest.

An old adage runs to the effect that there are two classes of people who should never speculate—those who cannot afford to lose, and those who can. About a year ago, in one of the popular magazines, a writer declared that in over thirty years in Wall Street he had known hundreds, possibly thousands, of speculators; yet he could recall only one case where the speculator had been able to keep what he had made.

The Log of the "Flying Pig"

(Continued from page 115)

clatter woke up poor little Timothy. Right through the darkness we heard him chirping cheerfully to himself, "I guess it's God's flood!" He had expected it, and it had come. And there I was, a great big girl, afraid of rain. I was ashamed of myself.

But the next morning when father saw what the flood had done to our boat, he turned actually pale under his becoming new tan, for we were—adrift! It was simply thrilling.

(To be continued)

HARRY W. JONES
CHURCH ARCHITECT
Minneapolis

HANDBOOK OF Church Advertising

By FRANCIS H. CASE

It answers the question "How."

For—Pastors, Pastors' Assistants, Publicity Committees, Executive Secretaries, and All Persons who have the responsibility for advertising any phase of the church or its work.

Illustrations and charts. Net $1.25; by mail, $1.35.

THE ABINGDON PRESS

Beware of Contagious Diseases

THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE

INDIVIDUAL SERVICE

SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES

Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer.

Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing outfits for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

VISUAL INSTRUCTION

By Balopticon and Acme "Movie" Projection

LANTERNS SOLD & RENTED

Our Slide Library includes the "S. S. Times Pace Cartoons." Special slides made to order from your pictures or negatives. Write for Bulletins.

GEORGE W. BOND SLIDE CO.

Rm. B. 6 E. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outfits, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.

DEMOLIN BROS. & CO., Opt. 17 GREENVILLE, ILL.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

The American Baptist Home Mission Society

Our Corporate name is

"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"

Executive Secretary, Charles L. White

Treasurer, Samuel Bryant

23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

Notable Address by Shailer Mathews

By CHARLES H. WATSON

It was the fourth lecture on the Stephen Greene Foundation at Newton. It was given, as usual, in the Baptist meeting-house. Dr. Mathews took as his subject "The Christian Faith and the Community."

The Discovery of the Community

Befittingly the lecturer began with a simple and just tribute to the far-sighted and social spirit of Stephen Greene. He then declared that the nineteenth century discovered "society," and the twentieth century is discovering the "community."

We deal now not with abstractions, but with the community spirit which emerges from the social mind, in which customs become morals, and morals either justify or condemn. The generation that fought the war has seen admiration for the generation that brought it on. The church of the past bequeathed a morality insufficient for the church of the present. The Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount cannot be limited to individuals. We are acting as social classes, and community units. The modern church must concern itself with economic conditions just as Moses did with stealing and perjury. Our faith must be in Him who came not to condemn but to save. He is the Lord of the improvable and improving world; and by her working faith in him the church becomes his social engineer. Then such moral problems as the movies, the commercialized play and dance hall, the social problems of prohibition, living wage, rights of workingmen and employers, are for the church to solve by first-hand knowledge, vital sympathy, and confident leadership, else she will lose her religion.

The Church Saves from Above

The church must save from above. Her primary service is regeneration. She must make spiritual ideals supreme. Disbelief in the practicability of Christian ideals is the deadly and fundamental heresy. The great Christian creed that the cosmic God is good and fatherly; that justice, sympathy and good will are divine; that nemesis awaits self-seeking and self-indulgence; that blessedness comes to him who lives the life found in Jesus Christ; that forgiveness is a social force of vast effectiveness—this is a creed that calls for imagination, daring and faith. It is a faith that makes for hope and for progress. Communities languish, nations perish, and churches cumber the ground when these great fundamentals are disbelieved. The kingdom of God cannot be built out of communities which are not moved by the faith and the spirit of Jesus Christ. The working confidence with which to face the tragic present and the fateful morrow was uttered long ago: "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

The large, representative and appreciative assembly evidently expected the illumination of a subject in which Dr. Mathews had proved himself expert. Their close attention for an hour and a quarter attested the fulfillment of their expectation. The speaker firmly laid hold of the roots of Christian obligation as disclosed to us in Christ and the Bible. In that he rang true to the spirit and endeavor of the old seminary on the hill. One of our solidest Baptist educators on the Pacific Coast once said it all to the writer: "I have great respect for Newton. It is sound, progressive, true to the spiritual content of the Bible, and never 'top-sided.'"

"The Ever-Living Christ"

(Continued from page 100)

are met first by a tax-gatherer and a soldier, who inform them of his crucifixion, and then by the disciples, who give an account of his resurrection. The Wise Men leave, believing that Jesus lives forevermore.

Part II represents three modern Wise Men: a statesman, a scholar and a business man coming to ask whether Christ can enter into the policies of nations and direct the stirring events of today. They first meet the profiteer and the militarist, who declare that his teachings will not hold today. A missionary enters, who conducts the Wise Men to a Christian hospital in China, a Karen Sunday school in Burma, and a Christian center in an American city. They leave, affirming their belief in the power of Christ to live in each man transformed, changing ruthless competition and greed into unselfish service.

The exercise brings out the theme in less elaborate form than the play prepared for the department of his education by Rev. C. N. Arbuckle in collaboration with Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Berkeley of Newton Center, Mass.

When Is a Sunday School Graded?

(Continued from page 113)

For years we have recognized three stages in adolescent life, but have not grouped according to the psychology of the individual. Early adolescence corresponds to the transition period of life and becomes rightly the intermediate department. Middle adolescence is the high-school age, the assimilation period of life, and should be considered the senior department. There is a decided difference between the other ages of adolescence and the young people's group. Therefore the young people's department has been established. When a school is departmentalized as indicated, it meets the first graded requirement.

Second, a school is graded when the children of the same age and mental capabilities are grouped in the same class. Certain physical developments of human life are the result of age. The intellectual development of the child tends to expand his social horizon. So it is necessary to consider both age and mental capabilities in grading.

Third, a school is graded when the teachers are selected to suit the child. Graded teachers are as necessary as graded children and graded lessons. He who can teach junior boys well may not be at all adapted to junior high-school boys. His niche is fixed to a degree.

Fourth, the school is graded when the curriculum is graded. This means, of course, graded lessons of some sort. What is used is determined by the ability of the child to understand, by the spiritual needs at his particular age, and by the dominant characteristics of life at its various stages of development.

Fifth, the school is graded when there is annual promotion. No one ever should be graduated from the church school. But all need to realize that here is a school with standards and possible achievements which can be recognized at the commencement day. June and Children's Day or September and rally day are best adapted to this purpose.

Sixth, a school is graded when it is kept graded. Closest supervision should be made of each department, and every new pupil must be made to conform rigidly to the system. It is not always easy to grade. It is not easy to do any important educational task. Sometimes it seems that no task in the church is so baffling, for we deal with ideas and ideals more than with organization and statistical exactitudes. But brains, perseverance, tact and gumption will work wonders. "When I was a child I spoke as a child, I thought as a child, I understood as a child." We attempt simply to get the child to speak, think and understand the Christian religion as a child can and will.

Book Reviews

"Pagan and Pagan."

Elizabeth Corbett. New York: Henry Holt and Company.

No one will deny that this book has decided literary merit, although readers who do not enjoy expositions of the sex problem will stop there in their approval. The leading characters are a young painter and two young women—one a "pagan" and the other a so-called "puritan." Between these two the painter oscillates. The conclusion, although not altogether satisfactory, is probably the only logical one.

"The Personality of God."

By James H. Snowden. Pittsburgh: Western Theological Seminary, 1915.

Mr. Beecher said that he "died" in the existence and personality of God in spite of all the volumes written to prove it." Doubtless he had in mind the masses of endless arguments and evidence that were in his day burdening the student and reader. These days practical religious teachers and preachers no more argue for the existence of God than do astronomers for the existence of the sun. God is his own evidence in nature and in the heart of the believer. Still the personality, nature and character of God are subjects of living interest and discussion by believer, doubter, theist, deist and atheist. Seldom has come to our notice a more convenient readable and enlightening book on this great subject than this one by Prof. Snowden. No doubt these lectures have passed the keen inquiries of the classroom, where all manner of questions and objections were discussed and sifted, so that the volume represents considerations of the modern phases of difficulties as presented by friend and foe. Perplexing metaphysical and abstruse philosophical apologetics give room to answer practical questions and help solve problems in terms that can be understood by readers untrained in the theology and philosophy of professional schoolmen. The book is a classic adapted to the mind of the diligent student and the religious "seeker for God." The latest phases of doubts and objections are considered and examined with all fairness.

6.00
A P
Volume II

March 5, 1921

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO LIBRARY

MAR 24 1921

Number 5

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

RELIGIOUS BOOK WEEK NUMBER

And books we know,
Are a substantial world, both pure and good Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood,
Our pastime and our happiness will grow.
—Wordsworth.

Religious Book Week—March 13-20

An Oriental Parable of Present Day Significance

The Angel's Lily

By

RUSSELL H. CONWELL, D.D.

Pastor of Temple Church, Philadelphia; founder and head of Temple University;
famous lecturer; practical philanthropist.

KNOWN as "pre-eminent preacher of personal opportunity and individual achievement," Dr. Conwell probably holds the world's record as a lecturer. For forty years steadily, for sixty-one years intermittently, he has spoken to American audiences. During a large part of the year he now lectures five nights a week—210 lectures a year. In addition to this, in spite of his seventy-seven years, he preaches twice each Sunday to audiences which vary in numbers from three to four thousand.

Just Published

Illustrated      Cloth      $1.25 net

America needs "the rediscovery of Religious Dynamic"

The Religion of Jesus

By ALBERT G. LAWSON, D.D.

Boards, 75 cents

In method of treatment, descriptive rather than historical or philosophical; in style, addresses, not essays; in matter, Biblical; the work of a lover of good books—these four papers have the charm of sincerity and beauty in expression that well supports their practical purpose.

A Study of the Holy Spirit

By T. P. STAFFORD, A.M., Th.D.

Boards, $1.00 net

A well-ordered exposition of the Scripture teaching as to the Holy Spirit. Biblical in method, simple in statement, practical in purpose, this work should find a place not only on the student's shelf, but on the desk of the pastor who aims at Scriptural presentation of so important a doctrine, and in the hands of the church worker who seeks intelligent contact with the source of spiritual power for himself and for others.

You and Your Church

By JAMES S. KIRTLEY, D.D.

Boards, $1.25

What is involved in being a Christian, a church-member? Out of an experience of many years as a pastor, Doctor Kirtley has set forth replies to these questions in such way as to construct a work of great practical value to young people. The volume is especially adapted to serve as a text-book for classes in study of the essentials of the principles, polity, and work of Baptist churches.

The Stature of a Perfect Man

By P. H. J. LERRIGO, M.D.

Boards, $1.00 net

A physician's contributions to the statement of natural laws in the spiritual world. Through science "undreamed-of natural secrets have become the commonplaces of popular information." Dr. Lerrigo has drawn upon one department of this widely disseminated classified knowledge in an attempt to indicate the wealth of possibilities of teaching by means of parable the truth concerning the life processes of the soul.

Do the Dead Still Live? or, The Testimony of Science Respecting a Future Life

By DAVID HEAGLE, Ph., D.D.

Cloth, $1.50 net

The author has sought to present in up-to-date structure the entire argument for immortality, drawing from all possible sources, not only using the familiar contributions to assurance furnished by philosophy, poetry, and the Scriptures, but finding exceedingly important material of more modern origin in the fields of science, especially in biology, physics, physiology, and psychology. The spiritistic phenomena, brought into renewed prominence as a psychological by-product of the great war, come under review.

Friday's Footprints

By MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

Cloth, $1.50 net

Here are missionary stories—almost two-score of them—told by a master of storytelling who has so coordinated her work and who presents her material in such a fascinating way that to read her chapters is to take a personally conducted tour around the world of missionary interest. Miss Applegarth's charming style in expression of her thorough grasp of facts is most effective to win attention and to lodge information.

The Garo Jungle Book

By WILLIAM CAREY

Cloth, $2.00 net

A notable missionary monograph, replete with information, ably written, combining the lure of a story with the reward of worth-while facts. The book throbs with human interest, in the description of the wild hill people, their mountain habitat, the contacts of some of their own men with civilization and Christianity, the strength and weakness of these first native apostles, and the development of the mission under American leadership. Profusely illustrated.

All books mentioned or reviewed in THE BAPTIST can be obtained from our nearest branch. Your orders will have prompt and careful attention.

Send for a copy of our new DESCRIPTIVE CATALOG OF BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, AND TRACTS.

American Baptist Publication Society

Philadelphia

Boston

Chicago

St. Louis

Kansas City

Los Angeles

Seattle

Toronto

The Baptist

Vol. II

March 5, 1921

No. 5

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire
Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER      MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE      MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WILLIAM A. MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs including every family, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
EDITORIALS .....	133
A MAN AND HIS BOOKS, by Harry Emerson Fosdick..	136
THE PLACE OF RELIGIOUS BOOKS IN THE HOME, by Emory W. Hunt .....	136
RELIGIOUS BOOKS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE AND CHILDREN, by Mary E. Bamford .....	137
BOOKS I SHOULD LIKE MY PASTOR TO READ .....	138
BOOKS I SHOULD LIKE MY PEOPLE TO READ .....	139
A PASTOR'S READING, by E. M. Poteat .....	140
THE BEST SELLERS OF RECENT MONTHS .....	141
WHAT BAPTISTS STAND FOR, by William Henry Geist-weit .....	142
BOOKS—THE SILENT SERVANTS OF MAN .....	143
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	144
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	145
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	146
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	148
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	149
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	156
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	158
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS .....	159

Look for It Next Week

ONE of the very best things planned for this number was an article by Prof. John R. Brown of Rochester on the subject, "Religious Literature—Then and Now." The article is written and in our hands and is just as stimulating and thought-provoking as we anticipated. But unfortunately it reached us just too late for inclusion in the present number. It will therefore appear next week. Watch for it.

Religious Books

WE have in this column "occasionally" reminded our readers that THE BAPTIST is a religious book published in fifty-two installments. Its editorials are written, its departments conducted, its articles selected, and its news gathered with the one purpose of equipping and inspiring men and women to become better church workers.

Perhaps its greatest service is that of a sign-board. It points to the work which needs to be done, the methods successful individuals and institutions are employing, and to men and women whose examples are a challenge.

This number is a religious book number. It calls attention to the place books have in molding our lives. Of the making of books there is no end—good books, bad books, useful books and useless books weigh down the bookshelves. It is a real task to select a good book for a young man or for a young woman. With this in mind we asked an experienced man to name a half dozen recent books for young men.

He said that Dr. Fosdick's books are probably first. More than a half million have been sold, and the sale is increasing. "Among the best are 'The Meaning of Prayer,' 'The Meaning of Faith' and 'The Meaning of Service.' The last named is just off the press. It costs $1.25. Every young man should read 'The Dynamic of Manhood,' by Luther Gulick. It costs $1.25 and is a sane treatment of the dominating force in a man's life—love, and its four chief channels of expression—toward friend, woman, children and God."

We made the same request of a woman who is giving her life to serving young women. "There are so many good books coming from the press I hardly know what to say. The Inch Library is very helpful. Three sets of nine pamphlets each are written especially for girls. These cost 60 cents per inch. They deal with all phases of a girl's life. Then there is 'Courage: Today and Tomorrow,' by Jeanette Marks. This gives a working philosophy of life full of cheer and inspiration. The book costs $1.35."

There are two new books which seek to prepare girls for their new responsibilities in the state which are very good: "The Young Woman Citizen," by Mary Austin ($1.35), and "Christian Citizenship for Girls," by Helen Thoburn (paper 25 cents, cloth 50 cents).

"All Night with the Stars," by Louise Brown, is a simple lesson in astronomy, but it takes one where God may easily be found (cloth 50 cents).

Any of these books can be secured at your nearest branch of the Publication Society. The prices are net and postage should be sent.

A Great Inspiration

By JOHN Y. AITCHISON

THE missionary conferences are proving to be a great inspiration to our people. From every quarter pastors and church leaders are expressing the highest appreciation of the plan and seem eager to know more of the work of the mission field and the needs back of the hundred million dollars. Our missionaries are telling wonderful stories of the triumphs of the gospel on the mission fields at home and abroad. Comparative statements showing the condition of the mission fields today and thirty or forty years ago reveal the wonderful, almost superhuman results which have grown out of the service of our own missionaries.

Experience in connection with these conferences has demonstrated more clearly than ever to the General Board of Promotion that the future promotional program must be along the line of missionary achievements and a definite statement of the needs and of the opportunities which are developing in the various mission fields.

Splendid support has been given by pastors and church leaders during this series of conferences. Our gratification is great that churches in all quarters have shown such zeal and fervor in mission interests, and that they have declared their intention of re-doubling their efforts, in order to secure their full quotas in the New World Movement. Letters which have come to us from as far east as Maine and from as far west as California tell more clearly than any words of mine could do how general is the interest awakened by the missionary conferences.

Illinois reports "an intense kindling of the flame of consecration and sympathy, as the conferences proceeded." "The most thoughtful men at Alton said, 'If the other 150 conferences rise to the height of the one at Alton, it is a sure conviction that these conferences will be the greatest contribution to the denomination and to our great purpose that has occurred among us for a great while,'" comes word from that state. "The feeling is expressed that the results of these conferences will grow with the years of the next decade, rather than fade. The blessing of God upon the meetings was evident from the very first song that was sung. The speakers say that they went to throw fuel on a fire, rather than to kindle one. Dr. Franklin was at his best, and Dr. Ferguson is a host in himself, while the women were unusually strong speakers."

"The Michigan conference is a splendid success!" tersely communicates that state.

"The Fresno conference is one of the largest and best in the series," writes a member of the team in California. "Definite plans have been adopted to put that association over the top. Great results are expected. Our team is united in the belief that tremendous good will come from these conferences."

"New Jersey votes unanimously for missionary conferences and asks when they will come again," a member of that team reports. "At all the conferences, the spirit was excellent. Interest centered in the open discussions of the progress and plans of the New World Movement. Questions were freely asked and frankly answered. At each point particular pains were taken to show the large and influential plans which the women of the churches may and should have in the new missionary methods. The women manifested particular interest in the plans for the Easter thank-offering and were pleased with the new missionary boxes, designed by Mrs. Aitchison and Mrs. Pratt. In each conference appreciation was expressed for the light which had been thrown upon many questions about the New World Movement upon which there had been misunderstanding and confusion. A number of different people contributed to the interest of these conferences. Mrs. C. A. Brooks, Miss Harriet Smith, Dr. Hunt and Dr. Padelford spoke at each place. Dr. Huntley and Mr. Vinton spoke at Orange, and Mr. Vinton at Bridgeton also."

One woman in another place declared, "I go with a very different conception of the New World Movement." One pastor, who has been remaining silent, is now loud in his praises of New World Movement.

"The conferences are demonstrating how hungry the small churches are to hear more of home and foreign work and to know all about our denominational interests," writes Iowa.

Dr. E. R. Pope, director of promotion for Minnesota, characterizes the missionary conferences as remarkable for their fine spirit and marked spiritual tone.

"Great interest aroused," reports Wyoming. Good meetings. Team working splendidly."

"Without exception, each conference was characterized by a very spiritual atmosphere," Wisconsin declares. "Questions were fully discussed and strong, telling missionary addresses given. Great feeling is expressed in these local church conferences. The state is planning a series of one-day conferences, with Dr. Hulbert, Dr. Eubank and Miss Elsie Kappen."

"Tremendous good being accomplished by these conferences," Oregon says. "The conferences heartily pledged their efforts to complete Oregon's task."

"Erie conferences were of unusual interest and power," comes the word from that Pennsylvania city.

A. A. Forshee reports a successful conference in Kansas City, in a letter to Mrs. L. Jessie P. Bishop, secretary of the speakers' division. "This is just the sort of thing we need!" men said to Dr. Robbins at the close of the conference. "I am going back to my church to put the thing over!" another man said.

"I believe that this will mark a new day for our cause in West Virginia," Dr. G. E. Bartlett, state director of promotion writes. "I am trusting that the other states are having similar results."

As an instance of the splendid feeling that has permeated these conferences may be mentioned the following resolution, adopted at a meeting of the ministers' conference of the Mongahella Association, with R. A. Austin and J. C. Madden on the committee:

Resolved: That it be our goal to attain by every church in our association 100 per cent in the standard set by the Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention.

The laymen, at a subsequent meeting, heartily endorsed the action of the pastors' conference and pledged their hearty co-operation in carrying it out. At the men's conference, this action was taken:

Resolved: That we heartily endorse and approve the plan of our Board of Promotion to complete the raising of the hundred million dollar fund, and pledge our increasing loyalty in bringing it to final consummation.

We desire to express our appreciation of the services of the executive officers of the state and of the General Board of Promotion and our sense of fellowship with them in great enterprises.

Surely "a sense of fellowship in great enterprises" has come to all of us through these missionary conferences.

A Remarkable Record for Pennsylvania

THE REPORT OF SOME OF THE PENNSYLVANIA CHURCHES WHICH SUBSCRIBED THEIR FULL QUOTAS TO THE NEW WORLD MOVEMENT.

ONE HUNDRED and twenty-five churches whose record is tabulated below have subscribed their full quota to the New World Movement. These churches represent every association in Pennsylvania excepting one. They have not been picked out especially in order to make a good showing. All the churches whose record we have are included in this statement.

Many of these churches contributed very little to world-wide missions during the fiscal year 1919-1920. Several of them did not give anything.

Some of the foreign-speaking and mission churches have made exceptionally high per capita subscriptions.

These facts have been furnished by the state director of promotion, Dr. William G. Russell.

Association	Number of churches pledging their full allotment	Total amount pledged by these churches	Total amount contributed by these churches April 1, 1919-May 1, 1920	Total amount contributed by these churches in nine months—May 1, 1920, to Jan. 20, 1921
Abington .....	1	$ 1,000.00	$ 23.00	$ 111.00
Allegheny River .....	2	1,302.02	409.13	1,004.29
Beaver .....	3	19,304.09	541.47	957.53
Bradford .....	1	480.00		42.56
Bridgewater .....	1	3,631.98	118.02	418.77
Central Union .....	5	100,141.56	5,319.92	16,706.03
Center .....	1	17,149.68	561.34	2,535.30
Clarion .....	2	5,261.10	1,193.59	641.00
Clearfield .....	3	15,292.50	504.18	1,445.00
French Creek .....	2	83,967.17	3,590.33	11,158.60
Harrisburg .....	4	34,077.51	2,260.01	4,562.52
Indiana .....	2	6,275.34	85.60	1,034.51
Monongahela .....	11	141,588.23	5,775.02	25,078.63
N. Philadelphia .....	10	146,895.41	7,788.32	18,723.22
Northumberland .....	8	168,304.45	7,563.23	19,773.22
Oil Creek .....	1	58,875.37	2,740.24	7,585.70
Philadelphia .....	13	282,369.81	11,974.81	35,219.90
Philadelphia (Cont'd) .....	20	439,313.93	42,543.34	111,341.48
Pittsburgh .....	16	251,166.28	19,829.98	30,618.36
Reading .....	4	23,181.76	1,168.59	2,877.89
Riverside .....	3	56,248.52	2,891.61	7,089.42
Ten Mile .....	1	14,241.45	380.65	2,555.35
Wayne .....	1	1,798.00	55.72	63.60
Welsh .....	1	3,900.00	123.00	546.00
Wyoming .....	4	28,104.94	671.63	3,364.04
Totals .....		$1,981,304.10	$103,556.58	$270,234.63

The Baptist

Was Jesus a Swede?

IN ST. PAUL, Minn., there is an aged member of one of our Baptist churches who insists that Jesus was a Swede. And in proof she declares that the Bible is written in Swedish and that every one of the words of Christ is spoken in the same language. What possibly could be clearer?

Before this it has been pointed out that when Jesus was painted by Italian artists in the wonderful past, it was an Italian face which looked out from the canvas. In these later days, we have seen the Chinese painting Chinese Christs and the people of India giving us Indian Christs. Now and then one of our moderns makes an attempt to give us a Christ with a Jewish type of face, but in almost every case it is possible to tell from the picture the nationality of the artist.

This is something like the miracle of Pentecost. Then every man heard the gospel preached in the tongue in which he had been born. Now every man sees the Christ as one of his own people. He is never a foreigner. He is always one of us and yet always more than any one of us is or ever can be.

This cosmopolitanism of Jesus is one of the things about him which captures our imagination when we stop to think of it. There are few other leaders of whom it is true. Confucius is forever a native of China and Mohammed belongs to the East. Multitudes of the men and the women who come to us from England and France are distinctly of a different type from ourselves. But Jesus is always one of our own number.

The aged Baptist is right. Jesus is a Swede. But he is more: he is also a Frenchman and a German and an Englishman and a Japanese and an Indian. He is man, typically and representatively man always and everywhere. Humanity has its summing up in him. He reaches out his arms to all, and whosoever will may come to him and feel no sense of strangeness.

It is a glorious thing for our aged friend to be able to go to the Master and feel that he can understand all her troubles and ambitions and disappointments and successes because he too is a Swede. But it is no less delightful that the silver-tongued Negro preacher whom we know can go to a Christ who knows the Negro heart and answers to it. And is not the inspiration of those who carry the gospel to all lands found in the fact that the people to whom they go may find the missionary a foreigner but will never think of the Christ as a stranger? Thank God for a Christ who belongs to us!

O Lord Jesus, we who speak many tongues, whose faces are of different colors, whose traditions are utterly different, come together at thy feet. Surely thou art one of us. In thy presence race and color are forgotten. For as thou dost speak to the one heart so dost thou also speak to the other. In thee all we have willed or dreamed of good is found. In thee all our best visions of manhood and womanhood become fact. And we are all thine, and thou art calling us all to thyself. Bless us, we pray thee, with thine own spirit. Teach us how to rise above the level of race. May all that is human be dear to us also. In the name of a Christ who loved all and belongs to all may we become lovers of our kind, sharers of thy task of uniting all men in the bonds of love.

When Did You Buy a Book?

THE spoken word always has power. Let a great preacher or orator arise anywhere and the crowds flock to hear him. But, in an unprecedented way, this is the day of the picture and of the printed page. The moving picture houses are crowded; the industry itself has reached vast proportions. Newspapers and magazines reach almost every home in the land. Even increased costs have not materially lessened the demand. Has the sale of books kept pace? When did you last buy a book? If the sale of books has not increased proportionately, is this because of the price or because the magazines have so largely filled the demand for reading matter?

When a man stands by a modern news-stand he realizes that there is reading in plenty. But what kind of reading? What are on the pages to which people are giving their attention? These questions are of the greatest importance to the individual and to society. Character is formed by the image one holds in his mind. Such images are the product of what one sees and reads.

Do parents turn aside long enough from their favorite magazine to consider the books the children have secured from the library? Is their own reading of a sufficiently good type so that they could venture criticism or suggestion.

The week of March 13-20 is being observed as Religious Book Week. Attention is being called to religious books and to the desirability of having such in the home. There are homes which have almost no books. But the great majority have at least a few. Among those few should be some of a religious character. The cost of a good book is not more than is paid for a good lecture ticket or for two pounds of candy. And the book remains a valued possession to be read not once but several times.

On books of this kind great souls have been nourished. Books of the first value have been spiritual food and drink. Whenever the story of any great man is told, there is certain to be mention of a few books which helped to shape his character. It makes a difference what is read. Great souls are not produced by yellow literature.

In this issue are articles of the greatest value dealing with this subject of a person's reading. They are of concern to pastor and layman, to parents and children, to the middle-aged and the young. We bespeak for them a thoughtful reading. For this matter of books in the home enters deeply into many matters of the utmost spiritual importance.

God Give Us Men!

THE foundations of the Republic are laid in the lives of men who are true and unselfish and religious.

February brought us the birthdays of the two greatest Americans—Washington and Lincoln—and in our schools and churches and newspapers there was sounded the praise of these men and of the principles for which they stood. Washington was rich and Lincoln was poor, but inasmuch as both were rich in faith and in life, no contrast is made between the two on this account. Indeed one is compelled to remind himself of the wealth of the one and the poverty of the other, for so strongly does attention center on the men themselves that their circumstances are lost sight of.

So long as America can produce men with the spirit which was in these two her destinies are sure. Both of them had problems hard enough to make body and soul weary; both of them were beset by enemies; both of them were victims of malicious propaganda and of circumstances which seemed at times likely to prove too strong for them. But both believed in God and in themselves, in the people and in the principles of liberty, in the worth of a life which is given unselfishly for men. And living out their beliefs, they won. Washington died at home in peace; Lincoln died by the assassin's bullet; but both of them died as conquerors.

The United States is not so much territory or so much wealth; it is people. Its future depends upon the kind of people who make up its citizenship. Make the ideals of Washington and Lincoln supreme and all is well. Forget these ideals and America will have lost its mission to the world. The nation is praying for prosperity. It had better be praying for men—men of the type we have been remembering, and bringing up its children in the love and spirit of men like these.

Looking towards Des Moines

THOSE who are planning to attend the Des Moines convention in June should speedily get in touch with Mr. F. E. Goodell, 3620 Adams St., Des Moines, who has charge of assignments. The earlier applications are received, the better they can be handled.

This convention promises to be great in numbers, in interest and in enthusiasm. Reports from all parts of the country indicate that our Northern Baptists are waking to the vision of the world task, and that there is beginning a noteworthy consecration of money and of life. The Des Moines convention will be another step towards the tremendous objective which has been placed before us and which is constantly becoming more thrilling as we see its outworkings. There will be reports concerning money but even more will there be reports of the Christian faith and zeal out of which all contributions come.

Why are we going to Des Moines? To fellowship with the saints, to review the labors of the past year, to recount the mighty things which God has wrought, to consecrate ourselves to a larger, better service in the new year, to enjoy a brief period on the mountain top with our Lord before we return to the struggle with sin in the valley.

There is also another thing which will take us to Des Moines and that is to experience a sense of the growing Baptist solidarity. Our "rope of sand" organization is a marvel in the eyes of our brethren of other communions. There are times when we ourselves wonder whether it is going to hold, but always when we have talked over our differences we come to realize that we have so many things in common—and all of them vital things—that we return to our homes rejoicing in our liberty and in the gracious spirit of co-operation and unity which has become manifest. Our unity is not primarily in an outward form but in an inner spirit—we are one in Christ Jesus.

The Gift of a Lovely Thought

FOR a text and sermon we take the following from the Universalist Leader:

"Associate reverently, and as much as you can, with your loftiest thoughts," wrote Thoreau, and Sir Philip Sidney seems to tell us what reason must have been in the naturalist's mind, when he says, "They are never alone that are accompanied by noble thoughts."

Noble thinking is next to noble living. Perhaps we should speak more exactly and say that noble thinking precedes noble living. If any of us on our wanderings and eternal journeyings should chance upon the kingdom of Heaven we might well say with the dreaming Zoroaster, "Taking the first footstep with a good thought, the second with a good word, and the third with a good deed, I entered Paradise."

But noble thinking is nothing extravagant, elaborate or in any way pretentious. In reality it is a part of the simple life. Noble thoughts are a form of riches within the reach of each and all, and their value cannot be measured or estimated.

One of the great values attached to these riches is that the more we give them away the richer we ourselves become. So truly did George Macdonald believe this that he wrote:

"If instead of a gem, or even a flower, we could cast the gift of a lovely thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give."

And now for an application, we remark that one of the easiest and best ways of passing along a noble thought into the heart of a friend is to send him THE BAPTIST for a year, or make a present to him of some loved religious book.

Knowing Where We Stand

ONE OF the large churches of the Middle West has recently voted to place in every home represented in its membership a copy of "A New Baptist Church Manual," issued by the Publication Society. The booklet is comparatively small, but contains many things with which every Baptist should be thoroughly familiar.

We Baptists stand for certain Bible principles and teachings for which our fathers have suffered much. The fact that we enjoy the rich heritage of their struggles should lead us at the very least to seek a thorough understanding of those fundamentals. Other churches may well follow the example of this particular church, using either this pamphlet or the little volume recently issued by J. S. Kirtley or some similar work. Let us be thoroughly grounded in the faith once for all delivered to the saints. Let us see that our children know the meaning of what we are doing in our Baptist churches so that they shall be able later to give a reason for the faith that is in them.

A Critic from India

ONE OF the greatest obstacles to missionary success, we have often been told, is the life of so-called Christian countries. And so long as lands nominally Christian permit and even encourage practices on which these other lands look with abhorrence, this is certain to be the case.

There has been visiting in Boston a young woman from India. She is a Brahmin of the highest caste and so particularly favored. Her statement, therefore, that she would not care to become a Christian and that she prefers the Hindu religion does not mean much, for she is not one of the real victims of the social system for which her religion is responsible. Nor can she be hedged in, as the majority of Indian women are, or she would not be visiting in the United States. One cannot judge a religion from such an exponent of it.

But there is a criticism she makes that has some punch to it. She is amazed and shocked by what she calls the "immoral clothing" our women wear and the "shocking dances" in which they take part. She cannot understand why the authorities permit it. If she tried to introduce dancing in India, she says, her people would lose all respect for her. Anybody who knows the position of women in India can readily believe that.

The Chicago Journal of Commerce, commenting on this young woman's views, says, "Her theology may be all twisted, but her moral sense and devotion to propriety cannot be questioned." And to that most of us can say, "Amen." There are many things in our manner of life in this country of which Christian people cannot be proud. The least they can do is to be an example to these foreign people in all godliness and sobriety of behavior.

Spiritual Dyspeptics

THE man who over-feeds and neglects exercise invites dyspepsia. The Christian who feeds his spiritual emotions and lets his mind kindle under the words of preacher or evangelist and forgets what James said about "pure religion and undefiled" invites spiritual dyspepsia. Doctrine is necessary, but heaven defend us against those who are over-long on doctrine and short on practice. The possession of the true doctrine should always result in Christlike action. Fervor is beautiful, but a coal may burn itself to ashes and never come into the place where it is of real service.

There is such a thing as practical religion. Here, for instance, is a woman who is confined to her house because she must care for a small baby: pure religion would in some cases send its possessor to care for that baby in order that the mother may have a few hours' outing. A small boy who has been sick sits at the window and longs for somebody with whom to play checkers: he is sure of the Christian goodness of the person who comes in to play with him. A man is fixing a bit of his roof and having rather a hard time of it: that neighbor who lends his assistance shows himself a good missionary. How the possibilities multiply as one thinks of them! Was this also included in Jesus' meaning when he said that in doing a service to some needy one we were doing it unto him?

The Christian needs exercise. He will find it in connection with our great missionary enterprises and in church work. But he will find it also in lowly service done in the name of his Lord. Individual Christians may not realize that they have become spiritual dyspeptics. But their neighbors know and count the other person's religion vain. The surest remedy for such a condition, whether known or suspected, is action. First, prayer and a feast on the Word and meditation, then the doing of all manner of kindly things in Christ's spirit—a method suggested by the Great Physician.

Announcement

ON MARCH 1, Rev. U. M. McGuire, for many years editor of the Indiana Observer, joins the staff of THE BAPTIST as Associate Editor. The able work he has done on the Indiana paper is the surest prophecy of the gifts he will bring to the service of our denominational organ.

This Week's Prize-Winner

Baptists and the Big Cities

THE diagnosis made by Mr. Bryce of the government of American cities may be easily applied to our Baptist work in the great urban centers, for here is probably disclosed our most conspicuous failure. Both are in a sense failures of democracy, though we should be slow to admit that these failures are inherent in democracy. Here, it may be, the cure of the ills of democracy is "more democracy." In the case of the Baptists in their dealings with city problems, the remedy is in that necessary implication in all sane democracy, namely, co-operation.

The two most pressing church problems for the cities are the down-town problem and the suburban problem. The first has been made more acute by the development of the second. To minister to the surging populations of foreign peoples who are taking the heart of the great cities, and also to the growing young American families who for the sake of cheaper rents, better environment for their children, and other more or less valid reasons, have settled on the outskirts of the great cities—these are the tasks which Baptists can accomplish only by voluntary, but patient, persistent and thoroughly-organized effort.

Recently-published figures show for the first time that the majority of the people of the United States are urban—51 per cent of them. The next census will no doubt reveal a continuation of this steady relative growth of the cities. Baptists have been largely a rural people. Shall we be satisfied to let the cities go by default?

Nietzsche said contemptuously, "Spit upon the city and pass by." Jesus stood and "wept over the city." Whose counsel and example shall we follow?

Chester, Pa.

EDWARD B. POLLARD.

A Man and His Books

Books are the open avenues down which great ideas and inspirations move to the abbey of man's soul

BY HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK

IT IS a great pity that when all of us are reading so much of the time, and when, as someone has put it, "life is a blur of printed paper," there are not more who make it a religious duty to acquaint themselves with the great dynamic literature of the spiritual life.

When one considers how much we do read, how reading creeps in at all the cracks and crannies of our lives, how our ideas are shaped and our views of life suggested by our reading, how the possibilities that lie in books to ruin or exalt man's life are open for a few pennies to all of us, one must agree that few questions are more important to the culture of the spiritual life than the question of a man and his books.

Great books are the finest of all democrats. They come to us all alike on equal terms. If St. Augustine or Wesley or Phillips Brooks were alive, only a few of us could see them and hardly any of us could have private seances with them. But this is not true of their books. Though we are so poor that we must buy them in paper covers, they will repeat their message again and again. If we forget their truth, we can come back next evening and they will tell it to us once more.

If kings and queens were waiting to talk with us, if noblemen and princes were holding audience till we should come, how long would we stop to barter gossip with the corner loafers? And yet we do just that when we read the cheap and temporary trash of superficial minds, while all the while the great books of the spirit are waiting for us. "Do you not know," cried Ruskin, "that if you read this you cannot read that?"

Some people read to get information about their business. They use their books as Pharaoh used his slaves—menial drudges to help build the pyramids of their success. Some people read to keep abreast of the times. It is a hurrying age in which we are kept panting, out of breath, in our endeavor to keep up the pace. Books, like wings on the heels of Mercury, marvelously increase our ability to keep abreast of our swiftly moving time and not to be utterly belated in the rush of movements and events.

Some people read because they are expected to, and because a stigma attaches to the man who has not read the famous or the latest books. There are a few clubs by the duress of which we are more driven than that appalling question, "Have you read —?" But while such motives as these lie behind the reading of multitudes of people, there are some folk still left who look to books as one of the great sources of enrichment to their spiritual life.

Books are the open avenues down which, like kings coming to be crowned, great ideas and inspirations move to the abbey of man's soul. There are some folk still left who would understand perfectly what Fenelon meant when he said, "If the crowns of all the kingdoms of the empire were laid down at my feet in exchange for my books and my love of reading, I would spurn them all."

The Place of Religious Books in the Home

*We are careful about the children's food: what about their reading?
Religious books of the most virile sort should be within reach*

BY EMORY W. HUNT

WE HAVE a comfortable confidence in heredity. We believe unquestionably in our family. Because they are our children, we are sure that they will ultimately turn out all right.

Of course we are careful about their food. We sterilize their milk while they are babies, and we give them good advice about their diet later.

Does human experience justify our confidence that the higher values will be automatically preserved? We do feel that we should cultivate their taste for music and for art. Should we not take as much care to develop and correct taste for reading? Surely if ours is a religious family there will be a place in it for some religious books.

In what we call our complex life, everything good is subjected to pitiless competition. We no longer go to church because there is no other place to go. We do not read religious books because there is no other kind within reach.

We depend upon the board of the public library to censor the multitude of books which are placed before our children; but the board is as busy as we are.

We take care to quarantine our children against diseases of the body; but we feel that it is impracticable to quarantine them against books and magazines which permanently disfigure the life. The religious family cannot transfer to any other the responsibility for the culture of the taste for the good in literature.

Many have felt a need for the production of a better quality of religious literature for the young. Our Sunday-school libraries have held many stories of which the hero was "a blameless prig." We need to have ideals of character placed before our youth which are more than good—are good for something.

The Christian life calls for courage, for strength and for initiative. These are the qualities which appeal to our healthy children. The finest elements of character are attractive, and the worst are unattractive. Their portraiture should make them appear so.

No materials for such work are so rich as the biblical literature and the records of Christian life and history.

In our day also there has been a more thorough study of the developing mind and an appreciation of adaptation to the different stages of that development. As a result, we have collections of stories fitted for the different ages of that growth. Nothing should interest Christian parents more than the results of such study. The development of a taste for the right reading, by fitting the right food to the right time, is the surest safeguard against the wrong, both in reading and in companionship.

Nor are we by any means destitute of such books. Foster's Bible stories are of perennial interest and value. Their covers have been worn out while they have formed the taste and have passed into the fiber of three generations of children fortunate enough to be reared in homes where they were known. And all the way from Foster to Boreham—the Baptist minister in the antipodes, the supreme religious essayist of our day, who leads us "through nature up to nature's God"—we have books which should keep us too busy for that which is worthless or degrading.

Our young people are going to read. We must have time to know and to direct what they read. The place of truly religious books in the home should be within easy reach.

Lewisburg, Pa.

Religious Books for Young People and Children

There are books so interesting that all others become dull in comparison. This is to introduce a few to the young people

BY MARY E. BAMFORD

FIRST, each child or young person should have his or her own personal copy of the Bible, and should be brought up from childhood to read a portion of Scripture daily. Then grown people will not have to go to a librarian as a man came to me once in the reference department of a city library, asking me to show him where the story of Joseph was to be found in the Bible he held. Neither will a girl of sixteen or so come to the library and ask, as a girl did of me, "Where can I find the myth of Naboth's vineyard?" "Why?" I exclaimed, "that isn't a myth! That's history!" and I found her the twenty-first chapter of I Kings.

Next, a child or young person should be familiar with "Pilgrim's Progress." One Sunday I handed to a young married woman in my Sunday-school class a copy of "Pilgrim's Progress," asking her to read aloud a certain part that bore on our lesson for the day. She began to read, then stopped a little laughingly to say, "How queer it sounds!" Evidently she was not used to the diction of John Bunyan. I remember how, when a young person, I used to pore over "Pilgrim's Progress" Sunday afternoons. Good is it for young folks to know Christian and Faithful and Great Heart and Giant Despair and others of that immortal company.

Third, a child will read a good deal of missionary literature if it is served up right. Have I not four junior missionary books right now in the hands of eleven, twelve or fourteen-year-old girls in our Sunday school—the simple expedient of circulation being that on the back fly-leaf the words, "I have read this book," are written, and under those words each girl signs her name after reading the book? Those children have nearly read into old-book-age two paper-covered copies of Charles Lincoln White's "Children of the Lighthouse," which I consider the best home mission junior book he ever produced. "Lamp-Lighters across the Sea," by Margaret Applegarth, and "Mr. Friend O' Man" are the other books I have started among those girls. The following missionary books are good:

My Guide

THERE is no path in this desert waste.

For the winds have swept the shifting sands;

The trail is blind where the storms have raced,

And a stranger, I, in these fearsome lands.

But I journey on with a lightsome tread;

I do not falter nor turn aside;

For I see His figure, just ahead—

He knows the way I take—my Guide.

There is no path in this trackless sea,

No map is limned on the restless waves;

The ocean snares are strange to me

Where the unseen wind in its fury raves;

But it matters naught; my sails are set,

And my swift prow tosses the seas aside;

For the changeless stars are steadfast yet.

And I sail by His star-blazed trail

—my Guide.

There is no way in this starless night;

There is naught but cloud in the inky skies;

The black night smothers me, left and right;

I stare with a blind man's straining eyes;

But my steps are firm, for I cannot stray;

The path to my feet seems light and wide;

For I hear His voice: "I am the way!"

And I sing as I follow Him on—my Guide.

—Robert J. Burdette.

"African Adventurers," by Jean Mackenzie.

"Uganda's White Man of Work," by Fahs.

"Friday's Footprints," by Applegarth.

"The White Foreigners" (American Tract Society).

"Ann of Ava," by Hubbard.

"Under Marching Orders," by Hubbard.

"Winning the Oregon Country," by John Faris.

"White Heroines of Africa" (English publication).

"Yarns of Heroes in India."

"Yarns of African Pioneers."

"Kiowa," by Isabel Crawford.

"Giovanni," by Anita B. Ferris.

"Called to the Colors," by Martha Van Marter.

"Around the World with Jack and Janet," by Norma Waterbury.

"Helping the Helpless in Lower New York," by Bainbridge.

"Story of Antonio the Galley Slave," by Arrighi.

"Jack of All Trades," by Applegarth.

"Mr. Friend O' Man," by Stocking.

"Good Bird the Indian," by Gilbert Wilson.

"In and Out of Homes in India," by Lee.

"Junior Mission Stories," by Applegarth.

"Life of Adoniram Judson."

Years ago, when my young grandfather became a Christian, he took his copy of "Robinson Crusoe" and buried it in the earth. In those stern days he thought he could not follow Christ and read "Robinson Crusoe." Our thoughts as readers and as Christians in these days are different. Yet let not the parent who spends her Sunday afternoons reading the Ladies' Home Journal, without a look at the library book her young daughter is reading, hold herself entirely unaccountable for the lack of Christian knowledge in her household.

Books I Should Like My Pastor To Read

The layman often sees life from a different angle than does the pastor. Consequently he stresses other things. His opinion concerning worthy books for the pastor ought therefore to be suggestive

LETTERS requesting a short article on the subject, "Books I Should Like My Pastor To Read," were sent to a group of representative laymen. Only one article has been received. The answers from the others are interesting.

One says: "My strong points never ran toward writing articles for any newspaper. Aside from that, I am extremely busy at the present time." And yet he can put into words most pungent suggestions regarding business matters.

Another writes: "The fact is that my pastor and I read very different books and have very different ideas. I fear that such an article by me would be regarded as a criticism if not an attack upon him, and I do not wish to stir up trouble." If we were in the active pastorate, that man's list is the very one we should want to read.

A third responds: "Any article on such a subject as you suggest is so entirely out of my regular line of thinking that I would not under any circumstances venture to write anything on that subject. In fact, should I do so, what I said would be of no value, inasmuch as those to whom it would be directed are so much better qualified to pass judgment upon that particular subject than I could possibly be." And to think that we chose this man because those who know him so greatly value his judgment!

We cannot help wondering if it is possible that the majority of our laymen have been neglecting religious books or other books of first importance. But that cannot be. It must be that they are yet somewhat in fear of their ministers or are too modest to express their opinions. Indeed, Mr. John E. Carr of Benton Harbor, Mich., sends us an opinion which touches on this very matter:

He is an up-to-date fellow—my pastor, I mean; and being a man among men, it is a task to tell him what he should read. He spends a good portion of his income for literature and library timber (if not lumber), and consideration must be shown in asking him to dip too deeply into his salary for my edification; but the pastor who reads the worth-while books can and usually does command a salary that will be more than interest on the expenditure. I note that it is "my pastor" we are advising, with emphasis on the "pastor." A pastor of the ideal measurements requires broader reading than a preacher. Why? Because in the pulpit the speaker is quite supreme, but in mingling with people he needs to have reasons backed by information. The intellectual can get further every time than he who is not well read.

But as to the books: Some need to read the Bible—and this is no joke. He who questions it has only to look over the announced Sunday subjects in any city's Saturday newspaper. We want our pastor to absorb as much of Roger Babson's books and current writings as he can, that he may show that he understands something of what we are up against in these re-adjustment days. Business men should have optimism in fair-sized doses on Sunday to carry them through the trials of the week. "The Americanization of Edward Bok" is worth any minister's time. And as a fourth suggestion I would say that DeWitt Hyde's "Gospel of Good Will" will greatly help to brighten up the minds and hearts of its readers. It is my candid belief that our pastors are well read and much better informed than a large percentage of the laymen to whom they address themselves in an interesting manner week in and week out.

A short time ago Zion's Herald, a Methodist publication, conducted a symposium on this subject, and some of the responses are suggestive. One man says:

I gladly recommend to my minister or any other minister the following books:

1. The Interchurch World Movement's "World Survey," (two volumes.)
2. Thayer's "Life of Roosevelt."
3. Cohen's "An American Labor Policy."
4. Fiske's "Boy Life."
5. Gladden's "Present-Day Theology."

Number one should be in the library of every minister because it is the only authoritative work giving a bird's-eye view of the world situation.

All preachers should read a good biography of Roosevelt because no other man since Lincoln has left a deeper impression on the heart of America.

Number three contains only 105 pages; yet it sums up in a clear and illuminating way the fundamentals of the industrial problem. It inclines neither to capital nor to labor, but takes a middle ground.

Number four is one of the helpful books on the boy—the greatest problem in the church today.

Number five is one of the books of the past decade that interpret the Bible in a broad and generous manner, and in the light of this century and not in the light of some previous century.

Another offers this:

I am going to suggest books which I myself have recently read and from which I have received much enjoyment and, I believe, some benefit:

"A Labrador Doctor," by Grenfell.

"Theodore Roosevelt's Letters to His Children," and "Theodore Roosevelt and His Times," by Bishop.

"The Education of Henry Adams."

"Life of Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson."

You will note that I include no fiction, but I sincerely trust that my minister reads some, especially on Mondays and holidays.

Yet another, a woman, suggests this list:

"The University of Chicago Sermons."

"Ambassadors of God," by S. Parkes Cadman.

"The Life of Phillips Brooks" or "A Labrador Doctor."

"Relation between Religion and Science," by Agnes Stewart Woodburne.

"Understanding the Scriptures," by Bishop F. J. McConnell.

A man who thinks that he has sent in a rather radical list suggests these, his idea being that ministers should be familiar with the things his people are discussing:

Eddy: "Science and Health."

Wells: "God the Invisible King."

Spargo: "Bolshevism."

Doyle: "The New Revelation."

"Bhagavadgita" (from "Mahabharata.")

Another thinks it not unlikely that any or all of the following books will prove helpful and stimulating to ministers:

"The Meaning of Prayer," by Fosdick.

"Understanding the Scriptures," by McConnell.

"Beacon Lights of Prophecy," by Knudson.

"Social Teachings of Jesus," Mathews.

"A Labrador Doctor," by Grenfell.

A Living and a Life

BUSINESS is a religion, and religion is a business. The man who does not make a business of his religion has a religious life of no force, and the man who does not make a religion of his business has a business life of no character. The world is God's workshop; the raw materials are his; our hands are the members of Christ; our reward his recognition. Blacksmith or banker, draughtsman or doctor, painter or preacher, servant or statesman, must work as unto the Lord, not merely making a living, but developing a life. This makes life sacramental, turning its water into wine. This is twice blessed, blessing both the worker and the work.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

Books I Should Like My People To Read

*Among all the religious books of the day, selection is not easy.
A group of pastors offer lists which will prove suggestive*

THE list I send is not very long and may not be essentially modern. But books that stimulate devotional thought and that in a measure meet modern situations are always helpful.

1. "The Meaning of Faith," by Fosdick: His chapter on "Faith's Intellectual Difficulties" has been found especially helpful.

2. "My Son," by Corra Harris: This is a shrewd delineation of some of the needs in the modern ministry, both of the man in the pulpit and the man in the pew.

3. "Religion and Business," by Babson: The book speaks for itself.

4. "A New Mind for the New Age," by King: A book to be thoughtfully read.

5. "Hypatia," by Kingsley: The chapter entitled "The Prodigal's Return," in which Raphael Aben-Ezra tells the story of his conversion to Christianity, has proved of especial value to students of this present day.

Fargo, N. D. RALPH W. HOBBS.

IT is difficult in this day of "movies" and other worldly pleasures to persuade people to read the books they should. I am suggesting those which I consider most worth while.

As the home is the heart of civilization, I suggest the following books for the family:

1. The Bible.

2. "Quiet Talks on Home Ideals," by Gordon.

3. "Religious Education in the Home," by Cope.

4. "Misunderstood Children," by Harrison.

For general education:

1. "Educational Values," by Bagley.

2. "What Do We Mean by Education?" by Welton.

3. "Talks to Teachers on Psychology," by James.

4. "Introduction to Psychology," by Ellwood.

5. "The Essentials to Character," by Sisson.

For Sunday-school and church workers:

1. "Education in Religion and Morals," by Coe.

2. "The Child and His Religion," by Dawson.

3. "The Natural Way in Moral Training," by Dubois.

4. "Moral and Religious Challenge of Our Time," by King.

Missionary books:

1. "Foreign Magic," by Cochran.

2. "A Better World," by Dennett.

3. "The Bible Message for the Stranger within Our Gates," by Harrison.

4. "The New Social Order," by Ward.

5. "The Bible and Missions," by Montgomery.

As to inspirational books, there is nothing more inspiring than biography.

J. H. SKEEN.

Boulder, Colo.

IT is essential that the laymen of today keep pace with their pastors along lines of religious thinking. Religion is no longer a thing of the pulpit and Sunday, but must be woven into the very texture of our every-day living at home and abroad. There is no excuse for the laymen to plead ignorance today or complain that religious books are written for the clergy only. Men like Fosdick, Pres. King, Shailer Mathews and Rauschenbusch have rendered a great service with their pen and brought religious subjects before the people as never before.

Every pastor wishes his laymen would read their Bibles more than they do. That is the place to begin. A help to appreciate that book better would come from the study of a book like J. Patterson Smyth's "How We Got Our Bible." Too many take it for granted that our Bible has been handed down to us in its present form. Dr. William Newton Clarke gives us an interesting account of his own experience with the Bible in his charming book, "Sixty Years with the Bible." Few men have written in a more fascinating manner than Dr. Clarke.

The subject of the church always affords an interesting discussion. Laymen should be vitally interested in it. Dr. Albert Parker Fitch has recently written a book called, "Can the Church Survive in the Changing Order?" This is a timely subject and of special interest to all Christians. It is a small volume, but is packed with stimulating material. Dr. Fitch says the answer to the question depends on the extent and character of the church's faith. The church will survive just in so far as she really believes in her Master, his message and herself.

Fundamentals seem to be the order of the day. This subject is in the air, and we might just as well accept it. I set myself the task of preaching on fundamentals from January till Easter. The interest grows weekly. I believe that if we all preached them and our people studied them more there would be many less "isms" than there are at present. In this connection I found helpful Dr. Jefferson's book on "Things Fundamental." It is a good book for laymen to study. Paul said, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." That advice was to a layman. He also wrote to one of the churches, "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good." The layman should be able to think and reason for himself. Another helpful book on this subject is Dr. Richard La Rue Swain's "What and Where Is God?" which is a human answer to the deep religious cry of the modern soul.

There are five other books worth while for laymen: Of "Decision of Character," by Foster, Dr. Mott, who wrote the introduction, says that few books have influenced him like this one. All church officials should read and study Dr. Agar's book on "Church Officials." The committee on the war and religious outlook has issued a book called "Religion among American Men." This is the first of a series, and it should be studied by the pastor and his men. "Social Christianity in the Orient," by John E. Clough, is as interesting as any of Paul's fascinating letters. "Jesus' Ideal," by Dr. William Newton Clarke, furnishes a safe guide through the present storm and stress.

WM. G. TOWART.

Bennington, Vt.

I wish for my people what I wish for myself: that we might feel the stimulus of the best books. I shall mention but a few, and these varied in aims:

1. "The Meaning of Service," by Fosdick: Mr. Fosdick's previous books on prayer and faith are so deep-toned as to free him utterly from the charge sometimes made of over-emphasis on the service aspect of life. Such chapters as "Service and Christianity," "The Peril of Uselessness," "The Abundant Life" and "Victorious Personality" will lead any earnest person to the highlands where the sun shines and where victories are won. This book is a spiritual tonic.

2. "Lest We Forget," by Black: The title tells the problem and task. What wide-eyed or clear-visioned man or woman does not realize our present peril? How discouraging the moral confusion and spiritual blindness in these two years and more following the world war! The chapters on "The Moral Issue" and "The Binding of the Nations" lead us to basic factors in our world.

3. "What the War Has Taught Us," by Jefferson: This book comes close to our personal problems, showing the destructive power of sin and how Christianity is indispensable if our world is to avoid disaster.

4. "A National System of Education," by Athearn: All interested in religious education should read this book. It shows how big is the task ahead. Prof. Athearn is daring in his method of solution: that a system of religious education comparable to our public-school system must be constructed by the Christian church.

And we should all read and re-read Bertha Conde's book on "Evangelism." It has been out a few years, but is so true and fundamental as to be used year after year. It were fortunate if every Sunday-school teacher and personal worker could be feeding on this book from this day on to Eastertime.

CLARENCE W. KEMPER.
Lansing, Mich.

A Pastor's Reading

Religion is the most interesting fact in human experience. The minister is an expert in religion. His primary task, therefore, is to master the documents of the Christian faith—the Scriptures

BY E. M. POTEAT

THERE lies before me an announcement card. It names the dates and topics of a series of addresses on religion. The town hall is the place. People throng to hear. They do not throng the nearby church. Why this difference? Yes, one is conventional, and the other is unconventional. One promises something new, and the other will stress the familiar. One audience is made up of sensation mongers, and the other is made up of simple-hearted Christian people. It is easy to content ourselves with this statement of the difference, but I do not believe it wise to do so. There is something else here.

EXPOSITION ALWAYS ATTRACTS

Consider! religion is the most interesting fact in human experience. It is for this reason that expositions of new religions attract the multitude. And explanations of religion, if only they explain, meet a deep need. The throngs of bright people who attend the Wednesday night services of Christian Science churches, for example, constitute a social phenomenon which we have not explained when we have cried out against the preposterousness of some of their beliefs. I may as well confess that I have attended two of these week-night meetings—one in Boston, at the Mother Church, and the other in New York; and I need not conceal my amazement at the crowds. There must have been 2000 in the Boston meeting, and in New York, though I arrived a half hour before the "lecture" was to begin, the house was full, with 900 people already seated. With some maneuvering I got past the guardian of the already closed entrance.

I am not satisfied to say "a fad"; and at any rate my quick recollection of the half hundred at last week's prayer meeting at our church gives me pause. Why were we so few and they so many?

I venture the following suggestion in answer: People assume that they understand Christianity. That is one thing. And another thing is that preachers do little to dispel this assumption. On the contrary, they support it by excellent discourses which are full of good advice, but which rarely attempt to explain the Christian religion. One envies the preachers who carry Christ to non-Christian lands. There people say eagerly, "Tell us about your religion." People do not say this here because all their lives they have seen church buildings and have at least occasionally heard sermons; and accordingly there is nothing to pique their interest. But let a new religion send an expositor to the town hall, and lo! people we preachers may have inwardly accused of a wholly secular interest and outlook show that they are interested in religion.

Let no one misunderstand me. I do not forget the thousands of preachers who labor faithfully to make our religion plain. But their faithfulness does not alter the fact that the multitude thinks Christianity a stale subject, and, further, that this multitude is profoundly ignorant of what the Christian religion is. Prof. Royce of Harvard wrote books on philosophy for thirty years before he tackled the problem of Christianity; and then he found that Paul was a greater thinker than Kant—"the subtlest intellect of all time," as Coleridge said. Whatever the cause, and whose fault soever it is, Christianity is the newest theme, even as religion is the oldest and ever newest theme to which men can give their minds.

What has all this to do with the pastor's reading? Much every way. He is a specialist in religion, and in particular he is held to be an expert in the Christian religion. In his reading he must seek to justify this estimate. This means that his primary task is to master the documents of the Christian faith—the New Testament Scriptures. Here is a strenuous labor which will keep his mind on the stretch the rest of his days. An old Greek father used to say, "There is a street in hell kept paved with the skulls of lazy ministers." Let the man who sets out to master the New Testament understand that he is entering upon a life-long undertaking; and let him make up his mind to scorn delights and live laborious days.

MASTER OF THE WRITINGS

Alas! he may be under the illusion that he already knows these writings. Has he not read them through? Yes, and he may have read them again and again; but he was in search for texts on which to hang his own favorite ideas. Said Shakespeare, "In religion, what damned error but can bless and approve itself with a text!" This sort of thing involves no attempt to gather the contents of a series of books which, whatever else may be said about them, must remain the primary deposit in the form of literature of the influence of Jesus in this world. The men who wrote them were of the first Christians, and their experiences as here recorded must continue to be the norm of Christian experience for all time. How then must the pastor go about mastering them?

1. If he is under the illusion alluded to above, he must renounce it and in humility acknowledge that he is coming to the fountain "immediately where it springeth" to be filled with heavenly wisdom.

2. He will expose himself to raw contact with these primitive Christian minds, and he will do this not with a primary interest in his people, but for his own enrichment.
That is to say, he will not come as a critic or judge of the writings or as a student of them for the benefit of other people, but rather as a thirsty man to the fountain.

3. This raw contact is not always easy to achieve, for we wear as a sort of non-conductor one or more layers of asbestos which must be stripped off our minds before John and Paul and Matthew can reach us.
Many of us have been brought up in Christian homes, and we retain from our childhood a reverence for the Bible which itself may be a hindrance to fresh contact with it.
The Negro cook who had been given a Bible as a Christmas present was asked a few days afterward what she had done with it. She said,

"Dat Bible is in de bottom of ma trunk and dar ain't nobody never gwine to touch it."

The other layer on our minds which makes direct contact difficult is the system of theology which we have adopted. For once such a system is adopted the temptation is all but irresistible to study the Scriptures with a view to finding support for the system. A man who is looking in Paul for the support of his own views is hardly in the mood to find out the views of his brother Paul.

VERSIONS GIVE LIGHT

4. I would strongly urge the reading of the New Testament in as many versions as can be found; and of course no version can take the place of the original Greek. Many preachers who consult their Greek only when working on particular texts would find the New Testament growing alive in a new way if every day they made a faithful study of even a brief passage. Twenty-two verses each day would complete the
New Testament in a year.

5. In general, expositions, the most thorough-going and scholarly, are the best reading for the pastor;

or the kind of study which issued in such expositions as Maclaren, on Colossians, for example. The supremacacy of Scottish preaching in our day is without any question attributable to their patient and scholarly exposition of the contents of the Christian books. And I, for one, see no other way to awaken fresh interest in Christianity but for its preachers to assume that people do not understand our holy religion and set about, in some such way as I have suggested, to make them understand it.

6. I do not rule out other reading.
Of making many books there is no end, and sometimes the minister is tempted away from his Source Book.
Dr. Alexander Whyte, of Edinburgh, who recently died, was, as one admirer said, "the most widely read man he ever knew." But his own counsel to the students in New College and to brother ministers everywhere was, "Read only the best."
It was Emerson who said, "There are good books, and it is possible to read them because they are so few."

The Best Sellers of Recent Months

The following responses have been received from the agencies of the American Baptist Publication Society in answer to an inquiry concerning the books which had been the best sellers

KANSAS CITY

"The Ideal Man," by J. P. Greene.
"Study of the Holy Spirit," by
T. P. Stafford.
"Meaning of Service," by Fosdick.
"Religion and Business," by Bab-son.
"Religion of a Layman," by Brown.
"Personality of God," by Snowden.

W. J. SMITH.

CHICAGO

"The Meaning of Service," by Fosdick: This is another of those valuable little books in the "Every-day Life Book" series. It should be in every Christian home in America, and should be read by every member of the family.

"The Fundamentals of Prosperity," by Babson: This is a small volume which can be read in an hour, but which contains more meat than a great number of books many times its size. It is a splendid book for young men.

"You and Your Church," by J. S.
Kirtley: This was written with the young people of the church in view.
It is a timely book and deserves a wide circulation.

"The Highways of Leadership," by Slattery: We can especially recommend this to Sunday-school teachers and to all workers with the young people in the churches.

"What and Where Is God?" by Swain: This is a human answer to the deep religious cry of the modern Saul. Douglas C. MacIntosh says: "A better book to put into the hands of the religiously perplexed and doubting has not been written for many a day."

"Religion and Business," by Bab-son: It is a remarkable fact that two out of the six best selling religious books should be by the same author and by a business man.

CHARLES L. MAJOR.

PHILADELPHIA

"Meaning of Service," by Fosdick.
"Purpose in Prayer," by Bounds.
"Bunch of Everlastings," by Bore-ham.

"With Grenfell on the Labrador," by Waldo.

"Evangelistic Sermons," by Porter.
"Friday's Footprints," by Apple-garth.

H. E. CRESSMAN.

ST. LOUIS

"A Quest for Souls," by Truett.
"A Bunch of Everlastings," by Boreham.

"Hope of Glory," by Dargan.
"The Ideal Man," by Greene.
"Religion and Business," by Bore-ham.

"Come Ye Apart," by Jowett.
M. M. PEANICK.

BOSTON

"Friday's Footprints," by Apple-garth: A much-needed book of mission stories for juniors.

"Do the Dead Still Live?" by David Heagle: A testimony of science respecting future life.

"Newton Chapel Addresses," by members of the faculty of Newton Theological Institution.

"Meaning of Faith," by Fosdick:
A book to expound the vital significance of faith in Jesus Christ.

"Quiet Talk Series," by Gordon:
As devotional books, this series is without equal.

"World Stories Retold," by Sly:
A book that may be used by mothers and Sunday-school teachers.

W. A. KINZIE.

What Baptists Stand For

As part of a symposium given at the Middle West Christian Unity Conference held in St. Louis, February 2-3, on the subject, "What Does My Denomination Mean by 'the church' and 'Christian unity'?" Dr. W. H. Geistweit represented the Baptists. His suggestive statement is here reproduced

BY WILLIAM HENRY GEISTWEIT

IN CONSIDERING "the church" from the Baptist viewpoint, with the possibilities involved in church unity, the simplicity of our denominational conception makes the task both easy and difficult.

At the outset is the simplicity of organization. While there is a denominational consciousness, there is no denominational authority. Each local Baptist church is an independent unit: it is simply a group of people associating themselves for worship and work. Their association with other churches of what they call "like faith and order" is spiritual, not organic, in the full meaning of that word. While they have a common faith—expressed in the usually accepted statements of evangelical Christianity, they do not express these fundamentals in fixed authoritative creedal forms. This grows out of the insistent and persistent conviction of our people that the human soul stands in immediate relation to the heavenly Father through Jesus Christ, without the interposition of any person, ordinance or sacrament. This stressing of the spiritual character of all church movements, with a steadfast refusal to accept any form or organization that even remotely intimates ecclesiastical authority, is the outstanding position our people take when any question of unity is under discussion.

This spiritual interpretation of the church, this refusal to submit to any authority—ecclesiastical, sacerdotal, ceremonial—carries with it another right for which our people steadily stand: the right of private interpretation of the Scriptures. Our people not only contend for this right, but insist that it is the bounden duty of each member to read and interpret for himself. Our people fully accept the Scriptures as containing the absolute law of Christ's reign on the earth. We acknowledge the complete lordship of the Christ, in things personal, social and ecclesiastical. We can accept no intermediaries or mediators.

This interpretation develops another consistent position of our people: The church being a spiritual body, it follows that its members become so by conscious, voluntary action on their part; that they are therefore all believers before God, equal in every particular; that distinctions, if any seem to be, are distinctions of service, and not through divine favor or ecclesiastical bequest. This creates a perfect democracy in the government of the local church. Our ideal of the ministry is simply that some regenerated believers are called of God to give their whole lives to distinctively Christian service; that ordination is merely a recognition of function and not the impartation of special power or grace; and that its regularity and validity depend upon God's endowment of the person and not upon human devices for continuity of ministry.

This spiritual interpretation of the church, this regenerated body of believers, this steady insistence upon what one of our number has pertinently expressed as "the soul's full competency before God," looks upon ordinances as purely confessional and not sacramental. Baptism is a confession before the world of an ethical death to an unchristian world order and life. It symbolizes things fundamental: the death, the burial and the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. The communion is a commemoration of the death of Jesus and a symbol of our personal participation in his redemptive blessings and service.

Perhaps another word is needed to express the attitude of our people

(Continued on page 157)

The Colporter-Missionary

THE colporter-missionary is always ready to assist the pastors in his territory. Rev. R. L. Williams, colporter-missionary for northeastern Colorado (at left), was caught by the camera while holding a conference with Rev. Leroy W. Ellis (center) of Deer Trail and Rev. James C. Matthews of Vona, Kit Carson County. They were planning a year ahead for the success of the eastern Colorado Baptist associational meetings. Mr. Williams' territory comprises fourteen counties and contains 23,000 square miles.

The automobile in the picture is the latest accepted type for colporter-missionary work. The cabinet in rear is equipped with trays for books and papers and has compartments for a complete camper's outfit, including cooking utensils, blankets and tent.

Books—The Silent Servants of Man

"Friday's Footprints."

By Margaret T. Applegarth. Philadelphia: The Judson Press. $1.50 net.

Few young people will fail to find a trip around the world a fascinating experience, especially when the tour is conducted by so interesting a story-teller as Miss Applegarth, who seems always to have on hand the exact story needed to make the people of the particular country on which attention is centered seem living creatures. In this volume are thirty-nine such stories, and one is taken to practically all of our mission fields. We venture to predict that if the older people get hold of this volume the children will have to wait for it.

"Fundamentals of Prosperity."

By Roger W. Babson. New York City: Fleming H. Revell Company. $1.

The name of the author is a household word as a student of and writer and lecturer on statistical and economical problems. On those subjects he is held as a foremost authority. The volume before us is a collection of short addresses that were doubtless delivered before industrial clubs and financial bodies. The author combines the economical, industrial, ethical and religious factors of statistics in an almost startling manner. As a rule, financial and economic interests are discussed from prudential and utilitarian viewpoints. With this author the ethical and religious forces find a predominant importance, not only because they are right, but also because they are essentials of material prosperity. His propositions are proved not so much by deductions from great ethical principles as by inductions from statistics and facts in the business and industrial world. Lecturers, teachers and preachers will find here useful data. While Mr. Babson's direct activities are along the line of statistical economics, he is religious to the measure of a prophet.

"The Power of Prayer."

A selection of essays delivered in St. Andrews University, Scotland, under the "Walker Trust Endowment." Edited by Dr. W. P. Paterson. New York City: Macmillan Company. $4.

This is a pretentious volume of more than 500 pages containing twenty-two elaborate papers or essays by eminent teachers, preachers and church leaders in Europe and in America, representing thirteen different religious faiths, and selected out of more than 1600 prize essays. It is an encyclopedia on the subject, and it is impossible to review such a work adequately in limited space. The best we can do is to append some of the subjects considered: "Prayer and the Contemporary Mind," by the editor; "Its Meaning, Reality and Power," by Samuel McComb, Baltimore; "Prayer and Experience," by the president of the Unitarian College, Manchester; "Scope and Limitations of Prayer," by Ed. J. Hawkins, Exeter; "A Modern Apology," by Pasteur Bourquinn, Switzerland; "The Autobiography of an Evangelist," London. Different and contradictory views are presented with consummate ability, liberal and conservative. Bible, science, experience, theology and reason—all contribute to its pages. The book cannot but interest and educate the reader.

"You and Your Church."

By J. S. Kirtley. Philadelphia: The Judson Press. $1.25.

Dr. Kirtley is known not only as one of our strongest preachers, but also as lecturer, writer and author of exceptional merits. We consider the volume before us the most practical, the best prepared and the most needful of all his books. It is to educate the convert in the doctrines, duties and privileges of his church life—a task sadly overlooked by the modern pastor and church. It would be a splendid investment on the part of the church to present a copy of this book to every member on receiving the right hand of fellowship at his first communion. The book starts out by explaining what it means to become a Christian and to join the church. It then recites what the new member will find in his new home—its privileges, tasks and opportunities. Part III treats of the part the member shares in all the church life. It is written in clear, incisive and devotional style, closing with mention of the difficulties and encouragements the member will meet in his new relations. We cannot too highly commend the book. 'Tis a veritable classic on the subject it considers.

"Wanted—A Congregation."

By Lloyd C. Douglas. Chicago: The Christian Century Press. $1.75 net.

Of all recent books dealing with the problem every minister faces—that of gathering a congregation which will stick and have always the worshipful spirit—this is one of the most interesting. A man who has actually done the thing of which he speaks pictures the process and the methods by which the result was brought about. No minister can read the book without getting at least some hint of the road over which he must pass to the success of which he has dreamed.

"Sources of Effectiveness in Public Speaking."

By Prof. C. Edmund Neil. Boston: Hinds, Hayden and Eldredge.

Public speaking is vital to a democracy, and Americans have every reason to foster the art. In this book the principles are enunciated with great clearness and cogency. The author uses the psychological approach entirely. The use of the voice depends on the vividness of the conception, and this in turn on the freshness of the sensation and the imagination, which is defined as "the senses working in absentia." Tone-texture, inflection, movement, and vocal purity and endurance are the products of right emotional and purposive states. These mental states should be the aim of one's practice, and the author gives copious "experiments" through which the student arrives at mastery of himself, his subject and his hearers. The end of all true oratory is persuasion; and the persuasive speaker is he whose personality has been so enriched and mental powers so well trained that the vocal organs become the flexible instrument for achieving the speaker's purpose. Prof. Neil has recently gone to Newton and to Boston University after many years of successful work at the University of West Virginia, where his principles have had a thorough testing. His book marks a new stage in our understanding of the secrets of oratory, and no student of the subject can read it without enlightenment, enjoyment and profit.

"The Ideal Man."

By President Emeritus J. P. Greene of William Jewell College. Philadelphia: The Judson Press. $1 net.

Anyone who ever heard Dr. Greene preach or make a public address will realize what riches of literary merits, common sense and spiritual pabulum to expect in a volume like this one, whose only fault is its smallness. He considers, pictures out and presents the ideal man in respect to his intellectual character, moral stature, and his spiritual life—all congested into the normal full-orbed ideal man. The volume contains but fifty-seven pages, but it is all good gold.

"The Truth of Christianity."

By Lieut.-Col. Turton. London: Wells, Gardner, Darton and Company. 2/-.

This is the ninth edition of this work. It is divided into three parts: Natural religion, the Jewish religion and Christianity. It combines treatises on theism, biblical inspiration and theology and evidences of Christianity. Its point of view is distinctly and emphatically conservative. To a graduate of a theological seminary the contents are not unfamiliar; but as a digest of volumes on those subjects it is wonderful how much the author has been able to congest into this volume. He does not pretend to classic scholarship or original research into the questions he discusses; but in clear, concise language he presents facts, criticisms pro and con, history, arguments and reasonings that are of rare merit. His conservatism we think leads him sometimes into undue literalism in discussing Bible criticism; but he is just and fair to opposite views, and presents the objections to his own views with all courtesy and answers them fairly. Discussions great writers would present with obsessive scholarship, this author presents in unpretentious language and in forms the lay reader will enjoy and understand, though they are concerned with the profoundest problems of theology and criticism. No wonder the volume is so highly commended by editors, prelates, teachers and other religious leaders of various faiths. The Roman Catholic papers advise that it be placed in the hands of every Christian. It would make an excellent class-book in a seminary or for a study class. While not accepting all its conclusions, we heartily commend it as a book of unusual merit and of deep religious interest. The admirable index at the close of the book is a valuable assistance in studying the volume.

The Bulletin Board

Abating the Liquor Nuisance

On Feb. 7 Federal Judge Landis ordered the property housing thirteen Chicago saloons closed for a year because of violation of the Volstead Act. Up to Feb. 1 the attorney general had filed 247 suits under the nuisance section of the prohibition law, and many more have been filed since. Tying up property for such a long period as a year is proving a most effective method of abating the liquor nuisance.

Education in the United States

The report of the house committee on education, recommending the passage of the Smith-Towner bill to establish a federal bureau of education, states that the United States ranks ninth among the nations of the world in the general educational level of its people. We are trailing behind most of the civilized world, the report says, in point of educational advantages. Illiteracy is a national and not a sectional problem. We are now reaping the results of an unrestricted policy of immigration. The measure offers a means of correcting the present inequality of educational opportunities and of dealing with illiteracy among adults. It also proposes comprehensive Americanization plans.

The Stage Door

A clergyman wrote to Edwin Booth asking if he could not be admitted to his theater by a side or rear door, as he preferred to run no risk of being seen by any of his parishioners. The distinguished actor replied: "There is no door in my theater through which God cannot see."—The Outlook.

The Bible at the Inauguration

There is no law compelling the president to place his hand upon a Bible when taking the oath of office. The custom has prevailed, however, since the time of George Washington, who, stepping out on the balcony of Federal Hall, Wall Street, New York, in full sight of the assembled multitude, laid his right hand on the open book while repeating the constitutional oath, and then reverently kissed the page. State Chancellor Livingston turned down the corner of the page towards the words of Genesis 49:24: "His bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob." This custom has never been violated by a president-elect. The Bible is usually opened at random by the clerk of the Supreme Court; a record is made of the passage kissed, and the book presented to the president's wife. Cleveland used a little red Bible given to him as a boy by his mother. Roosevelt placed his lips to the words of James 1:22: "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only." The Bible was opened for Pres. Wilson almost at the middle. He kissed the page at Psalm 119:46: "I will speak of thy testimonies before kings and will not be ashamed." The Book will be opened for Pres. Harding at Micah 6:8.

The Place of Stewardship

Every re-reading of the New Testament impresses one the more deeply with the fundamental place of stewardship in the Christian system. It meets a discerning student on every page. The stewardship idea is surely scriptural. Accordingly, it is the only practical way of financing the great projects of the Christian church. Moreover, it is democratic. It avoids the dependence of the church solely or chiefly on the rich, who may be tempted to dictate where they give so largely, and distributes the burdens and the opportunities from the richest to the poorest man on at least an approach to an equitable basis. A sane and genuine program of Christian stewardship should and must become a part of the program of every Christian church.—Bishop Thomas Nicholson.

It Happened in India

During the two years of his father's furlough, the young son of a missionary had been used to hearing his father preach in English and rather prided himself upon the fact that he "understood a lot." On the first Sunday of their return to India, he heard his father discourse in the vernacular. He rushed home to his mother with all the indignation a five-year-old can muster and exclaimed:

"Mother, father doesn't preach the true gospel any more. I couldn't understand a word of it!"

A theological student in India was fond of embellishing the Bible stories which he told, but his efforts in that direction were frowned upon when he related the resurrection of Lazarus in this fashion: "And the lord told Lazarus to come out, and when he heard that word he put up his umbrella and came right out of the tomb." (Contributed by Mrs. E. N. Harris, Toungoo, Burma.)

Southern Collections to Date

Baptists of the South have to date collected in their big campaign the sum of $16,851,100.68. This sum includes the payments in the various states through the convention year closing with Nov. 30 in the majority of the states, although for Texas it includes the payments to Jan. 1. As a preparation for a spring round-up campaign for the collection of pledges, the women will observe the week of Feb. 27-March 6 as a week of prayer, giving emphasis to every phase of the campaign in addition to their annual observance of this week in behalf of home missions, while on March 2 the entire membership of all the churches is asked to spend the day in prayer for divine guidance and blessing. The remainder of March will be given over to enlistment work and stewardship teaching, while April has been designated as loyalty month, during which an effort will be made to induce every Southern Baptist who has subscribed to the campaign to pay his pledge to date, and everyone who has not subscribed to make a cash offering to campaign objects.

"Do-A-Kindness-Day"

Taking a leaf from the Boy Scouts, who have for their motto, "Do a good turn daily," the Y. W. C. A. has designated May 21 as "Do-A-Kindness-Day," thus celebrating the memory of its founder Miss Grace Dodge. Miss Dodge, during a life long devotion to girls, made many large gifts to the association. The purpose of the day, which is her birthday, is to interpret her life and work to the public.

To Counter the Y. M. C. A.

Evangelista of Rome prints an account of a banquet to the Knights of Columbus during their recent European pilgrimage. It was held at the Grand Hotel—a function of "supreme elegance," tables flashing with silver, crystal, and flowing champagne. The feature which will interest Americans was the speech of Mgr. Cerretti, in which he voiced the wish of the holy father that the "most noble" Knights should "immediately undertake active propaganda at Rome to counter the activity of another great American association, heretical and Protestant." The reference was to the Y. M. C. A. The appeal was, according to reports, frantically applauded.—Record of Christian Work.

Dr. Rushbrooke's Observations

Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke recently returned to London after a month's visit to Baptist churches in Central and Eastern Europe. In Czecho-Slovakia, the most promising of the new states, he observed distinct signs of a growing restlessness and anxiety as to the future. The Communist rising of a few weeks ago was easily suppressed, it is true, but it is by no means certain that the trouble is at an end. In Rumania the position of the Baptist churches is rapidly becoming intolerable. Persecution has not diminished; indeed, religious freedom is being steadily suppressed, and the Baptist ministers and churches are being treated with great intolerance. In Transylvania, the new territory acquired by Rumania under the Treaty of Versailles, practically all our churches have been forcibly closed. Mr. Rushbrooke has brought back a mass of new evidence on this question which will enable the Baptist World Alliance to make strong representations in the proper quarters.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for March 20

JESUS ON THE CROSS

Matt. 27:33-50. Golden Text: Rom. 5:8

BY JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

For the details of the crucifixion we are dependent upon the four gospels. In the epistles of Paul the cross becomes a symbol of salvation through sacrifice. The cross was one of the instruments of Roman execution, the sword being the other. Slaves were usually crucified, and the Jews, being regarded as slaves by their Roman masters, when guilty of crime were nailed to a cross and left to die thereon. Jesus met the common fate of a criminal slave, and that there might be no doubt of his status as a criminal, he was crucified between two thieves.

The Lesson Taught

Jesus delivered, despised and desolate are three things written on the cross in addition to the words, "This is Jesus, the King of the Jews."

Delivered

The cross was the culmination of several forces working together to put Jesus out of the way. The late lamented Walter Rauschenbusch in his "Theology for the Social Gospel" gives five causes to account for the crucifixion of Jesus. The first, earliest on the field and latest on the watch, was religious bigotry. Soon after the first year of his public ministry, Jesus, by his open disregard of the regulations concerning the Sabbath, fasting, the distinction between clean and unclean in foods and fellowship, brought down upon himself the organized anger and persecution of the religious leaders. They became obsessed with the passion for his death, and with diligence worthy of a better cause rested not until they saw him nailed to the cross and lifted up between two thieves. Religious bigotry was the worst foe Jesus had to meet in the days of his earthly ministry and in the days of the ministry of his Spirit. The other causes were graft and political power, the corruption of justice, mob spirit and action, and militarism. All these causes grew out of the sins of organized society. It is a doleful picture revealed as we read the story of the crucifixion of Jesus, and as we remember that the sins of organized society then are the sins of organized society now. The picture would be wholly without relief were it not for the redemptive element in the death of Jesus. Peter spoke better than he knew when he said, "Jesus of Nazareth being delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God" (Acts 2:22-24). There was a divine purpose in the death of Jesus. This is the element in the crucifixion of our Lord which eclipses all its horror of human injustice and brutality. Had Jesus been simply the victim of Jewish bigotry and Roman injustice, his death would have been in vain.

Despised

The whole lesson is an eloquent description of the words of Isaiah: "He was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." Peter must have had the cross in mind as he wrote: "When he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." The people passing on the road that led into the city reviled Jesus, the priests mocked him, and the thieves reproached him. The thieves despised him because he did not save himself and them; and the priests taunted him with the reminder that the one who had threatened to destroy the temple, pledging himself to build it again in three days, was now so helpless that he could not save himself. Everybody seemed to take a fling at the sufferer because all his power seemed to be at an end. They made the common mistake of the church throughout its history in making omnipotence the test of Christ's deity. We have Unitarianism because the orthodox church insisted upon miracles as the test of Christ's divinity; and many thoughtful people, unable to harmonize the weary man at the well with the omnipotent God, gave up the puzzle and denied his deity. The deity of Jesus has only one test—perfect love. It was perfect love that refused the sword in Gethsemane, spurned the stupefying cup on the cross, and cried out, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." It was perfect love that enabled Jesus to endure the cross and despise the shame. The perfect love expressed in John 3:16 is the only gospel for a world lost in sin. On the grounds of power the people who despised the Christ on the cross were justified. "He was crucified in weakness." But on the basis of love perfectly revealed in human flesh, there was no justification for a single fling at the suffering Messiah.

Desolate

No longer do we debate the question as to whether Jesus were actually forsaken on the cross, as his words seem to imply. It is enough to know that the desolation of his soul shut out the face of the Father. Here we must hesitate and stand aside, because we do not know what this desolation of soul means unless we have entered by actual experience into the fellowship of his sufferings. If we too know something of the bitterness of religious bigotry and its unrelenting spirit of persecution; if we have been betrayed and denied by our friends when we needed their loyal sympathy and support; if our motives have been maligned, our actions misunderstood, our love spurned; if powerful money and political interests have combined to crush us in our attempt to render unselfish service—then we may know a little something of the desolation of Jesus when he cried out, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

An All-Day Sunday with the Children

BY E. M. STEPHENSON

For more than half a century Children's Day has been challenging the churches to pay a more rational attention to the religious education of their children and youth.

This celebration has taught the churches that children need, for their own development on the religious side, to participate in the public services of the congregation, and on the other hand has plainly demonstrated that only those churches who live with their children are sure of children to live with.

All denominations acknowledge the many blessings which this second Sunday in June of each year has brought to them, and all are planning for a larger participation than ever this year.

Baptists of the Northern Baptist Convention are offering something new in the form of a program for June 12. This year a program has been arranged by the department of religious education which is intended to suggest to our schools how to make use of what they already have acquired in their work of teaching and training the scholars.

For example, every department has a lot of memory songs and memory scriptures which congregations delight to hear recited. The school, too, has its mottoes, and patriotic pledges in salutation of the flag, patriotic hymns and songs, and religious exercises of its own of highest merit. The program shows how to put this material before the congregation in impressive form.

There will be available an exhibit of the newest venture in religious education—the church vacation school—and announcement of the possibilities of such a school in many fields.

From time immemorial the Children's Day offerings have gone to the American Baptist Publication Society for the support of its educational and missionary activities; but under the new arrangement all money collected will pass through the treasury of the local church to the General Board of Promotion. As in the past, this money will apply on the apportionment of churches sending them in.

The Publication Society will issue the programs, and they may be ordered from its headquarters, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or from any of its branches, or from directors of religious education.

The Chimney Corner

The Confession of "Fetch-and-Carry"

YES 'm, I've give notice. O, no'm, she ain't been unkind to me! Quite the contrary. I'm just quitting while the get-a-way is good.

No'm, she give me a dandy little room, fixed every bit as well as her own daughter's. Though that ain't saying much that's extra. Only I've been doing general work for going on ten years now. It's been fetch-and-carry here and fetch-and-carry there, until now at last I've struck the real comforts of home; for at Lawyer Davis' did I get a nice undarned dresser cover for me bureau with all the knobs on? or a decent mattress? No'm, I did not! Theirs was the kind of mattress makes you fall asleep dreaming you're on one of them straw-rides when your best feller has a mad and you wish to goodness you hadn't come—if you know what I mean. Not a night's decent rest after fetching and carrying all day; but at the parsonage it's different. And Mis' Lawyer Davis didn't hand me out no pleasantries about the day's work like Mis' Rev. Sayre does; neither did Mis' Prof. Thompson, nor Mis' Grocer Spruce, for that matter. You've got to lay it to those there parsons for being genuinely human. But I just can't stand it another minute. I gotta leave.

O, yes'm, it's a nice enough house—sort of a pill-box of a place, with a chimney slapped against one side. Take it from me, though, that trustees is nutty landlords. Even Rev. Sayre let out a heart-to-heart on this subject onct when the church folks didn't hanker to pay for a plumber to plumb a very bad leak. Says Rev. Sayre to Mis' Rev. Sayre, says he, "Dot, I'd rather pay rent to worldings than live free on the angels!" It seemed to me an awful cute way of saying it. They's both very humorous with their remarks. But it's things like the above that take it out of a sensitive girl like me.

Why've I gotta leave?

Lissen! When I was hired out to Mis' Lawyer Davis it was so plain as the nose on your face that he had his evenings to himself. His clients wasn't forever feeling that they owned him and his fambly and all their time. Every afternoon Mis' Lawyer Davis put on her sprigged taffeta and sat by the front winder to snoop on the neighbors and to tat, or maybe she'd prink up a speck more and play cards somewhere—like ladies should.

But, believe me, Rev. Sayre's fambly ain't built on that principle. Every blinking member of that church must get called on every year. But this he had ought to do, of course. For sick or well, I lay that a parson had ought to know whether people's go-to-meeting clothes on Sundays is double-crossing their stay-to-home habits on Mondays. It's a cinch that any old bird can perch in a pew on Sunday, but can he fly straight out doors? So parsons had ought to make the rounds every so often to see what dope to hand out the next Sunday. But, say, would you swallow it? They expeck Mis' Rev. Sayre to ring their doorbells, too. Sure! beating it to every house where there's sickness or sorrow or newcomers or whatnot.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

The things she don't do you could write on the head of a pin! I hadn't been fetching at the parsonage very long before I says to her one day, she having been unusual nice to me about mending my next-to-the-best dress. "Say, Mis' Sayre," says I, real bold, "I'd chuck them continual matinees of yours if I was you, and lay me on the sofa to read, or darn, if you must work."

"Matinees?" says she, real puzzled-like.

"Sure," says I, "them perpetual afternoon doings at the church—ladies' aiding or misshunairy meetings and such. And if you know what I mean, Mis' Sayre," says I, "I'd blow my wad for a new hat or silk hose onct in a while 'stead of wasting the whole plunk on them leapers in India. Now, Mis' Lawyer Davis, say, she weeps and carries on, but she ain't a scratch on you as far as giving real dough goes! Yet Lawyer Davis must get double what—"

"That will do, Carry," says she, so gentle that I can't take no offense with being shut up for gossiping.

Well, I've kep' my eye peeled and seen the jobs them Church folks is willing to let lie on her.

Them misshunairy programs, now, they means wading through more books 'n I ever seed lying open at one time before. Yes'm, she helps all the performers regular every month. And that ain't a patch on the jobs she does for kids, for she runs the primary and paints big wall calendars, with flowers and "consider the lilies" on 'em at Easter, or holly and "Peace on earth" at Christmas, and so on through the year. Well, onct Mis' Life Insurance Tripp says to her, "Seems to me you really had ought to take some drawing lessons, Mis' Sayre, if you aim to elevate the little tots!" And she laughed, she being awful high-brow, unable to understand what the new picture is about. So when she left, Mis' Sayre she cried and tore up the drawing. But Rev. Sayre he kissed her and said, poetical-like, "Be not weary of well doing, or you'll reap the morning dew."

Daubing calendars is only one of her jobs for them primaries. She grows things for them in pots so they can see how God is Love. She calls on the sick kids, ropes in new ones, gets the brand new babies into a band, and has Valentine parties for their mommers. And as for collecting teachers, it's—her continual task. She'll lure them to the parsonage with coffee and doughnuts, and teach them how they had ought to teach. But although they eat out of her hand, so to speak, they nearly drive her crazy on Sundays. The least little snuffle in their noses keeps 'em home!

Then there's the See Double-You See. That's for kids, too—a crusade of some kind. Not in all that congregation was there a lady with time free from tating or bridge to make them kids See Double-You See (whatever that means; mebbe you know—I don't). So Mis' Sayre says to Rev. Sayre at supper that she guessed it was up to her to organize and run this here crusade stunt. Says he, real stern, "Dorothea Sayre, you mustn't! You're entirely too busy already."

"Tell me something new," says she, or words to that effect. So she organized. And I understand the crusade is a howling success and an ornament to any church.

You've got to hand it to her for energy. For I give you my word she's back of something else for older girls called the Double-You Double-You Gee. Not that she has to run the whole show, for the girls are supposed to do it. But you know girls! Blow hot one second, and blow cold the next. So she keeps 'em regulated, so to speak, and sicks 'em on to give plays, and pack boxes to send to the ends of the earth, and work out nice programs, like she is also helping their mommers.

This ain't all—not by a long shot. For she often has to speak up in prayer meeting, poor woman. There'll be a silence so horrible silent that you can almost hear the purple brim of Mrs. Lawyer Davis' hat announcing that it had just been did over with colorite! Rev. Sayre will be sitting up in front looking uneasy, waiting for the deacons and such to spiel a few words (as would have been only natural, seeing they'd ought to have been practicing his last sermon all week). But the deacons is tightglued to their seats, and neither sitting nor standing do they bust into conversation as they had ought. So Mis' Rev. Sayre will rise up and say a few words.

Before I worked at the parsonage I've often heard my other fambles criticize Mis' Sayre because she spoke so low, and onct Mis' Lawyer Davis says disdainful; "Perhaps it's just as well we couldn't hear."

But after all these months of living with a real honest-to-goodness Christian, I give you my word that if Mis 'Sayre was to sell safety-pins to naked cannibals they'd appreciate her and cry for more. She's that kind of a skirt. So I just gotta leave. I'm too softy!

Why when I'm fetching and carrying on sermon mornings I tip-toes around like I was Nazimova in some outlandish dance—real stealthy-like. For when I first come, Rev. Sayre says to me: "Carry," says he, "I hope you'll never have to interrupt me when I'm pegging away here, studying. I might lose a perfectly good idea, you know!"

"Sure!" I says, "I'll treat you gentle, sir," says I. And I've kep' my word. Not a mouthful of ideas have I ever spoiled for him. Every week I've seen him promenaded that study carpet like he thought it was the park in springtime, with his best girl hanging on his arm—up and down, up and down, his lips moving spirit-like.

"That'll be some sermon," I'd think, dusting real quiet in the hall. "That'll fetch folks!" And Sunday mornings I'd peek through the parlor curtains to watch him going to church in his Prince Albert coat and his gates-ajar collar.

But ten to one you can bet on this for Sunday dinner: "Freddy," says she, "that was a beautiful sermon, dear! Didn't everybody say so?"

"Was it?" says he, eager. "No, nobody says nothing. Mis' Smith says was I forgetting her ma had newrightus and expects a call? And Mr. Rupert says he can't hear me so plain since I had the flu."

"O—O!" groans she, like she might cry. So last Sunday I told my best fel-to sing me 'Old Black Joe' real often."

(Continued on page 159)

Now of course you know that that song isn't a hymn at all, but mother never let on about it, nor father, either: he just asked mother if she'd make it a solo, please. So she did, for she has a beautiful soprano voice and used to sing in choirs and at concerts before she became so busy bringing us up.

Jake looked at if he was hearing angels while she sang it. And he kept right on looking inspired while father told us Bible stories and prayed in that wonderful way father has, just as if he knew exactly what Bill and Timothy and I wanted to say to God. When church was over Jake went up and shook hands with father and said that it had been fine, "but I've got to hurry along now, sir, for I hear Fanny-Anny braying for me."

The minute he was gone I said, "I like Jake. I'm going to be his friend."

"So'm I!" piped up Timothy. "But I did it yesterday, Peggy. I brag him a daisy—didn't I, muvver?"

"You did!" said mother softly. And I wondered if God gives us quiet Sundays to open our eyes to lonesome people who have nobody but mules to talk to them when they need real people.

Bill helped me pod the peas for dinner and pretended he was chef. He even made up a special dish all his own, composed of olives and cold meat chopped up with cottage cheese. We spread it on our bread and father made a pun about it: "I like our new Bill-of-fare!" said he.

We called father Mr. Noah all day, and mother Mrs. Noah, so naturally the rest of us had to be Noah's three sons: Shem, Ham and Japheth. But who should be who?

Timothy instantly said he wanted to be Ham. He liked ham, he said—only without mustard, please! But of course you and I know that the ham he meant is not the Bible Ham, for I suppose your mother tells you the same stories our mother tells us—how from Noah's sons were born all the races of men: the Jews from Shem, the Negroes from Ham, and everybody else (Gentiles) from Japheth. Timothy's hair is golden as butter and his eyes are like enormous blue saucers, so we simply could not let him be the Negro Ham. It dawned on me that since I was taking Agony's place as cook, it was my solemn duty to be Ham myself. I'm not really a proud, haughty person, but O! I knew right away why so many Negroes hate their dark skins. I was glad that underneath the Ham name I kept right on being Peggy! And I turned an old tomato can into a "Ham Might Box" (I never spell it "mite" do you? For why should I give only my littlest money?), so that all summer long I could save my candy money for one of our home missionary schools where some dear little black Topsy, just my own age, is growing up. Bill was Shem, and Timothy Japheth.

Meanwhile we were floating nearer and nearer the shore, little dreaming that soon after we "bumped on Ararat" that night we were to have our second adventure, and be robbed! It was most surprising—and horrid.

(To be continued)

The Young Reserves

The Log of the "Flying Pig"

CHAPTER V

AS long as I live I shall never forget father's face that Sunday morning after the dreadful storm when he first came 'on deck and saw our ark floating right out in the middle of the canal instead of being hitched to one bank as it ought to have been. Evidently the rope had snapped with the strain of the lashing and lurching that had gone on all night. Anyhow, there we floated in a sort of "wide waters," which was like a small lake, with cat-tails starting to grow on the swampy bank opposite the tow-path.

Father and Jake talked and talked, but they did not seem to find a single way to "rescue" us. Jake offered to swim ashore, and then walk until he found a farmhouse where he could borrow ropes long enough to stretch from the shore to the ark. Then he and the farmer and the farmer's lusty sons ("supposing he hadn't any sons?" I sighed; "supposing it was just a ladies' farm?") could pull and pull and pull until our boat sidled over to the towpath. But father had a county map and found that the nearest village was over eight miles away so that plan was given up. Next Bill suggested that all three men (ahem! imagine his including himself!) should swim ashore, pulling the ark after them by means of sheets knotted end to end. But father said that it would be "quite too much of a swim." So it was left for little Timothy to pipe up cheerfully: "Why don't we just wait, fawver, like Mr. Noah? Won't we bump on Noah's mountain bime-by? For I fink, I weally fink, we're moving now!"

And, sure enough, the gentle wind and the rippling waves were paddling us inch by inch along our way. So father said that we'd just wait calmly until we "bumped on Ararat." Fortunately on Saturday we had laid in a big supply of milk and ice and fresh water, also vegetables and fruit, so Bill and I thought it huge fun to be shipwrecked over Sunday—although there really wasn't much to do! After breakfast mother suggested having church and Sunday school, so we went to find Jake to help swell the congregation.

Jake is the kind of man you call an enigma. I had that word in spelling last year, but I never expected to meet one of them face to face so soon. Jake seems to think we are all mildly crazy. You see, he's used to working on canal boats that are full of something—real cargo. I expect that he and Fanny-Anny talk us over a lot. He's devoted to her. We wonder whoever named our mule, but really when she brays her mournfullest the name fits her splendidly. Personally, Bill and I have a grudge against Fanny-Anny. For the other day we had a long hike "inland" to buy vegetables, and when we reached the towpath once more, Bill set down the market basket and we had a game of tag together—for only a few minutes, too. Yet when we stopped, there was the wicked Fanny-Anny munching the last of our carrots and peas and lettuce—roots, pods and everything gone! We had the long trip over again. And I haven't loved Fanny-Anny since.

Jake accepted our invitation to church, but insisted on finding a collar and necktie for such a solemn occasion. It took ages to find them, and Bill kept saying that maybe Fanny-Anny had eaten them! But at last he came on deck with his hair neatly plastered over his head, and in his Sunday shoes. I began liking Jake immensely from that moment, for people who take such trouble about their looks for my sake are always going to be appreciated.

Well, we sang hymns—everybody's favorites. When it came to Jake's turn, he hemmed and hawed, and said to mother, "You'll have to 'scuse me, mum, but I ain't what you might call familiar with hymns. But I recollect my old ma used

Young People's Work

Topic for March 20

THE CROSS IN GARO LAND

Acts 2:1-5; Matt. 16:24; 10:28; 20:29; 9:37

1. Literature: "The Garo Jungle Book," by William Carey, $2; "The Gospel among the Garos," 5 cents; "Tura Work among the Garos," 3 cents. These last-named pamphlets may be secured from Dr. W. A. Hill, secretary of missionary education, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City.

2. Garo Land and people: Far away in the great tea country of Assam, with its tangle of foothills, its rugged ranges and long open valleys through which for 450 miles flows the great Brahmaputra River, there live a people just emerging from savagery and heathenism. These people are in the Garo hills, which occupy a commanding position at the entrance to Assam. The story of their rise from heathenism, of their first knowledge of the gospel, reads like a fable. It is a fable of the power of God in a heathen nation.

In 1847 these people lived in their hill fortresses absolutely without communication with the outside world except as they took their cotton to market on market day. These market days were alike desired and feared by the shopkeepers, for the Garos are a wild race, keen at bargaining, and willing to shed blood at the slightest resistance. They terrorized the tribes in the neighboring country.

3. Pioneers in Garo Land: The story of the pioneers who first took the cross of Christ to these heathen people is one revealing the greatest courage and consecration. The land was practically unknown; no government survey had been made of it. The people were notoriously blood-thirsty. Shut off from the world in their jungles, the only communication being by dangerous trails haunted by wild beasts, it took strong hearts and wills to penetrate the unknown.

The first character to appear is Mr. Bronson, who started an orphan institution in 1843. He made some trips into the mountains and won converts, but the territory was so vast and his duties so pressing that neither he nor his wife could do what they wished. It was through his earnest pleas and repeated requests that missionaries at last were sent to these people.

In 1867 Dr. and Mrs. Stoddard joined the Bronsons and were sent immediately as missionaries to the hill tribes of Garos. Dr. and Mrs. Stoddard were charming people, born in New York state. Both were well educated and gave their best to their work. English classes were soon started, and the task of reducing the Garo language to writing was begun. After three months spent in getting acquainted, Bronson and Stoddard went on a missionary tour through the hills, visiting schools, making converts, and baptizing. Native preachers and teachers trained in the missionary school were at work in some few places. The extent and great variety of the work can be imagined when we realize that all the uplifting influences in the community had to come from these missionaries. Headquarters were established at Tura. Before this, more help became necessary, and two new families came to work with the Garos.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organization, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Marcus C. Mason and Elnathan Phillips were comrades on farms in New York state, went to school and college together, married sisters, and sailed together for this great work. The task before the two young couples demanded a strong mental equipment, sound knowledge of the Scriptures, ability to manage men, much wisdom of heart, and great powers of physical endurance with courage. A literature had to be produced, beginning with early school-books and going on to the finished translation of the New Testament, in a language of which little more than the rudiments had been learned by their predecessors or written down for the tribe; journeyings made unattended through the roughest interior country, and friendly relations established with a sullen and savage people; teachers trained, the raw material being the wild Garo boy or girl, and, when trained, sent back into the depths of the jungle with torches lighted at the central fire; the beginnings of interest in a score of far-scattered places watched and fostered, and churches formed and guided to a right exercise of discipline and an earnest advocacy of the faith. It was a stupendous task, but they gladly shouldered it, and their success is the history of the widespread growth of Christianity in Garo Land. Later other missionaries were sent, but these pioneers blazed trails.

Native teachers and preachers are trained and take care of churches, which are for the most part self-supporting. Sunday schools were established and in 1898 they reported seventy-two schools with 3337 pupils. (Adapted from Service.)

News

WISCONSIN

"Some of the outstanding events in religious education in Wisconsin during 1920 have been:

"1. The unusual success of our assembly. Enrolment increased 50 per cent over 1919, taking entire capacity of grounds.

"2. A good increase in the number of standard Sunday schools.

"3. The success of the experiment of holding the state young people's convention in connection with the assembly instead of with the state convention.

"4. One five-day city institute—Milwaukee—with good enrolment and fine class attendance.

"5. The enlargement of the state committee on religious education to twelve members (eleven of whom were present at the last meeting), and the division of this committee into four sub-committees: Sunday-school work, young people's work, the assembly, and the student pastor work at the state university" (Charles H. Boyd).

WESTERN WASHINGTON

"The outstanding achievement of this year's work was the purchase of the assembly grounds for the Western Washington Summer Assembly.

"The convention made a contribution of about $2000 for this purpose, while the board of managers of the Western Washington B. Y. P. U. authorized the director to raise $4000 in addition to the gift from the convention. So there was purchased for $5250 a tract of land containing about seven acres, and we also secured an option of five acres more. Thus the Baptists of Western Washington own and control approximately twelve acres of ground overlooking Puget Sound. One building has already been erected on the grounds, and plans contemplate the erection of other buildings from time to time.

"A similar campaign will be put on in the near future in Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho, so that our assembly work there may be put upon a permanent basis" (T. H. Hagen).

OREGON

"One of the more interesting phases of our work in this state is the actual service of our young people in the city of Portland. Under the leadership of Mr. A. D. Bosserman, the president of the Willamette Young People's Association we are holding monthly rallies at which we put on attractive programs.

"Next month will be 'Foreigners' Night,' when the attendants will declare their nationality and a cosmopolitan entertainment will be given. We expect to have an original American, a Negro, a Chinese, an Italian and others render the program. On another occasion the young people will give a reception to all the Baptist pastors in the city.

"There are now only three churches large enough to hold the attendance, which runs well toward the thousand mark. We are developing a consciousness of unity and power among these fine young people, and we are planning to do something aggressive to make this city 'sit up and take notice' of the Baptists and the kingdom" (Geo. H. Young).

Our Own Folks

St. Louis Letter

By W. E. DARROW

On Jan. 21 Supt. J. S. Wharton of the Missouri Sanitarium, located in our city, passed to his reward after a brief illness. He was elected to his position as superintendent at the annual meeting of the board of managers in October 1920. Although a young man, about thirty-three years of age, his influence and ability as as director of the sanitarium and as a consecrated Christian worker were becoming felt and appreciated. He recently joined the Third Church. His departure is a distinct loss not only to his family but to the wider circle of Baptists in St. Louis and beyond. B. A. Wilkes, M. D., has been elected superintendent.

Ordination

At the Fee Fee Church, about nine miles from St. Louis and the oldest Protestant church organization west of the Mississippi occurred on Feb. 10, the ordination of Bro. D. Earl Allen, its pastor, and also the ordination of W. R. Martin, as deacon. Rev. S. E. Ewing spoke on "The Work of the Ministry"; Rev. R. K. Kelly on "The Office of a Deacon"; Rev. J. W. McAtee offered the ordination prayer for the minister, and the writer the ordination prayer for the deacon. Rev. P. G. Van Zandt directed the singing and presented Bro. Allen with a Bible in the name of the Fee Fee Church. The standing committee of the St. Louis Association, at a meeting in the Euclid Church building on Feb. 1, examined Bro. Allen and unanimously recommended his ordination. He is a recent graduate of William Jewell College.

Unity Conference

The Middle West Unity Conference was held in the Second Church, Dr. W. C. Bittling, minister. It was largely attended. Dr. W. H. Geistwelt of the Third Church presented the paper on "What Does My Denomination Mean by Church and Christian Unity?" It was well received by the conference and the Baptists of St. Louis. Much time was given to discussion, each paper being afforded respectful hearing, though ever so diverse the convictions to which it gave expression. The conference was a helpful one, and may help toward the coming of a better day for Christian activity and fellowship.

Evangelistic Effort

At this season of the year many of our churches are holding or plan to hold special evangelistic meetings. Not a few report additions to their membership each Sunday through the regular preaching services. The Grand Avenue Church, of which the writer is pastor, will begin special meetings on March 9, Major E. W. White of Omaha, Neb., assisting the pastor. Already, there is marked increase in prayer-meeting attendance and other evidences of spiritual renewal. Forty-four have been received for membership in the Euclid Church during the regular January services.

Coming Events

The annual get-together dinner under the auspices of the St. Louis Mission Board will be held in the Third Church building on the evening of March 8, with Dr. Charles A. Brooks of New York as the chief speaker. Our city B. Y. P. U. will hold its quarterly rally with the Compton Heights Union on the evening of March 10, with Dr. J. A. White of Chicago as the speaker. A large delegation from St. Louis at the Cincinnati B. Y. P. U. A. convention is planned.

Beyond the City

Rev. Charles Durden has gone to the pastorate of the First Church, Galesburg, Ill., from the pastorate of the First Church, East St. Louis, thus severing his connection with our St. Louis Ministers' Conference. At a recent meeting of the conference resolutions commendatory of the brother were unanimously adopted. Rev. C. A. Westbrook has been elected field secretary for the Kansas City district of our state general association. Rev. A. A. Todd, well known to Baptists of our city, was translated on Feb. 15 after two weeks' illness. He was born in Callaway County, Missouri, in 1870, and has been in the Baptist ministry for more than twenty-five years. Since 1916 he has been pastor of the First Church of Jacksonville, Ill.

Iowa Letter

By JAY A. LAPHAM

Des Moines University

There is general satisfaction over the new name for the institution. A large and enthusiastic body of students accept it with much pleasure, and a hearty response comes in from over the state.

Dr. L. D. Osborn has reluctantly resigned his position as professor of sociology and director of extension work in the University of Colorado to accept the position of chancellor in Des Moines University. Dr. Osborn received his bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan and his doctor's degree from the University of Chicago. His achievement as an educator has won for him respect wherever he is known. The challenge to lead the Baptist hosts of young people in higher education in our state is so great that Dr. Osborn felt that he must accept the urgent invitation from the board to undertake the task. To him will be given the general internal management of the affairs of the university. His splendid service as president of Des Moines College at a time when great patience and tact and perseverance were needed recommend him strongly to all our people. Pastors and parents will give him hearty support, and the students extend an enthusiastic welcome.

Iowa Convention

The board of managers of the convention met in regular quarterly session Feb. 8. There was a large attendance of the members. The board is composed of over fifty members: one from each of the twenmembers at large, and five officers. Nine ty associations in Iowa, twenty-eight of the members are women and twenty are laymen. The others are ordained ministers, but two are not serving as pastors. One is Rev. R. R. Sadler, who has served the convention for many years as its secretary, and who is highly appreciated as the editor of our state paper, the Baptist Record. The other is Dr. John Earl, so widely and favorably known to readers of THE BAPTIST through his illuminating exposition of the Sunday-school lessons.

Much business pressed for attention. Forward steps were taken of deep significance. A later letter will give the names of those who were elected to serve the convention. The report of Dr. G. P. Mitchell, missionary secretary of the convention, tells how the work has grown in the last few years. The amount of business now transacted when the board meets is easily four times what it was six years ago. The report says: "From practically all quarters of the state come reports of gracious revivals. Muscatine, Webster City, Shenandoah, Atlantic, Davemport, Grand River, Pleasant Valley, Chariton, Oelwein, Bryantburg, New Haven, Mt. Pleasant, Pella, South Ottumwa, Hedrick, Sioux City, Humeston, Corning, Perry, Fort Dodge, Sac City, Grand Junction, Charles City and Glenwood have reported meetings which have been held or are in progress. Brethren, it is a time for God's people to be much in prayer. Marked demonstrations of the power of the gospel have been manifested in many places."

There are now three pastors-at-large at work in Iowa. Dr. A. W. Caul is at work at Cherokee. Miss Hazel Boyd helped him for two weeks. A strong meeting is reported. Rev. A. G. Lagerquist is steadily gaining at Dubuque, and the outlook is the best in years. Dr. E. A. Shanks was heartily received at Cascade, where he did a fine piece of work. The missionary secretary visited twenty-six places during the quarter, met in conference with committees seventy times, delivered twenty-six sermons and addresses, and traveled 5768 miles.

Here and There

Rev. C. C. Browne, who came to Dunkerton a few months ago from Indiana, is putting on in the church an educational program of much promise. The needs of the community have been studied carefully. A new moving picture machine has been bought, and once a week the people enjoy an interesting educational entertainment. The teacher training class in the Sunday school is finishing the fourth book.

Central Association held its annual B. Y. P. U. rally at Grinnell. There was a fine attendance and much enthusiasm. The coming of the Northern Baptist Convention to Iowa June 22-29 appeals strongly to our young people.

Dr. H. O. Rowland of Oak Park, Ill., supplied the First Church, Des Moines, for two weeks. Many old-time friends were glad to hear him again.

Philadelphia Letter

BY ARTHUR C. BALDWIN

Remarkable Birthday Celebration

What the papers called "the most remarkable birthday celebration ever staged in Philadelphia" marked the seventy-eighth anniversary of Dr. Russell H. Conwell on Sunday, Feb. 13. The Temple was thronged at each service. Morning, afternoon and evening, long lines of children, women and men numbering literally thousands streamed up to the platform, each presenting the loved pastor and lecturer with flowers or fruit. In the evening he received three barrels of grape fruit from the young people. He received every variety of fruit except a lemon. On Monday morning Dr. Conwell addressed the Baptist ministers' conference and was welcomed by one of the largest attendances of the year. A testimonial dinner was given him at the Union League. Founder's Day for Temple College, which he established for poor boys and which now numbers more than 7000 students, was celebrated in the evening. Dr. Conwell is a veteran, but not our "grand old man." My typewriter refuses to use the word "old" in connection with him. He is young, vigorous, forward-looking, loved and honored by all. He is a great man.

Dr. West at Oak Lane

Dr. Raymond M. West of the Board of Promotion gave ten days to the Oak Lane Church, George E. Tomkinson, pastor. I am glad to insert here the resolution adopted by the church:

"The meetings were held for the purpose of deepening the spiritual life. The church has been greatly quickened. Dr. West's passionate presentation of his faith in the living God, in the redemption of Jesus Christ, in the guilt and punishment of sin, in the Bible as the word of God, and in the church as the divine institution will never be forgotten. Young people looking forward to life's work, people in the midst of life's tasks, and those who have seen many years of service have been greatly helped. Several professed conversion, and an old-fashioned revival is quietly going on. A group of personal workers was in training for four months to follow up these services."

One-hundred and Third Anniversary

The First Church, Camden, has just celebrated its one hundred and third anniversary. Pastor Lyell, who began his thirty-second year on Jan. 1, preached the sermon. The communion service was the largest in years. Special funds were asked for to purchase some real estate, and more than enough money was received. The old church is renewing its youth and faces the future with great hope.

Social Unions

The Baptist Social Union of Northwest Philadelphia met with the Logan Church on Feb. 15. Rev. B. L. Newkirk read a paper on "Our Baptist Heritage" in the afternoon. The evening address was by Rev. E. A. E. Palmquist, our Baptist brother who is secretary of the federation of churches. The officers for the next year are H. Windisch, president, J. L. Miner, vice-president, B. L. Newkirk, secretary, and H. W. Stringer, treasurer.

The West Philadelphia Baptist Social Union met with the Chestnut Street Church on Feb. 17. Rev. W. E. Chalmers spoke in the afternoon on the World Sunday-School Convention in Tokyo. Pres.

Emory W. Hunt gave a strong message in the evening. The officers for the new year are Arthur C. Baldwin, president, J. Francis Vought, vice-president, John F. Neff, secretary, and Harry C. Kaeplinger, treasurer.

Church Items

Rev. W. H. Wrighton of Georgia has been called to Western Memorial, and Rev. Walter Alexander of Texas has been called to Mantua.

At the last communion service in the Third Church, Dr. Groves W. Drew gave the hand of fellowship to eleven persons representing five states and the Dominion. South Philadelphia is surely cosmopolitan.

The East Church on Feb. 6 celebrated the forty-third anniversary of its Bible school and the thirty-fourth anniversary of Dr. C. H. Woolston, the pastor. Dr. Woolston is another of our young men who keeps his church on the qui vive and pays especial attention to the children.

Wayland Memorial, Rev. H. A. Bulson, pastor, is booming along with activity in every branch. Few churches are more active or have brighter prospects.

The Chestnut Street Church observed its second annual Foreign Students' Sunday on Feb. 20. Forty-one accepted the invitation. Eleven nationalities were represented in the attendance. After the service these young men were invited to the various homes for dinner.

Noon-Day Prayer Meetings

Noon-day prayer meetings in a downtown theater are being conducted by the federation of churches. March 1 to 4 is given over to Baptist leadership. Some good brethren shake their heads over the idea of lenten prayer meetings, but surely we cannot refuse to pray because it is Lent. Such a fear would be unworthy of us. We believe in prayer at any time and welcome the privilege of prayer and fellowship with our brethren to present Christ.

A Sorely Bereaved Family

BY D. D. PROPER

Paul enjoins Christians to "weep with them that weep," and experience proves that it is good to enter into the sorrows and sufferings of others, for we not only become a blessing but receive a blessing, as our hearts are made more tender and sympathetic by so doing.

The family of which I write is that of State Secy. S. P. Shaw of Sioux Falls, S. D. On Feb. 18 the father, mother, brother, two sisters and wife were called to lay away in the grave the remains of Chester, the oldest son of Dr. Shaw.

This young man was twenty-five years old, had graduated from Sioux Falls college in 1918, and was ordained to the gospel ministry. He had preached for two or three churches in the state while getting his education, and gave promise of future usefulness. He was married in July, 1918, to Miss Ruth Yonker of Columbus, Ohio. He was in the second year of his course at the Rochester Theological Seminary, N. Y., and was student pastor at Mumford, near Rochester.

Late in November, 1920, he underwent an operation for appendicitis. His heart had been affected for some years, and so great was the drain on his vitality that it could not stand the strain for complete recovery. When he was able to travel he was brought to his father's home. In the early part of February, 1921, it was thought that he could return to his work, and he went to Columbus, Ohio, where his wife and baby boy were with her father. The doctor there said that he was not able to work and urged him to return to Sioux Falls at once. On Monday, Feb. 14, his mother met him at Chicago, and they started homeward. When they were within about twenty miles of home, the spirit took its departure, and only the lifeless body remained.

Chester was converted at his mother's knee when a little boy, and was baptized and united with the church when ten years old. To the great delight of his father and mother, he wanted to be a preacher, and every encouragement and help were given him. His father baptized him, signed his two diplomas from academy and college as president of the board, was moderator of the ordaining council, and married him.

The funeral was held in the First Church of Sioux Falls Feb. 18, and was attended by a large number of friends, some from out of town. The pastor, Rev. G. Elton Harris, conducted the services. Several pastors from out in the state were present. Rev. Earl Pierce of Brookings, Rev. J. E. Cook of Watertown, Rev. Walter Ingram of Mitchell and Rev. L. L. Mann, pastor-at-large, took part in the services. Rev. D. D. Proper preached the sermon from II Samuel 12:23: "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."

Women of Central District—Attention!

A letter from national headquarters of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society called the attention of the Central District board to the starving millions of China. Although the famine is in north China, where Baptists have no work, and although contributions to the China Famine Fund cannot count on the $100,000,000, it was the opinion of the board that we should certainly co-operate in this urgent and worthy movement. Therefore we recommend that the women of Central District do something definite for famine relief in China, sending all funds to Mr. Geo. B. Huntington, treasurer of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City.

To Baptist Women Everywhere

I hope that each one of you has clearly in mind the Easter thank-offering to be taken in our Sunday schools this year for our great Baptist world work. It offers an unusual opportunity for our children to give out of their abundance to the needy children of the world. It also gives us a chance to glean our home field for the small gifts which are perhaps too uncertain, or are considered too small, to be pledged through the ordinary church channels.

In the old days we used to gather such gifts through our gift envelopes and boxes, and this Easter thank-offering gives us the opportunity to repeat that method, for one feature of the material is a lovely gift box for general use. There will be enough of these boxes so that one may be placed in every home to catch the pennies, the nickels, the dimes and quarters, and larger amounts, not only of the children, but of each member of the family who has reason for thankfulness and who wishes to have a part in the great united Easter offering.

By the time this message is read, samples of the material will probably have been sent to every pastor, and as much more as is needed can be had from the state promotion office. This material consists of a leaflet upon the way in which we are meeting or failing to meet God's fair demands of service for himself; a letter to women telling them what to do and how to do it; a charming little sheaf of stories for the children showing them what their gifts will do for children all over the world; and the beautiful box all ready to receive the gifts.

Women of every church, will you see to it that this material is distributed in your churches; that a gift box goes to each household, and a copy of the children's leaflet to each family of children; and that the letter to women is read in your mission circle and the general leaflet widely used? Then when Easter comes will you see that all the gift boxes are brought in and the contents promptly forwarded to your state collector? So shall Christ rise anew in the hearts of his children, and the light shine again in darkness because of what you have done.

MARTHA H. MACLEISH.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Mississippi Valley

MINNESOTA

THE MONTEVIDEO CHURCH is prospering under the ministry of Rev. L. R. Johnson. Twenty persons have been added to the membership during the year. All financial obligations have been met, and $3000 has been subscribed toward the new world movement. It was decided to have week-day religious instruction under instructors appointed by the church.

At LUVERNE, the church and Sunday school attendance is increasing, sixteen persons have united with the church, and Pastor J. T. Brown and his people are much encouraged.

Rev. E. A. LAGERSTROM sees real advance spiritually and materially at Willmar. Baptisms are frequent.

THE CANBY CHURCH has taken a forward step in paying the last obligation on the building purchased last fall. Rev. C. T. Davies is fast gathering the people here and at Minneota together.

Rev. E. P. JOHNSON is serving the churches at Lake Lillian and Irving, and may also supply the pulpit at Sparta, which is vacant at present.

Rev. JESSE RUNYAN has closed a successful pastorate at the Merriam Park Church, St. Paul. Decided progress has been made during his ministry. The church bore a good part in the New World Movement, has attained self-support, and has many additions by baptism. Mr. Runyan was in Y. M. C. A. work in France for some eight months. He now begins at once as executive secretary of the Baptist Union of Minneapolis, with Baptist headquarters in that city.

PASTOR J. S. NORDELL welcomed six new members into the Fahlun Swedish Church recently.

SEVEN CONVERTS were baptized at Virginia the last Tuesday in January.

Rev. A. J. DAHLEY of St. Paul, who was obliged to return from Assam because of illness in the family, has taken work as superintendent of the Mariners' Church and Bethel Mission in Boston.

Rev. L. D. ALVORD has held an evangelistic meeting at Frazee. Some thirty-five persons have taken a definite stand for Christ. From Frazee Mr. Alvord went to Laporte, beginning there Feb. 20.

Rev. C. O. DAHLEEN of Quincy, Ill., has accepted the call from the Swedish Church at Worthington.

THE SWEDISH CHURCH of St. Cloud is going steadily forward under leadership of Rev. A. E. Belstrom. Two persons were recently baptized.

MISSOURI

Rev. WARREN P. CLARK has been pastor at Chillicothe for more than six years, during which time he has received into the church 418 people, 257 of them by baptism. The average Sunday school attendance for the first seven Sundays of the year was 405. The church has recently made up a purse of $250 for Dr. W. Sanford Gee and his wife, both of whom have been ill for some time. Dr. Gee, for many years an active pastor in Illinois and more recently in Missouri, has been in the hospital at Chillicothe, suffering greatly from pancreatitis, for over a month. He is far from being well as yet.

ON FEB. 27, Dr. W. M. VINES of the First Church, Norfolk, Va., began special meetings with the First Church, Columbia. Mr. J. P. Scholfield of Fort Scott, Kans., is conducting the singing. The church started, the meetings organized, prayerful and expectant. The pastor, Rev. T. W. Young, is just entering his ninth year. There have been more than 1000 additions to the church during his pastorate.

KANSAS

Rev. ROBERT J. CHURCH began his fifth year as pastor of the Arkansas City Church on Jan. 1. Attendance is good, and someone unites with the church at almost every preaching service. During the four years of the present pastorate, 320 have been added to the membership. This number more than equals the resident membership when Mr. Church became pastor. Preparations for a new church edifice are in progress, and a sinking fund is growing. Three well attended Bible classes are conducted during the week by the pastor and his wife. Missionary benevolences of the church have more than doubled. The report is that

"the wheels of church life are running smoothly."

THE "DAILY AND VACATION Bible school" institute recently held at Kansas City under the auspices of Dr. T. S. Young was well attended. W. O. Shank of Atchison writes: I am highly impressed with this new movement fostered by our Publication Society. This is a pioneer work, but the time will come when biblical instruction, in every city, town or hamlet, will be recognized and adopted as a part of our educational system. Every Baptist church in America should acquaint itself with this movement and endeavor to co-operate."

THE FIRST CHURCH of Hutchinson reports the following additions to its equipment and property: A large new pipe organ, which is much enjoyed by all; new pews for the main auditorium and new furniture; a primary department in the enlarged basement, with new furniture for same; a large new parsonage; and a building for the mission of the church in the suburb of Careyville. The fifth anniversary of Pastor Horace Cole's work with the church was celebrated last October. In 1915 the benevolences totaled $923, and in 1920, $3957. Local expenses in 1915 were $4312, and in 1920, $8637. The pastor is much loved by his people.

THE CHURCH AT PHILLIPSBURG is taking on new life since the coming of Rev. L. E. Griffith. There is a good teacher training class, just now completing the first unit of the new standard course.

Rev. G. W. E. MERRIFIELD of Fredonia held a successful meeting with the Bethel Church recently, with good results. There were some ten or twelve conversions, several of whom have been baptized.

Rev. J. R. PENNINGTON has been called to the church at Liberal and has accepted. He has done a successful work in one of the suburban churches of Kansas City, Mo.

Rev. W. W. SEARCY of Olathe is greatly encouraged with the outlook for his work since the first of the year. He gave the hand of fellowship to fourteen new members recently, seven of them coming in by baptism.

Rev. C. H. OWENS of the Harmony Church held a successful meeting recently in one of the schoolhouses near by with fine results. There were some twelve hopeful conversions.

Rev. J. J. VIA, one of the teachers in the schools of Sterling, has recently become the stated supply for the Larned Church.

THE MCPHERSON CHURCH, under the leadership of Pastor C. T. Isley, has completed extensive plans of improvement on the church building, improving its appearance and giving added room for the work.

Rev. A. H. MCHENRY, formerly pastor at Phillipsburg, has accepted the care of the church at Wakeney and has already taken up the work.

LINDSBORG will be the place of meeting for the Student Volunteer Convention for Kansas and Feb. 11 to 13 the dates. There will be representation from all the colleges in the state. Dr. J. C. Robbins will be one of the speakers.

PASTOR R. W. MCQUERRY of Argonia had the assistance of Pastor J. H. Pennoch of Norwich in special meetings recently. There were eleven accessions to the church.

A NUMBER OF NEW STUDENTS have enrolled since the first of the year at the Kansas City Seminary, bringing the total number above any previous year. Prof. Sharp is grateful for the response of churches and individuals in furnishing lecture-room chairs to furnish his classroom. The training school is indebted to many mission circles for linens, towels, fruits and provisions sent in during recent months.

EVANGELIST JAS. A. ARMSTRONG of Leon, Iowa, held a meeting recently in the Waldo community with good results. The Baptist Church building is a few miles in the country, but the probabilities are that, when the church begins work again, it will be moved into town.

NEBRASKA

EVANGELIST E. W. WHITE closed a series of successful revival meetings at Red Cloud on Feb. 6. The church has been pastorless much of the time for years, and only one church in this city of 3000 has a regular settled pastor—the Methodist. Dr. R. R. Coon of Grand Island, who was present at these meetings as acting-pastor, writes: "We feel sure that Christian forces there have had a spiritual uplifting whose good influences will long abide." Dr. White began meetings at Chadron Feb. 10.

Lincoln Notes

Baptist affairs are going on well in this city. The First church recently held its annual supper. At that time it gave a welcome to exactly 100 new members who had been received during 1920. Fully 400 people were present. Representatives of all departments spoke briefly. At the February communion service twenty-three members were welcomed. A "prospect list" which Dr. Elmore keeps gives hope that at least 100 members may be received this year by Easter. Record attendances at prayer meeting, Sunday school and church services are being broken constantly. Nearly every organization in the church and practically every class in the Bible school has adopted goals for attendance and efficiency.

Changes have been taking place in East Lincoln. Our good people there have adopted the name "Second Baptist church." Brother J. G. Dickson closed his pastorate the first of the year to enter welfare work. He has been a faithful, hard-working pastor. The church has called Rev. Henry C. Smith, of Berwick, Ill. He will begin his pastorate March 1. He is a thoroughly trained man and has had fine success in one of the strongest rural fields in Illinois. He is in the vigor of young manhood and is coming to an enthusiastic people.

The greatest source of satisfaction is the union which has been effected between the Rush Memorial and the Holdrege Street churches. These people have been working vigorously side by side for the last four or five years. After a long courtship, attended alternately by hope and misgivings, the two have been most happily wedded. It was a layman who assisted chiefly in tying the knot. Mr. Oak Davis, president of the Baptist Social Union, did some fine counselling. A love feast, celebrating the event, was held the first Sunday afternoon following the union. The church was recognized by a council Jan. 25. Rev. C. A. Spalding, pastor of Holdrege Street, becomes a missionary of the convention, and Rev. F. W. Ainslie, pastor of Rush Memorial, becomes pastor of the united church. The name adopted is "The Temple Baptist church." It has a membership of over 200. It is specially well located in the northeast part of the city, is self supporting from the start and is aggressively at work. A new building project will be on in the near future.

A Federated Church Council has recently been formed. Thirty-three evangelical churches are members. We are well represented upon the official staff. Dr. Elmore is chairman of the department of evangelism and Mr. Oak Davis is in charge of publicity. It is expected that the council will be a positive force in the moral and spiritual life of the city. The first aggressive movement is an evangelistic campaign which will be conducted simultaneously during the two weeks preceding Easter. Union noon meetings will be held down town. Each church will hold its own evening meetings and each pastor will do the preaching in his own church. Dr. Elmore, with his committee, is setting things in order for a thorough work in all the thirty-three churches. A complete religious census of the city was taken Sunday afternoon, Feb. 13, which will form a splendid basis for the evangelistic campaign.

The work among the Baptist students at the university is encouraging. Several, in various stages of preparation, are planning for work in foreign fields.

C. J. POPE.

MICHIGAN

MARANATHA CHURCH, DETROIT, has the satisfaction of announcing that Rev. C. E. La Reau has accepted the call to the pastorate, left vacant by the resignation of Rev. Christopher Burnett in October. Mr. Le Reau has for eight years been pastor of Windom Park Church, Minneapolis, and also a teacher in the N. W. Bible School. He is at present seeking rest in the South and will assume his duties early in April.

AFTER A MINISTRY OF FOUR YEARS, Rev. A. Carnell, finished his work at Bloomington on Feb. 28. During his pastorate, seventy-six have been received by baptism and letter. The chairman of the pulpit committee, Mr. W. Harrison, will be glad to hear from a suitable man.

REV. J. W. ERSKINE began an evangelistic meeting with the Durand Church on Jan. 23 and preached for two weeks. As a result, the pastor, Rev. A. M. Bailey, baptized fourteen and received six by experience and one by restoration. Others are to be received by letter.

THIRTY NEW MEMBERS have just been baptized by Pastor C. B. Milberry into his church at Harbor Beach and six others united on their Christian experience. Rev. J. J. Pease of Bay City assisted in these meetings.

"EVERY MEMBER IN THE CHURCH IS PLEASED," writes one from Manistee of the pastor, W. E. Anderreck. He is proving a fine leader and the members respond gladly to his plans for aggressive work.

REV. C. H. MYERS at Hudson finds help and inspiration in his orchestra and chorus choir led by Mrs. Myers. They contribute no small part to the success of the evangelistic services held each Sunday evening.

REV. P. J. JOHNS has resigned his pastorate at North and West Rome, desiring to move to a field where he can have advanced school advantages for his daughter. During his three year pastorate he has received more than thirty members. His address is Manitou Beach.

THE CHURCH AT BIRMINGHAM increased the salary of Pastor Peter M. MacKay by $200 at its last business meeting. It has purchased what is considered the best building lot in the village and is looking forward to a modern church building in the not distant future.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL at Marshall has now passed the 330 mark, with all classes organized and holding social gatherings each month. Pastor J. Burt Bouwman expects to baptize several at Easter.

PASTOR D. MARTIN, assisted by Mr. Elker, singer, has been cheered by thirty-two conversions, several of whom will come into the Bad Axe Church. This is the result of pastor and people unitedly and prayerfully entering upon a campaign for souls.

REV. R. A. ALLEN was assisted by Rev. H. H. Ford of Traverse City in the special meetings in the South Church, Port Huron. Not only as a preacher does Dr. Ford proclaim the gospel, but his singing is equally effective. Pastor Allen says: The meetings were far-reaching in their influence and God gave the victory over evil forces working against us. Twelve have already been baptized.

ILLINOIS

EIGHT WERE BAPTIZED recently at the Slovak Church, Chicago, Rev. A. P. Slabey, pastor. Meetings are being held in three parts of the city. Dr. Benj. Otto visited the church on Sunday evening, Feb. 20.

THE STATE STREET CHURCH, ROCKFORD, Rev. Raymond S. Carman, pastor, is conducting a campaign for church attendance which began Feb. 6 and will continue until April 24. Definite goals are placed for all services and organizations and strong attempts made to reach these. An attractive series of "Mobilization" bulletins is being issued.

THE CORNER-STONE of the North Shore Church, Chicago, was laid on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 20. The new site for this growing church is nearly a mile north of the present location and is in the centre of the residences of the members. A complete and adequate workshop, as well as a beautiful house of worship, has been planned. The Bible school can take care of about 1200 and the auditorium will seat about 800. The enterprise will represent an investment of approximately $200,000. The exercises of the corner-stone laying were attended by Baptists from many other churches. Dr. Benj. Otto, Dr. J. P. Abbott, Mr. C. J. Howell, Mr. S. M. Seator, Mr. W. B. Wagoner and Mr. J. L. Kraft had a share in the program. The address of the afternoon was made by Dr. Carl D. Case of Oak Park. The work on the entire building is being pushed forward and it is expected that the church can take possession of part of the structure in the summer. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Jones, has been with the church about three years. Dr. W. E. Biederwolf is at present holding special services with the church.

Woman's Mission Union of Chicago

The March meeting of the Woman's Mission Union of the Chicago Association will be held at the Immanuel Church (2320 Michigan Boulevard) Tuesday, March 8. The morning will be of great interest to every circle, it being the annual meeting. Reports will be given from each chairman.

The afternoon is full of good things. Dr. G. A. Huntley, medical missionary, of Shanghai, China, Dr. William Axling, evangelistic missionary, of Tokyo, Japan, and Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery will be the speakers. Mrs. ERNEST RIDGEWAY.

Woman's Mission Society of Illinois

The regular board meeting was held in the First National Bank building, Chicago, Jan. 28. There was a large attendance from all over the state.

An impressive memorial service was held for Mrs. H. W. Ralph, a former faithful board member, who passed away in January. Miss Marchie Hines, our missionary at the Kodiak Orphanage in Alaska, was present and told of her work by word and picture. Mrs. Robert Hoffman of Elgin and Mrs. C. E. Siver of Waukegan were elected to fill the two vacancies on the board. The death of Mrs. Upcraft, for years one of our faithful missionaries in China, was spoken of.

Atlantic Coast

NEW JERSEY

AT THE EMMANUEL CHURCH, RIDGEWOOD. Thursday evening is being observed as "Church Family Gathering Night." A table discussion follows the supper and this in turn is followed by the devotional service of the church. Three new deacons were ordained at the last communion service and five new members welcomed.

MAINE

A LARGE COUNCIL convened at Bradley Feb. 17 and after a thorough examination of the candidate, Mr. Oscar W. Thomas, voted unanimously to recommend his ordination. Rev. H. G. Kennedy was the moderator of the council and Rev. H. W. Rowe was scribe. Mr. Thomas.

The great work of this church will now have more adequate facilities.

THE QUARTERLY MEETING of the North Aroostook Association convened with Pastor J. W. Brown and the Fort Fairfield Church on Feb. 14. Aroostook is having a wonderful winter, but prefers to have potatoes up and the mercury down. The spirit of the people, however, is wonderful. There is no whining over losses. The people fully expect to cover with profits next year. There is much of good to report in the work of the churches. Pastor Clark at Bridgewater is leading in a great revival. Constantly increasing congregations and interest encourage Pastor Cooper at Washburn. Pastor Ranger is seeing some of his best young people declare for Christ. The quarterly meeting gave special prominence to promotional affairs, Secy. Mower speaking upon what the New World Movement means to Maine and Promotion Director Whittemore speaking on the greatness of its meaning to the world and the kingdom of God. Mrs. J. W. Browne, wife of Pastor Brown, led the women's hour, and Director Henderson presented the new emphasis upon religious education. Pastor Clark preached and Pastor Ranger opened the subject of evangelism in a helpful way. The association took vigorous action against the bill before the legislature to relax the Sunday law.

ON SUNDAY, FEB. 13, Rev. Benj. Beatty, the successful and much loved pastor of the Getchell Street Church, Waterville, resigned in order to become one of the pastor-evangelists of the state convention. His pastorate has been remarkably successful, and a strong band of young people are becoming efficient church workers. The baptism of eleven Russian men and women is one of the notable things in Maine church work. The leader in this work, Mr. Maxim Green, becomes convention missionary to the Russians of Maine. The principle of sacrifice seems to be applied to the Getchell Street Church, as both pastor and special worker are taken. Pastor Beatty is, however, primarily an evangelist and goes to the field of his successes and his love, and Mr. Green has a great passion for souls.

Twenty-fifth Anniversary at Rumford

Rumford is one of the great towns where paper has built of stone and mortar almost a city over night. Here is one of the greatest water powers in New England, and here twenty-five years ago, with the aid of the convention, the Baptist Church laid foundations on which it has strongly built. A beautiful church and a fine parsonage afford excellent equipment for service. For the entire twenty-five years Dea. Charles A. Mixer has been organist and choir director; nor is the length of his service its most remarkable characteristic. Pres. Gray of Bates College and Secy. Irvin B. Mower were the preachers for this notable anniversary. Rev. E. C. Jenkins, from a successful pastorate in the Free Church, Houlton, came to Rumford a few weeks ago. Already there is progress.

MASSACHUSETTS

RECOGNITION SERVICES for Rev. Arthur T. Brooks as pastor of the Dudley Street Church were held on Feb. 17. Addresses were given by Rev. A. K. deBlois, Rev. F. W. Blakeslee, Rev. B. A. Wilmott, Rev. Clarence A. Young and Mr. Brooks.

AT RUGGLES STREET, congregations have been steadily increasing since the coming of Rev. S. W. Cummings. During the

NEW EDIFICE OF THE FIRST GERMAN CHURCH, MADISON, SOUTH DAKOTA

Mrs. Topping told of the eight regional conferences to be held in the state during February and March. A number of missionary circles and C. W. C. societies and fifteen W. W. G. chapters were reported organized since the state meeting. All the committees for the year were appointed, including the program committee for woman's day at the state convention.

This was necessarily an all-day meeting, much business being transacted and many plans for the year's work being discussed. Illinois board women seem alive to our key words—"Survey and Obey"—and seem determined to lead all Illinois women to "overcome and possess the land." Mrs. W. C. RUTHERFORD, Secy.

SOUTH DAKOTA

THE FIRST GERMAN CHURCH, Madison, dedicated its new edifice, which replaces one destroyed by fire two years ago, on Jan. 23. The general missionary secretary, Rev. William Rubn of Chicago, preached the dedicatory sermon. During the services the amount remaining on the indebtedness, $7000, was wiped out. The cost of the new building, not including many articles of equipment was $58,368.53. The church is very happy in its new home which is pronounced the most modern and beautiful in the community. Three weeks of special services have just closed. The outlook was never brighter. (Ohio news on page 156) formerly a business man in Lynn, was converted thirteen years ago and immediately become active in Christian work. Afterward connected with the church in Beverly, he so fully won the confidence of the church that it encouraged him in his purpose to devote his entire time to the ministry. For the past year he has served the church at Wells Depot. The ordination exercises included sermon by Secy. I. B. Mower; prayer, Rev. E. S. Drew; hand of fellowship, Rev. D. W. Kimball; charge to the pastor, Rev. P. E. Miller; charge to the church, by a representative sent from the church in Beverly, who not only brought the greetings of that church, but also a substantial contribution for the work in Bradley. Pastor Thomas is already seeing large progress in the work of the church.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Houlton, Rev. Henry C. Speed, pastor has raised its meeting-house four feet (it has raised its benevolences in the N. W. M. much higher than that), and has thus provided prayer-meeting room, dining room, classrooms and robing rooms—an admirable equipment for Sunday-school work. Over $14,000 has been expended. Special exercises of rededication were held Feb. 13, with sermon by Secy. I. B. Mower, Scripture reading by Prin. E. H. Stover of Ricker Institute and prayer of dedication by Pastor Speed. The attendance was so great that many were unable to gain admission.

past month about fifty young people have expressed a desire to enter the Christian life, and there have been a number of baptisms.

ONE OF THE NOTABLE pastorates in Massachusetts is that of Rev. Nelson S. Burbank at the First Church, Revere. On Feb. 17 the thirtieth anniversary of this pastorate was celebrated with interesting addresses. Mr. Burbank's remarkable work in Revere is generally recognized throughout the state.

THE FIRST CHURCH, EVERETT, Rev. A. Judson Hughes, pastor, has just closed a successful series of evangelistic services conducted by Rev. E. C. Pauling of Salem, assisted by Mr. George E. Whitehouse of Somerville, musical director and soloist. A goodly number of young and middle-aged persons responded to the appeals made. At the communion service for February, which was largely attended, the church by a rising vote declared its appreciation of the pastor's fifteen years of service, its endorsement of his plans and policies for the church's welfare and growth, and its hope that he might remain as the church's leader and guide for many years to come.

THE WEST SOMERVILLE CHURCH, Rev. Frank Swaffield, pastor, is a regular beehive—plenty of people all about it and in it. You would almost take it for a Roman Catholic church, as you see the people pour in and out. Think of a men's class of 400! This church has it. And a Sunday school of nearly 1800, and a Sunday night service packed to the walls! The church got the habit under Pastor W. F. Wilson, and emphatically is the habit growing under Frank M. Swaffield. O, for a great, new, adequate plant for such a working church.

REV. F. W. PEAKES has begun his pastorate at West Newton with favorable signs. Although overshadowed in a way, by great churches of other denominations, this church has a large and unique field of its own as a live evangelical body.

THERE ARE CALLS and rumors of calls in the suburban meridian. Ere these notes get into type, two of our best pastoral leaders may have "run upon a troop or leaped over a wall."

THE NEXT "STEPHEN GREENE LECTURE" at Newton Theological Institution comes Feb. 25. Prof. Edward C. Moore of Harvard, president of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, speaks on a topic upon which he is an authority: "The Christian Faith and International Relations."

THE FIRST WEEK IN LENT the interdenominational noon services at King's Chapel have been conducted by some of our Newton professors. Pres. Horr took the first two days and was followed by Profs. Vaughan, Bradbury and Donovan. The attendance has grown during the week.

DR. GEO. E. HERR has begun his visitation at Baptist colleges, commencing with Bates College the present week. His visits always bring a strength and inspiration that are anticipated.

DR. JOHN MARVIN DEAN of New York has been preaching for the Tremont Temple Church of Boston during February. "The great work has gone on," he testifies, "even in Dr. Myers' absence. This is due to the remarkable staff of associates. During the great blizzard on Sunday, Feb. 20, the burning of the Cudaby plant in the heart of Boston drew scarce a hundred spectators, while there were present that same stormy day in the Tremont Temple Brotherhood alone 375 men by actual count. Brotherhood leaders should get in touch with the methods and spirit of Rev. D. M. Lockrow, director of men's work at the Temple. Dr. Myers will occupy his own pulpit again beginning March 6. A royal welcome awaits him."

Boston Ministers' Conference

After brief wandering the ministers' conference of Boston came back strongly in a large meeting and brisk discussion. Dr. Woodman Bradbury led with a paper on "Democracy and Conscience." The attractive difficulty of the topic provoked question as well as questions. The essayist made it plain that while the strain of the great war was upon us, we wrought some violence both to democracy and conscience, but it did not appear just how we could have escaped a more violent German dominance had we allowed crooks, cranks and conscientious objectors to muddle us while we were saving everything precious. An excessive conscience can do more harm than one full of offense. Then we must take care of it.

Dr. Lemuel C. Barnes was the reader at the next meeting, on the "Christian Control of Intensive Power." Dr. Barnes had plowed his field so thoroughly that the conference by a hearty vote requested our Home Mission Society to print the paper for a wide reading. It was suggestive, informing, weighty and forward-looking. In his wide spiritual outlook, the great material fundamentals have not escaped our home mission leader. He has well considered coal, oil and electricity as intensive powers; but he amazed us with the still inexhaustible power that remains for our service after coal, oil and natural gas have had their comparatively little day. It was an address that compelled optimism and flashed light along the sure path of Christian progress.

The Social Union

The February social union meeting was a general unlimbering. That is, we touched great things lightly, yet deeply, and were helped in it by rollicking song, and instructive fascinations. It was "Father and Son's Night," and was designated to hit both at once. Pres. Sheppard was without a tremor. Evidently he had something "up his sleeve." The "Sons" acted as if "spreads" were in their line, and the "Fathers" did not falter at the tables.

The music was overwhelmingly rousing—homemade choruses and plenty of them. Our special entertainers were two charming Scotch-American boys from Somerville. In this case we loved the "hyphenates": Harold and Kenneth Kirkness. They were in the sprightly period and fully entered into their fascinating specialties. Kilts, plaids, bonnie bonnets and Highland song and humor played upon our applause and laughter.

The serious phase was in the hands of Dr. Sumner R. Vinton. He gave us grand pictures, startling figures about world conditions, thought-provoking facts and problems—a solidly impressive culmination of a really great meeting.

CONNECTICUT

THE SPECIAL REGIONAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE held in the state, Jan. 28 to Feb. 7, resulted in a better understanding of the New World Movement program on the part of the churches.

MANY CONNECTICUT CHURCHES have been engaged in evangelistic effort since the opening of the year, with encouraging results. The spiritual life of the churches has been deepened, and there have been numerous additions to the membership. Other churches are planning special meetings.

REV. THEODORE BACHELER, pastor for two years of the Federated Church (Baptist and Congregationalist), Willington, has accepted a call to the Broad Street Congregational Church, Providence, and began his work on the new field March 1. Willington offers a fine opportunity to the right kind of a man seeking a field of labor.

THE WORK IN THE GRAND AVENUE CHURCH, New Haven, is progressing encouragingly under the leadership of Pas-

Give Your Pastor a New Book

HE READS ALL THE YEAR ROUND

A WONDERFUL MORNING

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN

Author of "A WONDERFUL MORNING"; "THE PERSONALITY OF GOD"; "THE COMING OF THE LORD" etc.

This finely made book is a study of that first Easter morning which sets forth in poetic language its profound meaning and far-reaching power. A many-sided message of reassurance for the sorrowing. $1.75

FOUR RELIGIOUS BEST SELLERS

New Printings. Reduced Prices.

JAMES B. PRATT
The Religious Conscience. Paper Boards $2.50

RICHARD L. SWAIN
What and Where is God? Paper Boards 1.50

ROGER W. BABSON
Religion and Business. Paper Boards 1.50

S. PARKES CADMAN
Ambassadors of God. Paper Boards 2.50

THE NEW LIGHT ON IMMORTALITY

The Significance of Psychic Research

By JOHN H. RANDALL

Written for the benefit of those without time for an extended study of just what psychological research really means, what it is trying to do and how much has already been accomplished. $1.75

AT ONE WITH THE INVISIBLE

By B. W. BACON, G. A. BARTON,

C. A. DINSMORE, E. W. HOP-

KINS, R. M. JONES, F. C. PORT-

ER, G. W. RICHARDS, E. H.

SNEATH, C. C. TORREY, WILLIS-

TON WALKER.

Prepared for the seeker after a fuller life of aspiration, insight and contemplation who prefers to pass by present day pretenders for conference with these great exponents of mysticism—Wordsworth, Fox, St. Theresa, Eckhardt, Dante, Augustine, Paul and Jesus. $3.00

POWER OF PRAYER

By Various Writers

"The most important recent volume on prayer." Christian Evangelist.

"A revelation of the place occupied by prayer the world round." The Presbyterian.

"An astoundingly comprehensive book." The Christian Intelligencer. Octavo 528 pages $4.00

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF ADOLESCENCE

By FREDERICK TRACY

"Of incalculable value to parents." Brooklyn Eagle.

"Presents its subject in a way large enough to take in the whole course of youth from home to university." Boston Transcript. $3.00

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

Wolf: The Myth of the Jewish Menace ..... $ .50

Snowden: The Personality of God. 1.75

Drake: Shall We Stand By The Church? ..... 2.00

Hoyt: For Pulpit and American

Life ..... 2.50

The Problem of Christian Unity ..... 1.75

Slattery: How To Pray ..... 1.50

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

64-66 Fifth Avenue New York City, N. Y.

tor P. L. Cosman. Thirty-six new members were added during the past year. Slogan for 1921: "Every member a personal worker."

REV. SAUMEL JOHNSON of Hartland, Maine, has accepted the call extended to him by the Winsted Church and will begin his pastorate April 1.

REV. C. L. FISHER has resigned from the pastorate of Union Church, Hartford, after five years of faithful service, to resume a former pastorate in Alabama.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

ON FEB. 13, REV. W. C. CHAPPELL, visited the Midway Church, preaching in the morning on "Stewardship," and in the evening on "Personal Evangelism." The occasion was the reopening of the auditorium after painting and renovation. The basement has also been papered and painted by members of the church. Two weeks of evangelistic services began on Feb. 20, the first week's meetings being conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. R. Rutledge and the second week's by Rev. J. S. Jewell of Carnegie.

REV. C. E. HEMANS, pastor of the First Church, Homestead, observed the second anniversary of his pastorate on Feb. 13. During the past two years, more than 100 were received into the membership, most of them by baptism. The audiences on Sunday morning have increased so that they now practically fill the great auditorium. During the past year, $300 was added to the pastor's salary, and the missionary apportionment was increased from $1400 to $4000. In addition, a large electric sign was placed in front of the church, and the church and parsonage were painted. The tithing band organized during the year, which numbers over twenty, made much of this possible. The church is looking forward to special evangelistic services to be held this spring, and it expects to lead the association again this year in the number of baptisms.

Pacific Coast

WESTERN WASHINGTON

CONCRETE: The old saloon property recently purchased at Concrete has been transformed into a beautiful little church building. Rev. Earl D. Sims is conducting a revival meeting. Night congregations have reached as high as 150. Already twelve or fifteen people have been baptized and others are being received. The membership has increased from seven to about twenty-five, the Sunday school has more than doubled and the whole outlook is encouraging. This is the heroic little church with only seven members that subscribed more than $1000 to the New World Movement.

REV. AND MRS. T. O. WOLD have been appointed missionaries to work among the Scandinavian people of Western Washington.

THE REGIONAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCES in Western Washington began at Seattle in the Tabernacle Church Feb. 7-8. The team sent by the General Board of Promotion consisted of Dr. Charles A. Brooks, Mrs. H. W. Peabody, Rev. W. H. Bowler and Miss Anna Johnson, for seventeen years a missionary in the Philippine Islands. Besides this conference, the team attended the conference at Mount Vernon, Feb. 8-9, and at Chehalis, Feb. 10-11. In the Seattle conference sixteen churches were represented; at Mount Vernon, fourteen, and at Chehalis, six. The addresses given by members of the team and their counsel in the discussion of practical questions were exceedingly helpful in putting clearly before our people our task and how to accomplish it. Many appreciative testimonies were given by those attending the conferences regarding their helpfulness. These conferences were followed by other regional conferences, held at Bellingham, Bremerton, Olympia, Hoquiam, Raymond and Tacoma, which were conducted by teams of workers from the state. Miss Anna Johnson attended a number of these conferences and gave fresh and vivid messages of her work. Findings committees made reports at the conferences which were unanimously adopted, pledging anew allegiance to the New World Movement; endorsing the outline of work between now and May 1 proposed by the General Board of Promotion; and recommending that an adequate missionary program be adopted by each local church. These regional conferences will be followed by a large number of local church conferences.

WHILE DR. CHAS. A. BROOKS was in Seattle attending the regional missionary conference an opportunity was secured for him, through Rev. C. L. Maxfield, university Y. M. C. A. secretary, to deliver a message to the all-student assembly of the University of Washington. This is a privilege accorded to very few speakers. Dr. Brooks' message was received with great appreciation by the thousands of students present. On the same day, Mrs. H. W. Peabody addressed the student volunteers at the men's building on the university grounds.

REV. A. B. BAIRD, who has been supplying the church at Elma since Rev. Horace Goodin closed his pastorate Jan. 1, has been called as pastor and will move on to the field March 1.

REV. CHARLES BAKER of Summerland, B. C., has become pastor of the churches at Lynden and Laurel, beginning his work Feb. 1.

REV. E. F. HAMBY of Lusk, Wyo., began his work as pastor of the South Tacoma Church Jan. 24.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

PASTOR RUFUS KEYSER of the First Church, Lindsay, has organized a large number of personal workers into groups for evangelistic work. Baptismal services occur weekly.

DURING THE LAST MONTH, seventeen have been received into the membership of the church at Chico, eleven of them by baptism. The State Normal School is located at Chico and Pastor Berry is reaching out in his ministry to these young people.

THE FIRST CHURCH, OAKLAND, received thirty-six new members on Feb. 6 and five more were baptized on Feb. 13. For many weeks members have been received every week. The prayer meetings now overflow into an adjoining room. On Feb. 2 an institute of religious education, to continue twelve weeks, opened with classes in Bible origin, Bible doctrine, missions, stewardship, teacher training and young people's methods. The classes meet at 6:15 for supper, then go to their sessions and later all come together for the regular prayer meeting hour.

DON'T BUY THESE BOOKS

UNLESS YOU ARE WILLING TO THINK

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

By George Cross
$1.25, postpaid $1.35

This book is a comprehensive survey of the rival interpretations of Christianity.

THE SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY IN THE MODERN WORLD

By Edward C. Moore
$2.00, postpaid $2.15

A survey of the history of missions since the beginning of the modern era and a discussion of the present situation in India, Japan, China, Africa, the Ottoman Empire, the Americas, and the islands of the sea.

THE RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD

By George A. Barton
$2.00, postpaid $2.15

What are the great religions of the world and what elements do they hold in common? The author ably answers this two-fold question in seventeen chapters that read as easily as a story.

THE REVELATION OF JOHN

By Shirley J. Case
$2.75, postpaid $2.90

The author explains the meaning of the book as it was intended to be understood by those to whom it was first addressed. Special attention is given to the explanation of such terms as "beast," the anticipated end of the world, the millennium, and the New Jerusalem.

THE GOSPEL IN THE LIGHT OF THE GREAT WAR

By Ozora S. Davis
$1.50, postpaid $1.65

This book is designed as a workable manual for the preacher who is facing the opportunities of the pulpit in a new age. The suggestions offered are examples of a profitable way to work the rich mine of biblical and recent literature.

THE PARABLES OF JESUS IN THEIR RELATION TO HIS MINISTRY

By Willard H. Robinson, Jr.
$1.50, postpaid $1.65. Ready in April

The purpose of this book is to present a new method of interpreting the parables, namely that of discovering the original setting in which the parable was spoken, of making clear the truth taught at the time, and applying that truth to the solution of our modern problems.

THE MINISTER AND THE BOY

By Allan Hoben
$1.25, postpaid $1.40

Based on sound psychology and furnishes principles upon the basis of which the boys of any community may be given inspiration and right direction.

A GUIDE TO THE STUDY OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION

By Gerald B. Smith
$3.00, postpaid $3.20

This book is just what the title suggests—a guide for the person seeking reliable information about the Christian religion.

HOW THE BIBLE GREW

By Frank G. Lewis
$1.50, postpaid $1.65

The author has given the Bible an opportunity to tell its own story; how it came into existence, and how it came to be the Bible.

THE EVOLUTION OF EARLY CHRISTIANITY

By Shirley J. Case
$2.75, postpaid $2.90

To understand Christianity one should know something of its early history and especially the environment in which it developed.

Purchase from your denominational dealer or direct from us.

The University of Chicago Press
5752 Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

Ohio

Dayton Association

The pastors held their monthly meeting Feb. 14 at the First Church, Dayton. Pastors O. T. Swigart of Greenville, L. M. Copland of Springfield and E. McFarlane of Franklin and Howard Johnson, Sunday-school director of Clark County, were introduced. The paper of the hour was by J. C. MacFarlane of the Memorial Church, Dayton, on the Zion movement.

Dr. Slocum of the First Church reported eight confessions and a growing Bible school. The deacons and trustees gave to Dr. and Mrs. Slocum a pleasant experience on the day of their silver wedding, at which time there was a gathering in the church chapel of the officers and their wives and the ministers and wives who are members of the church. They were presented with silver quarters to the amount of $25.

Supt. C. H. Starrit reports that many of the pastorless churches have secured pastors during the month.

Pastor B. F. Patt of Sidney had the help of Rev. J. C. Jones of Piqua in special meetings, resulting in eleven baptisms. The church building is being remodeled to make room for the growing work.

Pastor J. C. MacFarlane led his people at Memorial to a high-water mark in attendance. Teachers and officers are planning a decision day next month.

Pastor O. T. Swigart was encouraged on his first day of service at Greenville by two additions. Things are taking on new life with the coming of the new pastor.

Pastor J. M. Cosby has had much to encourage him at Tippecanoe City this last month. The Bible school has gone beyond the 100 mark. The church is meeting cheerfully all its pledges to the forward movement. Fifteen were baptized.

Dr. R. B. Smith of Springfield First has conducted two revival meetings during the month—one in Springfield, at the West Chapel on Pleasant Street, which is a part of the First Church, and the other at the Second Church, Indianapolis, where some thirty were converted. Springfield has a teacher training class of nearly 200. Mr. Howard Johnson, who is conducting the class, is a member of the First Church.

Rev. E. McFarlane of Franklin has organized a promising orchestra. The young people are doing good work.

R. C. Fletcher of Fletcher is calling and training his people to pray. More than twenty-five persons pledged themselves to pray at home and at any time and place called upon. A number of large men's meetings have been held under the leadership of the pastor.

Pastor C. R. Jones has many things to encourage him at Piqua. The young people have an average attendance of seventy, and the mid-week prayer service averages eighty-two. Congregations are large, and there have been confessions of faith and a number of baptisms.

Pastor Sloman of Third Street held a meeting of the officers, teachers and workers at which 100 were present. Great things are planned for the future. The Denison gospel team was with the church Feb. 13. Four enlisted for life service. Two persons have been baptized and one has been received by letter.

The city young people's society, of which Pastor Sloman is president, held its second annual meeting Feb. 11 at the First Church. More than 300 were at the banquet. The Denison gospel team provided most of the program. The young people enthusiastically requested Pastor Sloman to lead them another year.

Pastor T. J. Smith of the Zion Church, Dayton, has aroused interest among the men. One class has grown from six to 107.

Pastor Hall at Summit Street received one by experience. Since Wednesday has been made a church day, the attendance at the prayer meeting has greatly increased.

M. F. Scruby at Haynes Street is having conversions and baptisms. The earnest efforts of this pastor and his wife are bringing the Baptists into their own on this difficult field.

Pastor G. W. Johnson at Linden Avenue received four by letter and three by baptism, and three are awaiting baptism. The Bible school averaged 393 last month.

L. M. Copeland has been at Clifton Street, Springfield, only a few Sundays, but already the church evidences new life. A young people's society has been organized with nearly 100 members.

Pastor F. F. Fenner of Bellefontaine is rejoicing in the recent installation of a $5000 pipe organ. Eight new members were received.

Pastor M. F. Bagby of Colorado Avenue baptized five. The Bible school now has the highest record in its history. A splendid B. Y. P. U. has been organized.

Pastor Henry Brandt of Troy finds things hopeful. More room will soon have to be provided for the Sunday school. One was received by letter and three by baptism.

Two were received by baptism at North Dayton. Two men in three weeks started a class of boys with thirty in attendance, all boys but three being new material. The school is the largest in our part of the city.

PHILIP BAUER.

North Dayton.

Fresh from the Field

The Student Volunteer Union of Greater Boston (Mass.) will hold a student missionary rally for college and high school students and young people of the churches of Boston at the First Church on Saturday afternoon and evening, March 12.

Rev. P. J. Johns will finish his work at Manitou Beach, Mich., on April 1. He is anxious to get in touch with a town church in some place where his daughter can attend the high school.

The Haskins, Ohio, Church has secured the services of Rev. Howard Parry of Crozer Seminary who will take up work on the field in June.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Mitchell Castlebury of Woodruff, S. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Ethel Heath, to Charles Samuel Copeland of Gaffney, S. C., the marriage to take place on March 9. Miss Castlebury is a graduate of Greenville Woman's College and a fine type of young Baptist womanhood. Mr. Copeland is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Arch C. Cree, a Furman University man and one of the most promising young business men of upper South Carolina.

Dr. F. G. Cressey of Dayton has been elected director of the Ohio state board of promotion in succession to Rev. C. E. Stanton, and moved to Granville on March 1.

During February Dr. O. P. Gifford has been acting as supply at the First Church, Pasadena, Cal.

Pres. John A. Earl who has served Des Moines College for ten years will close his work with the commencement in June. His plans for the future are not yet determined but the Baptists of Minnesota are hoping that he will continue with the First Church of St. Paul which he is now serving as acting pastor.

Dr. J. P. Treat, formerly president of the Colorado Woman's College, is now

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

Arizona—* Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phoenix.
California, N.—* Dr. C. W. Brinstad, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
Idaho—* Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
Indiana—* Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
Iowa—424 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capitol Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
Minnesota—* Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2nd Ave. So., Minneapolis.
Montana—* Rev. G. Clifford Cress, Box 643, Lewistown.
Nebraska—* Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
Nevada—George L. Synder, Box 230, Sparks.
New Hampshire—* Rev. D. S. Jenks, 92 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
New Jersey—* Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singiser, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
North Dakota—Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
Ohio—Rev. Chas. E. Stanton, Granville.
Oregon—* Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin, Field Promotion Director, 405 Tilford Bldg., Portland.
Pennsylvania—* Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
Rhode Island—* Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauderdale Bldg., Providence.
South Dakota—* Dr. S. P. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
Utah—* Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Vermont—* Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
Washington, E.—* Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane.
Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213½ Fourth St., Parkersburg.
Wisconsin—* Dr. D. W. Hulburt, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
Wyoming—* Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society

Our Corporate name is

"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"

Executive Secretary, Charles L. White

Treasurer, Samuel Bryant

23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N.Y.

almost fully restored to health and is hoping soon to be taking up again some form of active work.

Rev. Henry C. Miller who resigned from the Marion Avenue Church of Aurora, Ill., has been recalled and has again become its minister. He has been granted an assistant, Rev. W. M. Wilson, making it possible for him to continue as the Sunday morning preacher at Eastern Avenue Church, Joliet. Mr. Miller spent the fall semester at Columbia University.

We are in receipt of five printed sermons delivered during January and February by Rev. Alfred Wesley Wishart of the Fountain Street Church in Powers' Theater, at Grand Rapids, Mich. They are mostly on social topics, although the sermon for Feb. 15 was on "Personal Problems in Religion."

J. Harvey Gunn, pastor of the church at San Luis Obispo, Cal., has been delivering a series of Sunday morning sermons on the subject, "In the Field of Religion," and an evening series on the subject, "The University of Love." The church has raised $2,000 above its quota in the New World Movement campaign.

Sunday, March 13, is to be observed as China Famine Relief Sunday by Sunday schools of thirty denominations throughout the United States and Canada.

At the annual business meeting and banquet of the First Church, Bunker Hill, Ill., Rev. T. C. Coffey, pastor, the reports of the different departments showed a generally flourishing condition. The B. Y. P. U. has been reorganized with a large membership.

Dr. D. J. Varney, a deacon in the First Church, Greenfield, Ohio, has been elected commander of the local post of the American Legion. Rev. T. M. Hofmeister, pastor of the church, has been preaching special series of sermons, morning and evening, and had these well-advertised in the local paper.

Atlantic District Jubilee Celebration

The Jubilee celebration of the Atlantic District will be held in Washington, D. C., May 11-13. Because of special conditions, it will be necessary for all those who wish hotel accommodations to write soon. Franklin Square Hotel will be headquarters. It is located at Fourteenth and K streets. A great program is being prepared, and a great meeting is expected.

HARRIET NEWELL JONES,
Home Vice-President.

Visit Promotes Amity

Prince George Hotel,
New York City, Feb. 18, 1921.

To the Editor:

On the eve of my departure from the United States will you permit me on behalf of my colleague, Rev. C. E. Wilson, and myself to thank all who have extended kindness to us during our stay in this country as the delegation of the British Baptist Missionary Society? We have been greatly moved by the generous hospitality we have received and by the cordiality with which the various topics under consideration have been discussed with us by the representatives of the boards of the Northern and Southern conventions.

I believe that our deliberations will result in closer co-operation and more effective service for the good of those amongst whom our brethren and sisters on the field are laboring with so much devotion, and that the extension of our Lord's kingdom will be promoted.

Incidentally, feelings of amity between the United States and Great Britain will be strengthened by such intercourse as we have had, and the memory of our happy visit will abide with us through the coming years. THOS. S. PENNY.

What Baptists Stand For
(Continued from page 142)

toward what is termed "Christian unity." Our unity among ourselves—church with church, until it reaches something like national denominational expression—is entirely for the sake of enlarged service. Our gatherings, therefore, are purely advisory, never judicial nor legislative. Our people believe heartily in co-operation between denominations for social and religious service, but do not believe that such co-operation is dependent upon any organic union of churches. Furthermore, they protest against exalting the question of organic union as antecedent to such co-operation. Our people stand here, insistent and devoted. They believe that the unity longed for, and for which our Lord prayed—that happy consummation of the kingdom of believers—will be fully realized when we come to the unity of the Spirit, in the Spirit, in the bond of peace. We declare that we are neither tolerant nor intolerant. Our language expressing our spirit is of another order: utter, complete freedom, liberty! To put it all in a sentence: Our people feel that the meeting place for the unity of all believers is in spiritual functions and not in formal declarations of organic union.

FIFTY YEARS OF WORTH-WHILE PUBLISHING

REVELL'S BOOKS Religious Book Week MARCH 13 to 20
AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

---

ROGER BABSON | Fundamentals of Prosperity
George W. Coleman, the prominent Advertising Expert, says: "Just the right tonic for a sick world, without any doubt." $1.00 net.

HUGH BLACK | The World To-day | Lest We Forget
"A book that challenges attention . . . bids us make religious ideals supreme."—The Continent. $1.50 net.

J. H. JOWETT | A Book of Devotions | Come Ye Apart
"Dr. Jowett is blessedly with us in these golden nuggets."—S. S. Times. $1.50 net.

JOSEPH HOCKING | The Passion for Life
"A heart-gripping thought-provoking novel, the greatest of all Hocking's novels."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. $1.75 net.

P. W. WILSON'S | Latest Success | The Vision We Forget
"A writer with a distinctly new vision has taken the religious public by storm."—Christian Work. Each $2.00.

PATERSON SMYTH | A People's Life of Christ
"Does for the present generation what Farrar's Life of Christ did for a former age."—Churchman. $3.50 net.

ROBERT E. SPEER | The Gospel and the New World
"Preachers will be eager to possess it, as well as all interested in Missions."—Review. $2.00 net.

CHURCHILL KING | A New Mind for the New Age
"One of the most valuable of President King's contributions to the thought of the age."—Bibliotheca Sacra. $1.50 net.

S. D. GORDON | Quiet Talks About Life After Death
"There are few Christian homes throughout the land where Gordon's 'Quiet Talks' have not gone."—Religious Telescope. $1.25 net.

CAMPBELL MORGAN | The Ministry of the Word
"The latest and best work of the famous Evangelist and Bible expositor."—Christian Work. $1.50 net.

WILFRED GRENFELL | With Grenfell on the Labrador
By FULLERTON L. WALDO
Henry van Dyke says: "A vivid picture of one of the finest men of our age—an excellent book of inspiration and encouragement." $1.50 net.

---

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY NEW YORK, 158 5th Ave.
CHICAGO, 17 N. Wabash Ave.
"FIFTY YEARS OF BOOKS YOU CAN RECOMMEND"

IT IS A BURNING SHAME

that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

Baptist Department
Mutual Insurance Corporation
furnishes protection AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM
No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured.
No agents. Deal direct.

National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. & Mgr., 1509 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No.
ESTABLISHED 1868
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO.
Baltimore, Md.
CHURCH, CHIME AND PEAL BELLS
Memorials a Specialty

Harry W. Jones
CHURCH ARCHITECT
Minneapolis

Annuities

Annuity Bonds are issued by all the Boards and Societies of the Northern Baptist Convention.

For information, including rates, write to the Society or Board concerned

or to

The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention
276 Fifth Ave., - - New York

Write for Booklet

For Christian investors. You receive regular, generous, non-taxable life income. Your money helps a Christian enterprise.

Ask for Booklet B American Bible Society
25 Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

BOOK OF PRAYERS

Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 126 pages, cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU KNOW!!

THE Business World needs Christian Young People. An efficient Business Training midst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY
Write for particulars Osage, Iowa

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Young Women
Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year. Apply early for September.
Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

WILLIAM LESTER

THE QUESTION BOX

QUESTION: Will you please suggest some collections of Irish songs out of which we could arrange a representative program for a small music club; also a few modern songs written in the same style?—A. L., Iowa.

Answer: There is a fine collection published by Ditson—"Irish Songs," collected and edited by N. Clifford Page. By all means examine the volume of Irish songs edited by William Arms Fisher, published in the Musician's Library Series by Ditson. Boosey and Company have issued two volumes of Irish folk tunes, collected and arranged by Hughes, which are very individual and effective. Many of the artistic versions of Sir Charles Villiers Stanford can be had in sheet form from G. Schirmer. Some Irish type songs are: "Irish Folk Song," Arthur Foote; "An Irish Lullaby," Lang; "Danny Boy," Weatherly; "Mavourneen, My Darling," Lester; "Irish Rose of My Heart," Harling; "An Irish Noel," Holmes; and there are many clever Irish lyrics by Lohr in the Chappell and Boosey catalogues.

* * *

Q. What does the term "borrowed stops" mean. I read it in an article in an organist magazine?—C. S., Kansas.

A. When we "borrow" stops on an organ (technically called "duplexing"), we use one set of pipes on two or more stops, so that the set of pipes is playable from more than one keyboard without the use of couplers. Sometimes the organ builder will use part of a manual set of pipes, adding just enough new pipes to supply the lowest notes of the pedal register. To a certain extent this practice is legitimate when a limited amount of money is to cover a fairly ambitious array of organ pipes. But church committees buying the organ should understand that it is not the number of stops on paper that counts: it is what the result sounds like and how much actual material you get.

* * *

To Rev. Geo. D. Rogers, Winterset, Iowa: Thank you for your kind letter approving the music page. The suggestions you offer are gratefully acknowledged. Your point as to the hymn-service idea is "bully." With your permission I'll use it as a column-text soon. Your letter will be answered personally within a few days.

* * *

To Mr. A. W. Gale, Monroe, Mich.: Your letter asking for information as to efficient electric blowers for organs, also with question as to organ-builders, has been attended to. A personal letter no doubt has reached you by this time.

* * *

To Mrs. Movers, Minneapolis, Minn.: We are glad that you favor the music-page. I believe it can be a great aid to our readers. I hope so, anyway! I have taken up the matter of the missionary music with a publisher here, and will write to you when I have some definite news.

* * *

Note: Questions of general interest will be answered in this column. Others will be dealt with by personal letter. Please enclose stamped and self-addressed envelope with query.

A TOLEDO RECORD

OF UNUSUAL interest is the long and varied list of cantatas given at the Ashland Avenue Baptist Church of Toledo, Ohio, during the past few months. A clipping from a November issue of the Toledo Blade gives the schedule and plans, as follows:

"Mary Willing Megley, organist and director of music of Ashland Avenue Baptist Church, has planned a remarkable series of Sunday evening musical services to be given by the church quartet—Mrs. Charles Ellis Lackens, soprano; Mrs. Reginald Morris, contralto; Mr. Reginald Morris, tenor, and Mr. Harrington Van-Hoesen, bass. On each occasion a work suitable for performance by a quartet, by some eminent composer, will be presented, and care has been taken to select cantatas which have not been heard in Toledo. The series will begin Sunday evening, Nov. 14, at 7:30, with a rendition of 'The Jubilee Cantata,' written by C. M. von Weber in celebration of the harvest time. Later in the month 'A Psalm of Thanksgiving,' by William Lester, will be given. In December the following works will be presented: 'The Landing of the Pilgrims,' by Louis A. Coerne; 'The Coming of the Anointed,' by C. Hugo Grimm of Cincinnati; 'The Shepherd's Vision,' by Horatio Parker, and 'The Christmas Rose,' by Lester. For the new year the following list of works is announced; John Stainer's 'St. Mary Magdalene'; A. R. Gaul's 'The Ten Virgins'; Mendelssohn's 'The Thirteenth Psalm,' and 'Lauda Sion'; Louis Spohr's 'The Christian's Prayer'; Samuel Sebastian Wesley's 'The Wilderness'; 'The Passion,' by Joseph Haydn, and a new Easter cantata, 'The Great Miracle,' by Grimm. Besides the works listed above, individual solo numbers and duets from various other great oratorios and cantatas will be prepared for the regular church services, each selection bringing a great message to the hearers."

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6 cents per word per insertion; cash with order.

Thoroughly Baptistic Pastor wants location within reach of good high school. Southern Nebraska preferred, but will go where the Lord leads. Address "High School," care of THE BAPTIST.

L. D. Morse, Bible teacher-evangelist, can serve as temporary pastor if needed or conduct Bible study meetings in near-by states. 904 Boone St., Piqua, Ohio.

Walter Moncre Jennings, Evangelist and Bible Teacher. Single or union meetings. Box 272, Mt. Vernon, Wash.

Experienced Worker with Boys open for a position as assistant pastor or director of activities in some large church. Address B. W. S., THE BAPTIST.

An opportunity for a consecrated man or woman to aid in a wonderful educational and religious work. Recommendation by your pastor necessary. Several state representatives needed. Address Service, care of THE BAPTIST.

Great opportunity to help boys and girls of East Tennessee and Western North Carolina by giving books to start library in denominational academy. Send only good books of recognized worth or cash with which to buy them. Make inquiries. Watauga Academy, Lowell Q. Haynes, Principal, Butler, Tenn.

This undertaking certainly spells volumes for the energy and devotion of the organist and director, Mrs. Megley, and for the loyal co-operation of the splendid quartet. I am fortunate enough to enjoy the personal friendship of Mrs. Megley—one of the most cultured, artistic and sincere musicians to be found in this country. Besides her work at this thriving church, she enjoys the distinction of being one of the few women successfully directing a front-rank singing society, the Toledo Choral Society, an organization of 300 voices. In between the endless time needed to attend such a piano class as takes up about twenty-five hours out of a possible twenty-four, she somehow manages to find time to write some of the best songs to be found today. The Ashland Avenue Church is to be congratulated on its musical record and on the high caliber of the musicians who build up this record.

Short Talks on Investments
BY LEE B. DOTY

Bank Stock, U. S. Steel or Liberty Bonds

J. F. W.—If you have been able to get J. Fourth Liberty Bonds at 85, you have a better investment than U. S. Steel 5's at 94. The latter are high-grade industrial bonds, maturing in 1961, and at the price mentioned yield only about 5 3-8 per cent. The Fourth Liberties are due in 1938, and, besides yielding slightly more than the Steel bonds, have the added advantage of being exempt from local taxation by the states.

As to U. S. Steel or bank stock, the former has been prosperous during recent years, and from all accounts should have no difficulty in maintaining the present 5 per cent dividend. However, the matter of dividends is always a matter in the discretion of the board of directors of a corporation, and if it appears prudent to the directors to omit or pass the dividend, the stockholders simply have to exercise patience. It can almost be put down as a general rule that there is considerably more of the speculative element in a stock investment than in bonds of the same company.

The desirability of a bank stock depends almost entirely upon the management. As a rule, the market is narrow, being confined largely to those who are already interested in the institution. In most states there is a serious "come-back" for stockholders in case of failure, it being provided that they shall be subject to an additional assessment equal to the par value of their stock.

The Confession of "Fetch-and-Carry"
(Continued from page 146)

lar how I couldn't stand it no more. It took all the heart out of me to see a real he-man worrying all week about a bunch of he-and-she sinners who I'd fetched and carried for in their own homes and knew was nothing extra.

"He don't even get fifty-fifty of the greenbacks in the collection plate," says I.

My feller's not so religious you'd notice it, so says he to me, "why in Sam Hill does he keep it up then? Why don't he bust out on them with a whale of a scolding and then vamoose?"

"Yeah," says I, scornful, "you know him, you do! I bet if every parson that ain't supported pulled off that kind of a stunt you carpenters 'd be turning the churches into moving-picture theaters by tomorrow morning." "Ain't," says I, "we ain't on to this spiritual dope, but it's genuine! Only I ain't up to watching two perfectly nice folks break to pieces right under me nose."

So that's why I gotta leave. Yes'm, I know you're a newcomer in town. O, a Baptist—are you now? Well, they'll sure be glad to get such a swell lady in their church. I'm positive.

O, you think you can't take me on? You think I hadn't ought to dream of leaving her—O! — well now, I never fully chewed that side of the loaf. To be sure! Why, it'd just double her troubles, wouldn't it, to have to cook and scrub and fetch-and-carry for her kids and him? Say, you've said something! I gotta hurry back and tell her nothing doing about that notice I give her. Grin and bear it's my motto from now on. Say, if she can stand it, I should worry!

Obituary
JAMES YOUNG

Friends of James Young were shocked to hear of his sudden death on Dec. 9 at Jacksonville, Fla. He was motoring with relatives from Harristown, Ill., to Miami, Fla., to spend the winter. He became ill before reaching Jacksonville, later developed pneumonia, and died in a hospital in that city. His brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Gilman of Harristown, left immediately for Jacksonville and brought the body to their home, where the funeral services were held on Dec. 13.

James Andrew Young was born at Trivoli, Ill., Dec. 1, 1858, and passed away at the age of sixty-two. He was unmarried. He was the youngest son of Andrew P. and Carolina A. Young, both of whom have passed to the other side. The latter was for many years a faithful member of the Baptist church.

Mr. Young spent the greater part of his life in Iowa, devoting much time to farming and stock interests. For several years he was employed in Des Moines and made his home there. He was fond of travel and made many friends throughout this and other states who will remember him as a man of fine spirit, sterling character and sound judgment, remarkable for close application to whatever business or work he was engaged in. While he was not a member of any church, his daily life was rich in the practice of all the Christian virtues.

He is survived by two brothers, J. C. Young, Decatur, Ill., and H. L. Young, Rhinelander, Wis., and by two sisters, Mrs. G. F. Gilman, Harristown, Ill., and Miss Adelaide Young, Springfield, Ill.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

You will find an OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLE, with its wonderful References and Helps, an invaluable aid in Bible study and in preparing your Sunday School lessons. The Helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS
CATALOG UPON REQUEST
Oxford University Press American Branch
35 West 32nd Street New York City

RELIGIOUS BOOK WEEK
March 13-20—Put good books in your home, especially an OXFORD BIBLE, for every member of the family

EASTER FREE
HALL-MACK CO. MUSIC

Sample Services of Songs and Recitations to Ministers, Superintendents, and Committees.
Returnable Samples of Choir Cantatas and Anthems.
The Garden of Joseph, new song story by Adam Geibel. 25 cents.
Easter Helper No. 7 (not sent for examination). 15 cents in stamps.

HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts.,
ADAM GEIBEL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

JUBILATE
THE JOYFUL HYMNAL FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

8 Great Departments for all singing uses

Thousands of satisfied schools have enthusiastic, helpful singing using JUBILATE.

PRICES TO SUIT, $25—$32.50—$35—$40
According to binding.

Send for returnable sample NOW. Note change of address
HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Phila., Pa.

In writing to our advertisers mention The Baptist

Rodeheaver's Victory Songs

OUR great gospel song book prepared under supervision of our Mr. Homer Rodeheaver is for general Church and Y. M. C. A. purposes. Hearty approval from song leaders. 70 new songs and 250 old favorites.

Contains 288 pages of music.
Single copies: Manila, 35c; Limp, 40c; Cloth, 50c; postpaid.
Quantities: Manila, 30c; Limp, 35c; Cloth, 45c; not postpaid.

AWAKENING SONGS, 256 pages, same prices as above.
SONGS OF SERVICE, 288 pages, also same prices as Victory Songs.
JOYFUL PRAISE, 128 pages, Limp, 25c; quantity, 20c.
CAMP FIRE SONGS, 32 pages, 10c a copy—$3.00 per 100.
RODEHEAVER'S GOSPEL RECORDS, $1.00 each—Ask for list.

Our NOVELTY CONCERT PROPOSITION will interest you. Ask us as to great advantages in this to churches. Ask for catalog and list.

THE RODEHEAVER COMPANY
1053 Monon Bldg., Chicago Dept. B, 814 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

The World Conquering Christ and Our New Easter Offering

At its meeting in Minneapolis The General Board of Promotion adopted a plan for the year which includes a special Thank Offering at Easter, in behalf of our great program for the advancement of the Kingdom of the world conquering Christ.

What it is and what it is for

This is to be a free will Thank Offering, not in payment of pledges already made, nor for "relief" purposes, but in addition to pledges made and cash paid to the New World Movement, and for the purposes of the Movement as outlined in the Survey.

Why it is

First: Because of our gratitude, Easter has unspeakable and infinite values to the Christian. It is the time, of all times, when we feel the call to send the light to those who still "sit in darkness and the shadow of death."

Second: Because of what has been already accomplished. Our missionary work has been carried forward without loss, new recruits have been added, missionary salaries increased, equipment for evangelistic, medical and educational work enlarged, and new courage and hope inspired in our missionaries on the field.

Third: Because we have not yet subscribed the Hundred Million Dollar Fund. The program of the New World Movement cannot be carried out until full amount needed is raised.

Fourth: Because there are thousands who, in addition to their generous and sacrificial giving, will yet wish to make a special offer—in thankfulness for these blessings, and for personal benefits and mercies.

Easter is a time of light to us. Let us remember that one half of the world has no Easter hope.

Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

Send to your State Promotion Director for literature, offering boxes, envelopes and full information.

General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention,
276 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Volume II

March 12, 1921

Number 6

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

The Greatest is the Servant of All

"And supper being ended, . . . Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God; he riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel and girded himself . . . and began to wash the disciples' feet. . . . Then cometh he to Simon Peter." John 13:3-6.

Fresh from the Field

Dr. L. L. Henson of Covington, Ky., will supply the First and the Portland Street churches of Haverhill, Mass., in union services during the month of August. He has supplied them for several past summers. His church at Covington has closed a highly successful year, and will co-operate in the Billy Sunday campaign just begun in Cincinnati.

The First Church of Kansas City, Mo., will begin a series of meetings March 13, in which Pastor W. S. Abernethy will have the assistance of Dr. E. M. Poteat.

Dr. E. T. Carter has resigned the pastorate of the church at Monessen, Pa. The church is in excellent condition and is looking for another pastor.

"Bring church dishes back" was the slogan at the First Church, Jamestown, N. Y., March 1. So many dishes had been carried away by members of working committees that the congregation found itself running out of tableware.

Special meetings, conducted by Rev. Percy W. Black, were begun on March 1 in the Brighton Avenue Church, Allston, Mass.

Dr. T. W. Powell, who for ten years has specialized on helping churches in need of pastors, has been acting-pastor at Trinity Church, Marion, Ohio, during the last four months. He is now at Mt. Gilead, where he may be addressed, and is available for brief campaigns with pastorless churches needing his services.

The church in Oakland, Cal., has suffered a great loss in the death of Deacon P. G. Johnson, which occurred Feb. 13. He was for nearly fifty-two years an active and a devoted member of the church and for thirty-three years a deacon. One of his daughters is Mrs. Ola Hanson, wife of Dr. Ola Hanson, who has been for thirty years in missionary service in Burma. The late Rev. Oscar Johnson, who held pastorates in California, Vancouver, B. C. and Iowa, was a son. Mr. Johnson was born in Sweden, and at the time of his death was eighty-three years old.

The First Serbo-Croatian Church of Detroit, Mich., recently organized, has fourteen members who have returned to Jugo-Slavia. In an open and significant way these men have declared their allegiance to the truth as it has been revealed to them. At first they were bitterly persecuted, but now seem to have won their personal struggle for religious liberty. This is said to be the beginning of Baptist work in Serbia.

The alumni of Morehouse College have a happy way at times of making known their interest in their alma mater. Recently they surprised the president of this progressive school for Negroes by presenting him with an automobile.

Rev. A. C. Archibald, who has been out of his pulpit for six weeks, brought great sorrow to his people on Sunday, Feb. 28, by resigning the pulpit of the Brookline (Mass.) Church. He has done a notable work in Brookline. The evening congregation in sixteen months increased from less than 100 to nearly 1000.

The New York City Baptist Mission Society is planning for its next annual meeting on April 28. A program of unusual interest is being prepared. There will be a presentation by pantomime and picture of significant events in its fifty years' history, with striking population contrasts and others matters of human interest.

The church at Bloomingdale, Mich., is desirous of settling a pastor as soon as possible. Anyone interested may address William Harrison, Bloomingdale, Mich.

The First Church, Valier, Mont., is in the midst of a district which has had no crops for three years. It is, however, bravely carrying on. If any pastor has stereopticon slides which have been used and would like to donate them, the church can put them to good use. Pastor D. E. Baker writes that a good set on the life of Christ, missionary sets, or any informing and entertaining slides are desired.

Mrs. Helen Mary Schoemaker, wife of Rev. W. R. Schoemaker, pastor of the City Park Church, Denver, Colo., passed away suddenly on the night of Feb. 21, shortly after returning from a meeting of the Philathea Bible Class, where she had read a paper. Funeral services, conducted by Dr. J. W. Bailey, were held on Feb. 24. All that Mrs. Schoemaker possessed, whether of money or talents, belonged to her Lord. Her ministry to all in need and her cheerful life, despite her suffering, greatly endeared her to the people of the churches in Michigan, Iowa and Colorado to which her husband ministered.

Rev. O. H. Wallace has resigned at Bristol, R. I., and has accepted a pastorate in New Hampshire. He has done splendid work and the best wishes of his brethren follow him to his new field.

Pursuant to a call of the First Church, Mount Morris, Mich., Mr. Chas. William Harvey was on Feb. 28 set apart to the work of the gospel ministry. Rev. R. H. Monroe was moderator and Rev. H. C. Trabert clerk. Rev. Geo. M. Vercoe preached the ordination sermon.

Rev. P. C. Nelson has closed his pastorate at the Conley Memorial Church, Detroit, Mich., in order to return to the evangelistic field. His first campaign began in Wichita, Kans., on March 6. During his seventeen months in Detroit, the church membership has trebled. The Detroit Ministers' Conference gave a farewell luncheon in Mr. Nelson's honor.

On Feb. 27 the First Church, El Dorado, Kans., assisted by Rev. Ray E. York, went over the top in its efforts to secure subscriptions of $100,000 for a new building. This money was practically all secured from among the 350 members. Work on the new building will be started soon, although there is yet some question as to what site will be used. Rev. M. O. Clemmons is pastor.

Prof. Lyman Granville Jordan, profes- sor of chemistry at Bates College for more than thirty years, died Feb. 27 after a few days illness. For fifteen years following his graduation from the college he was superintendent of schools in Lewiston.

Rev. Earl Smith, who has had charge of young people's work on the Pacific Coast, will begin his work as pastor of the First Church of Ontario, Cal., on March 1st. The church has had no pastor for several months and is fortunate in having the call extended to Mr. Smith accepted. Every department of the church will look to a bigger program under the leadership of the new pastor.

H. H. Hayden of Los Angeles, Cal., was ordained at the Temple Church, Louisville, Ky., Dec. 15.

Dr. Thomas J. Villers, pastor of the First Church, Detroit, Mich., was to preach at Oberlin College March 6.

Dr. A. E. Booth of Beaumont, Tex., has been called to the First Church, Des Moines, Iowa.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Two Industrial Issues and a Public Utility

ILLINOIS: You have three good investments under consideration. Sears, Roebuck and Company in October last, converted a large amount of bank loans into an issue of $50,000,000 7 per cent notes maturing in one, two and three years, which were sold to the public. They can now be obtained more cheaply than when originally offered and at 95, the yield of the 1922 maturity is close to 10 per cent. As the total notes are only about one-fourth of the amount of the resources of the company, they are well protected, though not a mortgage security. But as the agreement under which they are issued provides that no mortgage indebtedness can be created without providing for these notes, the effect is almost equivalent to actual mortgage security.

Mengel Box Company 7 per cent debentures, like the Sears notes, are merely the general obligation of the company, and have similar provisions as to the creation of a mortgage. The company which is one of the largest producers of packing boxes, is controlled by the American Tobacco Company. In 1918 it issued $4,000,000 of these debentures, maturing in equal amounts from 1920 to 1923. At that time its fixed assets, plant, real estate timber lands, etc., were valued at over $4,500,000, and its quick assets, merchandise, cash, accounts receivable, etc., were over $6,000,000, and these figures covered only tangible assets, there being no figures included for good will. No later figures are available, according to Moody's Manual of Industrials for 1920.

The Tri City Railway and Light Company is controlled by the United Light and Railways Company, one of the leading holding companies, and operates in Rock Island, Moline, Davenport and vicinity. Its collateral 5 per cent bonds, due April 1, 1923, are practically a mortgage lien on its property, as all the first mortgage bonds and stock are collateral to this issue. At present, $250,000 worth are being redeemed each year as required by the provision for a sinking fund, so that now there are only $7,250,000 outstanding out of the original $9,000,000 issued in 1906. During the trying period of the past five years, the company has made a fair margin over its expenses and interest. These bonds are listed on the New York Exchange, but are not very active, the total sales for December having been only $8000 and in January, $17,000.

Of the three, the Tri City bonds appear to have the more direct security. At the present price of about 91 the yield to the investor is over 9 per cent. While they are listed, you would probably find them a little less marketable than the Sears notes, which are quoted quite freely both in Chicago and New York.

The Baptist

Vol. II March 12, 1921 No. 6

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire
Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIELER Mr. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
Mr. WILLIAM A. MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HORN PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs including every family, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	162
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS.....	162
EDITORIALS .....	165
RELIGIOUS LITERATURE—THEN AND NOW, by John Richard Brown .....	168
WHEN THE NAVAJO'S GODS ARE SILENT, by Coe Hayne .....	169
JUST LIKE HEAVEN—The Ellen Mitchell Memorial Hospital at Moulmein, Burma.....	171
THE LIVING WAY, by C. H. Robinson.....	172
THE PULSE OF THE COLLEGES, by Allyn K. Foster....	173
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	175
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE.....	176
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	177
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	178
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	180
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	181
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	188

THE subscription price of THE BAPTIST is $2.50 per year. The denomination believes that a large circulation for the paper is both desirable and necessary if we are to do our best work. The subscription goal has been placed at 100,000. This means that one in every ten of the reported membership of the churches of the North must be a subscriber to the paper. The church which secures a list equal to 10 per cent of its reported membership has done its part. A special rate of $2 per year is given to such churches in recognition of their co-operation.

Toot! Toot!

WHAT is the use of a horn if you never blow it? The postman during any week brings enough warm-hearted commendations of THE BAPTIST to fill a page or two. Of course there are just enough of the other kind to keep us from the woes pronounced upon him of whom all men speak well.

He Enjoys Music

"I want to voice my appreciation of Our Music Corner as now found in THE BAPTIST. Good church music, as it seems to me, is next in importance in our public worship to the preaching of the gospel."—Frank H. Smith, Los Angeles, Cal.

A "Religious" Newspaper

"The paper is becoming religious. * * * The recognition of the prayer life in Christian experience delights me and is the happiest augury for a useful paper. * * * No amount of clever theological discussion can make up for the absence of a deep spiritual note. * * * The deep inner experiences of the Christian soul delights to have expression. Policies, methods, machineries, etc., must have some place, but they ought not to dominate. I congratulate you on your discernment of what is the best thing for a religious paper."—Nathan E. Wood, Arlington, Mass.

Youth Time of Growth

"The paper grows better. Congratulations."—B. T. Livingston, Baptist Headquarters, Providence, R. I.

"The wonderful improvement in THE BAPTIST in the last few weeks brings encouragement to us all."—C. M. Carter, Detroit, Mich.

"I want to congratulate you on the improvement in THE BAPTIST. It grows better every week."—Helen Barrett Montgomery, Rochester, N. Y.

"I write to express my great satisfaction with the Evangelistic Number. Those stories of conversion are like food to a hungry man. * * * I am sure that this number will teach many that God does some things still in a sort of miraculous way."—Alvah S. Hobart, Yonkers, N. Y.

A Hebrew of the Hebrews Speaks

"I have just finished reading your issue for this week and cannot refrain from writing you a word of hearty commendation. This should be deemed especially and particularly significant, coming as it does from one who claims to be of the strictest sect of the Pharisees, and a Hebrew of the Hebrews, when it comes to contending for the faith. I particularly admire your eminent sense of fairness."—J. W. Porter, formerly editor of the Western Recorder.

"I shall be glad to do what I can for THE BAPTIST. I like the 'popularizing' idea. You are giving us a fine journal of practical religion."—Thomas W. Young, Columbia, Mo.

"Allow me to express to you my appreciation of the way in which you have improved THE BAPTIST. It is now becoming a first-class religious journal and is representing the denomination as a whole."—G. Elton Harris, the City Temple, Sioux Falls, S. D.

These letters were taken at random from our mail. They are samples of hundreds. We have not attained, but we press forward with cheer.

"It Can Be Done"

BY R. MAPLEDEN

SOMETIMES a small church, struggling under difficult and discouraging circumstances, may show the way to larger and more flourishing churches. Here is one. In Connecticut there are two old churches which we think of as old historic mothers of churches. One is at Croton, in eastern Connecticut. The other is the old First Baptist Church at Hastings Hill, Suffield (Rev. Jesse F. Smith, pastor). This latter church just now is proud of two things:

1. It has struggled on for 150 years and never yet taken one cent of state convention aid.

2. It has just gone over the top, pledged its full allotment and paid its first quota.

The churches with large membership and all-round prosperity may well listen to this story.

This old church has just thirty-nine members. Three are shut-ins, and some live from four to six miles from the church. The church is located three miles away from the town center, trolleys, railways, etc., and yet has maintained its services, Sunday school and activities. Ofttimes the roads are deep with snow or soggy with mud, yet for 150 years the services of the Lord have been maintained.

When the allotment came, which was $4,000—for a church composed of thirty-nine honest farmer folk—there was neither outcry, protest, nor "cold feet," but a cheerful faith, much prayer and, "It can, it must be done." It was done!

If this spirit were universal, how long would take it for 2,375,000 Baptists to raise $100,000,000?

Suffield, Conn.

Paying the Minister in Chotcholja, Assam

"SAHIB, don't you think we ought to have a pastor?"

"Yes, I do. I think it would be well if you could have a pastor."

"Could the mission help us support a pastor?"

"Why should the mission help? Can you not support one yourselves?"

"We have no money; we cannot sell our produce. How can we pay him?"

"If one among you became ill or crippled, could not ten others care for him?"

"Yes."

"If ten of you should wish to undertake some work, do you not think you could feed one man while he was doing that work?"

"Probably."

"Now if a man should become your pastor, could you not, when you harvest your rice, put, say, nine measures of that rice into your own granary and one measure into a church granary for that pastor?"

"Yes, we could do that, but would that be enough to feed the pastor?"

Tokong was the man they were wanting for pastor, and Tokong was present. He came forward and said that he would take what such tenth would come to for his salary, however small it might be, and that if it amounted to more than the estimated need, which was $3 per month, he would turn the balance back to the church.

And so it was arranged. He was chosen to be their pastor. And the tenth was found to be more than enough for his support. The plan adopted has been kept up ever since. When the paddy is cut, brought in and threshed, each man puts nine parts into his own bin and one part into the church bin. Some of the women, when preparing their daily meal, give, in addition, hand-grips of rice as a thank-offering for their food. For this purpose a dish is kept on the floor of the chapel, and often as much as two maunds a week is brought and poured in. There is another dish for money.—From "The Garo Jungle Book," by William Carey.

The Waiting Children

NORTHERN Baptists have planned to make Easter this year a memorable day "for the children of the world." On the day of the risen Christ, the denomination will make a thank-offering of $1,000,000 to be expended for needy children the world over—their schools, their doctors, and their Sunday schools. Fully 2,500,000 are concerned in the outcome of this Easter thank-offering.

The little gift boxes are already being distributed in the homes of every member of a Baptist school or Sunday school or young people's society. It is easy to imagine that already millions of little children in far countries are waiting anxiously as the coins drop into those small paste-board boxes on which so much depends. This is not a relief or an emergency measure. But it is infinitely important to the children of the world, since the continuance of the work that the denomination is already doing for them and the inauguration of new work for the coming year depends upon this Easter gift. Behind each little gift box is the wistful face of a waiting child.

The women of the denomination, under the leadership of Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, president of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, and of Mrs. John Nuveen, president of the Woman's Home Mission Society, will have charge of the collection of the Easter offering. One woman will be appointed in each church to see that the boxes are distributed and taken up again. The women's organizations have always been so faithful and so efficient in their collections that the children of the world may trust their advocates in this.

Who are expected to take part in this Easter offering? Every man, woman or child who gives thanks for the risen Christ, for childhood spent in Christian surroundings, and for this opportunity to be of service to less fortunate children in other places. Every child is expected to contribute, and every man or woman who has been a child.

The need is great for a special offering. The New World Movement is far from complete, and every cause in our denominational program is in need of added income. A special gift of a million dollars, together with sustained giving or regular budget, will greatly relieve immediate necessities. It is understood that this is part of the hundred million, and gifts will count on the church allotment (but not on the payment of individual pledges). A coin box has been prepared to receive the gifts. The purpose is to place one of these in the home of every one of our people and that these be brought in on Easter Sunday.

The duties of the woman in charge are: (1) to secure adequate supplies of literature relating to the offering and also of the gift boxes; (2) to place one gift box in every home in the local church and congregation at the earliest possible date; (3) by means of generous distribution of booklets and other publicity to arouse enthusiasm concerning the offering; (4) to provide for the collection of the boxes on Easter Sunday.

All money contributed toward this fund should be sent to the director of promotion of your state and designated as the Easter thank-offering. Boxes and booklets may be secured from your state director of promotion. If this address is unknown, write to the General Board of Promotion, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City.

It is hoped that an offering for the same purpose will be arranged in the church services and Sunday schools on the same day, that those who have not had the boxes may be able to share in the offering.

New Rochelle Schools Introduce Religious Instruction

ON Feb. 1 the school board of New Rochelle, Ill., turned over to the churches of the city for religious instruction for an hour and ten minutes each week, all children of the first eight grades of the public schools whose parents signified the desire that their children should receive such instruction. Over 97 per cent of the children in these grades have been turned over to the churches for this instruction on the written request of their parents.

This move was the result of a suggestion of the pastors of the city, but the school board and the city superintendent were so ready to grant the request that the pastors were taken somewhat by surprise. In the emergency they called on Dr. Thomas S. Young, director of week-day religious education and church vacation schools for the Publication Society, asking him for materials and advice. He visited Rochelle, and from Feb. 14 to 16 held a three-day training school for teachers in week-day religious education, which was attended by the teachers of the various church schools of the city. Great interest was manifest from the opening to the closing sessions. It is likely that he will conduct another institute in Rochelle in September.

Rochelle is a pioneer in this sort of work in Illinois, only Batavia and Evanston having attempted anything of the kind.

New World Movement Standard of Giving

At This Rate "B" Will Reach The $800,000 Mark By May 1, 1921

The Figures in This Chart Are Based on Receipts from the Churches in Arizona, Northern California, Iowa, Montana, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Washington.

The Baptist

Open the Golden Gate

LESS than the best life satisfies no man. Who is content with a partial, shriveled, dwarfed, unfulfilled selfhood? The mere asking of the question releases a flood of rich ideals and pure longings.

Our longing for good concerns itself first with present values. The desire for an ultimate heaven, when it supersedes the passion to achieve fullness and freedom and glory of life here and now, becomes a religious depravity.

"Christ in you the hope of glory" holds the mystery of the best life for any human being.

The very statement sounds mysterious to the understanding; but its supreme mystery lies in the fact that by a process too profound for the understanding, the spirit of Christ becomes regnant in us even down to the depths of subconscious being whence the ultimate motives are born. It is the mystery of an unfathomed personal experience in regions of the soul that the intellect can conceive but has never surveyed.

Such an experience is not merely the ground of hope that in some far-off time and place we shall receive glory. It is pregnant with present values. In it lies the only hope that the real glory of living will be achieved here and now. Christ in us creates a present splendor of life.

When we realize that our life is rooted in his, is drawing its vital being from his and is growing out of his, there dawns in the consciousness and spreads over the fields of conduct a glory like the breaking of a perfect day. His light becomes ours. We mount the King's chariot and ride with him.

Every such experience brings into the world anew a saving revelation. Nothing like it ever occurred before. It is unique because every personality is unique. In it God has revealed himself to me, and likewise through me to untold areas of other lives. Whatever fullness of love, of high and holy purpose and of spiritual beauty dwell in Christ has come also to dwell in me; and it has the additional glory that it takes the color of my own unique personality.

Faith in Christ, which is simply an honest lining up of one's life to the best he knows of Christ, opens the Golden Gate through which God's best may flow in a full, unhindered tide into the soul.

"If Christ be in you," said Paul—and named but one of the consequences. If Christ be in you, all is yours.

Shall We Abolish the Churches

WHAT would you, after the experience of your college course, suggest as a means of bettering the religious life of the country?"

This, in substance, was the question asked of a young man, just a year out of one of our Baptist colleges. And the answer he gave was contained in three words: "Abolish the church!"

"Facetious," do you say—"merely a young fellow's attempt to be funny when dealing with a serious question"? Possibly. And yet might it not be well to credit him with some measure of sincerity and think that possibly he had some definite idea in his mind? The mind is more active in the early twenties than at any other period of life. Gray-haired men are not the only ones who think. It is fair to assume that a man who has had a college education and then a year of active work may have some thing back in his head which would be worth hearing. We are tempted to try to think the matter through with this young man.

How would the cause of practical religion in the world be benefitted by abolishing the church? Well, it might be said that to the casual attendant church services are conventional and formal. Men go because they are in the habit of going. And they preserve a well-behaved silence in the presence of forms which are not vital to them. There is in the world a vast deal of vital religion; people are everywhere feeling after God; why should men trouble with an institution in which they are not finding God, which makes religion a form? Religion, such an one would say, would be more genuine without the church.

And then this young man might argue that there is in the church an increasing complexity of organization which gives the religious life little chance. Wheels turn within wheels and there are those who delight in the turning. Men and women become so busy that they stifle the cry which is surging up in their souls, "O, that I knew where I might find Him!" Organized religion is a mighty business which at times seems to possess men instead of being subject to their control. Why not get back to simplicity and to genuineness by abolishing all this machinery? You have heard people argue in this fashion and generally you have felt that they were all wrong. We ask if there is not a measure of truth, even if a very small one, in what they say?

Possibly this young man may take an occasional look at the minister and see how he is turned aside from his spiritual function to become a propagandist and a server of tables. Every good cause must be heard from the pulpit and for every worthy movement there must be ministerial backing. Ministers are expected to speak on all sorts of subjects on which it is impossible for them to be expert; there are penalties, visible and invisible, if they refuse. How can a man be a prophet of God under such circumstances? Would it not be better to get rid of all this formal religion and all this constant turning of wheels in order that spiritual living may have a chance in the world? The smashing up of outward forms sometimes gives life a chance; would the breaking up of the church liberate real religion?

We do not know just how much more a man of the type of which we speak might say, but we have heard young fellows say this much. And each time it has given us food for thought. It is easy to dismiss all this and say that a man must have himself the religious spirit in order to appreciate the religious bodies. But would it not be better to meditate on this man's attitude, to do him the honor of taking him seriously and to examine ourselves and our churches to see if they are entirely without fault? We love the church of Christ; we believe in it and in its work; therefore we are the more anxious that it shall fulfil its mission in the world and be worthy of the praise of its ascended and ever-living Lord. And to us thought upon this young man and his attitude suggests certain things regarding the church and its ministry.

Might it not be well for churches to free ministers for their particular specialty? They are ministers of religion; they are from time to time in public and private ministrations to feed the flock. Is it not perfectly clear that if they were given time for meditation and prayer and study they might accomplish this purpose better? How can a man be a financial expert and an organizing genius and a popular platform orator, using up his energies from day to day in a multitude of business activities, and at the same time speak as God's prophet to hungry souls?

In every church there are capable laymen who need and deserve a larger task than that of mere attendance at church services. That church is most culpable which does not give to them a large part of the necessary work of organization and administration where their training would make them particularly helpful.

A church should see to it that its service and its program are intimately linked up with life. Its program should be large enough and comprehensive enough to give full expression to the religious feeling and the religious abilities of its members. There is no sense in developing power if it is not to be used. Formal religion is abhorrent to every live young man if he never sees it working out in helpful activities. Nobody would want to do away with the church which fills its members with the religious spirit and then sends them out to practice their religion in every part of their lives. But what if religion is seen nowhere except in the church building?

May we suggest also that the religious spirit should permeate all the life of a church. There have been prayer meetings which were dull and deadly. On the other hand there have been business meetings, dealing with purely formal matters, which have been spiritual from start to finish. To spiritualize its own activities is one of the splendid tasks a church faces. Can it be done? If it is not done the number of those who suggest that the church should be abolished will increase.

No, we do not think that the church should be abolished. But we do think that the religion of Jesus should be given a full and free chance and should manifest itself to the world in all the activities of the church. And we have observed that eventually a church which does not make this possible abolishes itself.

Spizzerinktum in Kansas

SPIZZERINKTUM is not some new disease. But it is catching under the right circumstances and something which every pastor might devoutly pray should afflict his people.

The word is new to us, having drifted up to Chicago from Kansas through the medium of a missionary who has been speaking in regional conferences in that state. But he assures us that both the fact and the expression are common in Kansas and in other states and that state border lines ought not to be allowed to confine either.

As to the meaning of the expression, an illustration will be in place. The story has to do with a bunch of mules down in Texas. They were out on the range. One night wolves attacked them and they became excited, kicked wildly and bit and fought each other with the natural result that the wolves killed several mules. This happened for a number of nights until at length the mules put their heads together to devise methods of defense. That night, instead of milling around as before and becoming their own worst enemies, they put their heads together in a circle with their heels outside. Then when the wolves came, expecting another easy conquest, they discovered to their dismay that spizzerinktum, practically applied, was fundamental and effective.

Although no definition is now needed, it is clear that spizzerinktum means practically applied pep. It has its value both for defense and offense. By our friend, the missionary, it is respectfully recommended to all the churches which are trying to attain Christ's vision and program for the world.

Men Are Religious Even in the Colleges

IN THIS number will be found an article by Dr. Allyn K. Foster which should bring joy to the hearts of many people. Of late there have been various rumors concerning the religious atmosphere of our higher institutions of learning. There are many of our brethren who sincerely believe that there are being taught in these institutions things which tend to undermine and destroy the Christian faith of their students. A committee of the Northern Baptist Convention is at present looking into this matter and we desire in no way to prejudice the case nor to anticipate any portion of their report. To our minds that would not be fair dealing.

But we may rejoice, whatever may be the decision as to the general situation, in signs of religious life and interest whether these appear among professors or students. Quite accidentally within the past two weeks we discovered that in a certain Baptist college there is a group of professors banded together for the express purpose of helping students solve the problems which arise in their personal religious life and also to seek out and talk with any upon whom it might seem well to urge the claims of the Christian life and Christian service. We should like to think of our own children as being under such an influence.

And now Dr. Foster makes it clear, from his very wide and intimate experience of the student bodies of our colleges, that there are in all of them groups of earnest men and women who are greatly concerned about religious things and who are earnestly and diligently seeking for themselves the deepest and finest Christian life. We have testimony that during the last few months the same wave of religious interest which is making so significant the evangelistic campaigns in our Northern churches has affected the schools and colleges also. We have largely come through the backwash of the war, and there is a turning to religion on such a scale as has not been in evidence for many years. There is no reason why we may not look for just as pronounced religious movements in our colleges as we are seeing in our churches and communities.

We hope that every man and woman who happens to see this note will read Dr. Foster's article and that then he will give himself to earnest and constant prayer for the young men and women in our schools that they may find the richest of all their possessions in the knowledge and love of Jesus Christ and that they may hear in this great new day the call to Christian service in our own and other lands. And out of that prayer there may come the impulse to some to write to the boys or girls they know in college the words that the Spirit shall teach them.

Sunday in the Navy

AMONG the last of the official acts of Josephus Daniels as secretary of the navy was an order which enjoined a proper observance of Sunday upon the navy, so that the men may be provided with the rest and recreation essential to efficiency. First he recalled an order issued by Pres. Lincoln on Nov. 16, 1864, in which that great leader said:

"The President, commander in chief of the army and navy, desires and enjoins the orderly observance of the Sabbath by the officers and men in the military and naval service. The importance for man and beast of the prescribed weekly rest, the sacred rights of Christian soldiers and sailors, a becoming deference to the best sentiment of Christian people, and a due regard for the divine will demand that Sunday labor in the army and navy be reduced to the measure of strict necessity. The discipline and character of the national forces should not suffer nor the cause they defend be imperilled by the profanation of the day or name of the Most High."

And then Mr. Daniels orders that no work shall be performed except works of necessity, that no vessel shall begin a cruise on Sunday except in case of emergency, that secular work shall never be allowed to interfere with the holding of divine services, and that if a chaplain is not immediately available, plans shall be made to secure competent clergymen from ashore to conduct such services.

With the spirit of these regulations we are sure that the great majority of our churches will be entirely in sympathy. During times of war there is a tendency to take from men rights and privileges which properly belong to them. Now that the war is over, the men on our ships should be given every opportunity to observe Sunday in a proper and becoming manner. A government like ours should help to lead public sentiment in a matter like this.

This Week's Prize-Winner

Transients in Heaven

THE ALPHABET and the church need all their letters to be complete. Every city pastor has or can acquire a list of 100 Baptists living near his church who have not brought in their church letters. When asked why, they say they can't bear the thought of leaving the dear old church where they have been members so long. They are so loyal to one church that they are disloyal to every other church of the same faith and order. A young student whom I asked to send for his letter said that he had applied for it, but that his pastor had urged him not to take it from the home church. "We hate to have you leave us," said the pastor. I said, "I suppose, then, that if a Baptist moves near that pastor's church, he urges him not to join, but to leave his letter where it is?" "N-n-no, he likes to have them join his church." See?

When a church member expects to attend a church for six months, he ought to put in his letter. It is more easily moved than a trunk. It would be an immense disappointment to thousands of self-satisfied Baptists to know that they could not now get letters if they wanted them, because they have been away from the home church so long without giving it any attention that their names have been pruned from the rolls as dead timber. There are many such prunes. A friend of mine says that the east bank of the Mississippi must be the most religious place in America—so many people have left their religion there when they moved West. Suppose Paul had never sent his letters to the churches!

The "Don't-know-how-long-I'm-going-to-stay" Christian is the most worthless type of vestibule saint. If you urge him, he gets stubborn; if you let him alone, he gets the sleeping sickness. I asked a woman whom I met in a pastoral call, "Are you a church member?" She answered: "Yes, I'm a Congregationalist." "There is a good Congregational church near you," I said, "I hope you will put in your letter." "Well," she said, "I would, only I don't know how long I'm going to stay." I said: "How long have you been here now?" She answered, "Seventeen years." Robbing her God and her church and her neighborhood and her family and her own lonely soul for seventeen years! Do you know what will happen. When that woman gets to heaven, after she has been there a week, she will go to St. Peter, and say, "I would like to see my mansion, please." And he will say, "We haven't got any for you: we didn't know how long you were going to stay!"

San Francisco, Cal.

ARTHUR S. PHELPS.

Doubtless no insistence on the enthronement of Christ in the market, in politics, or anywhere else can be excessive. But he never can rule in human relations until he reigns in human spirits. For society is what persons make it; and society will never yield to the principles of Jesus except as the social will is formed by a group sufficiently Christly and influential to give a Christly direction to social purposes. Society never can be more Christly than the church is; and evangelism must be evermore the social hope of the world.

Religious Literature—Then and Now

Your neighbor may catch you napping.—People run after religious biographies. Even the sermon has come back.—Where the older devotional books excluded pietism, the newer ones quiver with strength. Men of the pews write them

BY JOHN RICHARD BROWN

WORD comes to us by way of the publishers that religious books are being read once more. The war did not originate the habit, but the war has certainly confirmed it. A serious situation cannot be evaded by frivolity and the "movies" every hour of the day. Even the tired business man thinks a little more deeply because he is tired, and world-weariness always means the asking of big questions. When one thinks deeply he is beginning to think religiously and it will not be long before he reads religiously.

For one thing, religious books, the kind published today, are written interestingly. As far as possible they are made human documents. Technical and stereotyped language disappears and religion becomes the greatest interest in the world. It is significant to note that three-fourths of this product is from the pens of those who live in the larger world—from popular author, publicist, economist, sociologist and lovers and servants of men. The new religious literature has lost the professional note. In its place has come the vital stress.

HEARTS GATHER STRENGTH

The devotional book has come back. Some of us remember the older type of devotional books with a feeling of happy escape. They exuded pietism and reveled in sentimentalism. They were meant for comfort; they did not excite to courage. Frances Ridley Havergal and Andrew Murray were among the best of their kind, but for very many strong Christians such writers had no message at all. The new type of devotional work is based on the strength of manhood and the competency of womanhood—it is written for young folks "because they are strong." If the young can find it stimulative, the weary hearts of full age will revel in it. G. A. Johnson, Ross, Orchard, Kelman and especially H. E. Fosdick have written books of devotion which claim the intellect and stir the imagination as well as enrich the life. But these qualities were in some of the older devotional books and he who does not know them ought to make for his spiritual life some discoveries. He will always be thankful for the day when he made the acquaintance of "Andrewes Private Devotions," "Rutherford's Letters," "Woolman's Diary," "Saint Teresa's Life," and "Augustine's Confessions."

LIFE IS MORE THAN A SHELL

Religious biography makes a large appeal. The life of public and human service is now so much the touchstone by which we interpret any character that a biography lacking in religious and social values is felt to be a mistake and a failure. When John Morley was selected to write the life of Gladstone, it was his first intention to give "the public Gladstone" and to say nothing about his inner life—a subject in which the author was not personally interested. But he quickly saw that Gladstone would be left without explanation or understanding unless the deeper springs were uncovered. After that we are never left in doubt that the landscape of a great life is explained only in the hidden life and motives. Even Stevenson's life had to be written religiously. "Roosevelt's Life and Letters" is an illustrated series of life sermons on a very few practical themes. But religious biography in the stricter sense is also read with increasing interest. G. A. Smith's "Life of Henry Drummond" is still popular among college men, although Drummond has been dead twenty-four years. The demand for "F. W. Robertson's Life and Letters" remains steady. A new life of Wesley by Winchester has had a phenomenal sale. New lives of Luther and other great Reformation workers meet a popular demand. As we know that religion is the only basis that explains a man's life, and as a life story always interests, it is inevitable that a man's religion should be the most absorbing part of his experience. Religious biography, direct or indirect, will always be read—and it is being read now more than ever.

"GIVE ME A GREAT THOUGHT"

Even the sermon and the theological treatise have come back! This does not mean that some sermons we have heard or remember with painful wonder have any chance to be printed except at the personal expeise of the author himself. The purely controversial discourse on sectarian differences has only a local circulation, and the sermons which round out a theology and leave us gaps even for imagination are not wanted. But sermons with great ideas, nobly expressed and ironically presented, are in demand. That there is something necessary in the sermonic form is evidenced by the fact that the great magazines have entire departments given to lay sermons, based on an incident or a text, and planned by laymen. Could the despised sermon have a greater triumph? The new type of published sermon is characterized in several ways: it is short, it is human, and its field is the common life. The tabloid sermon seems to have come to stay. We find it in the various books of John Kelman, George Matheson and Canon Inge. Such books answer the wish of Herder: "Give me a great thought that I may refresh myself therewith." They are the books by the way, the places of intellectual and spiritual refreshment, for which busy folk are always asking.

REBUILD ON THE MAIN POINTS

Closely connected with such books of sermons in type and purpose are the works now so popular, particularly with some college groups, which give the principles of the Christian faith. What are the great truths "about Christ and his gospel?" The doctrinal sermon had a dogmatic purpose: the newer expositions of Christian truth are an attempt to find the truth as it is in Jesus in the great agreements as they must be lived out in daily experience. Such a book as Dean Brown's "The Main Points" does this very thing for us. It is evangelical and strong, and never controversial or doctrinaire. When we read it we feel as if we were dealing with the great assurances. While theological reconstruction goes on, such books are most helpful companions by the way.

Another type of religious works that is now read widely is the so-called kingdom literature. We know that there are triumphs of faith and righteousness too great for any church to claim, and inspirations of

(Continued on page 170)

GREWSOME EVIDENCES OF A TRAGEDY

PHILIP IN TROUBLE FINDS A FRIEND

When the Navajo's Gods Are Silent

A dead boy in a shanty got his brother into a deal of trouble, and neither the good-for-nothing gods, the chiefs nor the United States government would lend a hand. But a missionary took hold and helped

BY COE HAYNE

PHILIP, returning with the sheep after an absence of three days, found his brother's lifeless body lying on the ground inside the hogan. Without warning had come the Great Calamity. Ted, his erstwhile brother and companion, had become a thing to be shunned. The Navajo youth threw a blanket over the object of his dread and fled from the log shelter.

WHERE DOING GOOD IS A CURSE

To touch a body that had been dead three days, according to Navajo traditions, would bring a curse upon Philip. Furthermore, for him to bury a human body, however long dead, would compel him, according to these same traditions, to desist from all work during a period of four days. The sheep, unshepherded, would scatter upon the desert to become the prey of wild cats, wolves and coyotes. But he could leave the sheep one day with his shepherd dogs. At night-fall he must be with them again. To secure assistance in the burial of his brother's body was the immediate task, and he was many miles from help.

HIS CHIEFS FAILED HIM

At daybreak next morning Philip took the shortest trail to the home of Hosteen Nez, a Navajo chief, to ask that dignitary to intercede with the Indian agent to the end that white men would be sent to bury the body that had lain dead three days. He also interviewed Belasighi, another chief. But neither head man could get the government aid for Philip in his plan to escape The Curse. As the Navajo were an independent, self-supporting people, the burying of their dead was not on the list of activities undertaken by Uncle Sam in their behalf.

There was one way left for Philip. He could go to the Baptist missionary, Lee Thayer, who never refused to bury the dead. During two severe epidemics all Navajo living within fifty miles and more of the missionary's headquarters at Keam's Canyon had been convinced of that. For many weeks the missionary had been driving his automobile night and day to reach the most distressing cases of need.

RUN TO JESUS MAN

Philip hurried to the missionary's home and stated his errand. Thayer learned that it would be impossible to reach the distant sheep camp by automobile, but set out at once on horseback with the Navajo boy. They rode fifteen miles over a rough trail to the top of some bluffs. Here the boy halted and pointed down at a hogan at the foot of the slope. He refused to go further.

The missionary made camp, cooked a meal and then with pick and shovel went down to begin his task alone.

Has there taken place elsewhere such a burial as this? Acting as grave-digger, pall-bearer, undertaker, minister, chief mourner and sympathizing friend, this missionary to a superstitious people has performed many of these lonely tasks in the Big Country where no record is made of broken hearts.

SMOKING GRIEF AWAY

The grave was dug; then the body, wrapped in its blanket, was lowered to its final resting place within the hogan. When the prayer was spoken and the grave filled, the missionary closed the entrance of the abandoned habitation with poles to prevent marauding coyotes from digging up the body. When he walked to the top of the bluffs he found Philip reclining at his ease indifferently smoking a cigaret. The affair that had taken place at the bottom of the slope, apparently, was of no moment to the Navajo. That is the way with an Indian. Yet somewhere, deep in the heart of the youth, an impression must have been made. Countless acts of kindness of this character have served to give Lee Thayer a peculiarly high place in the estimation of redmen and whites on the Navajo Reservation.

PICK AND SHOVEL NEEDED

A party of three that visited Lee Thayer's field recently, remained long enough to obtain a fairly accurate idea of the extent and nature of the Navajo work. On one of the long trips by automobile it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the visitors that a pick and shovel are a necessary part of this pastor's permanent equipment.

TUMBLE WEEDS STALL CAR

Over the divide from Pinon to the Oraibi Valley is a ride not quickly forgotten. Trails over which the camp wagons of the nomadic Navajo sheep owners may go with impunity may be well-nigh impossible for the automobilist. Before the level floor of the valley was reached both Kinney and Morton were ready to confer upon Thayer the title of "Master Driver of the World." After negotiating every rocky barrier over the divide, the car was nearly stalled at the bottom of the slope by tumble weeds, well cured by the sun, that piled many feet high in front of the engine's hood. After escaping from these circus performers of the vegetable world, a good road was encountered. The mesa upon which Oraibi, one of the ancient and most interesting villages of the Hopi is built, thrust its rugged summit out of the desert ten miles ahead of us.

SADDLE AND BONES

Just before crossing the line separating the Navajo territory from Hopi Land the missionary stopped his car. He pointed to a saddle lying upon the ground a short distance to the left. Without comment he removed his pick and shovel from the tonneau. We followed him.

The saddle was an old one and badly wrinkled from exposure to rain and sun; near it was the skull of a horse, a primitive irrigating hoe such as the Navajo and Hopi use, and near the hoe was an old coat from one sleeve of which protruded the skeleton fingers of a hand. Further search revealed a human skull half hidden in a small hole in the ground twenty feet from the coat. Scattered everywhere were other bones of beast and man—grievous evidences of a tragedy that had occurred over twelve months before.

A THUNDERBOLT GOT THIS ONE

A Navajo riding homeward from his cornfield during a thunderstorm had been struck down by lightning, his horse being killed by the same stroke. The dead bodies of horse and rider remained in the same relative positions until the coyotes began their work. No member of the victim's family, no friend, dared touch the remains. According to Navajo belief, a curse rested upon the ground where the man had fallen, and a new trail was broken out around the dreadful spot.

It remained for the missionary on one of his more extended trips to dig a grave and perform a service unrequested and unrecorded. On this occasion he had the assistance of his visitors.

The Navajo have many well-defined deities, nature gods and animal gods, local gods and gods that are distant; they have a vast mythical and legendary lore and hundreds of formulas for the preservation of life and happiness on earth; their religious ceremonies are replete with songs and prayers which must be learned and repeated in the most exact manner; but in the presence of death they are helpless.

BURIED HEROES

To lead this people out from enslaving superstitions into the freedom which the gospel alone makes possible is a task to which the churches have addressed themselves. With patience, devotion and God-given heroism, missionaries representing the Baptist and other denominations are at work among them. These men and women are far from the centers of population, the problems they must solve are unknown to the great majority of Christian workers, and they are alone. Let us not forget them.

Religious Literature

(Continued from page 168)

life which can never be purely ecclesiastical. Any book which tells how a community or a life was transformed, and how the things men really live for come to victory, is a kingdom book. Such literature is widely popular. It advertises to the world that Jesus Christ is coming into his own at last, and shows how in so many different ways he fulfills himself.

If we have not been reading religious literature recently, we may have the shock of having the matter presented to us by some neighbor who is not a church member, but who is reading books with which we ought to be completely familiar. A well-known Baptist deacon had this experience not long ago: He had never heard of Simpson's "The Fact of Christ," but his business friend had not only read it, but mastered it. He who neglects religious literature these days is missing what the rest of the world seems to be finding.

Not a Dying Race

HOPi INDIAN CHILDREN COME TO SCHOOL THROUGH THE SNOW BAREFOOTED

THE Indians are not a dying race. While some of the tribes are decreasing, others are multiplying. Therefore the Indian problem will not be settled through inaction. Work in their behalf is carried on by the two home mission societies in Montana, Oklahoma, Arizona, Nevada, California, Alaska and New York.

The fact that the Indian survived the terrible period of conflict and then the period of conquest when he was herded upon reservations is proof of his virile character. The mere fact that he exists today is a challenge to Christian manhood and womanhood of America to contribute the best and to the utmost for the development of Christian citizenship among Indian tribes.

Just Like Heaven

Heaven took the form of a maternity hospital. People were shy of it at first, but later a rush to it set in. Besides regular patients came mothers with children to sell, wives afraid of their husbands, and people wanting clothes and rice

WHY, this place is just like heaven." The place referred to is the Ellen Mitchell Memorial Maternity Hospital at Moulmein, Burma, and the remark was made to the Burmese seamstress of the hospital by the sister of a patient concerning whose case Dr. Ella Gifford writes: "God was good to us and in ten minutes we did a piece of work which put the woman out of danger and made her comfortable." Two sisters and other relatives of the patient accompanied her to the hospital, as is the custom on the Orient, and the sisters were allowed to remain with her for the first night; but the next night they stayed elsewhere, and upon seeing their sister the following morning they eagerly inquired, "Were they good to you? Did they take care of you as well as when we were here?" Being reassured by the sick woman, they expressed their surprise and satisfaction as already quoted. This gave the point of contact to the Christian seamstress of the hospital. She did not fail to use the opportunity, and to these friends and the patient who had come from a heathen country village she gave the gospel message.

FORTY YEARS OF HEALING

The Ellen Mitchell Memorial Maternity Hospital stands as a memorial to Dr. Ellen Mitchell, the first woman doctor sent out by Baptist women of America.

On Dec. 4, 1879, Dr. Mitchell, accompanied by a trained nurse, Miss A. M. Barkley, arrived at Rangoon, Burma. They were sent to Moulmein, where in an old building, formerly used as a Eurasian girls' school, they opened a dispensary. It was with difficulty that patients could be persuaded to come even as far as the veranda. When the first woman patient was brought into the hospital to remain for a while, a cable was sent home to America. That was in 1880.

Forty years have passed, and Dr. Gifford in her report for 1920 says:

"The number of patients tells its share of the story. The net numbers have not been large, but for the most part they have been growing. The number of dispensary visits for the year will run well over 3000, more than one-third being new visits. The number of in-patients has been larger than before, being about 300, making a total of more than 500 since the hospital was opened in April, 1918. They have, as usual, comprised many racial varieties. There are few of the many races and tribes of cosmopolitan Burma who have not knocked at our doors.

ELLEN MITCHELL MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, MOULMEIN, BURMA

WILL THEY BUY MY BABY?

"They have come for varied purposes. Supposedly all patients come to a hospital to be cured, but we have discovered other motives. Cotton cloth and rice have their price these days, and this has not been without effect. It undoubtedly has been one of the factors that have brought fatherless or motherless children to us. It is easy for those who see that we love children and put forth every effort to restore them to health, to conclude that we would be glad to take any child and keep it always. Consequently we have had many offers of children whose friends were unable or unwilling to care for them. Other patients have come because it was a happier place than their homes. We have found that back of certain ailments which were the ostensible reason for coming to the hospital were such real reasons as an unbearable husband or the fear of a beating. There has been the actual beating too, with sufficient evidence to remove any possible doubts."

MUST HAVE 181 MISSIONARIES

The New World Movement calls for 181 new missionaries to be sent out by the W. A. B. F. M. S. before the close of 1924. Sixty-nine have already sailed. Dr. Gifford is due home on furlough in the spring of 1923, while Miss Selma Maxville, our trained nurse associated with her, should start home a year earlier. There are seven Baptist girls in training for doctors and many more nurses, but none of these will be ready to sail for Burma to relieve Dr. Gifford. Two doctors should be in charge of this hospital all the time to share the great responsibility. But this has not been possible.

WILL SOME WOMAN ANSWER?

There must be some woman doctor in America who will answer this call. It is an emergency call. Correspond with Miss Grace T. Colburn, Ford Building, Boston, Mass., acting-candidate secretary, concerning this opportunity for service.

The Living Way

Nothing is of more interest than people. And no experiences are so vital as those in which men find God. The following is a true story told by a man who found Christ to be the living way

BY C. H. ROBINSON

A BOY'S will is the wind's will, and the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts."

My earliest recollections were of the sea. I was born surrounded by the ocean, on that beautiful island called Martha's Vineyard. My people were born there for 200 years before me, and I naturally took to the water. My good father died when I was six years old, and I went more or less to my own head, which in the case of most boys seems inclined to go the wrong way. I remember I would often lie on the white beach sand, and with my chin in my hand, gaze off on the distant horizon and wonder where those white sails were going. A great longing would come over me to go after them. With what interest would I listen to the thrilling tales of the sea, told around the grocery-store stove on a wintry night, or along shore on wharves by day! I would even work hard to hear these stories. My uncle, who was formerly a sea captain, used to have me place potatoes in the hills while he hoed the rows and told me exciting sea yarns. Of course I had to keep within the sound of his voice or lose the story, and in this way I hustled the work off and thought it was play.

HE IMPRESSED THE BLUE SEA

At fourteen my highest hopes were realized. I was shipped as cabin boy on the bark "Palmetto" of New Bedford, which was going for a three years' cruise in the South Pacific Ocean. I remember singing the song, "My Bonny Blue Sea, I Am Coming to Thee," and before the month was out I guess the "bonny blue sea," thought I was about all in, for I was desperately sea sick.

After a three years' voyage I returned and sought employment on land. How many sailors try to do this and fail! I have heard them make the most solemn vows that they would never go to sea any more, and in less than a month they would be on the sea again. I secured a place on a farm away up in New Hampshire. I went from one thing to another—as boys sometimes do before they find their proper places—until I found myself at the head of a large furniture business in Dock Square, Boston, Mass.

Prosperity brought with it many temptations—gay and fascinating companions, clubs, banquets, etc. I was drawn away from all that was good and took the downward course. I had no faith in religion, and often said that no man ever returned from the dead to tell us about the future, and that one person knew as much about eternity as another. So I would not bother my head about such things.

HE WOULD NOT HAVE A CIGAR

I had a summer house in Blackstone, Mass. Away from the turmoil of the city I would often think of a better life. I said to myself, I will try to do better; and with all my mind and body and will I would secretly pray to God for light and help. I would ask God to take my life, or take from me my bad habits, and for my part I left off everything on this line and kept on secretly praying for more heavenly light and help.

Over a year had passed, and I was again on the farm. We were situated three miles from the Millville Methodist Church. Occasionally I would go to please my wife. There had just come to this church a new pastor, Rev. S. V. B. Cross, an old-time Methodist preacher. I was attracted by his sincerity. I even invited him to dine with me. He accepted the invitation, and I found him different than other clergymen whom I had met. I invited him to smoke a nice cigar, as I had done others, but he kindly refused. Before leaving, he asked if he could have prayers with the family. I never had had a minister ask me this before, and I objected, saying that I did not care to have my guests intrude their various beliefs on me and my family; but notwithstanding my objections, he knelt down and prayed one of the most earnest prayers I ever heard. He prayed that God would trouble my soul and convict and convert me with power sent down from heaven. I sat apparently unmoved, with head in the air, like the stiff-necked sinner that I was. Rage filled my breast. Upon his departure I turned on my family and gave them my opinion of ministers in general and this one in particular. I said that this ended my courtesy to ministers, and that I would never have another one in my house. Considering the fact that they have been my constant companions ever since, how wonderful a change must have come over me!

I retired that night stirred to the depths. I could get no sleep. A strange and heavy load was upon my breast. For the first time in my life, I felt that I was a lost sinner, without God or hope in the world. The prayers of that man of God were answered, and conviction was upon me. In my distress I asked my wife if she would not get up and pray for me. She was so astonished that she burst into tears. She thought that the minister had spoiled all the years of care she had taken not to get me offended with religion. But there I was asking for what she never dreamed that I would ask for—her prayers. Even this gave me no relief.

KEPT HIS WORD WITH GOD

After two or three days of praying, and promising God what I would do if he would forgive me my sins, which were many, I said at last that if he spared my life until morning I would go down to that minister in Millville and ask him to pray for me.

I kept my word. The next morning I had the horses hitched up and took my good wife and drove down to the little parsonage. I entered the house and told the minister that I was in trouble and wanted him to pray for me. Great was my surprise when he said that he had been expecting me. I asked him how this could be, and he informed me that he had been praying to God to give me no rest until he sent me down. I said, "Here I am, and I want your prayers." So he prayed and talked religion with me from ten in the morning until four in the afternoon, without any dinner, and yet I received no relief. Upon my saying that I felt no better, he said, "You keep right on praying, and you will feel better by and by; and when you go home, read the fourteenth chapter of St. John."

I lay on my bed that memorable May night worn out with my efforts, to find the salvation of God. I asked my wife to read the fourteenth chapter of St. John. As she read, "You believe in God," I said in my mind, "Yes, I do. Then she continued, "Believe also in me," and I said in my mind, "Who is 'me'?" Up to this time I had never thought of Christ, but now it began to dawn upon me, so that when she read, "Jesus saith, I am the way, and the truth, and the life, and no man cometh unto the Father but by me," I prayed to Christ, saying, Lord Jesus, plead to God for me that my sins may be forgiven.

Instantly a great light came from heaven, and I saw Christ hanging on the cross that my sins might be forgiven. The burden all left me, and I was filled with the pardoning joy of God, which is only known to those who come in true penitence to him, and who are truly accepted by Christ as the only Saviour of men.

Many years have come and gone since that day, and many times have I proved the promises of God and found them divinely true. For the comfort of other hearts, I pray that they may test by personal experience these wonderful words: "Seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

The Pulse of the Colleges

Religion and science are married here.—Dr. Foster rejoices in the Christian spirit that he finds in our Baptist colleges.—Professors and students together dedicate themselves to Christ.—Tom Mock had a grouch and lost it

BY ALLYN K. FOSTER

MY right to report on the college situation is based upon the fact that during the past twelve months I have visited over 100 institutions in all parts of the country. My mission is to stimulate the Christian interest of students. I am trying to carry a message of redemption that shall be applicable to all life here and hereafter. I have always held central in my thinking the old truths, though I am always seeking better forms in which to express them. To be specific, these central truths are Christ as God manifest in the flesh; the atoning work on the cross; immortality confirmed to us in the resurrection of Jesus as the first fruits of them that slept. Around these great truths there is a field of magnetic force available to any man who seeks to put himself in connection with it. I believe that this force is what the modern world needs for individual and social redemption. My college work consists in trying to show that all departments of knowledge are open doors into the spiritual world. I frequently go into class and try to demonstrate that psychology, economics and even the physical sciences can be shown to be tangent to the spiritual world at many points. I believe that God can be found in any search for knowledge if pushed far enough.

SETS UP THE GREAT ISSUES

For another thing I try to set up the great issues that confront the world of today, at home, in Europe and in the foreign mission field. I believe that the only thing that can mend a broken world is a new spirit among men, and I am sure that there is no source from which this new spirit must proceed except from Jesus. The right spirit of men toward their brothers and toward God is the true social and economic spirit that will solve the world's outstanding problems. I am seeking not merely to convince the world of sin which makes its appeals to repentance for past deeds, but also to convince it of righteousness, which is the challenge of things to come. Bad deeds to be expiated do not begin to furnish the urge which good deeds to come will evoke. So I try to preach the whole of that text because "the judgment to come" involves both of the other two elements in this word of Jesus.

REALITIES MORE THAN THEORIES

With this preliminary let me try to say a few words of what I have found. First of all, I have found from student bodies everywhere a most unusual response to every appeal I have made. As with the men in the army, I find that the heart of our youth throughout the country is sound. Both idealism and religion lie close to the surface, and a little mining generally reaches it. Wherever I have talked about the great things of the gospel without adjectives, there has been an instant impression. For instance, as I spoke of the lordship of Jesus without trying to establish it by argumentative methods, I have found that they instantly accepted it. Probably if I discussed theories of his divinity I might easily confuse them. When I speak of the atonement wrought on the cross I can see that they understand its spiritual meaning, but I fear if I tried to rationalize the cross by running it into a theory there might again be "darkness over all the land." When I have spoken of the challenge to Christian service in a day like this, the rapt attention which I receive makes me believe that many thousands of our best young people are alive to the situation. I think I am justified therefore in believing that the hearts of our young people are sound and that God will, out of this college generation, raise up the needed leaders for his people.

FOLLOW JESUS TO KNOW HIM

Second: I do find a good deal of confusion about many things. There is theological confusion—and why shouldn't there be when we consider the varying views of earnest people upon the same subject? I am trying to point out that religion is the realm of the play of spiritual forces, and that the test of Jesus is as final today as it was when he spoke: "Who-soever will come after me let him deny himself * * * and follow me." In other words, begin by doing the things of Christ and we shall soon attain a body of knowledge. I am trying to emphasize the truth that following Jesus comes first and the acquisition of views eventually follows (John 7:17). There is still a good deal of confusion about natural science and its relation to religion. All forward-looking thinkers these days are absolutely clear that nothing revealed in the study of nature can be at variance with things revealed to the human spirit. There has never been any warfare between science and religion. Religious men without scientific training and scientific men without the proper religious point of view are the people who have caused this false impression. What really has been at war is one set of theories with another set of theories. People do not quarrel over realities: it is always over varying apprehensions of reality. I do not, in other words, try to fight over again the dead theological battles of the past. I have no theory about anything that is bigger than the thing itself, and I know too well, as all scientists do these days, that no statement can ever cover the simplest reality. What always gives a definite result is a relationship. God reveals himself in experience and in no other way. I find in spots throughout the country that students are asking about Genesis and evolution, but for the most part that matter is settled one way or the other and the Bible still stands as the inspired book of religion leading men into the presence of God.

A GOOD PLACE FOR ANY MAN'S BOY

Third: I have been greatly delighted at the splendid support which college and school presidents and faculties have given me. Indeed, my work would have been impossible without it. I have made it my business to know as far as I could what the spirit and the nature of their teaching are. I am speaking just now particularly of our own Baptist institutions, though the same could be said of many others. We are exceedingly fortunate to have the type of men that we have teaching in our institutions. I recall president after president who almost made himself an errand boy to me, seeking to bring the students into sympathetic relationship with my work. Obviously I cannot mention names of institutions; but I find the tears coming to my eyes even now as I think of the tender solicitude which these men have for the spiritual life of their students. In large measure this applies also to the members of the several faculties.

HOW THEY HELPED AND HEARD

In more than one of our colleges, recitations have been practically suspended in order to give me the chance at groups of classes. In one of our Baptist institutions recently, in four days and a half I spoke no less than thirty-three times. I have been particular to seek intimate knowledge of the spirit and methods of the Bible teachers and the teachers of religious education. Almost without exception the men to whom we have intrusted the teaching of the sacred word of God are men of splendid Christian spirit and wisdom. I do not recall a single man who has not the constructive spirit. I remember affectionately their deep interest in the lives of their students. The Baptist denomination has every right to be proud of the teachers to whom it intrusts the welfare of its children. I was greeted recently in a New England college on my arrival by a large group of the faculty, who placed themselves at my disposal. During the five days of my visit there these men practically put aside everything else and worked diligently, going from dormitory to dormitory wherever they thought a personal word with a boy or girl might do good. I only wish that my own boy, when he goes to college next year, may fall into the hands of such godly men as I saw in our Baptist colleges.

Fourth: Perhaps a few incidents will serve to show what kind of results may reasonably be hoped for in the course of time. Plowing and weeding have to come before the harvest, and I look upon the last year as a sort of breaking of the ground and getting the obstacles off the soil. I think of two of the leaders in a certain preparatory school.

TOM MOCK AND HIS GROUCH

On my second visit to this school I found that these boys had become Christians. Both were leading athletes and one was at the head of the Y. M. C. A. To my delight, in private conversations with these men, I found both of them moving toward the Christian ministry. In a college in another part of the country seven or eight men told me that they felt the stirrings of the call to Christian service. In a college in the Middle West, after two days of work, I had just finished my last address; the atmosphere was tense with interest, and I was moved to say: "Now I wonder if there is anybody in this audience who has not made it quite clear that he is a Christian. Why would this not be a good time to take your stand?" Instantly there arose two members of the faculty and a dozen or more students. I regard all my work in its last analysis as evangelistic. While I approach it in a dozen different directions, in the end it all means one thing—acceptance of Christ and his program for the world. I think I ought to tell the story of Tom Mock. He was a student in an agricultural college. He was twenty-eight years old, had spent two years with the First Division in France and Germany, had returned to America utterly sore on everybody and everything, and was like a fish out of water. After my second address he came to me and said, "I want a long interview with you. I am all tied up and I think you can untie me." We met after an hour or so, and after listening to his experiences I diagnosed his case as follows: "I am disposed to laugh at you. You have just lived through two of the greatest things in the world's history, in the thick of its hottest activity, and you have grown like grass in the summer sun. You come back and try to shoe-horn yourself into the same position you occupied before you had that experience. How would you like trying to wear the trousers that fitted you when you were twelve years old?" Then I proceeded to prescribe: "What you need to do is to drop your grouch. Your life needs centralization, and I tell you to make it your prayer right here to know what God's will is for you and to try to place your life where it will count for most." That fellow lived with me for two days, and when he put me on the train it was a new Tom who said, "You let me have the information I need and I will go anywhere on this planet that God wants me."

WE CAN TRUST THEM

In several colleges recently I have left the fraternities practically under promise to become the foci of light and warmth for the good of the whole campus. Perhaps the sweetest experience I ever have is that of going on invitation to the students' rooms, crowded with boys, to assist at an old-fashioned prayer meeting just before the time of retiring. In school after school and college after college these little groups of praying boys get close to my heart. I am often asked to go over at ten o'clock to the girls' dormitories, and the girls gather in their drawing room while I have a heart-to-heart talk with them and then lead them in their evening prayer. The hope of the church and of civilization is in the hands of these colleges of ours. I am immensely heartened as I see the way in which they take the Christian message and the earnestness with which they try to look out upon life. Let us believe in them and let us do nothing that will cast discredit upon them or their teachers. We can trust both. We ought to reward them with our loyal support.

Prayer, the Heart of Religion

PRAYER is the act in which we turn our will upon God. Therefore religion consists, above all, in prayer. To be religious means to be able to pray. The battle for religion is the battle for prayer. The theory of religion is the philosophy of prayer.—Schlat-ter in "Christian Dogma."

The Bulletin Board

Methodism and Roman Catholicism

Comparative statistics of Methodism and Roman Catholicism in the United States have recently been set forth by the Presbyterian Standard, which finds that the Roman Church reports 17,549,324 members as against a Methodist membership of 7,868,863. But aside from membership the advantage is all with the Methodists, for they have 67,493 churches as against 10,460 Roman Catholic churches; 46,364 ministers as compared with 20,588 Roman priests; 69,078 Sunday Schools as against 12,800 Roman Catholic; 7,287,381 Sunday school members as compared with 1,932,206 Catholic. The Roman Church counts every baptized person in its constituency no matter how far from the church they may have gone. If the Methodists did the same thing, their numbers would equal and perhaps exceed those of the Roman Catholics.

A Substantial Drying Up

The Anti-Saloon League shows that in 1917 the following amounts of liquor were sold in this country: "Whiskey, 89,641,985 gallons; alcohol, 71,081,121 gallons; fermented liquors, 60,817,379 barrels (thirty-one gallons each).

Here are the figures for the dry year 1920: "Whiskey, 5,581,553 gallons, including rum and gin; alcohol, 22,639,355 gallons; beer, 9,231,280 barrels."

The comment of the league statement on these figures is:

"This shows a decrease of 84,060,432 gallons of whiskey, 48,441,736 gallons of alcohol, and 51,586,099 barrels of beer of thirty-one gallons each, or a total in gallons of 1,599,169,069.

"Granting that many million gallons of alcohol and whiskey withdrawn for non-beverage use have been diverted to beverage use, and granting that many million gallons of beer have been made and consumed illegally, a conservative estimate shows that the people of the United States have saved over $1,000,000,000.00 in money previously spent for beverage intoxicants."

Koo's Tribute to Missions.

The religious press of England is saying a good deal about the new Chinese minister to Great Britain, Dr. Wellington Koo. Dr. Koo, who was formerly Chinese minister to the United States, is a product of mission schools and studied later for seven years at Columbia University. He is an ardent advocate of progress and does not hesitate to pay his tribute to the missionaries in China. Recently he said:

"China owes a great deal to foreign missionaries. The efficiency of missionary institutions in training men of discipline, of character, is a fact generally admitted. The missionary, as a moral and religious teacher and as a social reformer, has been a distinct force in China. The Christian church has not only rendered valuable service in propagating Christian doctrines, but by her various activities has contributed to the modernization of China; and under the present regime of Republicanism Christianity is bound to make even more rapid progress and accomplish more in China than it has in the past.

Life-Saving Stamps

The co-operation of women's societies, Sunday schools and young people's organization is asked in selling China Life Saving Stamps. The stamps are a trifle larger than regular postage stamps. The price of one of them, 3 cents, will save a life for a day. Orders should be sent to C. S. Clark, Bible House, New York City, Campaign Sales Director.

Interchurch Films

Fifty-one thousand feet of film, taken originally for the Interchurch World Movement, has been acquired by the International Church Film Corporation, and as soon as it is classified and titled it will be released throughout the churches of America.

Taking these films, which form one of the greatest pictorial surveys of interdenominational mission work ever compiled, was one of the big projects of the Interchurch. Four expeditions were sent out at various times to the mission fields where, often under extreme difficulty, the camera men finally succeeded in getting "shots" of the native people, customs and buildings.

There are 38,000 feet of film taken in India and China, 6000 in Central America, and 7000 in Northern Africa. One of the most interesting things pictured is the mass movement of India, which shows hundreds of thousands of Buddhists and Hindustans converted to Christianity. A five-reel feature is being made of this particular subject for the first release.

New Bedfellows of Freedom

If any man is beginning to despair of liberty, let him read this news-note in a daily paper of March 1, and believe that the age of persecution is in its dim and dying twilight.

"Denouncing an alleged anti-Jewish movement in southern parts of the United States, Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty of the Knights of Columbus announced at his home here tonight that he had called upon 2,200 Knights of Columbus lecturers in the United States and Canada to combat anti-Semitism. 'An attack on one religion or race may easily develop into an attack on any religion or race,' his message to the lecturers read: 'The Knights of Columbus will oppose the anti-Semitic movement because it is un-American. There are undesirables of every race in this country, but that does not justify proscription of any race.'"

When a representative Catholic order stands for religious and racial liberty and catholicity, who is left to promote intolerance?

Paul Revere Will Ride Again

Roger V. Flory has been appointed chairman of the American Legion's service and membership campaign, which will start with a "Paul Revere's Ride," to carry the "villagers" of Illinois the tidings that the American Legion is in a position to serve the disabled comrades of the late war. Three Paul Reveres will conduct the drive.

In the list of new devices for religious publicity here is an idea that appeals to the imagination. Suppose 10,000 horsemen in regalia were riding over Illinois at once in the interest of some great religious appeal!

It Smells Bad, but Keep on Smelling

Campaign costs of electing a president of the United States in 1920 were $10,338,509, as estimated by a special senate committee created to investigate them. The committee compilation took into account the expenditures made by or in behalf of all candidates for the Republican and Democratic presidential nomination and of national, state, congressional, and senatorial committees of both these parties. Senators Kenyon and Spencer, Republicans, and Pomerene and Reed, Democrats, signed the report, which was unanimous. While stating their conclusion that "the expenditure of these vast sums is a present and growing menace to the nation," no recommendations for congressional action were made except the suggestion that elections committees of the next congress should "consider the question." Constitutional difficulties may intervene to prevent legislation on the subject, the report said.—Chicago Tribune,

The Devotional Life

Called but Not Chosen

BY C. M. CARTER

DOES the Holy Spirit ever call one to do that which he never intends him to do?

There is a wonderful story in the twenty-second chapter of Genesis—a story of faithfulness unto something more bitter than death, but which has a thrilling climax. Let no one suppose that Abraham gave immediate and cheerful assent to the call of God to offer his only son, the boy he loved so well. For Abraham was human, and this story is worth while only as it is human. Abraham had doubtless seen the awful acts of heathen fathers, but forty miles from where he lived, offering their sons to Moloch, and the question naturally arose in his mind whether he would be willing to offer his son on top of the mount not half a mile away and in plain view! The Spirit used this suggestion to speak to Abraham and to try him to the utmost: Would he offer his son to Jehovah as they did their sons to Moloch!

Then came the Voice of gentle stillness calling him to do that which seemed to him so terrible! How long he tried to close his inner ears to this gently calling Voice no one can say. But finally he heard and answered, but answered as would any normal, devout father such a crushing call of duty.

This call to Abraham was genuine. God never trifles with his children in such agonizing tests. The call to Abraham was of God, and the agony of obedience was more than any untried one can ever appreciate. It was as in the recent past when fathers laid their sons—some an only son—upon the altar of their calling country, even though heart-strings were tearing. These fathers know the heart of Abraham as he tossed sleeplessly through that scorching night. But what must have been the anguish of his soul through the three days and nights as he journeyed from Beersheba to the mount!

The call of the Spirit to leave Ur of the Chaldees was no more genuine than the call to offer Isaac. Though the call was of God, he never meant Abraham to do what he was ordered to do. But Abraham did not know that. His obedience was perfect because he did not know. The attesting Spirit centuries later had it recorded: "Abraham, being tried, offered up Isaac" (Heb. 11:17). In the mind of God, his faith was accounted unto him for righteousness, and the record is not that he was willing, but that he "offered up Isaac"—a fact and not a purpose.

Why this terrific testing? In order that Abraham might be fully worthy of the destiny God had marked out for him. Note that it was after he had met this supreme test that it was promised him that his descendants should be as "the stars of the heavens, and as the sand which is upon the seashore." The scorching flames of this trial, superbly met, burned the dross from out his soul. Abraham told no more lies after this, and his faith attained such perfection that he is evermore to be called the friend of God. This call of the Spirit, never meant to be carried out, was the culmination of the cleansing, preparation and exaltation of Abraham.

The Holy Spirit calls today to tasks never meant to be done. Here is a modern story: A young man, following his baptism, struggled for eighteen months against an overwhelming call to go as a missionary to Africa. The test was extreme because the young man—rather boy—was a home-lover, he only too well preferred to follow his own will, and he had a natural shrinking from Negro people, with whom he then had had no association. Neither did he desire to preach, as that conflicted with his own plans of life. More than once he prayed that he might die rather than be a missionary. But steadily the Spirit called until after a year and a half of bitter rebellion he made a full surrender. Through college and seminary he prepared for missionary service, fully expecting and willing to go. But as the time came for him to enter upon his work, the orders changed entirely. Clear as the sun at high noon the lead was into a work in his own country. His real work, as later the Spirit plainly revealed, was to take fields in the homeland which were disorganized, which possessed equipment and strategic locations that for the sake of the cause must be held. This proved to be his life work, and the long and heart-breaking struggle against foreign missionary service, with final submission, made him willing to do the needful and trying work of saving difficult situations at home.

Some are called to be foreign missionaries, or to preach in America, or to do certain definite duties calling for self-sacrifice, and yet they will never have opportunity to do these things. But they do not know it, they cannot and ought not to know, for they must become honestly willing and have no concealed hope that they may escape finally.

No one need fear that his call has not been of God because it finally seems radically altered, nor because doubts arise concerning it, nor because at times it becomes almost too faint to be heard. It was offering up Isaac in his heart of hearts which made Abraham worthy to be the friend of God, the father of multitudes, and the ancestor of Jesus. The honest yielding to a call from which the soul shrinks with desperation may of all things best prepare for the real work which the Spirit has chosen and which he will reveal in due time.

Or if it happens that one has had a great desire to do some difficult and noble task, and that with this desire one has felt a divine call, cherished possibly for years, and that then Providence has closed the door beyond all opening, there is no need to doubt the genuineness of the call. Instead there should be the sweet assurance that God counts honest purpose just the same as a task actually faithfully performed. "Abraham, being tried, offered up Isaac"—though in his heart only. On that spot where he purposed to make the offering was built the greatest temple to the glory of God—a most fitting memorial also to Abraham's heroic willingness.

The Voice of gentle stillness is calling today. The earnest hearer, by much prayer and patient testing, must first determine that there is a call, and then be ready to obey it literally, exactly as it commands. Only after this he must be ready for any changes which may come. The call is of God though later the Voice directs along most astonishing lines of service, leading over rough and rugged roads, through blood-sweating perplexities, and, it may be, through midnight agonies. Sometimes the Holy Spirit leads through deep darkness into apparent failure and death, even as Jesus was led. What of it! The Voice speaks, and mystifying experiences need not develop fear, neither need changed orders be discredited. Obedience and courage are the soldier's greatest virtues. March on!

The Friends We Never See

*A*ROUND the corner I have a friend, in the great city that has no end.

Yet days go by and weeks rush on, and before I know it a year is gone:

And I never see my old friend's face, for life is a swift and terrible race.

He knows I like him just as well as in the days when I rang his bell

And he rang mine. We were younger then. And now we are busy, tired men—

Tired with playing a foolish game, tired with trying to make a name.

"Tomorrow," I say, "I will call on Jim, just to show that I'm thinking of him."

But tomorrow comes and tomorrow goes and the distance between us grows and grows.

Around the corner—yet miles away. . . "Here's a telegram, sir." "Jim died today!"

And that's what we get and deserve in the end—

Around the corner a vanished friend.

—Selected.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for March 27

THE LIVING CHRIST (EASTER LESSON)
Matt. 28:1-20. Golden Text: Matt. 28:20

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

In all the accounts of the resurrection of Jesus there is no explanation of the process of his resurrection. He appears to the women and to the disciples as the same Jesus who had formerly lived among them. He was the same in his essential character whatever changes may have taken place in his body. When Paul wrote his first letter to the Corinthians he attempted to explain in part the process of the resurrection. To the question, "How are the dead raised and with what body do they come?" he answers by analogy, and closes his explanation by saying, "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." By the spiritual body he evidently means a body not subject to earthly conditions or corruption. However, the process of the resurrection is incidental; the fact of the resurrection is fundamental.

The Lesson Taught

The Living Christ and His Promise, His Power, and His Presence are suggested by the lesson.

His Promise

Note the significant words of the angel to the women, "He is not here; for he is risen, even as he said." There is veiled rebuke in these words. In fact, Luke in his account of the same incident reports that the angels said to the women, "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" It is as though they had said, "Have you utterly failed to entertain the promise of the Master so often repeated in your ears that he would rise again on the third day after his death? Why do you come to the tomb as mourners to anoint a body which God promised should never see corruption? Return at once and tell his disciples that God's promises are unfailing, and in fulfillment of the promise which you could not believe, Christ has risen from the dead." As far back as his Judean ministry Jesus had promised that he would rise again from the dead. Speaking in picture words he said, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will build it again." They thought he referred to the temple built by Herod; but his disciples after the resurrection interpreted the words to mean his promise to rise from the dead. From that time on to his crucifixion he kept telling his disciples at intervals that he must suffer death and be raised from the dead the third day. But so preoccupied were their minds with the settled conviction that he would restore the kingdom to Israel, and himself reign as the Son of David, they could not take the promise of his resurrection into their consciousness.

His Power

The resurrection of Christ is a symbol of his power and authority. This is the message of the New Testament. Paul especially dwells upon this phase of the resurrection of Christ. "He was crucified in weakness; he was raised in power." The period of Christ's earthly life was the period of his humiliation when, divested of his divine prerogatives, he took upon himself human nature and became obedient to death,—the death of the cross. But in the resurrection he was clothed with the authority which he had temporarily laid aside in taking upon himself the form of a servant and being made in the likeness of men. Therefore all authority in heaven and on earth is his. He is supreme, the one Master, the only Lord, Power, however, must have a medium through which it works. Steam must be compressed in cylinders and expressed in a locomotive in order to function as power; electricity must flow through a motor before it can turn the wheels of a street car; wind will pump the water for the farm only as it is harnessed in the windmill. The power of Christ must find a medium through which it will express itself, and the medium is men. That is the reason for the "Great Commission," as it has been so happily called. "All authority" has no meaning apart from "Go ye into all the world." He is the dynamo; his followers are the motor. The power is exhaustless. It is more than sufficient for all time and for all the world. The dynamo never fails; if the motor fails it is because the connection between it and the dynamo is broken. The living Christ cannot work through a dead church.

The Presence

Both promise and power head up in a personal presence. "Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world." The Old Testament believer thought of God as above and over all. The sovereignty and transcendence of Jehovah appealed to him; but it remained for the New Testament believer to add to this stupendous thought the personal presence and constant companionship of the Spirit of Christ. One of the most difficult things in the Christian life is to cultivate the consciousness of God in human experience. We are conscious of ourselves most of the time, and conscious of others around us some of the time, but scarcely conscious of Christ any of the time. And yet he is with us, according to his promise, always and without break to the end of the age. The Acts of the Apostles is the story of the consciousness of the living Christ in Christian experience for thirty years after the resurrection of Christ. It is a story of cumulative conquest. Whenever the church has lived in the spirit of the Acts of the Apostles it has been invincible. The living Christ is the Christ of today. His promise fulfilled is the guarantee of the fulfillment of every promise; his power demonstrated by his resurrection from the dead is the guarantee for the energizing of every obedient disciple; and his presence manifested in the person of the Holy Spirit is the guarantee of unbroken fellowship with him in bringing the gospel to all mankind.

A Course for High-School Pupils

By F. F. PETERSON

A REQUEST has come that I outline certain courses which have been used in preparing high-school groups for church membership. These suggested have been used over a period of years in various churches, and so at least are practical and possibly useful for other men in dealing with this important group of young life. It is hoped that these conversations may be suggestive rather than used as a manual by our leaders.

The answers to the questions may not agree with all teachers' ideas as to what is either basic or correct. But at least they may prompt someone else to better work in this long neglected department of religious education.

Let it be remembered that the studies are exclusively for high-school groups or the equivalent age in business. Usually the young people have a supper together and after the supper remain at the table, which is convenient for writing, etc. There is a brief devotional service led by one of the group, followed by an hour devoted to questions and answers. It is essentially a conversation method, and the young people discover what they know. Notebooks are used, and each pupil is supplied with a Bible.

CONVERSATION ONE

Theme—Question: Which Is the Best Religion? Scriptures: Rom. 10:11-15

Does every person have a religion? is the initial question to show how universal is religion. Get the class to agree upon an answer and definition of religion.

Name some of the world religions?

Why do all people have some kind of religion? This question should result in an answer showing that all people feel the need of God.

How do they show the need of God?

(Continued on page 189)

The Chimney Corner

Pigs, Pixies and Patrick

ON a certain blustery March evening the Story-teller in her chimney corner was shelling a pod of historical P's about Pigs, Pixies and Patrick, while the rest of us sat watching the blazing logs—although actually our eyes gazed back centuries and centuries ago to a primitive farm in old Britain. "And sure, before ever he was turned sixteen," said she, "didn't some wild Irish pirates swoop down and steal the poor lad from his father's farm? Away they sailed with him to Ireland, where he became naught but a slave for six long uncomfortable years, tending swine in county Antrim."

"Aha!" said we astutely, "so that is why pigs are in evidence on March seventeenth!"

"Arrah! It's fair amazing how wise you are, all of a sudden!" the Story-teller commented gravely, as she poked the embers and laid fresh logs before continuing: "And you shall now be hearing how on many a dewy morning, before ever a soul of all those heathen Irish had opened their eyes to the new day, this lad Patrick would go tiptoeing off to pray to the God of Gods, the very same he had prayed to in old Britain on his father's farm. But tending pigs is not a job for a man full grown, and he was all for 'running away."

"The first time that ever he tried this rashness they straightway fetched him back to his pigs, and kept a paganish eye on him. But at last through many dangers, he made good his escape to the coast, where a vessel was ready to sail. And I must be reminding you that in that year—394 A. D. it was—vessels were not propelled by steam or equipped with wireless. He would be putting out to sea with naught but a sail to trust to, and a puny wooden rudder! Moreover the crew were as heathen as ever they were, and their cargo Irish hounds; fierce, vicious beasts that yelped and snapped and leaped savagely.

"But Patrick had 'a way with him,' and handled those dogs with such a knack that when the vessel reached the coast of France the sailors grew wondrous canny, and avoided touching shore or sighting towns—and all for keeping him on board as long as ever they could. "But the next you are to hear of Patrick he will be living on a little island in the Mediterranean Sea, and a wonderful set of dreams will be bringing him letters night after night—"The voice of the Irish"—much the same as the Apostle Paul once had his call from Macedonia. And ever Patrick's 'voice' kept writing: 'We pray thee, holy youth to come henceforth and walk among us—these very words he quoted in his Confessions years later. So Patrick knew the Lord wanted him to preach the gospel in Ireland, that dark heathen land where he had been so long a captive. And he went."

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

"D'ye mean he was a missionary?" piped up the youngest of us, while She-Who-Is-A-Watchful-Waiter sprang a patient query: "But wherever do the pixies come in? You haven't said a word about them yet!"

"Sure and I'll not be hurried just for the likes of you," we were warned. "But as the story happens, you're right up against the pixies this very minute! For when Patrick set foot in Ireland he found that the Irish were still poor, fearsome pagans, dreading all manner of pesky-tempered spirits, supposed to dwell in earth and heaven, in sea and sky and rivers. Nor was this all! For there were Druid priests who set up huge stones in circles to offset the power of spirits, and believed that there was saving virtue in tall Druid oaks. Such bowings and incantations, such sacrifices as went on to appease the unappeasable spirits! So before ever he won a single soul to love his own Lord Jesus, poor Patrick had to fight the Druid priests anew each day, and sweep the fear of spirit-pixies from the minds of troubled peasants. But he had rare patience, and 'a way with him,' as I have already been telling. Before fifteen years had passed he had founded many a monastery to teach Irish youths to live clean, fearless Christian lives, and year by year he dotted Ireland with glad Christian homes, until today the Irish cannot help but have him for their patron saint.

"So I'm thinking that all of us would do well on March seventeenth to remember Patrick; for sure he was the bravest of heroes, and from his monasteries men went forth to carry Christ for the first time to pagan parts of western Scotland and of northern England, as well as overseas to Italy and up north to Iceland."

A log ripped itself asunder and sent sparks snapping up the chimney. Then the oldest one present made his first remark: "I wonder why the Irish wear the shamrock on St. Patrick's day. Is there a reason?"

"You've said it!" cried the Story-teller, "a reason of all reasons! It is one of a dozen legends of St. Patrick which even Protestants are proud to believe. It would seem that in the midst of Druid priests—jealous and vindictive—the pixie-spirit worshipers were needing something to remind them of the God whom Patrick urged upon them, the God who was three persons. So he pointed to the shamrock, that ever-present bit of clover—and touching each round leaf in turn said: "Now remember—Father, Son and Holy Spirit." And the youngest Christian walking through the fields of Ireland might have felt a twinge of pixie-fears until his eye lighted on the wayside shamrock; then, "God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit," this new devotee would whisper to his heart of hearts, and walk on, comforted. It is a legend we do well to love, that! The wearing of the green, sir, takes on new meanings. But a score of super-miracles laid to Patrick's fame we have small use for: how, for instance, he drove snakes out of Ireland forever and a day; or this one which I'll quote in verse:

"St. Patrick, as in legends told,
The morning being very cold,
In order to assuage the weather
Collected bits of ice together;
Then gently breathed upon the pyre,
When every fragment blazed on fire."

The sputtering sparks sank dreamily to rest into the bed of embers, and the Story-teller looked agnash at the clock on the mantle as she closed her tale. "So he preached, and he preached, and he preached, for going on twenty-nine years, until news of the Lord Jesus spread all over Ireland. Then in the year 461, on

Deeds

*'TIS better you do that kindly deed
You meant to do today,
Better you go to the friend in need
Who's striving along life's way;*

*Perhaps just a friendly smile from you
Will help him to face the strife;
A word of cheer or a welcome hand
May brighten his path of life.*

*Putting off to some distant tomorrow
The words that you meant to say
Won't lighten the burden of sorrow
He's bending beneath today.*

*Reach out and extend the grip of a friend,
'Twill take but a moment or two,
And will help him to know that you understand
The troubles he's fighting through.*

*For when we have followed the winding path
Nearing life's setting sun,
'Twill count for naught, what we meant to do—
Just the kindly deeds we have done.*
—Orrin A. De Mass.

March 17, Patrick died, a missionary who did much to teach the very men who brought our own wild savage ancestors their first news of Christianity."

Unwillingly we trooped off to bed, humming "the wearing of the green," and dreamed gratefully of Pixies, Pigs and—Patrick!

The Young Reserves

The Log of the "Flying Pig"

CHAPTER VI

THIS is really Bill's special chapter, not mine, for he certainly shone as a hero in all our eyes. He modestly declares he was so sleepy at first, and so useless afterwards, that it isn't anything to boast about, so I'll boast for him.

Well, we were all sleeping peacefully when something made Bill wake up, halfway. Through a hazy dream-like feeling, Bill says, he heard Fanny-Anny bray.

"Oh, that mule!" he groaned, and was rolling over to go fast asleep again when he suddenly knew Fanny-Anny was braying in my kitchen!!! And this was quite against all the rules, since Fanny-Anny's stall was purposely far, far away from our quarters. Bill heroically decided to rescue my domain (ahem!); so he stumbled out of his bunk and tiptoed on deck.

"I'll fix you, you meddling Fanny-Anny!" he said, inside himself, and crept along the deck, feeling for the door which leads down two steps into the kitchen. He plunged boldly into the jet blackness, aiming to grab Fanny-Anny around the front knees and drag her up on deck. But he suddenly wished he had brought his flash-light. Just as he planned, he clutched her wildly around her legs and laughed sternly: "Burglar, prepare to meet thy doom!" And then, alas, alas, it suddenly wasn't Fanny-Anny's legs at all, but legs in woolen pantaloons! Also, two big hands gripped his neck and a human voice hissed at him: "So you'll butt in, will you? Well, I'll show you!" Bill says that even then he was sensibly trying to say to himself: "It's just a dream, old Bill, calm down now." But those horrid hands around his throat were far from dream-like, so he began struggling for all he was worth. And Bill really has muscle! But the unknown person had much more, so presently poor Bill had one of my dish-towels bound around his mouth to keep him from making any noise; another dish towel lashed his hands behind his back, and a third towel swaddled his feet. Well!!!

You can just imagine how he felt to have all this happening in a pitch-black room. The unknown person tiptoed around, then there were clinking sounds which Bill supposed was the burglar stealing my alarm clock (which I always forget to take to bed with me) and my Ham Might-Box, (for some little Negro Topsy girl). Presently somebody else joined the unknown person, who whispered: "I've got a kid here all trussed up. Just leave him lie! Now, heft your end of the sack partner, and we'll be off."

Bill heard them tiptoe away, and then another Fanny-Anny bray fell on the night air. "They're making that sound themselves," he decided, "it's a sort of camouflage to cover any noise they may make."

But you mustn't suppose that Bill intended to lie calmly in my kitchen until morning. He isn't that kind of a boy! He curled himself up into a ball and rolled over and over until he came to the steps. If you've never tried it, perhaps you don't know how almost impossible it is to roll upstairs, even with your legs and arms unbound. Anybody can roll downstairs—in fact, it's a little unpleasantly simple at times; but Bill and I have often tried the upward rolling with very little success. But—as Bill says, we had no motive in our former efforts; whereas, now, he wanted to warn father about the burglars who might come back any minute and begin tying up mother or Timothy or me. Again and again he tried to roll "up," but only to roll back, kerpunk!

"Look here!" said Bill to himself, "you've got to do it this time." And he did! He had been afraid that the burglars might have locked the door opening on the deck, or at least closed it, for then he could do nothing, of course. But fortunately it was open; so he rolled on deck, then over and over, making his way in the direction of the cabin where our bunks were. When he reached the door leading down two steps he rolled down them as quietly as he could, so that none of us would hear him.

He rolled over to father's bunk, then reared himself up as well as he could and bumped father's elbow with his head. Father evidently is a very good sleeper, for Bill had to keep on bumping and bumping, and it was a great strain on his back for his arms were tied there, and he could hardly breathe, his head was swaddled so tightly.

Finally father awoke. He says now that when he reached out to see what was bumping him he felt Bill's hair and was sure some stray Newfoundland dog had gotten aboard! Then he ran his hand farther down and discovered cloths with a nose underneath, and was mystified indeed. He reached for his flashlight, and when once he saw Bill's two excited eyes he untied him carefully and heard the whole story on deck. Father and Bill wakened Jake at once, and the three of them sat on deck till morning, but not a burglar was to be seen. So until the rest of us were dressed we had no least idea that anything had happened, as the three "men" had decided not to tell the rest of us, for fear of making us nervous.

But they forgot all about inspecting the kitchen, and when I walked into it to get breakfast, behold, everything was gone! Everything! All the dear little white shelves were absolutely empty.

I supposed it was some joke of Bill's, so I stormed out on deck like a combination "Windmill-Tempest." "Bill Hatha-way," I said severely, "you're simply the biggest nuisance that ever was, and I've a good mind never to give you another meal all the time we're on this ark. Now tell me, where are all the cereals and the milk bottles and the canned goods? Tell me this minute!"

"Dear Peggy-Weggy!" said Bill soothingly, "if I knew where they are I'd bring them back, honest injun! But I haven't a ghost of an idea where any of those things are."

"Nonsense!" I scolded, "you'll drive me to tell father and that's one thing I've never done yet—tell on you! But this isn't like ordinary jokes, you don't want to starve poor little Timothy, do you? And the milk will curdle off the ice—oh come now, Bill, do tell me!"

"Can't!" he answered, and squinted up at the sky whistling.

So I guess no one could blame me for going to father almost in tears: "Daddy," I groaned, "I can't get breakfast because there isn't anything to get. And Bill won't tell me where anything is."

Whereat father squinted up at the sky and whistled; and Jake squinted up at the sky and whistled.

"Oh!" said I to myself, with all my detective instincts aroused, "there is more in this than meets the eye!"

So mother and I had to be told all about Bill's curious night adventure, from the moment when he first heard Fanny-Anny bray to the last bump on father's elbow. A more surprised mother and sister never existed.

"You're a hero!" I said, and kissed Bill approvingly.

"But I didn't do a thing," he sighed, "except, of course, to roll upstairs. If I'd only lain all night in the kitchen then you would have been really thrilled."

But personally I was thrilled enough, anyhow! And a little later, when Fanny-Anny had finally pulled the ark to the nearest village, we bought new provisions, and learned that there was a canal boat reported to be going up and down the canal regularly, full of drinks forbidden by the government since prohibition came into effect; and the owners of that boat were said to have hidden the whiskey and brandy in ordinary tin cans and jars. So no doubt the burglars looted our boat thinking it was that one, little knowing that father is a law-abiding Baptist minister.

So the mystery was solved. Perhaps you will be interested to know what Bill noted in his "Log":

"July 19. Weather fair after storm—Temperature 87°. Ran out of provisions owing to two unknown persons who raided our larder late last night. Rolled upstairs successfully at 2:15 a. m."

And our next adventure was with six silent spooks at midnight!

Young People's Work

Topic for March 27

LESSONS FROM THE FIRST EASTER

By C. W. GILKEY

1. True faith in the resurrection shows itself in courageous loyalty to Christ: The disciples had evidently been completely disheartened by the tragic events of Good Friday. The conversation of the two who were returning to their home in Emmaus (Luke 24:17-21) indicates that their faith in Jesus had been sorely tried if not indeed shaken by his death at the hands of his enemies; and apparently some of them who lived in Galilee had in mind to return to their fishing there (John 21:3). But the events of the first Easter transformed this timid company who had forsaken their Master and fled in terror at the first sign of danger (Mark 14:50), into the boldest company of witnesses and martyrs that Christian history has ever seen (Acts 2:14-36; 4:1-13). They spread abroad rapidly their own faith in Jesus' resurrection and exaltation, not so much by processes of argument as by the contagion of their own triumphant faith and heroic example.

Thus it has been with faith in the resurrection ever since—and so also with faith in immortality. It has been quickened and communicated, not so much by arguments addressed to the intellect, as by a courageous loyalty to Christ on the part of his followers that has spoken direct to the hearts and wills of men. We in our time can best spread the Easter faith abroad, not so much by debates on immortality or discussions of the evidence for the resurrection, as by the sincerity and strength with which we personally bear witness to the presence and power of Christ in our own lives. That was the convincing secret of the spread of Christianity in the first century just when it seemed to be utterly overthrown by the death of its Founder: and from that first Easter until this last, it has been the living and continuous evidence of its reality and power.

2. It was those who were nearest to Christ on earth who knew soonest and most surely of his resurrection: If you will examine carefully the list which Paul gives in 1 Cor. 15:5-7 of the appearances of Christ on and after the first Easter, you will see that, until the exceptional case of Paul himself, they were made to those who had been his near friends and followers before his death. The enemies of Jesus continued for many years to explain away his resurrection (Matt. 28:11-15); and even some of his disciples were for long unconvinced (Matt. 28:17). It was those who had followed him most closely in the old days of earthly fellowship, to whom the new and abiding spiritual relationship (Matt. 28:18-20) was first revealed.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organization, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

So has it always been in Christian history. The disclosures of new truth come first to those who have most fully lived up to the old; and the Lordship of Christ over new areas and levels of life reveals itself earliest to those who have followed him most closely along the old paths. If we would be ready to share in the triumphs which Christ is sure to win in the coming days, and are to have any real part in "crowning him Lord of all," it can only be as we follow him closely and learn to know him better here and now.

3. The highest type of Christian faith depends, not upon argument or outward evidence, but upon personal experience and confidence: This is explicitly stated in John 20:26-29. That surely means that the attitude which best suits with Easter is not that of intellectual argument or debate about the many questions connected both with the resurrection and with immortality which at present we can ask but cannot answer; but rather the loyalty to Christ in heart and will which follows him courageously at any cost through the life that now is, and fears neither the unknown future nor death itself because of its serene faith that there also he will be the Lord who always leadeth us in triumph, and the Friend who never leaves nor forsakes.

Religious Education

A SURVEY OF THE WORK IN THE BLOOMFIELD ASSOCIATION OF ILLINOIS

According to the constitution of the Bloomfield Association, the work of religious education comprises the work of the Sunday schools, the B. Y. P. U.'s and the woman's mission circles.

There are nine counties represented in the territory of the association, and there are forty-three churches. No regular services are being held in five of these churches at the present time.

During the months of November and December, educational rallies were conducted in the churches. Thirty rallies were conducted in a period of forty days, a rally being held each day of the week except Saturday. A team of three or four people, representing the Sunday schools, the B. Y. P. U.'s and the mission circles, conducted conferences in the interest of these organizations. Eighty conferences were conducted, and also fifteen children's hours. Sixteen different people assisted in the rallies. The executive secretary had general charge, and the director of the state department of religious education, Rev. L. H. Koehler, assisted in thirteen of the rallies. Local men and women in the association with special qualifications gave of their time to make the rallies a success. More than 3000 people were addressed. The members of the rally teams traveled 2807 miles.

There are thirty-seven Sunday schools in the association, with about 417 officers and teachers. Several of the schools are seeking to become standard schools. I regret that there are but five teacher training classes to report. In this day when training is of such vast importance, we must not be satisfied until we have made adequate provision for the training of our officers and teachers and of those who will be our officers and teachers of tomorrow. Many helpful plans were discussed in the conference, and we have already begun to realize results from these plans.

There are twenty-three senior B. Y. P. U.'s in the association. Practically all of the unions are doing well in their Sunday evening meetings and in attendance. We have endeavored to interest our young people in the Baptist trained leaders' course. Several of the unions have planned to take up the study of this course. By correspondence and personal interviews we keep in touch with our volunteers for Christian service and those we know to be interested. The young people are planning for large delegations to Cincinnati to the B. Y. P. U. of A. convention, and to the summer assembly at Alton. We have eight junior B. Y. P. U.'s, one being organized at the time of the rallies. The drill and memory work in some of the unions can hardly be surpassed.

There are twenty-nine woman's mission circles, five of which were organized as a result of the rallies. The women are taking a great interest in the state reading contest. We have nine chapters of the World Wide Guild. Three were organized as a result of the rallies. There are three organizations of the Children's World Crusade.

During the holidays an educational rally of the association was held at the First Church of Danville. There was a splendid program on different phases of religious education. We were grateful to have with us Dr. White of the B. Y. P. U., who brought to our young people a helpful message on "The Challenge to Youth."

If the church members of this and of the next generation are to be efficient in kingdom service the church must provide an adequate program of religious education.

BESSIE WINCHESTER.

Our Own Folks

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

The Problem of the "South End"

The South End of Boston has long been a religious problem—chiefly on the score of its being over-churched, yet needing more churches. That paradoxical statement has in it so much truth that the truth in it has brought about a notable recent conference. It was a union gathering of evangelical churches in that section of the city.

In its day—that is, when the whole South End was filled with families, the most of them owning their own homes—it was in every way an impressive and attractive urban section, as much so as could be found anywhere. Parks dotted it. Homes of uniform yet varied architecture lined the inviting street. Noble trees towered everywhere. Stately and spacious meeting-houses rose at the strategic locations. What subtle thing is it that so completely changes a whole section when it loses its stability and becomes transient? Whatever it is, it is unmistakable. Then comes the life and death struggle of the churches. The whole section, civic and ecclesiastic, wears the aspect of decayed respectability, yet swarms with people.

The Survey of the Section

After we had exaggerated the Jews and the Roman Catholics, and other supposedly outside camps, our thorough survey disclosed fifty per cent of Protestant population. Then came an impulse to consider broadly the problem and to face the obligation to solve it. The conference was to do this and to attempt to formulate something. All the old meeting-houses in this section are fine and large. The meeting was in one of the largest—the Union Congregational on Columbus Avenue. Dr. De Blois presided. Dr. Guthrie, pastor of Union Church, Judge Robert F. Raymond of the church federation committee, and Rev. W. Harry Freda, Pastor of the Clarendon Street Church, were the speakers. The speeches favored consolidation, with strong churches well distributed, ably manned and sufficiently endowed to enable them, by an aggressive and elastic service, to make a vital impression upon constantly changing population.

Dr. Peterson and a Baptist Workers' Union

Our state leader in Sunday-school efficiency and religious education has long wanted to lengthen his arm so as to reach all of his outlying constituency. When he called a general convention of Sunday-school workers from the four Boston associations and nearly 200 responded in the Clarendon Street Church, he soon found that his matured plan was met by a sort of pent-up enthusiasm and readiness to co-operate. It was a plan of work, hard work, without ornamental frills or recreation—serious business for the kingdom. It was so understood and fully adopted. It is to cover Sunday, week-day and vacation, and to meet all the inevitable questions of real religious training.

This new organization is welcomed and already is under way, and an early meeting in March will complete the preliminaries and clear the deck for action. Dr. W. Quay Rosselle gave an address that helped push the new craft into the stream. Dr. Peterson and a splendid team of Sunday-school workers will do the rest.

A Brace of Ministers' Meetings

The first one was addressed, entertained and electrified by Hon. Clinton U. Howard of Rochester. He is a new one in these parts, but, men, brethren, fathers and gentle readers, was it ever so seen and heard in Israel? He was speaking on some forward-looking theme, but his tendency was downward on the almost lifeless carcass of John Barleycorn. Mr. Howard looks like an inoffensive little dominie, but he is so possessed by his subject and by an irrepressible spirit of fun that he does with you as he lists. His eye sparkles and snaps; his facts and figures easily "take the road"; then he goes jolly-ly into rhyme. It is "nip and tuck" between truth and poetry, first one ahead then another; but the sum total of it all was a tremendous push toward the sober, clean and all-conquering life.

The other meeting gave us Dr. W. Quay Rosselle and Dr. C. H. Day, answering the question, "How do I prepare my sermons?" That old conundrum every minister answers for himself; but Dr. Rosselle and Dr. Day really answered it for all of us. Dr. Arbuckle of Newton Center, called up from the floor, packed into five minutes a deal of substance and spirit, clinching a discussion of great practical value. The ministers' conference is going with unusual strength.

A Ninetieth Birthday

Your readers in the Middle West especially will hear with interest that Deacon E. Nelson Blake of Arlington, Mass., has just entered the "nineties." His mental clarity and stability are surprising, though the former physical alertness hardly keeps pace. He began by running across the street after some objective when only nine months old; so it is not surprising that ever since, and even at ninety, he is still pursuing. Mr. Blake has been the soul of many large Baptist enterprises in his day, and a tower of strength in every church that claimed him. Chicago had his strong years. Arlington has the ripening and mellowing time just before the harvest.

Some Happenings Hereabouts

Of course, calls have the "call." It was intimated that some were on the way, and they have arrived. Rev. W. D. Goble of Fitchburg is called to First Church, Cambridge to succeed Dr. Powell, now of Kalamazoo. The church strongly hopes for an acceptance.

The First Church, Lynn, calls Rev. Eben F. Francis of Medford, brother of Dr. James A. Francis of Los Angeles. There are four Baptist dominies in that immediate family. That is a way they have in Nova Scotia.

Dr. Frederick B. Greul has just closed his five months' acting-pastorship at First Church, Providence. Results show that his service has been characteristic. One thing after another that had lapsed has been brought back—the girls' guild, the Sunday night service, the Y. P. S. C. E., the mid-week prayer service in goodly strength, the evangelistic note in the messages and many baptisms; finally, the adoption of a new and broader church activity that is to require a pastor of administrative ability, and Sunday morning preaching services by men of outstanding reputation from different sections and denominations. Beginning with March, Pres. W. H. P. Faunce preaches for a month, then comes Dr. Joseph C. Robbins in April, and Dr. R. S. MacArthur in May. It is an interesting revival of a kind of animation that well befits the noble old church with its model colonial meeting-house.

Sun and Shade

Dr. Nelson S. Burbank, the veteran pastor of Revere has been celebrating his thirtieth anniversary. His entire church and the whole city helped him to do it. Of course our best voices from neighboring churches, cities, and from our state headquarters did full justice to the modest strength and worth of Pastor Burbank. It is a beautiful thing to see a man hold on and grow on, quietly becoming a sort of bishop in the city. It is all normal, legitimate, self-respecting, for both pastor and church; nothing fictitious or frothy every sought after—only gospel grace and growth; and now the whole city responds to the solidity of the impression. Such a celebration brings with it a rare article of sunshine.

The resignation of Dr. Archibald at Brookline, though not altogether a surprise, is disappointing to all of us. Hopes were high until it became certain that in order to recover his strength entirely, he must leave our too trying coast. That he will do, and we are confident that time and a more favorable environment for health will soon bring him back to the high service of which he has proved himself capable.

Gipsy Smith in Newark, N. J.

By W. J. DAWSON

It was a great joy to me to welcome my old friend Gipsy Smith in Newark. It is nearly eighteen years since first we met at the meetings of the Free Church Council at Brighton. The years have not staled his infinite variety nor abated his natural force. He must have some Gipsy secret of immortal youth, for he looks no older than in the days when he conducted his memorable mission at Highbury Quadrant. He speaks indeed with increased fire and force, is even more dramatic, and his astonishing hold over an audience is undiminished.

Newark is a difficult city for an evangelistic campaign. Almost three-fourths of its population is foreign-born. The Protestant churches are strong, as becomes a city founded by the immediate children of Puritanism, but they do not dominate the city. They have a large membership, but the congregations are not correspondingly large. In recent years the Sunday opening of all theatres and picture houses has done a good deal to diminish Sunday evening congregations. There must also be noted an aversion to evangelism, caused by the vulgarization of evangelism by many of its more recent exponents. It has been associated with so much debasement of language, so much unscrupulousness in method and appeal, and so much avarice on the part of the evangelist, that to most thoughtful Christians it has become abhorrent. To persuade these people that Gipsy Smith was different, that he was absolutely sincere, simple, and unselfish, did not prove an easy matter. However, it has been accomplished. In three weeks he has endeared himself to the city; and neither in the press or pulpit, nor in private conversations so far as one person may report them, have I heard one word of unkind criticism. I may say confidently that he has won the hearts of the people and their honest admiration as no evangelist has even done before.

The services have been held in the armory, which has accommodation for 7000 persons. It is not conveniently situated, and some doubts were expressed whether it could be filled. The cost of the campaign, including the seating of the armory for worship, printing and publicity, was estimated at $20,000. In the budget no remuneration for the evangelist was included. This was left to a free-will offering on the last days of the campaign. At the close of the second week the $20,000 needed for campaign expenses was raised by collections, so that all public collections ceased with the third week. The first congregation assembled in the armory was about 5000. Since that day the place has been crowded. Again and again the doors have been closed before the advertised time of service, and overflow meetings have been necessary. At all these meetings cards have been distributed, calling for professions of discipleship or reconsecration. About 10,000 cards have been signed. These cards were at once distributed among the churches, and the rule was laid down that the signer of such a card should be personally visited within twenty-four hours. This has been done in most cases, and thus the results have been carefully conserved.

Those who have heard him do not need any description of Gipsy Smith's preaching. I have not the least hesitation in saying that I think him the most popular and in many respects the greatest preacher of this generation. Since the days when I first heard him his range of power has greatly increased. He is as pictorial as ever, as dramatic and intense, as direct and simple, but one feels the authority of a widened experience. Many have remarked upon the exquisite purity of his diction, and his complete mastery of the noblest language. And his power of poetic imagination is as great as ever. Without apparent effort and with no sense of violent contrast he passes from the homeliest forms of speech to passages of description worthy of the greatest poet. He has had little to say about doctrines. He has never spoken harshly or censoriously of those whose opinions differ from his own. He has said very plain things in very unmistakable language, but always in a spirit of love. I think the real secret of his power, apart from all spiritual qualities, is that he has the genuine to be loved. He establishes a personal relation between himself and his hearers which is warmly affectionate, and men's hearts go out after him.

His power over a great assembly is a remarkable study. He speaks as a man entirely at his ease, confident of himself. There is something inimitably boyish in the way in which he casts himself upon the frank good will of his audience, laughing with them, singing to them, requesting their approval, until he has kindled them into good humor, and worked them into a state of mind when his serious message can take hold upon them. Certainly no public speaker I have ever heard has had such a complete understanding of the psychology of a crowd. He plays upon them as a master musician plays upon an instrument. And he knows how to quiet them as well as to arouse them. To a shouting Methodist who interrupted him he said one night, "You said 'Amen' in the wrong place that time, brother," and he heard no more of him. To another of the same order, he said, "Be intelligent. That 'Amen' wasn't intelligent." Yet even his rebukes are given with such good humor that only a stupid person could be offended by them.

It is too early to speak of the results of the mission, but some results are already apparent. It has replaced apathy with enthusiasm and has reasserted the power of the pulpit in the community. No audiences so vast or so deeply interested have ever been gathered in Newark. Yet they have come for what, after all, is the simplest preaching of the gospel. How deep and widespread has been the quickening of the city cannot be estimated; but no one can doubt that the influence of Gipsy Smith's preaching will long abide as an inspiration and an impulse in multitudes of hearts and lives.

The Jubilee Gifts and Celebration

A standard periodical said: "In Japan everybody smiles as a matter of mere politeness. In China many smile from good nature and good feeling. In India nobody smiles, life is too hard, and man too insignificant." To help India to learn how to smile impelled the New England District to make its Jubilee gift a hospital for women and children. It will be erected at Mahbubnagar, South India. New England District, home of the original foreign society of Baptist women, celebrates most fittingly in Boston, April 26 to 29.

The Empire State of New York, which is a district in itself, erects a new building for the Kemendine school for girls in the old historic city of Rangoon. New York District has selected Rochester for its place of celebration, and the time is May 3 and 4.

The East Central District is invited by Cleveland to hold its celebration there. The dates are May 5 and 6. This district supplies a girls' high school building in the city of Ningpo, China.

The Atlantic District accepted Washington's call, and Atlantic's investment is a high school and assembly hall for Burman girls at Mandalay, Burma.

Central District, headquarters of the old society of the West, would surely celebrate in America's second city, Chicago. The dates are May 17 to 20. This district builds a high school and normal school for girls in Swatow, South China.

Northwestern District, contributes a Jubilee settlement house for Japanese girls where the young women in industry may find quarters and provision for their moral and spiritual well being. The settlement house will be in Tokyo or Osaka. The celebration is May 24 to 27, in Minneapolis.

Columbia River District will hold its Jubilee at Seattle, Wash., May 31 to June 3. Its gift is the erection of the first high school for girls in Bengal-Orissa, town of Midnapore, North India.

South Pacific celebrates at Oakland, Cal., June 7 to 10. Its gift is a missionaries' residence, combined with a Christian center in Chengtu, West China.

Rocky Mountain District turns its sympathies to Africa, where will be built a homelike cottage for our missionaries at Banza Manteka. The district Jubilee will be celebrated in Denver June 14 to 17.

West Central and the Northern Baptist Convention will celebrate at Des Moines, Iowa, June 21, 22, and on. This district erects a hospital at some point in the great Brahmaputra Valley, Assam.

Each district will be visited by the guests from the far East and the national officers. The result should be a wonderful stimulation of interest in the great constructive program of the Baptist Woman's Foreign Society.

Things in New York

By FRANK M. GOODCHILD
Luncheon to Dr. Brooks

We have been eating to the glory of God several times lately. Whenever any notable comes to New York we give him a dinner, and whenever one of our ministerial brethren leaves us we give him a luncheon. We welcome the coming guest and speed the parting guest by eating with them. "One touch of luncheon makes the ends of the earth akin."

It was a notable luncheon when Arther Brooks left us. It was held at the Masonic Club. Most of the brethren of the city and vicinity were there, for everybody liked Brooks, and all were sorry to see him go. He went from the associate pastorship with George Caleb Moor at Madison Avenue to the pastorate of Dudley Street in Roxbury, Boston. We shall miss him. But we shall rejoice in the good work he will do in Boston. His versatile powers will ensure him success there.

The Social Union

The social union has Arthur E. Bestor for its president now. He is at the head of the original Chataqua. The last meeting of the social union at the Hotel Astor brought together a representative company. It was a welcome to the women's missionary societies, home and foreign. Mrs. John Nuveen and Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery were the speakers. Among those at the guests' table was the eminent English Baptist T. S. Penny, who has been with us lately, conferring with the officers of our Home and Foreign societies concerning our sharing with the British brethren in the support, at least temporarily, of certain parts of their work in the West Indies and in Africa. Mr. Penny spoke briefly and delightfully about his errand. Both Mrs. Nuveen and Mrs. Montgomery spoke with their usual power, which is saying a great deal.

An air of hopefulness prevailed. There were reasons for it outside of the dinner. But, then, the dinner helped. When the eating is in so good a cause we may say, "Let us eat and drink, and pessimism will die."

The next meeting of the social union will be April 19. The subject will be "The Ministry." Both ends of the ministerial line will be looked to, recruiting the young and maintaining the aged and disabled. The speakers will be Dr. Charles W. Gilkey and Arthur M. Harris. We understand this is Dr. Gilkey's last appearance before he sails abroad. Mr. Harris is one of our successful bankers, and has just retired from business and given himself to the cause of the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board, for which he labors without money and without price.

Southern New York Association

The minutes of the Southern New York Association are just out, giving the reports made by the churches up to last October. They are ahead of the usual time, thanks to the diligence of the new clerk, Mr. Charles M. Wheeler of Mariners' Harbor, Staten Island.

This association includes the churches of Manhattan and the Bronx, and Richmond Borough, which is Staten Island, and also the strong suburban churches in Yonkers, Mount Vernon, White Plains, Tarrytown, Port Chester, New Rochelle. There are fifty-nine churches in the association. There were 1076 baptisms last year. The total membership is 27,941. Three years ago there were reported 29,491. No doubt the decrease is due to some diligent cleaning up of the membership lists. Our numbers would be increased by several thousands if the Baptists from other places who are living in New York would bring their letters. Of course they are not expecting to stay in New York. But some have been here as long as twenty years and are still uncertain about staying. These unattached Baptists in the metropolis are at once the hope and the despair of the pastors.

are large and enthusiastic. New members are being received, buildings that have been closed for a long time have been opened and regular services established. At the central church a prosperous men's brotherhood has been organized. The splendid work of the pastor has been enforced and extended by the able services of Evangelist S. A. Evans, who has conducted special meetings on different parts of the field, and whose earnest and faithful preaching, together with the old-time visitation, has resulted for good to the entire community.

AT THE FIRST CHURCH, SPRINGVALE, Pastor H. H. Upton has had baptisms two successive Sunday evenings. There is a marked increase of interest in the church. Men are attending the services who have not gone to church for years. The pastor's preaching is not only original in its style, but is intensely vital and immensely practical. The Sunday school is forging ahead, and the future is full of hope for permanent progress.

REV. C. C. KOCH of the Springvale Free Baptist Church is doing good work not only in the village, but also at Shapleigh and South Acton, where, with untiring vigor and faithfulness, he preaches from week to week. The two churches of Springvale are united in preparatory services for the coming of Evangelist Milton S. Rees the latter part of March. Union meetings are being held during the week and on Sunday evenings. Pastors Koch and Upton make a strong team, and together they are doing great work in the community.

THE INTEREST CONTINUES good at the First Church, Sanford. Twenty-nine have recently been received into membership, twenty of whom were baptized at one time. There is a growing interest in the preaching services, and the prayer meeting is uplifting and refreshing, large numbers taking part. The attendance of the Sunday school is larger than usual and the teachers are doing excellent work. Payments on pledges to the New World Movement are coming in promptly and the church is responding to the calls for relief work. The pastor's salary has again been increased and good work is being done all along the line.

REV. ROY MERTON TRAFTON, pastor of the First Church, Bluehill, has accepted the call to the Essex Street Church, Bangor, and will begin his work there on April 3.

THE REDEDICATION of the Baptist meeting-house in South Berwick took place on Feb. 16. Pres. Clifton D. Gray of Bates College delivered the sermon. It was a timely and scholarly presentation of the new church. The church building has been completely remodeled. The local pastors of the Congregational, Methodist and Episcopal churches assisted at the services. A banquet was served at the evening hour. The church looks out upon its future with faith and courage. The attendance at all services is growing steadily.

MASSACHUSETTS

REV. G. L. MICHELSON of West Acton has received a call to the Calvary Church, Salem.

REV. LUTHER E. STILES has resigned at Manchaug, having accepted a call to Chiscopee, at which place he will begin work on April 1.

AT THE EAST CHURCH, LYNN, Dr. A. E. Harriman is preaching on Sunday mornings a series of pre-Easter sermons on

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

DR. WILLIAM A. NEWCOMBE, for thirty years the honored pastor of the church in Thomaston, and a leader in the denomination in the state, died in that town on Friday, Feb. 18, at the age of seventy-one. Born in St. Martins, N. S., the son of Rev. James Newcombe, he was educated at Acadia College and Newton Theological Institution. Ordained in Hallowell in 1875, he served with great success three years in Hallowell, six years in South Berwick and thirty years in Thomaston. Of unusual mental gifts, always a student, most at home with the great things of religion and life, his sermons had the attraction of truth presented in its power and beauty. Dr. Newcombe is survived by his second wife, who was Miss Ida M. Watts of Thomaston, and by five sons: Arthur W. of Brooklyn, Fred W. of St. Paul, Geo. S. of Wilmington, Del., Alfred W. of Galesburg, Ill., and Edward W. of New York. The funeral was at the Thomaston Church and was conducted by Rev. L. D. Evans of Camden and Rev. C. W. Turner of Warren.

A SUCCESSFUL MEETING of Bowdoinham Association was held in the People's Church, Bath, Feb. 24, where the pastorate of Rev. L. W. West is opening with much promise. The strong churches of the association—Bath First, Bath Corliss Street, Brunswick, Topsham and Freeport—gave inspiring reports of progress. The church at West Harpswell, under the lead of Pastor Kelley, is prospering. One-third of its resident membership was present, asking admission to the association and that the next meeting be at Harpswell. Inevitably both requests were granted. Moderator G. F. Finnie presided. Dr. G. H. Hamlen, Rev. J. C. MacDonald, Rev. H. H. Bishop, Mrs. E. C. Whittemore, Rev. G. F. Finnie, Rev. E. M. Holman, Pres. C. D. Gray and Dr. E. C. Whittemore had part in the program of what was considered one of the best meetings in years.

THE ASSOCIATION RALLIES arranged by the Board of Promotion and the committee on evangelism are doing much to keep the spirit of the churches level with the great missionary opportunity.

THE UNITED BAPTIST CHURCH, Lewiston, Rev. George F. Finnie, pastor, attributes much of its present success, spirit and promise to the share that it had in the New World Movement. It made a notable success in working the family group plan. A contribution of $982 for famine relief in China has just been made. Over 1000 are now enrolled in the Sunday school. The church has recently voted to erect a new meeting-house at a cost of $150,000 to care for the work that has outgrown the present edifice.

AFTER A PASTORATE of four years, Rev. Roy M. Trafton has resigned the pulpit of the Bluehill Church to accept a call to the Essex Street Church of Bangor. Bluehill is a fine opening for some ambitious young pastor. The committee would be pleased to correspond with pastors desiring to make a change. Address all letters to Mr. W. H. Osgood, Bluehill, Me.

REV. E. P. MOULTON, who became pastor of the Blaisdell Memorial Church, Waterboro, early in November, is happy in his new field. Splendid progress is being made. Sunday audiences are more than doubled. A room has been fitted up for a men's class. A special feature of interest and one which promises large returns to the church and the community is the organization of a boys' club, under the leadership of former Pastor Stewart, who was obliged to give up regular pastoral duties for a time on account of nervous strain. He is doing fine work with the boys and is highly appreciated.

THE CHURCH AT BUXTON, Rev. C. W. Wilson, pastor, is another rural church which has taken on a new lease of life under efficient leadership. On this field a great work is being done. Audiences

"The Seven Words from the Cross," and in the evenings, running through July, a series of addresses on "Gospel Lessons from Biography." The men and women chosen cover a wide range.

CONNECTICUT

REV. JAMES MCGEE, pastor of Calvary Church, New Haven, was the preacher at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Feb. 13.

THE WORK OF THE FIRST CHURCH, BRIDGEPORT, Rev. D. B. MacQueen, pastor, is marked by an intense interest in all departments. A strong promotion committee is pushing a comprehensive denominational program. A "father and son" banquet was held on Feb. 22. The speaker was Dr. Rolvix Harlan of New York. Subject: "Washington, Lincoln and Our Fathers."

DELAWARE

THE BETHANY CHURCH, WILMINGTON, is in a constant state of revival without extra meetings and outside help. Large congregations are the rule. On Feb. 13, "Bethany Hymn," written by the pastor, Dr. C. C. Earle, was dedicated.

NEW YORK

Summer Assembly for Pastors and Wives

Under Baptist auspices there will be a summer assembly for pastors and their wives at Keuka College, from Monday till Saturday, Aug. 8 to 13. The rates are $5 for the entire assembly from Monday night, including supper, till after breakfast Saturday morning. Delegates will bring their own sheets, pillow-cases and towels.

The assembly is conducted by the state convention, jointly with the state pastors' conference, the state promotion board, the metropolitan promotion board and the religious education commission of the convention.

The forenoons will be given up to classes in Bible exposition, evangelism, religious education, pulpit story-telling, pastoral experience, and devotional leadership, all in the light of the New World Movement. The entire afternoon is given up to recreation, which will be directed by a qualified leader. Each evening there will be an inspirational lecture. The program committee is completing plans in detail now. Watch for later announcements. There will be features for both rural and city and town pastors. There will be special features for pastors' wives, under the general leadership of Mrs. Martin of Ithaca and Mrs. F. W. Tomlinson of Binghamton.

The capacity of the buildings is about 200. But there are ample camping facilities for those who wish to bring tents, and several cottages are available for early applicants. There will be no registration or fees other than the $5 for room and board. Applications should be made at once to Dr. A. H. Norton, Keuka Park, N. Y.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE CHURCH BUILDING AT MIDWAY has been renewed and beautified. Re-opening services were held on Feb. 13, with Rev. W. C. Chappell as the speaker. A week of special prayer was followed by evangelistic services conducted by the pastor Rev. J. R. Routledge, and Rev. J. S. Jewell of Carnegie. The meetings continued through March 6.

AT SEWICKLEY, Rev. J. S. Stone, pastor, the pipe organ has been put in first-class condition, and two new furnaces have been installed. A class of ten is in training for church membership.

THE SPRING MEETING of the Bible School Convention will be held at the Homewood Church March 25. Every pastor should attend.

REV. EUGENE NEUBAUER has accepted a call to the Elizabeth Church and already entered upon his work there.

REV. J. C. LONGANECKER has resigned at Donora to become the missionary pastor of the Beaver Association.

REV. A. STRAPON, pastor of the Slovak Church at Monaca was recently given a leave of absence in order that he might return to Czecho-Slovakia to visit his mother who has since died. The church which consists of eight families is in charge of a supply and services, especially the Sunday school, are well attended. Mr. Strapon has been in charge of this church since his ordination on Oct. 24, 1920.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE GRACE CHURCH, CENTER VALLEY, is rejoicing in the work of its Bible school, which is one of the most active schools in that section of Pennsylvania.

REV. WALTER CHRZANOWSKI, in charge of the Polish work in Chester, reports good progress. Four were baptized recently. The baptism of another was postponed because the wife of the candidate appeared at the church with stones in her pockets and threatened to kill her husband and the pastor if the baptism proceeded.

FIFTEEN YOUNG PEOPLE professed conversion as a result of recent evangelistic services held in the church at Dundaff, Rev. Wm. H. H. Sharp, pastor.

THE BETHEL CHURCH B. Y. P. U., Scranton, recently captured the banner in an associational young people's rally.

PASTORAL CHANGES: Rev. H. S. Hamann has resigned at Saltillo; Rev. W. A. Owen began his work at Hazleton Feb. 1; Rev. A. K. Stokebrand opened his ministry at Pottsville Feb. 13; Rev. T. L. Justice has accepted the call of a southern church and left East Brandywine Feb. 13; Rev. Arthur Stewart Wahl closed his work at Canton Feb. 20 to become state evangelist for Vermont; Rev. C. M. D'Arcy brought his pastorate at Lebanon to a close Feb. 27 to go to Ogunquit, Me.; Rev. Leslie E. Gould, who has been working with Evangelist Ernest G. Crabill as chorister and director of prayer meeting, begins his pastorate at Hallstead about March 1; Rev. C. C. Cox becomes pastor at York April 1; Rev. Louis Shelley comes from Triangle, N. Y., as pastor of the Gelatt, Lake View and Jackson churches; Rev. R. M. Hunsicker has presented his resignation to the New Britain Church, to take effect April 1.

Mississippi Valley

MICHIGAN

THE BETHANY CHURCH OF PONTIAC, Rev. Thomas Marsh, pastor, has organized its forces in an efficient manner. The various men's societies are all united in one big Brotherhood which, without any red tape, takes in every man who is in any way connected with any department of the church work. This Brotherhood meets on the first Tuesday of each month for a supper, followed by an educational and inspirational program. The women's and the young people's work is similarly organized. Missionary education is pushed in the various departments through the board of missions, which is composed of one representative from each organization. It is a significant fact that while Pontiac is passing through the worst trade depression in years, fully half of the men in Bethany Church being out of work, all local expenses have been met ($5500 for church and Sunday school), the building fund has been kept up, and $5000 has been contributed to the New World Movement. Congregations are large and conversions frequent.

AT MAYVILLE, Pastor C. R. Jones has received into the church by baptism fifteen. Forty-two professed conversion in the union services, several of whom will affiliate with other churches.

THE ENROLMENT OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL of the First Church, Marshall, was 168 on Nov. 1 and on Feb. 6 it passed the 330 mark. The average for the last few weeks has been 210. It is expected that a large group from the school will unite with the church on Easter.

PASTOR T. H. SHINN has baptized five into the North Branch Church, and Rev. S. J. Hall has received several by baptism into the Leslie Church.

THE GRANT COMMUNITY CHURCH has added forty-four members during the past year. The Sunday-school is in splendid condition. Classes in religious education are held for old and young. All bills have been met and there is a balance on hand.

New German Church at Lansing

Delegates of the First and Hillsdale Avenue churches of Lansing, with delegates from six German churches of Michigan—First Church, Eben-Ezer Church and Burns Avenue Church, Detroit, Gladwin, Benton Harbor and St. Joseph—met with the newly organized German Church of Lansing on Jan. 27 for the purpose of recognizing that church. We also had the pleasure of the presence of Dr. W. T. Roberts of Lansing. Rev. C. A. Daniel was chosen moderator of the council and Rev. Thos. Stoeri, clerk.

This newly organized church is the result of the missionary labors of the First German-American Church of Detroit, which, under the leadership of its energetic pastor, Rev. C. A. Daniel, had conducted a mission there. This noble work was made impossible when the passions of war flared beyond reason. But the missionary zeal of the mother church did not allow it to give up the effort. As soon as circumstances permitted, it again took up the work energetically and with the help of the German Baptist home missionary board located Rev. Wm. Ritzmann as missionary on this field. He received twenty-two new members into the church, mostly through baptism. At the beginning of the new year they organized with a membership of sixty-two. With some outside help, especially from the mother church and the home missionary board of the German Baptists of America, they purchased three lots in a favorable locality, bought a small church building, moved it to these lots and rebuilt it, so that they now have a suitable church home. The local members themselves have contributed liberally toward the needs of the field. The council unanimously declared itself in favor of recognizing this new church as a member of our denominational body.

Therefore, on the evening of Jan. 27, the usual recognition services were held. Rev. C. A. Daniel acting as chairman. Rev. J. G. Draewel, pastor of the Eben-Ezer Church of Detroit, preached the sermon; Rev. C. A. Daniel led in prayer; Rev. J. Herman, pastor of the Benton Harbor Church, gave the charge to the church, and Rev. Benj. Graf, pastor of the Burns Avenue Church, welcomed the new member into our ranks and extended the hand of fellowship.

Rev. THOS. STOERI, Clerk.
St. Joseph, Mich.

KANSAS

SOME FINE MEETINGS are being held in the state at this time. Pastor W. G. Pumphrey of Meade held a meeting at South Concord, in Ford County, resulting in sixty-two conversions, and on Feb. 13 the people of this community went to Meade, bringing their dinners, and spent the day with the church there. It was estimated that nearly 300 were present. During the day thirty-nine of the converts were baptized.

Rev. T. J. BROWN of Missouri City was recently called to the church at Lenexa, south of Kansas City. This work had been practically abandoned, but the response at present is encouraging and the prospects are good for building the work up to a good standard.

Rev. B. R. HARRIS, a student at the Kansas City Seminary has been called to the pastorate of the Eastern Church, west of Atchison, and is encouraged with the outlook. This is one of the older churches in the Missouri River Association.

MR. AND MRS. IMRIE, singing evangelists from Ekron, Ky., assisted Pastor W. E. Dederick of Frederick in a successful meeting recently.

Rev. W. W. CARPENTER of Clay Center held a meeting at Formosa resulting in more than fifty conversions. It was a union meeting of all the evangelical churches. Mr. Carpenter conducted a meeting in his own church at Clay Center during February. The last information was that there had been seventeen conversions.

PASTOR J. E. WOODS of Alta Vista is rejoicing over the fine meeting held in his church a short time ago. He was assisted by Pastor H. W. Cole of Hutchinson. There were a goodly number of conversions, and twenty-six came into the church, most of them by baptism.

PASTOR A. E. MARTIN of Hiawatha and his people are remodeling their church building. Basement rooms are being built under the brick structure, and other needed improvements are being made, costing nearly $2000.

Rev. CLAUDE J. SPIERS, associational evangelist for the Arkansas Valley Association, has just closed a splendid meeting at Lewis. The church was badly run down and without leadership. The meeting resulted in several professions and restorations. The church was greatly quickened, and it is now ready for a pastor and forward work.

PASTOR PAUL J. GATES of Garden City is rejoicing in the good results of the meeting in which he was assisted by Evangelist Martin and wife.

PASTOR J. E. NAYLOR of Wamego was assisted by his father, J. Naylor, in special meetings a short time ago, resulting in twenty-five additions to the church and strengthening of the work.

Rev. R. W. VARNELL has been called to the church at Edna and is now getting settled on the field.

Rev. A. E. WENDT, a student of the Kansas City Seminary, is the new pastor of the church at Wathena. A splendid revival was conducted recently which resulted in fifty additions to the church.

Rev. C. W. SAFFORD of Elkhart is leading the church in a forward work. The building has been moved upon the basement recently constructed, which will greatly increase the facilities for Sunday school work.

PASTOR J. P. HENSON of Girard has been assisted in special meetings by Associational Missionary Walter E. Tanner. There were a goodly number of professions and the church was strengthened.

Rev. C. C. PITTS is the new pastor of the Pleasant Valley Church, southwest from Chanute. A special meeting was recently held in which ten were added to the church.

PASTOR B. W. WISEMAN of Iola led his forces in a revival campaign a short time ago in which thirty-two professed faith in Christ.

Rev. GUY H. WIMMER, a student at Ottawa University, has been called to the pastorate of the North Ottawa Church. He had been supplying the church for some time. The outlook is good.

Rev. HORACE GOODIN, until recently pastor in Western Washington, has been called to the pastorate of the church at Holton and enters the work at once.

Rev. C. W. FISHER of Wellsville conducted a special meeting with the New Hope Church, in the country near by, resulting in about thirty professions and twenty-three additions to the church.

Rev. S. L. BOWERMAN of the First Church, Kansas City, has conducted a successful meeting with his church since the first of the year. The church was strengthened in every department.

THREE OF THE REGIONAL MISSIONARY conferences in the state have been held, viz., at Kansas City, Manhattan and Salina. The speakers were Dr. J. C. Robbins, foreign secretary, Rev. A. A. Forshee of the Board of Promotion, Mrs. R. A. Hilton of Chicago, representing the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, and Rev. A. C. Bowers of Assam. The attendance was fair at Kansas City and Manhattan and very good at Salina.

Rev. AND Mrs. J. M. POWELL of Edgerton Place Church, Kansas City, were called to Colorado Jan. 30 for the funeral of Jno. Lovelace, father of Mrs. Powell, who was killed in an automobile accident. They have the sympathy of their many friends.

Rev. H. H. PLANCK is encouraged with the work at Washington. This is one of the struggling churches in a county seat town, but the outlook is brightening.

Rev. H. G. WEIR, the new pastor at Marysville, is getting settled on the field now. This church has greater strength now than for several years. It has received a number of families from the Marshall Center Church.

Rev. W. D. BOLTON of Sabetha is finding a forward movement in the work there. The Sunday school is growing and a new B. Y. P. U. was recently organized.

THE TOPEKA COMMUNITY TRAINING School for Sunday school workers was opened Feb. 7 under auspicious circumstances. Pastor C. F. Mathews of the First Church was the instructor in the social teachings of Jesus.

A SUCCESSFUL intensive training school for the students of the seminary and training school and workers in the churches was conducted at Edgerton Place Church in Kansas City, Feb. 7 to 11. Dr. T. S. Young, director of week-day religious education, Rev. C. S. Osborne, specialist in church vacation school work, and Mrs. L. E. DeShazo, specialist with children, constituted the faculty. J. M. Gurley, state director of religious education, was dean of the school. The purpose of the school was to develop and train workers for church vacation schools and for week-day religious schools as they may be developed.

Rev. WALTER DAVENPORT began work in Lyons in October. The work is growing and a new building will soon be needed. The Sunday school is increasing weekly.

ILLINOIS

THE PAST YEAR at the Cairo Church was one of remarkable success along many lines. A new parsonage worth $12,000 was provided for the pastor, and his salary was also increased. A goodly number of members were added to the church. Congregations have increased, and every department of the church shows marked improvement. The outlook is better than for many years.

A MEETING OF THE PASTORS and laymen of the Bloomington Association was held in the Bloomington Y. M. C. A. on Jan. 31, about thirty men being present. Dr. E. M. Poteat of the General Board of Promotion gave an informal address on "Stewardship," and Dr. J. L. Jackson of the First Church, Bloomington, spoke on "The Prayer Meeting," general conferences following each address.

AT A MEETING of the parents' club of the Ray School, Chicago, held on Feb. 25, resolutions were passed deploring the fact that "some of the later modes of social dancing are unwholesome and particularly unbecoming of the society of our best young people," and urging that "parents, ministers, educators, social workers and others interested in young people be recommended to co-operate most earnestly with chaperons and those offering the dance as a social activity in the entertainment of young people, towards eradicating and suppressing the unfortunate features and towards restoring to the best standards of former years that most entertaining art, particularly the typical folk dances of the various nationalities."

SUPT. BRAND spent Sunday morning, Feb. 13, at Carbondale and Sunday night at Murphysboro. Rev. J. W. Merrill, formerly clerk of the Chicago Association, has been pastor of the church at Carbondale for about two years. His influence is felt throughout that section of the state. He and his wife have done fine work, and the church is prospering. There were 304 in the Sunday school that morning. The large old parsonage has been connected with the church and, remodeled for Sunday-school and social work. The church is now planning to build a new parsonage. The Sunday school at Murphysboro numbered 413 on Feb. 13, and there was a capacity house Sunday night. Rev. H. T. Abbott has been pastor of the Murphysboro Church for several years.

There is great need of a new church building. The membership numbers 784.

Death of Rev. A. A. Todd

Dr. A. A. Todd, pastor of the church at Jacksonville, died on Feb. 15 at Maplewood Sanatorium after a two weeks' illness of legarthritis-encephalitis. He had been in poor health for some time, but had continued his work until about two weeks before his death.

Dr. Todd was born July 6, 1870, in Missouri. Early in his life the family moved to St. Louis, and when a young man he became a member of the Water-tower Church in St. Louis. He received his education at LaGrange College, Shurtleff College and Ewing College. He was married to Miss Daisy Rice of Alton, who died Feb. 4, 1920.

His pastorates were at Bunker Hill, Shelbyville, Ewing, First Church of Mt. Vernon, Pontiac, Lafayette Park Church of St. Louis, and at Jacksonville. He did good work on all these fields. He was a member of the Illinois State Convention board and of the executive committee of the board. He will be greatly missed in Jacksonville and in Illinois.

The funeral services were conducted Feb. 16 by the ministerial conference of Jacksonville, and burial was made in the cemetery at Upper Alton. Supt. E. P. Brand was in charge at the cemetery.

Southern Illinois Association

The Southern Illinois Association held its semi-annual meeting at Crainville Feb. 10-13. The attendance was good, and about two-thirds of those present were men.

This association was organized a few years ago by the First Church of Benton, the First Church of Mt. Vernon, the First Church of Murphysboro and the Ashley Church. One year later the First Church of Cairo was received into the association. A resolution was passed to the effect that the association would receive without rebaptism any Free Will Baptist churches that would send letters requesting admission. The Baptists of southern Illinois who have united with the Southern Baptist Convention would not receive the Free Baptist people without re-immersing them, thus making a travesty of the Lord's ordinance by immersing in the name of the Trinity people who had already been scripturally baptized. The Baptists of southern Illinois who refused to work with the state convention and the Northern Baptist Convention believe that no one is scripturally baptized unless immersed by an ordained Baptist preacher under the authority of a Baptist church. They will not receive into their churches a regenerated person who has been immersed in the name of the Trinity by a Methodist, Presbyterian or a Baptist preacher who is not of the regular Baptist type. By this action on the part of our new association in southern Illinois, we have received forty-four churches from the former Free Will churches, and the association now numbers 5753 members. Splendid work is being done, and good progress made.

Rev. J. L. Meads of Benton, one among the best pulpit orators in the state, preached a sermon at the meeting in which he emphasized strongly the doctrine of the perseverance and preservation of the saints.

This new association is making fine progress in the New World Movement. Some remarkable revivals have taken place this winter. Rev. James B. Little, our district superintendent, held a meeting at Ava resulting in more than eighty additions to the church. The old Missionary Baptist Church disbanded, and its membership, with its property united with the former Free Will Baptists, and now the church is called the First Baptist Church of Ava. The church is now able to support a full-time pastor.

E. P. BRAND.

OHIO

THE OLD FIRST CHURCH of Zanesville has been taking on new life during the last few months. The coming of Pastor O. L. Martin has been a stimulant in arousing enthusiasm and renewed efforts. The church is now in its centennial year, and next June it will celebrate its one-hundredth anniversary. It was in this church that the Ohio Convention was organized, and here also was where Dr. William Ashmore, the noted pioneer Baptist missionary to China, was converted and baptized.

REV. H. E. SHADE recently held meetings with Rev. Roy D. Wood of the church at Conneaut, and as a result fifty or more have united with the church. On Feb. 14 there was begun "a week of teaching evangelism" for the intensive study of the World and the deepening of the Christian life, under the direction of Dr. J. W. Weddell of Oberlin, author of "Your Study Bible." The people respond cordially to these follow-up meetings, which are always productive of good.

REV. W. H. CARLISLE recently closed a four weeks' evangelistic campaign in his church at Shelby in which there were 110 confessions of Christ. Since the beginning of his work last October, the church has been greatly stimulated. The Sunday school has grown from thirty-four to 159, and a men's class with an enrolment of twenty-six, a young women's class with a membership of twenty-five, and a junior B. Y. P. U. with an enrolment of sixty have been organized. The church building is now hardly large enough to accommodate the people who attend.

REV. G. R. ROBBINS of Columbus recently preached a short sermon each evening except Saturday for five weeks, and there was an average of one conversion at each service. To date twenty-seven new members have been received, twenty-three of them by baptism. Although the Sunday school averages only a little over 200 in attendance, the average collection for the school last year was $22.

THE FIRST CHURCH, WELLSTON, closed a successful evangelistic campaign on Feb. 27. Dr. Joseph A. Bennett was the preacher. To date, thirty-nine have been baptized and twenty-five received for baptism and six received by letter and experience. Rev. S. P. Stapp is pastor.

DURING HIS TEN YEARS at Ashtabula, Rev. Herman Lang has conducted personally an evangelistic campaign. This year the services began on Jan. 30 and ran for more than three weeks. Mr. Lang doing the preaching and Mr. Tinkam, pastor of the Madison Church, conducting the music. Thus far there have been about fifteen baptisms and some forty-three decisions. The church is efficient in religious education, and the new members are to be trained at once in Baptist principles and history.

REV. H. SNACK of Adams Mills has just closed a successful series of meetings at the Mt. Zion Church, near Byessville. This church has been closed for almost three years. There were, as a result, eighteen accessions to the church, and the local work has been given a new impetus.

THE BIBLE CLASS of the Emmanuel Church, Marion, has been having an unusually large attendance, having averaged 130 for the first two months of the year. Special services began the latter part of February, and after March 6, the pastor, Rev. J. G. Beard, was assisted by Rev. Geo. Cooper of Lorain City Mission.

The Warren Association

The ministers' conference of the Warren Association met on Feb. 21 in the Prospect Church. Songs were sung by Evangelists Littrell, Moody and Young, and reports were received from the various churches.

Rev. R. E. Brown became pastor on Feb. 1 of the churches at Morrill, Wyandotte and Grand Prairie, succeeding Rev. O. T. Swigart, and has been greeted by large congregations.

At Radnor, Rev. H. K. Freeman and Rev. W. W. Crabtree assisted Pastor Gow in meetings in November, from which twenty-three conversions resulted.

At Richmond, Pastor H. C. Gillespie and people expect to dedicate their new church building early in the spring.

Rev. F. E. Hawes, pastor of Fite Memorial, Marion, has baptized about seventy during the last six weeks. The average attendance at the Bible school is 420. A new mission station, known as the Bennett Street Baptist Chapel, has been opened and has a Sunday-school attendance of about 150. Revival services have recently been held.

Since June 1 the Prospect Church, Rev. H. K. Freeman, pastor, has remodeled its building at a cost of $27,000. Dedication services were held on Jan. 30. Rev. A. A. Nellis of Warren preached the sermon. There followed an evangelistic campaign, conducted by Evangelists Littrell and Moody, which resulted in fifty conversions. On Feb. 20 the pastor baptized eleven and more the following Sunday.

H. K. Freeman, Secy.

WISCONSIN

A UNION EVANGELICAL CAMPAIGN led by Rev. G. W. Taylor in Evansville closed on Feb. 21. The Baptist and Methodist churches were the main strength of the campaign. There were about 150 decisions, mostly among young people. Evansville has been greatly stirred and there has been created a new optimistic atmosphere. Great credit for the results in the Baptist church must be given to the quiet and prayerful work during two years of the pastor, Rev. A. W. Stephens.

NEBRASKA

DR. WILSON MILLS conducted special meetings from Jan. 30 to Feb. 13 in the Glenville Church. Fourteen boys and girls from the Sunday school made decisions for Christ.

SOUTH DAKOTA

THE CHURCH AT HURON entertained a successful regional conference on Feb. 16-17. The church building has recently been redecorated as a result of the work of a young woman's organization. A brotherhood has recently been organized. The excellent choir has recently been giving a series of concerts which have attracted large congregations. Rev. R. J. Lloyd is in his fourth year as pastor.

IOWA

DR. FRANKLIN SWIFT held a meeting in the First Church, Glenwood, Iowa, Feb. 6-20. Although not a union meeting, the other churches co-operated and the entire town felt the impress of the services.

DR. H. C. LELAND of Dixon, Ill., has recently concluded fourteen weeks of service with the First Church of Morrison, Ill., and is now performing a like service for the First Church of Clinton. Despite the fact that the church has been without a pastor for several months, work is progressing well in all departments.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Storm Lake, O. R. O. Farel, minister, is enjoying a healthy growth. The membership during the past year has been increased about 30 per cent, and the Sunday school now has an enrollment somewhat larger than the church membership. The church remembered the pastor recently with a purse, and Mrs. Farel received about $50 in gifts.

Pacific Coast

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE NEW BUILDING of the Memorial Church, Fresno, was dedicated the first week in February. A week was given to the exercises, during which the crowds were so large that many had to be turned away. The building has over thirty classrooms as well as spacious social rooms and will house a Sunday school of at least 500. The auditorium and Sunday-school rooms when thrown together will accommodate a congregation of 1000.

NEW EDIFICE OF THE MEMORIAL CHURCH, FRESNO, CALIFORNIA

EVANGELIST HARRY O. ANDERSON closed a two weeks' meeting with the Bethany Church, Oakland, on Feb. 20. Fifty signed cards and nine have already been baptized. One was received by letter. The church plans to have Bro. Anderson again next year.

THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE FIRST CHURCH, Modesto, Rev. Edgar H. Gum, pastor, has doubled in the last three years. The total membership is now over 400. A new building is urgently needed. Evangelist T. T. Martin has recently closed a meeting with the church, during which there were fifty confessions of faith. Twenty-five united with the church during the meetings. Two Sundays after they closed there was a good response to an appeal of the pastor. From Feb. 10 to 13 the annual Valley Rally was held. Young people's and Sunday-school workers of four associations attended.

AFTER HAVING SERVED as pastoral supply for the Waterford Church for more than two years, Rev. H. Newberry has resigned and the church has called Rev. W. T. Riggs, lately of Santa Cruz, who began his work on Feb. 20. Mr. Riggs has held several important pastorates in California. The work opens up well.

AT THE NORTHERN CALIFORNIA CONVENTION held in Visalia in November, it was learned that Rev. E. R. Bennett had completed fifty years of active work in the ministry, and appropriate resolutions were adopted, appreciative of his long ministry and of his helpful personality. Bro. Bennett was graduated from Kalamazoo College and from Rochester Theological Seminary. He held pastorates in Rollin, Jonesville, Grand Traverse and Grand Rapids, Mich., and in Pomona, Oakland, Santa Cruz and Burlingame, Cal. He was also general secretary for the Northern California Convention for five years. His has been a successful ministry both in soul-winning and in loving fellowship.

Rocky Mountain States

MONTANA

UNDER THE COMPETENT LEADERSHIP of Pastor Henry Van Engelen, the Missoula Church is making steady progress. The Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. are doing particularly good work this winter. The plain, sane, practical gospel messages of the pastor are drawing high school and university students to the regular services. The outlook for real spiritual growth is brighter than for some time.

REV. C. B. STEPHENS, formerly pastor at Eureka, is now student pastor at the Montana State College at Bozeman. This institution last year enrolled nearly 1200 students. Mr. Stephens is supported by the Disciple, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian and Baptist denominations and has the support of a strong local board.

COLORADO

THE CHURCHES OF STERLING have just experienced a gracious revival led by Evangelist E. B. Pratt. The Baptist Church has received about sixty-six new members. Other churches have received even more. Mass meetings are held every Sunday afternoon with out of town speakers. A spirit of harmony and good fellowship exists among the churches.

From Southern Colorado

The Trinidad Church is the only one of that faith in a county as large in area as Holland, Belgium, or some of the New England States. It is so large that one may travel 100 miles from Trinidad, in a straight line, and not get out of the county. There are some magnificent distances in this western country and great opportunities for pioneer Christian work.

The Trinidad Church, over which Dr. B. F. Lawler was the honored pastor for a fifth of a century, has taken on new life after a long period of comparative inactivity due to its being without a pastor for nearly a year. Since the settling of Rev. C. Arlin Heydon as pastor, the congregation has nearly doubled, several new members have been added, and a number are awaiting baptism.

The young people's society, on its own initiative, is planning for a week of evangelistic work to begin March 13, the services to be conducted entirely by the young people—a rather unusual undertaking, but one that is creditable. As further proof that these young people are wide awake, it may be of interest to say that they have raised $38 with which to send copies of THE BAPTIST to the reading rooms of the near-by mining camps, of which there are many in this vicinity.

The young people regard this as good home missionary work.

Following the meetings by the young people, the pastor, assisted by Bro. A. C. Kochenberger, gospel singer, will conduct a series of evangelistic services.

During the week of Feb. 20, Rev. W. F. Ripley, Colorado promoter of the New World Movement, preached or lectured each evening with substantial results.

Recently the church purchased a fine residence property to be used as a parsonage, and a tile roof is soon to cover the church edifice, the cost of which ($1000) is fully pledged and nearly all in hand.

The missionary activities of the church are bringing results. The women are studying the books prescribed by the Federated Council, and they are using the group plan successfully. Joint meetings are also held monthly. The W. W. G. girls of the church will present a missionary pageant in the near future. Attention is also being given to the White Cross work.

LAYMAN.

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

Arizona—*Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phoenix.
California, N.—*Dr. C. W. Brinstead, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
Idaho—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
Indiana—*Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
Iowa—424 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capitol Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
Minnesota—*Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2nd Ave., So. Minneapolis.
Montana—*Rev. G. Clifford Cross, Box 643, Lewistown.
Nebraska—*Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
Nevada—George L. Snyder, Box 239, Sparks.
New Hampshire—*Rev. D. S. Jenks, 92 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
New Jersey—*Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singsier, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
North Dakota—Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
Ohio—Rev. Chas. E. Stanton, Granville.
Oregon—*Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin, Field Promotion Director, 405 Tilford Bldg., Portland.
Pennsylvania—*Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
Rhode Island—Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauderdale Bldg., Providence.
South Dakota—*Dr. S. P. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
Utah—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Vermont—*Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
Washington, E.—*Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane.
Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213½ Fourth St., Parkersburg.
Wisconsin—*Dr. D. W. Hulbert, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
Wyoming—*Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

Obituary

VICTORIA C. GAMWELL

At her home in Holliston, Mass., on Dec. 30, 1920, Victoria C. Gamwell, widow of Prof. F. B. Gamwell, passed away. She was the eldest daughter of the late Deacon Benjamin Maxwell, a constituent member in 1833, and continuously thereafter for more than fifty years, an honored deacon in the First Baptist Church of Shelburne Falls, Mass.

Victoria Maxwell was born Oct. 16, 1843. Her youthful years were spent in her home village, where her excellent educational and religious advantages found ready appreciation in her receptive mind. At the age of fifteen she was baptized by Rev. E. H. Gray (later chaplain in the U. S. Senate in Pres. Lincoln's administration), uniting with the First Church of Shelburne Falls.

After completing the course in the public schools and the Franklin Academy in her native town, she entered the Emma Willard Seminary at Troy, N. Y., graduating with signal honor.

On Nov. 25, 1866, she was united in marriage with Prof. Franklin B. Gamwell, principal of the Connecticut Literary Institution, Suffield, Conn. Her married life was spent in New England with the exception of one year at the Golden Gate Academy, Oakland, Cal., and two years in the Central West, where her husband was engaged in prominent educational work.

Mrs. Gamwell was a woman of rare character and winning personality, naturally vivacious, hopeful, trustful, considerate and sympathetic. She was strong in purpose, conscientious, faithful to duty, unyielding in principle and ever maintained unflinching devotion to the Master's cause. Although an invalid for many years, which prevented her from taking an active part in religious and educational advancement, her interest in Christian work never waned, and her religious life from the beginning was one of spiritual growth. She had high ideals of life and was an inspiration to all who were privileged to know her. She loved nature's appointments and rejoiced in all environments that brought happiness to her family and friends. THE BAPTIST and formerly the Standard were a beacon light in her home. She watched their weekly appearance with eagerness and delight. She honored great teachers and preachers. A lineal descendant of Revolutionary patriots, she inherited a love of country and ever exercised a keen interest in national affairs. She possessed a keen sense of the humorous, both in literature and in the common experiences of life, which lightened many a day of invalidism. Words can but partially reveal our grief over the separation from us of our beloved and devoted sister, though now "the veil of sense lies dark between that happy land and ours." Some glad day we shall again see each other face to face. The words selected by her former pastor, the late Dr. A. J. Sage, at the last earthly rites of our mother are sadly fitting to the memory of our sister-kin: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

Mrs. Gamwell leaves two sons, Edward F. of Boston and Irving H. of Pittsfield, Mass.; one daughter, Helen S. Gamwell of Holliston; two grandchildren, Franklin and Constance Gamwell of Pittsfield; also two sisters and two brothers. Brief funeral services were held at her late home in Holliston and again at the old homestead in her native town. Interment was in the beautiful Arms Cemetery at Shelburne Falls. G. E. M.

A Course for High-School Pupils

(Continued from page 177)

How does one show his religion? Secure the information that they worship.

How does one worship? By prayer, praise, giving feasts or fasts, and by sacrifice.

Do these common expressions of worship differ?

What is the difference between Christian and non-Christian prayers? Between Christian and non-Christian giving, etc.?

What, then, are the differences between Christianity and the heathen religions? Christianity needs no intermediaries, and pagan religions require these. Christianity centers in love, and paganism in fear. Christianity gives voluntarily, and pagan giving is required. Christianity is ethical, and paganism unethical.

If they differ, do they have common elements? Yes. Both are missionary, and both possess sacred books, etc.

Is Christianity, then, superior to the non-Christian religions? Draw out the fact that its superiority is (1) in the character of God; (2) in the means of salvation; (3) in the ideal character of the disciples; (4) in the beneficent effects of Christianity. Other facts can be drawn out.

We are not especially interested in how one becomes a heathen. But how does one become a Christian? (Rom. 10:9-10.)

What are the marks of a Christian? He is a follower of Christ.

Can I know I am a Christian?

If so, what are the evidences? Evidences of the Book, of my affections, of my deepest motives, and of the deep-seated principles of living.

It is easy to bring out these facts and many others which can be tabulated on the blackboard.

We try to be true Christian people. That is a matter of character.

What is character?

How does it differ from reputation?

What helps to form a Christian character? Belief in all the good we inherit, a good education, and a good environment.

What is the best thing we can inherit? What is real education?

When is one educated as a Christian? What is our environment? School, church, social life, books, and chums.

Can one choose his environment? How can he do so?

If a chum is a part of one's environment, how should he select him?

If we have a friend (chum) as a part of the Christian environment, whom should we choose?

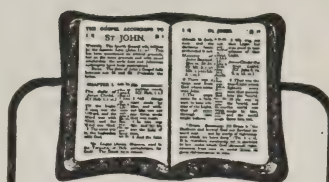

What are the marks of a good chum? Loyalty, confidence, etc.

What kind of a friend is Christ by these standards. Give the traits of his character which you desire most to emulate.

How does he know we are his friend? Is he the best friend? How do we know he is our friend?

It is apparent to the reader that there can be a considerable amplification of these questions. Answers are given solely to suggest how to develop the theme.

Conversation too will develop the hindrances and helps in the friendship of Christ.

The SCOFIELD Reference Bible

Edited by Rev. C. I. Scofield, D.D.
Assisted by Eminent Scholars

Helps on Pages Where Needed

With Chain References, Revised Marginal Renderings, Prophecies Harmonized, Books of the Bible Analyzed and many other features every Bible student needs

Send for Descriptive Literature

At All Booksellers or the Publishers
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

American Branch
35 West 32d Street New York

RELIGIOUS BOOK WEEK

March 13-20—Put good books in your home, especially THE SCOFIELD REFERENCE BIBLE

VISUAL INSTRUCTION

By Balopticon and Acme "Movie" Projection

LANTERNS SOLD & RENTED

Our Slide Library includes the "S. S. Times Pace Cartoons." Special Slides made to order from your pictures or negatives. Write for Bulletins.

GEO. W. BOND SLIDE CO.
Rm. B. 6 E. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Beware of Contagious Diseases

THOMAS INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE

SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES
Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer.
Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing outfits for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.
Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

MOUNDS PARK SANITARIUM

Earl and Thorn Streets

MIDWAY HOSPITAL

Snelling and University Avenue

MERRIAM PARK HOSPITAL

(FORMERLY COBB)

Iglehart and Cleveland Avenues

DEPARTMENTS

General Surgery Medicine
Neurology Obstetrics
Eye, Ear, Nose
and Throat

SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA

LABORATORIES

Radium Blood Chemistry
X-Ray Basal Metabolism
Serology Pathology
Electrocardiograph

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES

DO THE TEACHINGS OF

America's foremost thinkers will discuss this theme

THE YEAR 1921 is to be The Christian Century's greatest year. More than two score of the nation's foremost religious and ethical thinkers will conduct a thorough-going and unhampered discussion of the place Jesus Christ holds in the life of our times. Here is an example:

The Mind of Jesus and the Competitive System

will be discussed by

Robert Hunter, Spokesman for submerged humanity, author of "Poverty," "Why We Fail as Christians."

Harry F. Ward, Constructive radical, professor of Christian Ethics, author of "A Better Industrial Order."

Roger Babson, America's influential adviser of business men, author of "Religion and Business."

Scott Nearing, Socialist authority, a fearless agitator who believes in religion and the ethics of Jesus.

This single group alone makes The Christian Century indispensable to any man or woman who feels how urgent and how basic the industrial question is in religious and social progress. But these writers will represent only one of the many aspects of the great theme. The list of participants is a growing one. Each week adds a new stellar name to the brilliant galaxy. At this moment the writers and their themes are:

William Adams Brown
Theologian and Missionary Statesman.
"Can Society be Made Christian?"

Peter Ainslie
Church Statesman and Mystic.
"Would Christ Approve the War?"

Jane Addams
America's Foremost Woman.
"Christ and War."

Joseph Ernest McAfee
Prophet of Religious Democracy.
"Are Christian Missions Christian?"

Martha Foote Crow
Interpreter of Religion and Literature.
"Christ in Present Day Poetry."

Charles E. Jefferson
Preacher and Author.
"Are the Churches Christian?"

Herbert Croly
Editor The New Republic.
"The Problem of Religious Education."

H. D. C. MacLachlan
Scholar and Pastor.
Subject Not Yet Announced.

John Kelman
Scotch Preacher Adopted by America.
Subject Not Yet Announced.

Edward Scribner Ames
Preacher and Philosopher.
"Affinities Between Modern Philosophy and Jesus' Mind."

Finis S. Idleman
Preacher of Grace and Power.
Subject to be Announced.

Vida D. Scudder
Churchwoman and Socialist Leader.
"Can Public Opinion be Christianized?"

John Spargo
Socialist-Philosopher and Publicist.
"Religion and Social Progress."

Robert E. Park
Professor of Sociology.
"The Black Man, The White Man and Christ."

William E. Barton
A Counsellor of Souls.
"Would Christ Find Affinity With Modern Spiritualism?"

Walter Williams
President Press Congress of the World.
"Christ and Modern Journalism."

Albert Parker Fitch
A Vital Theologian.
"Do the Churches Really Believe in Jesus?"

Joseph Fort Newton
Preacher of International Sympathies.
"Is our Literature Christless?"

Edgar DeWitt Jones
Preacher and Shepherd of Men.
"Dare We Be Christians?"

Robert E. Speer
Most Potent Spiritual Influence in the American Church.
"Christ and Our Social Customs."

Lynn Harold Hough
Brilliant Preacher and Teacher.
"Is Science Foe or Friend of Christ?"

Richard L. Swain
A Writer Who Thinks of God in Terms of Life.
"Can Christ Rule Modern Business?"

Charles Henry Dickinson
Authority on Religious Education.
"Do We Really Know What Were the Ideals of Jesus?"

Peter Clark Macfarlane
Novelist and Short Story Writer.
"Is the Church Christian?"

Lloyd C. Douglas
Equally Brilliant as Preacher and Writer.
"Christ as a Practical Psychologist."

Rufus M. Jones
Modern Exponent of Quaker Ideals.
"War and the Teaching of Jesus."

Francis J. McConnell
A Bishop Who Is Also a Prophet.
"Are Christian Missions Christian?"

Katharine Lee Bates
Poet, Critic, Prophet.
"Christians or Pharisees?"

Burris Jenkins
Preacher and Newspaper Editor.
Subject to be Announced.

Charles A. Elwood
Sociologist.
"Is Our Civilization Christian?"

Shailer Mathews
Publicist, Teacher, Theologian.
"Is Christian Theology Christian?"

John M. Coulter
World-Famous Botanist.
"Is Evolution Anti-Christian?"

THIS GREAT SERIES IS JUST BEGINNING PUBLICATION

JESUS FIT OUR TIMES?

in The Christian Century during the year 1921

NEVER in the history of American religious journalism has there been so eager and widespread a response to a program of complete freedom in the discussion of Christian themes as that which The Christian Century is receiving. Its circulation has burst all denominational bonds. Thoughtful churchmen, both lay and clerical, in all communions are enthusiastic subscribers. They rejoice in a journal of religion which, without displacing denominational organs, undertakes squarely to face the problems of this new age without regard to denominational interests. The discovery—and it has been a discovery—that a periodical can be religious and at the same time free, positive and at the same time liberal in its hospitality to all enlightened points of view, has seemed to thousands of unsatisfied hearts like coming upon a refreshing spring of living water in a desert place.

The Christian Century has extended its influence into all the communions of the American church. It is equally at home among Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Methodists, Disciples, Baptists, Episcopalians and other Christian groups. Its subscription list is an album of the signatures of the church leaders of the nation. Besides, it is gripping the minds of the thinking men and women who have no church connection. They are astonished that from within the church which they supposed had become moribund and incurably denominationalized in its vision there should emerge a journal loyal to the church, devout and evangelical, and at the same time as free at a university class room. And they stand amazed to find themselves actually enjoying a religious paper! Churchmen and earnest minded non-churchmen are saying that The Christian Century points toward a new day for Christian faith and practice.

The CHRISTIAN CENTURY

A Journal of Religion

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON and HERBERT L. WILLETT, Editors
FOUR DOLLARS A YEAR

ANOTHER GREAT FEATURE THIS YEAR

JOSEPH FORT NEWTON

Master Preacher, known throughout Christendom for his ministry at City Temple, London, will present, in The Christian Century, during 1921, a series of interpretations of

"Some Living Masters of the Pulpit"

FRANK W. GUNSAULUS

Poet, Artist, Educator, Practical Mystic, who built his life into a mighty city.

GEORGE A. GORDON

Philosopher-theologian, whose sermons are lyrics and whose theology is an epic.

DEAN INGE, of St. Paul's

A Christian Cassandra; the one voice to which all England listens.

W. E. ORCHARD

The Bernard Shaw of Nonconformity; leader of the New Catholicism; a God-illuminated preacher.

MAUDE A. ROYDEN

The Jane Addams of England; the greatest woman preacher of her generation, uniting the faith of a saint with a flaming social passion.

CHARLES E. JEFFERSON

A quiet thinker, a wise leader, a great preacher who grew up on Broadway.

E. L. POWELL

An historic ministry at the gateway of the South. Today as in the days of Elijah, fire is the sign of God.

R. J. CAMPBELL

From the City Temple to Westminster; a pilgrim soul in a troubled age.

JOHN A. HUTTON

A man of letters in the pulpit; a preacher who searches like a surgeon and heals like a physician.

T. R. GLOVER

A layman who is a Doctor of Divinity; an orator with an atrocious elocution; a scholar who knows more than any man has a right to know.

S. PARKES CADMAN

A Rooseveltian personality in the pulpit—man of amazing industry, fabulous vocabulary, and infinite brotherliness.

BISHOP CHARLES WILLIAMS

A Prophet-Bishop; preacher of a vital Christianity which is also a civilization.

GEORGE W. TRUETT

A winsome preacher of the winsomeness of Christ; a shining figure in the Lone Star State.

SAMUEL McCHORD CROTHERS

A compound of Charles Lamb, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Isaiah, and much else besides.

BISHOP WILLIAM A. QUAYLE

Humor, pathos, literature, life made incandescent by a spiritual genius who is also an unveneered human being.

Other names such as Harry Emerson Fosdick, Burris Jenkins, Edgar DeWitt Jones, Frederick F. Shannon, Lynn Harold Hough, Studdert Kennedy and still others of the younger set accused of being great preachers—and each found guilty!—will be included in the series

Fill out one of these coupons and mail today. Addresses outside of U. S. must provide for extra postage

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY 508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Please enter my name (a new subscriber) for a year's subscription to The Christian Century at your regular rate of $4.00 (ministers $3.00). I will remit upon receipt of bill and you will please send me without extra charge a copy of [ ] "The Daily Altar," by Willett & Morrison (in cloth) or [ ] "Wanted—A Congregation," by Douglas, or [ ] "What and Where is God?" by Swain.

Name .....

Address .....

Baptist

(Use title "Rev." if a minister)

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY 508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Enclosed please find $1.00 for a twelve weeks' acquaintance subscription to The Christian Century.

Name .....

Address .....

Baptist

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

Over and Above

A Great Easter Thank Offering. Not urged as a burden, but presented as an opportunity.

Christian gratitude always overleaps the bounds of mere pledges. It insists on the "second mile." New causes of thankfulness are ever arising which demand expression.

Since our original pledges toward the New World Movement were made nearly a twelvemonth has passed. Thousands will gladly avail themselves of the Easter season as an opportunity to express their gratitude through a special Easter Offering.

Why is such an offering appropriate?

Because of our blessings

Our country safe, strong, busy, free; our resources, the greatest in the world; our schools with an open door for the poorest and weakest; our hospitals and sanitariums, our nurses and physicians with their ministry of health and healing; our parks and playgrounds and the many sources of wholesome amusement; our churches free to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience; our Sunday schools, our Christian homes; and above and beyond all else, the great Easter festival with its message of a Risen Savior and its tidings of His life and immortality.

Because of others needs

Consider the millions of children in heathen lands who cannot have schools unless we build them, nor teachers unless we send them, nor Bibles unless we give them; the children who live where there are no hospitals or nurses or doctors except those whom we have sent; the blind, the deaf and the lame, where there are no schools for the deaf and blind, and no help for the crippled.

Then there are the unprivileged and unlooked-after in our own land; there are Indian children with no one to tell them about Jesus; many black children who need our help and our schools; millions of foreign children who must be brought into Sunday schools and taught what real America is.

This offering will count in the 100 Million Dollar Campaign, but it is not a part of pledges already made. It is "over and above."

Let us make the offering worthy of ourselves, our denomination and our opportunity.

Send to State Promotion Director for Offering Boxes, Literature, etc.

General Board of Promotion of the Northern Convention

276 Fifth Avenue
NEW YORK CITY

Volume II

March 19, 1921

Number 7

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

MAR 20 1921

Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

Latest Publications from the Press of the

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

You and Your Church

By JAMES S. KIRTLEY, D.D.

What is involved in being a Christian, a church member, a Baptist? Out of an experience of many years as a pastor, Doctor Kirtley has set forth replies to these questions in such way as to construct a work of great practical value to young people. The volume is especially adapted to serve as a textbook for classes in study of the essentials of the principles, polity and work of Baptist churches. Boards, $1.25 net

A Study of the Holy Spirit

By T. P. STAFFORD, A.M., Th.D.

A well-ordered exposition of the Scripture teaching as to the Holy Spirit, Biblical in method, simple in statement, practical in purpose, this work should find a place not only on the student's shelf, but on the desk of the pastor who aims at Scriptural presentation of so important a doctrine, and in the hands of the church worker who seeks intelligent contact with the source of spiritual power for himself and for others. Boards, $1.00 net

The Ideal Man

By J. P. GREENE, D.D.

In these chapters is the heart of a course in Practical Ethics given by the author in William Jewell College. They pulsate with the virile personality of Doctor Greene. The outcome of wide experience and of intelligent study of books and men, they have the simplicity of light and the vitalizing warmth of eminently Christian humanity of a man who "sees into people and still believes in them." Cloth, $1.00 net

The Stature of a Perfect Man

By P. H. J. LERRIGO, M.D.

A physician's contribution to the statement of natural laws in the spiritual world. Through science "undreamed-of natural secrets have become the commonplaces of popular information." Doctor Lerrigo has drawn upon one department of this widely disseminated classified knowledge in an attempt to indicate the wealth of possibilities of teaching by means of parable the truth concerning the life processes of the soul. "A classification of those laws of spiritual health which parallel the normal physiological processes of the body, and which may perhaps fitly be termed the physiology of the inner life, should be helpful in leading us to a correct understanding of soul health."

Boards, $1.00 net

JUST PUBLISHED

Hymns for the King's Children

A Song-Book for the Children's Division of the Sunday School.

Edited by EDWARD M. FULLER

In this collection are 136 hymns, the words being set within the music. In addition, there are eight special services adapted for opening and closing periods for Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas, for patriotic, temperance, and missionary occasions, and combining Scripture reading, song, and prayer in reasonable proportions; ten additional hymns are given in these services.

Attention has been given to the requirements of each department in the Children's Division, and the range of children's voices has been kept in mind. A number of the favorite hymns of the church have been included. Special indexes of hymns adapted to the departments are provided, together with the indexes of titles and of first lines.

Octavo, 165 pages. Price, boards, 40 cents a copy, $35.00 a hundred; delivery charges extra.

The Religion of Jesus

By ALBERT G. LAWSON, D.D.

In method of treatment, descriptive rather than historical or philosophical; in style, addresses, not essays; in matter, Biblical; the work of a lover of good books—these four papers have the charm of sincerity and beauty in expression that well supports their practical purpose. Boards, 75 cents net

The Angel's Lily

By RUSSELL H. CONWELL, D.D., LL.D.

An accurate record of one of Dr. Conwell's most interesting and instructive addresses, in the form of an Oriental parable. Accompanying the lecture are eight chapters giving a history of Temple University. Cloth, $1.25 net

Friday's Footprints

By MARGARET T. APFLEGARTH

Truth embodied in a tale enters in at open doors. Here are missionary stories—almost two-score of them—told by a master of story-telling who has so co-ordinated her work and who presents her material in such a fascinating way that to read her chapters is to take a personally conducted tour around the world of missionary interest. Miss Applegarth's charming style in expression of her thorough grasp of facts is most effective to win attention and to lodge information. A worthwhile book for the juniors, and the seniors will not think it beneath them.

Cloth, $1.50 net

Send for a copy of our complete Descriptive Catalog.

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

Philadelphia Boston Chicago St. Louis Kansas City Los Angeles Seattle Toronto

Fresh from the Field

Rev. Ivan M. Rose has accepted the call to the First Church of Rome, N. Y., and will begin his work there on May 1. He has done a splendid work at Malone during the last three years and the people part with him only with the deepest regret.

The Superior, Neb., Church has just raised $26,100.50 for a new church home. The pastor, Rev. B. H. Ward, was assisted in the campaign by Dr. F. H. Divine.

Rev. Edwin W. Saylor has accepted the call of the Falls of Schuylkill Church of Philadelphia, Pa., after four years of good work at Lansdowne. The Philadelphia church has a well-equipped plant, costing over $50,000, a splendid parsonage and an active membership. From it in the past have gone out some of the able men and women of the denomination.

The Woman's Interdenominational Committee announces that the dates for the Northfield home mission conferences are July 5-13. Now is the time to appoint delegates.

Pastor Frank C. Shaffer of the Second Church, Cambridge, Ohio, was ordained March 8. Rev. W. H. Wilson of Byesville was moderator of the council and Rev. L. L. Long, clerk.

Pastor Jesse B. Brown of Machiasport Church, Maine, is now over seventy-three years old. He graduated at Colby in 1876 and was ordained the same year. He has just completed a new church building at North Cutler and repairing another at Holmes Bay. He has built or repaired twenty-three churches, and a friend has given him lead and oil enough to paint the church at Starboard.

Rev. E. A. Ford of Fordney Ave. Church, Saginaw, Mich., assisted Rev. R. H. Allen in special meetings at South Church, Port Huron (not H. H. Ford as stated last week).

Charles Evans Hughes, the new secretary of state, feeling that the duties of his position will require all of his time and attention, has resigned from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Dr. Thos. J. Villers was the Baptist representative this year in the union Lenten services held by the college and community at Oberlin, Ohio.

Rev. G. Carroll Berryman of the First Church at Wessington Springs, S. D., has resigned and can take up work elsewhere after April 1. His address is Box 105, Wessington Springs, S. D.

Arthur Porter Braisted, son of Pastor W. E. Braisted of Red Bank, N. J., died of pneumonia Feb. 28. His death is a great loss not only to his parents but also to the community.

Rev. A. K. Scott of Perry, Ohio, has resigned the church at that place and will consider another location. This small church raised $226.47 for European relief.

The mid-year luncheon of the alumnae association of the Baptist Institute for Christian Workers at Philadelphia was made the occasion of celebrating the birthday of the president, Dr. J. Milnor Wilbur. He has been connected with the institute as a teacher since 1903, and as president since 1912.

The Slaughter of the Innocents

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Contributing Editors;

PRES. GEORGE E. HORR	PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY	MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY	REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS	PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	194
EDITORIALS .....	197
AN EASTER VISION, by Helen Barrett Montgomery..	200
NATURE PROCLAIMS IMMORTALITY, by J. R. Treat...	201
EASTER IN HISTORY, by Henry K. Rowe.....	202
THE MAN BREAKER OF GIMLET BUTTES, a story by Coe Hayue .....	203
COME, SEE THE PLACE WHERE THE LORD LAY, three special articles .....	206
TOMOI SAN—AN EASTER STORY, by George W. Taft..	208
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	209
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	211
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	212
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	214
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	215
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS .....	221
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	222

"PLEASE continue THE BAPTIST to Miss Bashua Cornwell, West Allis, Wis. She will be 101 years old on April 27. She was baptized ninety years ago in the state of New York. In 1838 she came with her parents to Wisconsin and has lived on the same farm ever since. She reads THE BAPTIST from cover to cover every week."

Wise leaders build for the future. Conflicting interests are clamoring for the time and strength of our young people. Those who love the church and believe in its mission should redouble their efforts to place THE BAPTIST and Missions in the homes of Baptist church members. Have you done your part? Register a vow right now that you will do what you can to destroy in the families of your church the deadly indifference to our denominational journals.

The Attainment of Our Goal

THE survey of our denominational work was made two years ago. At that time it appeared that we could maintain our present work and enlarge our program on a reasonable and adequate basis for a period of five years at the cost of one hundred million dollars. If the survey were to be made today and the same program outlined, the estimated cost for the same work would be nearer one hundred and fifty million dollars. The cost of every missionary endeavor has been materially increased. It has been imperative to raise the salaries of the missionaries at home and abroad to enable them to cope in some fair degree with the rising cost of living. Traveling expenses have increased on both sides of the sea. It costs twice as much to send a missionary to China or India as it used to. We do not need to be told how much more it costs to erect buildings of any kind here at home. The increase in prices was even greater in the Orient than in the Occident. It is possible that we shall never return to the old basis, and until prices have dropped materially the world around, we can not hope to carry out our program as originally planned with even the full one hundred million dollars.

We are greatly perplexed at the present time by two important considerations. First, the demand for missionary effort has increased in all parts of the world since the armistice was signed. Secondly, as yet only about one-half of our one hundred million dollars has been subscribed. Until the other half is subscribed we can not carry through our larger program on any comprehensive scale.

We should not be true to our Baptist people if we did not reveal to them the fact that our great forward movement is now halting, waiting for the subscriptions for the full one hundred million dollars and for the full payment of all our pledges.

While it is true that our receipts for the New World Movement far exceed anything we have ever had before, yet by reason of the excessive cost of all missionary work, and of the inclusion in our national budget of many objects for which as a denomination we had never made adequate provision before, we have not been able as yet to carry out the enlarged program.

The Situation in America

In America the call for missionary work has become louder and more insistent during the past few months. This is especially true of the work among the many racial groups which are being slowly run together in our great American melting pot. We are ministering now to twenty-two of these groups, but how feeble are our efforts compared with the gigantic size of the task! We are warned of an impending tide of immigration such as we have never known before. The situation demands an immediate enlargement of our work. The Christian centers which we have promised and projected ought not to be delayed. They will be of inestimable value in helping the new-comers. Our Home Mission Society has recently opened an International Seminary to provide adequate training for the men to man this work. We shall soon have the men if we can have the money to send them out. Before the war we were thinking that

(Continued on page 223)

New World Movement Pledges and Receipts

TABLE A

This report is issued as of Feb. 20, 1921, and is compiled on the basis of a form of report adopted by the General Board of Promotion at its annual meeting held in Minneapolis, Dec. 1 and 2, 1920.

I State	II Quota of $100,000.00 fund apportioned to each state	III Amount pledged to Feb. 20, 1921 plus benevolence credits for fiscal year May 1, 1919 to Apr. 30, 1920.	IV Percentage of quota paid or subscribed to Feb. 20, 1921.
North Dakota	$ 200,000	$ 200,283.99	100.14
Arizona	215,000	215,105.00	100.04
Wyoming	113,000	82,668.00	82.00
Vermont	650,000	482,126.20	74.2
Washington E.	626,000	416,142.93	66.5
District of Columbia	200,000	132,000.00	66.
Montana	200,000	128,973.00	64.5
Missouri	1,000,000	611,917.17	61.2
N. Y. State	7,606,000	4,634,628.73	60.9
Idaho	287,000	173,102.61	60.3
Nevada	61,000	30,000.00	58.8
N. Y. Metropolitan	10,000,000	5,870,468.00	58.7
Michigan	3,500,000	2,000,000.00	57.1
Rhode Island	1,320,000	750,000.00	56.8
Massachusetts	7,877,000	4,307,313.00	54.7
South Dakota	640,000	350,000.00	54.7
West Virginia	1,980,000	1,043,000.00	52.7
New Jersey	5,341,000	2,803,804.14	52.5
Washington, W.	830,000	434,713.00	52.4
California, N.	1,654,000	859,500.00	51.9
Indiana	3,500,000	1,814,072.21	51.8
Pennsylvania	8,968,000	4,596,650.56	51.3
California, S.	3,669,000	1,849,500.00	50.4
Connecticut	2,255,000	1,107,196.36	49.1
Oregon	1,045,000	501,000.00	47.8
Colorado	1,301,000	610,000.00	46.8
New Hampshire	1,107,000	518,000.00	46.8
Ohio	7,000,000	3,220,167.36	46.
Wisconsin	1,540,000	626,549.00	40.7
Maine	2,050,000	796,000.00	38.8
Delaware	150,000	58,048.61	38.7
Iowa	3,270,000	1,261,425.48	38.6
Illinois	7,108,000	2,592,784.00	36.5
Kansas	3,085,000	1,125,000.00	36.5
Nebraska	1,506,000	547,600.00	36.4
Minnesota	2,640,000	903,229.30	34.2
Utah	75,000	25,668.00	34.2
Total	$94,559,000	$47,689,636.65	50.75

TABLE B

I States in order of highest percentage of payments on pledges	II Amount paid on $100,000.00 fund during fiscal year Apr. 1, 1919-May 1, 1920.	III Amount due on pledges during fiscal year 1920 to Feb. 20, 1921.	IV Amount paid on pledges May 1, 1920 to Feb. 20, 1921.	V Percentage of amount due on pledges paid Feb. 20, 1921.
Nebraska	$ 62,966.91	$ 97,857.10	$ 96,453.01	98.57
New Hampshire	61,800.00	92,115.90	89,310.06	96.95
Illinois	100,160.00	503,512.56	483,462.04	96.02
Iowa	130,235.39	228,409.88	211,269.46	92.50
Dist. Columbia	11,336.97	24,364.27	21,304.95	87.44
Connecticut	56,384.00	212,179.96	184,029.14	86.73
Maine	65,939.00	147,401.50	127,673.31	86.55
N. Y. Metropolitan	*685,887.00	1,424,758.89	1,228,279.00	86.20
Utah	2,092.00	4,760.47	4,069.19	85.48
Minnesota	90,857.00	164,034.15	139,506.77	85.05
Kansas	71,368.00	212,749.37	177,225.87	83.30
Rhode Island	23,505.00	146,693.87	121,509.62	82.83
New York State	374,766.74	836,687.42	681,535.55	81.46
Washington, E.	26,969.00	78,582.01	62,962.32	80.11
New Jersey	126,327.88	552,721.47	436,664.06	79.04
Massachusetts	184,941.00	832,389.35	655,907.09	78.80
Wisconsin	37,596.17	118,921.39	88,446.84	74.37
Pennsylvania	254,478.07	876,771.37	629,460.15	71.79
Ohio	110,056.34	627,993.61	447,667.33	71.29
Washington, W.	27,805.00	82,220.81	57,879.88	70.40
West Virginia	40,237.00	202,477.90	142,506.13	70.38
North Dakota	5,582.09	39,314.23	27,634.21	70.29
Nevada	561.62	5,944.32	3,969.18	66.77
Indiana	102,989.39	345,501.88	230,266.80	66.65
Oregon	11,790.00	38,871.28	65,541.05	66.29
Idaho	10,422.00	32,848.55	21,634.37	65.86
California, N.	25,500.63	168,401.23	108,801.92	64.61
California, S.	140,328.00	345,116.01	222,732.56	64.54
Michigan	93,906.00	384,878.50	247,949.99	64.42
Montana	9,163.20	24,192.04	15,163.15	62.68
Vermont	38,456.86	95,586.25	56,135.32	62.66
Colorado	29,165.00	117,282.20	72,348.59	62.11
South Dakota	20,000.00	66,633.60	36,231.33	54.37
Arizona	9,799.85	41,455.19	22,094.14	53.30
Wyoming	4,513.00	17,800.26	9,469.90	53.20
Delaware	8,311.00	10,043.10	5,277.43	52.55
Missouri	1,122.16	123,331.73	51,250.53	41.55
Totals	$3,507,366.27	$9,378,803.97	$7,284,212.14	77.66

* Includes large payments on pledges to New World Movement credited to fiscal year ending April 30, 1920.

The Baptist

The Gate To Life

IN ONE of his books Dr. Fosdick tells us of a traveller in Switzerland who, uncertain of his way, asked a small lad by the wayside where Kandersteg was and received, so he remarks, the most significant answer that was ever given him. "I do not know, sir," said the boy, "where Kandersteg is, but there is the road to it."

There are a great many things I cannot tell about the life to come. Its details must ever elude me until I enter upon it. But I know where lies the road. I know that neither height nor depth, nor death nor life, can separate me from the love of God in Christ Jesus my Lord. As I possess him within me, as I know Christ the hope of glory, I have the certain assurance of immortality.

As I abide in his school, I learn that death is not an enemy but a friend, that it shall not confine but liberate me.

"Joy, shipmate, joy!

(Pleas'd to my soul at death I cry)

Our life is closed, our life begins,

The long, long anchorage we leave,

The ship is clear at last, she leaps!

Joy, shipmate, joy!"

From all that confines and hampers death shall release.

He teaches me also that death shall unite, that all I have loved and lost shall be mine again. But most of all, death shall bring me near Him who is now so much hidden by the veil of flesh. The Christian faith is that of Mr. Standfast who said, "I am going to see that head which was crowned with thorns, and that face which was spit upon for me. I have formerly lived by hearsay and faith: but now I go where I shall live by sight, and shall be with him in whose company I delight myself. I have loved to hear my Lord spoken of; and wherever I have seen the print of his shoe in the earth, there have I coveted to set my foot, too. * * * He hath held me and hath kept me from mine iniquities: yea, my steps hath he strengthened in his way." That was Paul's faith: "having the desire to depart and to be with Christ." And this is ours also: "We shall see him and we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is." For all who live in him Jesus Christ has abolished death. "Because I live, ye shall live also." Yes, because I am a very part of him, I must live. Death can have no real power over me. All the world is life. All is instinct with God. And I am to enter into it all and to live with him and for him.

We come at Easter time to the age-long question of men, "If a man die, shall he live again?" And we find in the place where our dead Lord was laid an empty tomb. We meet angels telling us that he is risen. We turn about and we see him: "My Master!" Jesus lives and all that are his live in him. To men and women who have parted with parents or friends or children; who have looked upon dear flesh in which the spirit no longer was; to men and women who have poured out their souls in anguish, to a world which has seen war and become sick of the slaughter of men all of whom were friends to somebody; to men and women who have been pondering the riddle of life, comes this glad message of Easter, "I am the resurrection and the life." Would that all might hear it, might receive it, might live it. Death hath no longer any power over him whose life is hid with Christ in God.

Shall the Committee on Schools Make a Preliminary Report?

AT THE last annual meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention there was appointed a committee of nine to consider various matters relating to the organization of and the teaching in our Baptist schools and colleges and to report at the next meeting which will be at Des Moines in June. This committee, made up of men in whom we all have confidence, is hard at work gathering material and will doubtless present a well-considered report based upon the facts as it shall discover them.

Presumably the convention, gathered at Des Moines, will wish to take some action upon this report. A condition which has been so much debated and concerning which so many rumors have spread abroad, demands this. Both the colleges and the churches wish it. Such action should be no snap judgment but the conclusion of men and women who have viewed all the available facts and who have carefully and calmly come to a deliberate and mature decision.

We therefore raise this question: How, in view of the enormous amount of business which must always be transacted at the annual meeting, can such careful judgment be reached if people hear this report for the first time after reaching Des Moines? It is a matter which ought to be debated in ministers' conferences, to be taken up by pastors with the advisory boards of their churches, to be given every possible consideration by individuals. For the decision reached will be of the greatest importance and significance.

In view of this, we suggest that the report, or an abstract of it, be given to the denominational press from a month to six weeks before the convention, in order that our Baptist people may know what they are to discuss and decide. This indeed may be the intention of the committee. In the absence of any information to the contrary, we should naturally assume that it is. Such procedure is democratic and in accordance with Baptist practice. Precedent is also in its favor, for a similar thing has been done in the past with other important reports.

THE BAPTIST is in frequent receipt of letters and articles bearing on this subject. Some are calmly written and some are impassioned. Almost all of them prejudge the subject and announce conclusions on matters which have been submitted to the committee. Some go so far as to anticipate the committee's report and to suggest procedure. Some are calculated to suggest to the committee what its findings ought to be. We are, at present, publishing none of these. We believe that the great democratic body of Northern Baptists desires the committee it appointed at Buffalo to make a real investigation and to come to its conclusions without the pressure which would be exerted upon it by a public and perhaps impassioned and partisan debate. If we are to be true to our own democratic principles, we must not attempt in such manner to influence the committee.

But when the report is known, then we can and must debate it. The withholding of such a report until the time of the convention is not fair to that body nor to the denominational press which wishes to act generously and at the same time to fulfil its function of bringing to its constituency all important information. Neither is it fair to those thousands of Baptists who cannot be at Des Moines, but who are interested in this question and who would, perhaps, wish through their churches to instruct their delegates as to the action they shall take. The convention is never entirely representative; some sections of the country are always better represented than others; and it is contrary to our genius to have far-reaching decisions formed there on a report which the people at home have not had time to consider.

We are therefore asking the committee in this public way to follow precedent and to make this report or the gist of it public early enough, so that nobody need go to Des Moines without knowing in general what he is to consider and decide there.

Prayer for Rulers

IN FORMER days pulpit prayers for rulers and those in positions of authority and responsibility were common. Hardly a Sunday would go by in which such prayers were not offered with the result that they are one of the commonly remembered experiences of childhood. And they were as much a part of the orderly and proper process of life as were the Thanksgiving proclamations with their sonorous ending, "God bless the Commonwealth."

In how many churches is this done nowadays? In more perhaps than we think. During the war there was a revival of the practice; has it survived the ending of the war? In the day of great calamity or great effort men pray for those whom they have elected to positions of power. Do they think that God is not needed when the seas sailed by the ship of state become calmer?

The new national administration faces great problems; the tasks of peace are hardly less arduous than those of war. The governors of states, the mayors of cities and the selectmen or trustees of towns have no easy task on their hands. They need and deserve the prayers of God's people. There is danger, of course, that such prayers shall become an empty form but they need not do so if pastors and people really bear their elected rulers on their hearts.

Prayer is mighty in its working. It moves those who pray and Him to whom it is directed. How can men and women who desire the principles of Christ applied to their own lives and the life of the organized society of which they are a part, fail, both in public and private, to offer "supplications for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceful life in all godliness and honesty"?

Break the Arm That Swings a Sword

AMONG the fondest dreams of God's prophets is that of a world at peace.

Both Gen. John J. Pershing and Gen. Tasker H. Bliss have lately warned the American people against the dangers of militarism and urged steps towards general disarmament. When such as they sound an alarm it is time to listen.

How long will the war madness last and how will it end? Are there no statesmen in the world with insight and moral courage enough to ask that question and power enough to make themselves heard?

More and greater war is coming as sure as sunrise if the race for empire and armament continues. Only a fool or a devil can contemplate the consequences with satisfaction or indifference.

Where did you learn to say that one nation cannot disarm unless all do so? That is the language of feuds, not of faith. If we really believed that all must disarm or none, and we really cared to disarm, what course would we pursue? Surely it would not be our present course; for now we put billions of dollars into preparation for war, and dare not even offer to our neighbors a friendly proposal for a common effort to quit such folly. What nation has frankly, honestly and openly undertaken such a proposal?

If no nation as such can find a way to negotiate disarmament and peace, the international peoples must join hands across national boundaries to do so.

Any rational approach to peace must seek the causes of war and attempt their removal. What is it that causes the nations to strut about the earth, threatening to fight? It is the presence in every powerful nation of a predatory group, intent on grabbing what it can in trade or territory, by craft if possible, by force where necessary, and influential enough to control national policy.

Every such nation pronounces itself immaculate in its international relations and all of its neighbors predatory. Each says that another's fault compels it to arm in self-defense. The pretense is baldly false. All of them alike contain such groups, and the people of all alike are amenable to counsels of peace. If Japan is imperialistic, so also are England, France and the United States. Let us not make fools of ourselves by pretending otherwise. Any of them will fight for territory or trade, and none of them can do worse than that.

On this subject the world's rulers seem to be as blind as bats. Are there no actual seers for such a situation?

How sick of it all the world has become! How the heart of the risen Prince of peace must ache for the people for whom he died! We are coming to the anniversary of his resurrection with its Easter springtide of hope. His churches will call the people to a glowing reminiscence. But is a reminiscence all the tribute we are able to lay at his feet? Far better will it be to rise up ourselves and lay upon the nations the influential mandate that they give the spirit and principles of the risen Christ a fair chance to operate.

The time is at hand to mobilize the churches against war and its cause. If in their present measure of strength they are not able to find a way to make peace, when will they be able, and why else do they hold their present heritage of power?

A new tide of evangelistic fervor is sweeping America. It will head up at the Easter time. What has this new evangelism been doing if it has not been filling up a reservoir of moral power that under the leadership of the Prince of peace can be mobilized by the church as peacemaker of the world?

O, for a faith that can believe thus far in him, can visualize such a mission for the church, can pray for its fulfillment and dares to attempt its achievement!

The Cure Working in Russia

BEFORE the Czar of Russia was deposed scores of our Baptist brethren had been banished to Siberia in the evident hope that thus the hated belief might be suppressed. But the blood of the martyrs has always been the seed of the church, and word now comes that in Siberia 150,000 believers are the result of the spirit of evangelism which fired the hearts and lives of these banished Baptists. The fire has spread back into Russia also and multitudes of the people there are reported eager for the Word and for gospel preaching. Whole villages are being brought to Christ. This is the most cheerful news that has come out of Russia. God not infrequently makes the wrath of men to praise Him. Let us earnestly pray for a great work of grace in that greatly distressed land in order that there may emerge a new Russia which shall delight in honoring our Lord. This is not impossible.

Hayti Is a Fearful Country

HEADLINES in the morning papers on the day these words are written reek with tragedy. A camorra is killing somebody almost every day in Chicago. A race riot is raging in Springfield, Ohio. Wage cuts, bankruptcies and strikes are threatened in the packing industry and on the railroads. Several millions have no jobs. Business is debating whether it shall undertake to smash the unions. The president is pleading for arbitration and nobody is paying much attention to him.

Something of the same story is told in the papers every morning.

In the presence of such a condition, politicians are at their customary fooleries and the churches have their thumbs in their mouths.

Yet they tell us that the United States has a financial, political and military mission to civilize and tranquilize Hayti.

What fearful conditions must exist in Hayti!

* * *

Almost every day brings us some prize editorials. But they are not being received in numbers equal to those of a few weeks ago. Is it possible that our million and a quarter editors have nothing more that they wish to say to the brethren? The fact that a prize was not received the first time should stir to a second trial.

* * *

Like thousands of other men, the editor has just paid his modest income tax to the United States government. And as he did so, it occurred to him that ninety cents of each dollar paid was to help pay the expenses of war, past and future. Somehow, he does not like that; he would much rather pay money looking to the upbuilding of the manhood of the country.

* * *

When men who would, if they had the power, flood our cities with liquor, cease to rave about the failure of prohibition, we shall begin to believe that there is something seriously wrong with the law and its enforcement.

* * *

The quality of being inspired is perpetual in the Bible. In any serious and scholarly translation into any language, or in any honest and intelligent paraphrase or exposition, it is just as truly the inspired word of God as it was in the original writing. It would be a poor translation indeed that could rob the Bible of God's message.

This Week's Prize-Winner Atmosphere

WHAT a wonderful thing atmosphere is! Someone has rightly said that if you want to grow California roses, you must have a California atmosphere. Yes, and you cannot have a great preacher without a great atmosphere. Do those in the pew really realize how much they can help the preacher? It takes at least three forces to make a successful sermon—the Holy Spirit, the preacher and the audience. If it is true, that the speaker gives back in flood what he receives from his listeners in vapor, what a great part the hearer plays!

Suppose that there is no vapor of aspiration and prayer rising from their hearts; suppose there is nothing but cold, careless indifference. What then? The preacher is like one trying to send a telegram over a broken wire. He will fail. What was it that made Peter the great preacher at Pentecost? Was it his fluency alone? No, was it not rather because there were behind him, one hundred and twenty men and women in whose faces there lingered traces of the tongues of fire. With such an audience, who would not be a great preacher?

Dr. Fort Newton tells us that just before he entered that historic pulpit in the City Temple at London, he was a trifle uneasy. But on the vestry table there was a beautiful bouquet of flowers from the women of the church. Attached to it was a little card with these words, "We are praying for you." He said that this atmosphere-creating word gave him new power and poise. Why not do the same for your preacher? Try it, and see how he grows.

Columbus, Ohio.

ARTHUR E. COWLEY.

An Easter Vision

On Easter, like happy children we greet the day with shining faces, and pray that its three radiances may be ours: the shining face, the shining feet, the shining robe

BY HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY

SHINING

THE most beautiful things in the world shine. The glorious sun as he comes from the chambers of the morning shines. The moon slips shining across the still heavens. The steadfast stars break up the night and make it beautiful with their shining. But there is light lovelier than that of glorious sun or radiant moon or steadfast stars. He who has seen the light-house shining over stormy seas, or the twinkling light of welcome in the window of his home, or the firelight playing over beloved faces gathered about the heart, has seen that light. Lovelier yet there shines a light from the eyes of little children, the glance of pure maidenhood, the transfigured faces of lovers, the serene and steadfast eyes of aged saints, and the brooding gaze of motherhood.

This Easter morning we, too, would shine with all the shining world. The air trembles with the wings of angels who bear the Master into the excellent glory from which he came. The very earth shines with hope and joy. Like happy children we greet the day with morning faces, and pray that its three radiances may be ours; the shining face, the shining feet, the shining robe. We remember the shining face that Moses had, though he wist it not, when he came down from the terrible mountain of the law; the shining garments "glistening exceeding white so as no fuller's soap could whiten them" which the awed disciples saw about the glorified Master on the mount of transfiguration; and the feet of the Son of man "glowing like unto burnished brass" which John beheld in the vision.

THE SHINING FACE

THE shining face we all may have, for it is lit from within. Its glory is not in tint nor feature nor lineament of gracious beauty. Often we see it glowing steadily in poor marred faces, as the fairy light shone brightly through the broken walls of the hut in the forest; and there are faces fair to look upon that shine not at all. Love and gentleness, forgiveness and humility and generous blindness to the faults of others make the plainest face shining; and the transfiguring Christ himself works year by year, to soften and refine and illuminate that face.

Dr. Gannett has said that, while we cannot help the face with which we begin life, we are all of us responsible for the face with which we come to fifty years; for we have been creating it through all our life. It is this inner modeling of character that gives the beauty to aged faces,—the good gray heads of venerable old men, the peaceful faces of aged women, full of a loveliness that youth can never show. It must have been such a darling face, the face of the "justified mother of men," about which the story of the old lady and the young girl in the street car is told. They sat opposite, all alone in the car; the girl gazing at the sweet, tender old face, so motherly, so wise, until she could stand it no longer. Crossing the car she said simply: "Would you mind if I kissed you?" Later when the two were great friends, she said, one day, "Weren't you awfully surprised when I asked to kiss you that day?"

"No, dear," said sweet and seventy, "they often do!"

Such attractive grace in an aged face is not the result of inheritance or of accident; it is the accumulated riches of a thousand thoughts and deeds of self-forgetting love, each adding its tiny increment of loveliness.

THE SHINING FEET

HOW beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace," says the prophet, as he thinks of the shining feet of those that go about the King's business. Easter bids us shine, not only with the radiance of inner loveliness, but with the energy of glowing obedience. It is not mystical light of spiritual experience that is typified in those feet of the Son of man that shone "like unto fine brass as if they burned in a furnace." Toil is there, and heat and sweat and anvils ringing, and achieving energy.

The feet of service are the feet that glow. It is lagging feet of sloth and selfishness that bring leaden hours of ennui and isolation. So many errands to run, so many glad tidings to tell, so many wounds to bind up, so many hills to climb, so many messages to bear, so many marches to accomplish, so many glowing feet of eager servants needed for all the doing and bearing and running of errands.

Easter joy waits for the shining feet of consecrated service. Visions of angels and of the Master himself came to the women bearing spices and the two disciples who ran quickly to the sepulchre. If life has seemed gray, and the stars far off, and faith dim, and hope singing no more, is it because service has become cold and lifeless? Has the King's business waited on our sloth and the world's sorrow turned from our self-absorption? Then it is only on the shining feet of lowly service rendered in pain often and weariness, in weakness perhaps, yet in love, that we may bring back the Easter vision and the Easter joy.

THE SHINING GARMENT

THE shining garment! Alas, there is but One who ever wore that in all its beauty. There are spots in all our brightness, flaws in all our service, and the robes of the saintliest get many a stain and tear. None other wears the seamless robe that Jesus wore. His "white flower of a blameless life" bloomed once only in its full perfection. The face may shine, but the petulant still see the scars; the feet may glow with unselfish service, but they stumble now and again in weakness. Yet not more surely does spring weave its robe of flowers to fling over the bare earth, than shining feet and shining face, little by little, bring their possessor the shining garment.

Blind spinners in the sun, we are weaving our beautiful garment. Its pattern cunningly woven of smiles and tears, ecstasies, renunciations, agonies, raptures and disappointments, we never see. Wrapped in the cocoon of the earth life the bright wings of the spiritual lie hidden. We never know how beautiful our brother may be; we wait the revelation of the sons of God.

But Easter is the pledge that sometime the shining garment too shall be ours. "We shall be like Him, for we shall see him as He is"—and when we see that vision there shall be "no spot, nor wrinkle, nor any such thing," to mar its beauty.

Nature Proclaims Immortality for Man

Are planets more substantial than souls? Can anything destroy an atom of me? If the soul's light shine till death, why not afterwards? Does God do better for the crawling worms than he does for us?

BY J. R. TREAT

ANOTHER Easter is approaching and the Christian world will again celebrate a risen Lord. It is a time when the thoughts of millions will turn to the old question "If a man die shall he live again?" Of course, the most satisfactory answer to this question is found in the inspired word of God. Job answers his own question in the affirmative (Job 19-25), and the Bible is full of proof that death does not end all.

There are many proofs of immortality, however, outside of revelation. Weighing these carefully serves to corroborate the Scriptures and to strengthen the faith of every thoughtful person. It is the purpose of this article to refer briefly to some of these proofs.

The argument is based largely upon analogical grounds. What is reasoning by analogy? In simple terms, it is proving things not well established by their similarity to things that are well established. Science has used this method very effectively. Some of the planets were discovered by this method and no one any longer doubts their existence. Chemistry, physics, geology and other sciences have been greatly enriched by the analogical method of reasoning.

Let us see how the method works when applied to the fascinating question as to whether death ends all.

ALL BELIEVE IN IMMORTALITY

Belief in some kind of immortality is as universal as the race. In fact the belief in existence beyond the grave is so universal that it may be regarded as fundamental, as much so as any of our beliefs growing out of quantity, quality, time or space. Hence we may reason by analogy that if other fundamental things relating to the human race have their corresponding realities, as we know they do, the belief in immortality is surely neither a snare nor a delusion—that there must be a reality corresponding to it.

The desire for immortality is also universal and fundamental. The Bible assures us that God hath set eternity (immortality) in our hearts, which means that it is a fundamental thing in human nature. We long for immortality. Now, if other fundamental desires, such as desires for food, water, air, companionship, etc., are gratified and the means of gratification abundantly supplied, may we not reason by analogy that the desire for immortality is also sure to be gratified sometime, somehow and somewhere?

The principle of conservation of matter, now conclusively proven, may be stated as follows: "It is impossible either to create or destroy matter." Its form may be changed, but we can not destroy absolutely. Our homes may go up in smoke; but if all the vapors and gases are gathered up and weighed with the ashes, it is found that not an atom has been lost. If a kind of immortality is thus conferred upon matter, may we not reason by analogy that the human soul, which is able to transform and control matter, being in every way superior to it, cannot and will not be destroyed by any change, even death itself?

The principle of conservation of energy affords similar proof. Science teaches and the world accepts the doctrine that force can neither be created nor destroyed; that we may employ force or energy to perform useful work or we may waste it by friction or otherwise, but we can never destroy it. We may transform it or change the direction of it; but absolute destruction is impossible. For instance, the potential energy of Niagara Falls may become kinetic and be used to run the street cars of Buffalo or to light the streets and homes of cities a hundred miles distant, but not a particle of the energy is thereby lost. Even after it becomes kinetic, it is transformed again into potential energy and thus goes on and on forever. Now, if force or energy is indestructible, can it be possible that the greatest force in the world, the most energetic thing outside of deity—the human soul—can be destroyed by what we know as death! May we not reason by analogy that this can never happen and that physical death, though a great change, does not end all?

He who never connects God with his daily life knows nothing of the spiritual meanings and uses of life; nothing of the calm, strong patience with which ills may be endured; of the gentle, tender comfort which the Father's love can minister; of the blessed rest to be realized in his forgiving love, his tender Fatherhood; of the deep, peaceful sense of the infinite One ever near, a refuge and strength.—Farrar.

WHOSE BODY IS IT?

There is also a physiological argument. The soul is independent of the body. We recognize this when we say "my hand" or "my body." Whose hand and whose body? Ownership is vested in something entirely independent of the body. The foot is no more to the soul than a cane is; the eye is no more to the soul than the microscope is. That Crimean soldier who was shot all to pieces and all of whose limbs had to be amputated was injured in neither mind nor spirit. The soul (mind and spirit) performed its functions just the same. People are stricken with mortal diseases and without any impairment of their soul powers. As a matter of fact, the dying frequently talk rationally clear up to the instant of death. Is it possible that annihilation comes the instant after death?

Again, we never lose our physical identity, no matter how many changes in our bodies occur. We literally have new hearts every thirty days and entirely new bodies every seven years, yet with no loss of identity and we are conscious that we are the same person that we were fifty years ago. The aged mother can see in her gray-headed son the very one she rocked in the cradle in his babyhood.

Now, if all the conditions and changes that we have briefly outlined can occur without loss of personal identity and with no diminution of soul power, may we not conclude with the greatest confidence, reasoning only by analogy, that the human soul will survive every possible change, even that of death itself?

Finally let us get an argument from well known phenomena in nature. At this writing, mid-winter, all vegetation seems to be dead, but in a few months the trees will put forth their leaves and the whole vegetable kingdom will burst forth with life and beauty. Of the many thousands of insects that have been studied and classified, it is found that they all pass through definite stages of growth and development. Take as an illustration the repulsive green worm that we find feeding on our tomato plants. Watch it closely. In a few weeks it spins for itself a shroud and then apparently dies. Even with the aid of a powerful microscope, no evidence of life can be discovered. It seems to be a dead thing, but in the spring a wonderful miracle is wrought. The dead thing comes to life. It no longer crawls, but now flies. It is no longer repulsive, but is a thing of beauty. It has been ushered into a new world and with an entirely changed environment.

Will a loving Heavenly Father treat men and women, created in his own likeness, with any less consideration than that shown to the worms that crawl at our feet? Reasoning by analogy, we say no to this question, and going to the Bible we read that it hath not entered into the heart of man to conceive of the things prepared for them that love God and seek to do his will.

Easter in History

People rejoiced when the sun broke the fetters of the cold and the dark North gleamed with light. Easter marks the triumph of life over death. Baptism is a beautiful symbol for the Easter festival

BY HENRY K. ROWE

EASTER is the festival of life. As the desire for life is the strongest human passion both for this world and the world beyond, so Easter is the climax of the Christian year. Celebrated early in Christian history, it grew in popularity until it surpassed in interest every other of the holy days. The joy-bells rang on Christmas because the Holy Child was born, but Christmas was only the day of promise, not of fulfillment. Lent brought the dark days, when the promise of his life went into eclipse; and at its close the dirge displaced the hymn of joy, as darkness shrouded the cross and the neighboring city.

SUPPOSE THAT HAD BEEN THE LAST

If the day of crucifixion had been the end of the career of Jesus, no matter how beautiful his life had been, the Christian faith would not have made its way the length of the Mediterranean, penetrated the forests of the North, and passed in triumphal progress around the world. Mankind must have a religion of hope. The Italian peasants in their paganism kindled fires on the hill-tops to the sun, when, in spring, he triumphed over the gloom of winter. The German forest folk had their festivals of joy and laughter, when the Easter sun broke the fetters of the cold. Not for them could be a religion that had no resurrection hope.

It is because the story of Jesus did not end at Calvary, that it has attracted pagans. It is because Jesus rose triumphant over death, that the hope of life eternal rekindles in the human heart, and steadies the faith that sometimes staggers in the gloom of experience. The Christian gospel found its way to the heart of the Italian, and he kindled his fires in honor of the living Christ instead of to the distant sun. It entered the heart of the children of the North, and took the name of the German festival for its own. Henceforth, when the season of resurrection came to the earth, there would be the reminder that personality can no more perish, than the life that is husbanded in seed and root can fail to spring into bloom when the vernal sun calls it to the light.

We must not lose the significance of the Easter festival. It marks the triumph of life over death. These are the two great mysteries that baffle our profoundest thought; but we cannot escape them. They enter into the experience of every human being. Always death soon or late interrupts life. Personal affliction touches every heart sometime. Grief and desolation enter every home in every clime. Class strife and national conflicts and racial wars harass and maim and kill, and civilization has reeled under the blows century after century, as it is reeling now. But as often as comes the Easter dawn, there comes a renewal of hope and a re-girding of the heart for better days ahead.

WHISPERS OF BURSTING LIFE

We must not lose the symbolism of Easter, whether Easter eggs remind us of the potency of life that they contain, or Easter music whispers of the bursting life of nature, or Easter baptism typifies the resurrection of our Lord. It is an ancient custom of the church, and one that is peculiarly appropriate on Easter, to observe the ordinance of baptism on that day. It is the symbolism of immersion that makes the form so important to Baptists. To rise from the watery grave is prophetic, as Easter is, of the resurrection that shall be. While we have no reason to restrict baptism to Easter Sunday, there is a peculiar fitness in observing it on that day.

WILL MEN QUARREL AT HIS GRAVE?

It would seem as if nothing should be permitted to mar the observance of Easter, yet early in Christian history a dispute arose among the churches as to the proper date of Easter. Jewish prejudice clashed with Gentile preference, and one more quarrel was added to the hateful controversies that have stained the history of the religion of the Prince of Peace. Strange it is that human passions wax fiercest over the forms that clothe our faith and hope and love. The doctrine of the nature of our Savior, the meaning of the atonement, the observance of the day of hope, these have stirred the ire and aroused the bitterness of those who call themselves Christians. So through centuries a bitter quarrel went on over the date of Easter. It is not helpful to recite it.

It is better to journey here and there, and see how Easter has been observed. In the holy city of Russia it was long the custom at midnight on Easter eve for the populace to gather in the great square, and amid a blaze of light and pealing bells, to bow in worship and to rise with an Easter greeting on their lips. In the Tyrol mountains bands of musicians wound through the valleys and the people sang their Easter hymns as the musicians thrummed their guitars. In America the Moravians have a beautiful way of heralding the Easter dawn. While it is still dark, a trombone choir tours the town of Bethlehem, playing on instruments and singing carols to arouse the people, who rise and throng the church and cemetery for the morning watch. Joyfully they join in the services that greet the day, and the

(Continued on page 207)

The Man Breaker of Gimlet Buttes

The Story of a Resurrection

BY COE HAYNE

COPPERDALE had been in existence two years and now was in ruins. Gil Wadsworth of Gimlet Buttes was blamed for it. Sullenly the little mountain town waited for its day of reckoning with the man who had overgrazed the pastures on the southern slopes.

Two avalanches of mud and rock had rolled across the town leaving a wreckage as complete as if the place had been under a bombardment by heavy guns planted on the ridges of the Red Eagle Mountains that formed a ragged sky-line to the north. The winter had been a mild one even in the high mountain passes. A week of extremely warm weather that coaxed the frost from the ground followed by rain storms of rivalling intensity, started the movement. The water-soaked surfaces of the slopes buckled as the forces of gravity overcame their immobility, and Copper Creek and its tributaries discharged their accumulations of water, soil and rock with a suddenness that was appalling. The sound of the first avalanche was heard twelve miles away. Before its crest reached Copperdale the inhabitants of the town heard its sullen roar above the splash and patter of rain, and escaped to the higher bench land where the copper smelter was located and where the miners had their shanty homes. It was midday, and everyone had an unobstructed view of a town being crushed by rocks weighing from one to fifty tons, and carried on the surface of a mud stream that overflowed the banks of the creek—a spectacle no human mind could forget.

IN THE PATH OF THE AVALANCHE

Above the first concrete bridge the movement of earth and rocks was halted just long enough to show the populace what might happen should a dam be created at that point. From both sides of the bridge streams of mud began to pour, threatening to inundate the greater portion of the town. Fortunately the bridge gave way and the avalanche was not deflected from the creek bed, although it cut a wide path on either side.

The havoc wrought by that first onslaught from the mountains was heart-breaking. All of the buildings on the main street were crumpled; the school house, the town hall and two amusement houses were demolished along with many homes.

Mr. Coe Hayne is no stranger to the readers of THE BAPTIST. For the first time he presents to the public an imaginary story with a missionary theme. He writes: "It was your special request for an Easter story that drew this piece out of my system."

There was the menace of subsequent flood waters which necessitated quick action in getting the creek bed cleared. The state, in answer to Copperdale's appeal for assistance, sent a large gang of convict laborers. Store-keepers, miners, workers at the smelter, ranchmen and stockmen had taken their places beside the convicts in a common struggle to remove the obstructing rocks and tree trunks from the creek bed before another cloud-burst. But Gil Wadsworth, the richest cattle man in the country did not send down his men and teams. It was not his town anyway. The men in it, some of whom were owners of small sheep ranches, had fought him and generally had come out second best. His control of thousands of acres of stock range on the southern slope of the Red Eagle Mountains had been the cause of their jealousy and hatred. He understood that to a dot. Because some of his land had been washed down into the valley, his enemies were ready to shout "overgrazing. Well, let 'em yell." They could pull up their infant town by the roots and plant it elsewhere, and not give him the least offence.

When a second series of violent cloud-bursts followed the first within a week and wrought still greater havoc, the town lost its fighting spirit. The task was too mighty; the threat of the hills too overpowering. The battle with the rocks went on, but it was waged hopelessly by men who had become prisoners of despair. Convicts and freemen alike became victims of the one great dread. Every cloud that blotted out the sunlight and every gust of wind that shook tent or shanty at night, reminded the weary men of forces that were too great to combat. But the disaster that had befallen the town was not greater than the havoc being wrought in the souls of the people inhabiting it.

A sentiment was gaining ground which demanded a victim. Gil Wadsworth, contrary to repeated warnings from forest rangers, had overgrazed his pasture lands. The fact that his land lay outside the Red Eagle national forest did not lessen Wadsworth's guilt in the popular mind. Everyone knew that he had refused pasturage within the forest, offered in the hope that he would place his own holdings under the wise restrictions determined by the forest service. Now that the slopes, divested of vegetation, had been gutted by the continual rains just as the rangers had predicted they would be under such conditions, Wadsworth still scoffed at the experts and at Copperdale. The need of help, the galling fact that Wadsworth remained away and the rumors of his cruel mirth when he heard of the plight of the town, now stirred men's wrath in a way the cattleman's dereliction in the matter of overgrazing would not have done. Copperdale demanded its victim, and Gil Wadsworth, the man breaker of Gimlet Buttes, alone would satisfy the bitter craving of the pack.

A FEUDIST AND KEITH

This undercurrent of viciousness centered around a quiet, giant of a man named Graham, who had the softest of blue eyes, a low, pleasant voice and a will that could not be broken. He was a convict and his family still resided in Copperdale. Before his conviction as an incendiary he had owned a little sheep ranch in the foot hills. He was one of the men who had brought matters to a personal issue with Wadsworth and had come out second best. Wadsworth had furnished six witnesses to Graham's one. The latter had gone to the penitentiary smiling; not impatiently he had looked ahead five years to another day.

The missionary pastor whose headquarters were at Gilroy Junction discovered early Graham's drift of thought, and he knew when it spread to the minds of other men toiling in the creek bottom. He was aware that the psychology back of it was wrong. But Keith Duncan also realized that Graham's pathetic figure could stir the imagination of the dullest of wit among these men, convicts and freemen alike.

During five years Keith had been the only minister in Gilroy Junction just over the divide, and Copperdale had been one of his outstations since the mine opened. Remaining in this remote locality when more lucrative but not more inviting fields had beckoned, he had won the confidence and the love of a constituency which he could not completely classify by means of figures set down in monthly report blanks.

Keith was above all things a man among his toiling fellowmen. The peculiar depth, intensity and fineness of his manhood was unmarred by his familiarity with the everyday emotions of the common men and women with whom he labored. He never imagined that he felt differently from other men; perhaps his training had made it possible for him to feel more. He spent several sleepless nights, following days during which he directed the scrapers at one end of the obstructed creek bed, before he realized that the mud slides and rock slides were, in their power to annihilate, in no way to be compared with the soul-destroying power of despair, hatred and revenge.

JOE GRAHAM'S VENGEANCE

"Joe Graham, I want to say something to you. Don't let the other men of your gang know that we are talking." The low, soothing voice of the pastor did not cause the convict to start in surprise or look up from the stone he was drilling for a charge of blasting powder.

"The guard!" warned Joe.

"I have his permission to speak to you."

"Have you seen the mother and kiddies lately?"

"Nearly every day when I'm here."

"God bless you for that, Mr. Duncan."

"Were you pleased with the price I got for your sheep?"

"You did well considering their condition. Are the children healthy?"

"I'll walk by this point in about an hour and let you judge as to that," replied Keith.

"You don't mean it! And you'll bring Sadie—" The man's voice choked as he bent lower over the chisel.

"Joe, have you been telling these men to get Wadsworth?"

Blue fire blazed through tears as the convict looked up for an instant. "You know that's a job I'll give no man."

"But I've seen the thing grow. They know your story."

"This is my home town. How could I help it? But Wadsworth is my game. The others needn't concern themselves with my personal affairs."

"They are bound to make a break some day, I'm afraid. You should keep out of it. There are men in town who are talking violence of some kind. They talk about you? Yes. But they're making Wadsworth out as an enemy to the whole community."

"Tell them to let Wadsworth alone!" Then followed a suppressed cry, savage, primeval: "He's mine!"

"God pity you, Joe!" said Keith. "You have been forgetting to pray."

The young minister walked on as he caught the guard's signal that convicts were approaching just around a bend.

A SNOWSTORM IN THE MOUNTAINS

After Keith had taken the promised walk with Sadie Graham and her children, he spent what remained of the daylight hours tacking tar paper on the roof of a partly shattered building which he was converting into a temporary community hut.

There followed several nights spent by Keith and some of the "boys" making wooden tables and benches. The missionary expected a good shipment of books and magazines in answer to three or four telegrams he had sent to pastors in Colorado Springs and Denver. A big wood burner which had been hauled back to town from a point on the creek two miles below town added a world of cheer to the room, now that the nights were growing much colder.

A sudden change in the wind brought freezing weather but work on the creek, while it was slowed considerably, did not halt. Rocks always could be blasted although the ground became too hard for steel scrapers. Then snow—three days of it! The mountain passes became choked with it and it lay two feet deep on the level in the valley. Work along the creek stopped and the workers idled near sheet iron stoves in tent and shanty or near Keith's big stove in the hut having plenty of time in which to discuss moodily the uselessness of continuing a work liable to be undone during the next warm shower. This brooding did not improve men's tempers.

Keith had expected to make Easter a memorable day by opening the reading room in the hut. But there was little hope of a train getting over Eagle Pass for many days after Easter, considering the snow storms that continued in the mountains. So when the expressman at Gilroy Junction told Keith, in answer to the latter's inquiry over the long distance telephone, that there were packages for him at his home station, he decided to travel over the pass on snowshoes, with his dog, Brutus, and the toboggan. He hoped to make the trip in four days. The big St. Bernard and Keith had made it once in three days, when there had been a blockade and Sadie Graham needed a diphtheria toxin for two of her children, the supply in Copperdale having been exhausted. But upon that occasion the toboggan had been light, the camp equipment reduced to bare necessities. Upon this occasion the young minister intended to bring in as many books, magazines and newspapers as he and the dog could freight alone. The homes that remained standing in Copperdale were destitute of reading matter; and to supply this means of anchorage for the minds and souls of a distraught people, Keith was willing to make a great venture.

* * *

From the door of his line camp, twenty miles above Gimlet Buttes and his home ranch, Gil Wadsworth stared at the swirling wastes of snow that held him prisoner, and savagely berated the queer shift of fortune that had brought him to his present plight.

WADSWORTH HIDES OUT

When Keith Duncan had telephoned to him from Copperdale that men who blamed him for the woes of the town, and still more for his indifference, were now in a dangerous mood, he readily interpreted the note of warning in the preacher's voice and acted accordingly. He saddled his top horse, packed within the folds of his slicker enough food for two or three days, and left a note for his foreman, who was due to return with a shipping outfit within that time, telling him to send Manuel, the cook, to Line Camp No. 5 with a wagon and supplies to last two men a month and to keep the matter quiet. Wadsworth planned to hide out with his favorite cook for a month or as much longer as "that insane pack in Copperdale howled."

The first morning after Wadsworth reached the line camp he rose from his bunk to find snow covering the ground sixteen inches deep; and it was still falling in smothering blankets. For two days the storm kept up with varying intensity, with the result that Wadsworth was compelled to turn his horse loose or allow him to starve at the end of his rope. The animal floundered through the snow toward an oak thicket and was soon lost to view.

When the storm ceased Wadsworth hoped for a thaw and then a freeze hard enough to crust the surface of the snow. With the drifts in their present condition he could not expect to reach the ranch or receive aid from his foreman. He was a prisoner in a solitary part of his mountain range, caught unawares by a belated winter. While there was enough fuel piled along the south side of the cabin to supply his needs for several weeks, the lack of food spelled ruin unless he could succeed in making a pair of snowshoes out of the old cowhide tacked over one of the windows, together with some willow branches he had cut near the cabin.

The fourth day at the line camp began with a blizzard raging outside and a well-nigh hopeless task begun inside. Wadsworth was clumsy at that sort of thing; furthermore he could not still the argument that he should boil the rawhide for food instead of trying to weave the strips into a pair of snow shoes. For two days he had been without a full meal. He had three biscuits and one can of sardines left.

A DEATH STRUGGLE

Throughout the day there was little abatement of the storm but toward dusk the wind ceased. Looking out upon the white expanse, Wadsworth saw a man and a big dog tugging at a toboggan not fifty feet from the cabin door. He waded out into the first drift as far as he could go and reached out a hand for an end of the toboggan rope. The man beside the dog fell and did not rise. It was not the first time Keith Duncan had fallen that day.

With great difficulty Wadsworth carried the missionary inside the cabin. Then he freed the dog from his traces and dragged the toboggan to the threshold.

"You came just in time," he called to the young man who lay motionless upon the floor where the cowman had laid him. "I hope you're packing plenty of grub."

Wadsworth brought in the toboggan and the pack he had removed from it, and then began an eager search for coffee and whatever food Keith might have in his outfit.

"Food is what we both want!" he declared vehemently. "And I'll sure go on the prod if you haven't enough of it."

"He rummaged through the pack swiftly and when he had examined the last article within the canvas covering he threw up his hands in disgust.

"Books—papers! And Testaments!

Where's your grub?"

"Only a little here." Wearily Keith sat up and indicated a leather bag slung from his left shoulder. "Maybe enough for both of us one day."

"Fool!" Wadsworth surrendered to his bitter disappointment. Towering above the young man he shook a fist in his face. "You're freighting heavy," he scoffed, "but your load is trash! No grub! May the—"

"What I've got is for men—starving, needy men."

"Trash!" repeated Wadsworth hoarsely. "We'll starve now, sure enough! Get back!" The command was addressed to the dog.

Brutus advanced with his teeth bared, his back bristling, causing Wadsworth to back into a corner.

"You would, eh?" snarled Wadsworth snatching the gun at his hip.

Brutus growled a defiance as he

Sometimes we think we are walking the way of life alone, when there is an unrecognized Friend at our side. The two on the road to Emmaus thought that their hopes had been dashed to the ground, while in reality a greater glory had arrived, for "Jesus himself drew near."

stood his ground near his master who could sit erect no longer.

"You hear that, parson? He admits making threats agin me. I'll have his hide."

"We wanted to get down into the valley by Easter morning, Gil," said Keith weakly. "Brutus has put up a big fight. There are men down there starving for beauty and for love. I'd have kept on—"

In days past Keith had been the only man in the Eagle Mountain country except Joe Graham who had dared to stand up before Gill Wadsworth to tell him what he thought of him. A wave of admiration swept over the cowman. Suddenly his right senses returned to him as if a great light had broken through the darkness in his soul.

"Come on away, Shep," he coaxed, and threw his gun into a corner; "that man of yours needs attention."

The dog stiffened, yielding no ground. Nothing could reconcile him now short of a command from his master and Keith was past giving commands. He had not even heard the conciliatory tone of Wadsworth's voice.

Among the traditions of the Eagle

Mountain country there is a story of a fight between a mammoth dog and a man who was unwilling to inflict upon the dog a crippling injury for fear of making the animal unfit for a moonlight journey down the mountain side. When the combat was over the dog lay whimpering in a corner and the man carried his left arm limp, with a handkerchief twisted hard above a cut artery.

ANOTHER WADSWORTH TAKES A HAND

"There son, don't try to sit up," pleaded Wadsworth half an hour after the combat. "You make yourself comfortable in this bunk to-night. You'll be all right in the morning. I've left your grub handy by and put a kettle of water over. Yes, I've just had something to eat."

Wadsworth had repacked the supply of literature and put on Keith's snowshoes.

"Your dog and I go down the trail tonight," said the big man. "They'll all be fighting among themselves at Copperdale to see who comes back after you."

"Do you think you can win through?"

"I reckon we will and they'll have the opening Easter morn true to schedule, eh, Brutus?"

The St. Bernard whined in fear but when Keith spoke to him he bounded forward with a yelp of delight.

"You'll go with this man. He's a friend of mine."

Brutus slowly waved his tail and allowed Wadsworth to pat his head and strap on the harness.

"Gil."

"What do you want, son?"

"Do what you can for Joe Graham. I don't believe he burned your barn."

"I know he didn't."

* * *

At sunrise, eight hours later, Wadsworth, with the dog and toboggan, neared his ranch at Gimlet Buttes from which place he intended to send a party of his own men on snowshoes to Copperdale with the missionary's Easter surprise. The cowman had drawn upon the last atom of his physical reserve and staggered against the gate of the horse corral. From around an alfalfa stack stepped a man as huge as Wadsworth and seized the latter's gun hand.

"Joe Graham!" breathed Wadsworth feebly.

"Yes, I'm present, and ahead of the others by twelve hours."

"You're late, Joe," laughed the cowman. "The Gil Wadsworth you're looking for died last night."

Come, See the Place Where the Lord Lay

What means the Resurrection?—Love is stronger than death.—Nothing is gone but the scaffold.—Three men stand at the open sepulchre and meditate

What Means the Resurrection?

BY MANFORD WALLACE SCHUB

WHAT the resurrection means to me depends on what I mean by the resurrection. If I conceived it to be merely an isolated historical event, I should marvel at it and probably show some interest in the evidence and authority that support it. But to me, personally, living in this far off time, it would have little import.

If I took the words of Paul to the Corinthians very literally, and thought of Jesus as being "raised from the dead," external powers triumphant over his own impotence, I should wonder at such resuscitative energies; but at the same time I should lament over the failure of my Lord to fulfil his promise to raise up the temple his enemies destroyed. And I fear I should seldom turn back to Joseph's sepulchre, because it would have little more significance than the annual miracle of spring-time.

But to me, the resurrection of our Lord is a revelation. It uncovers the deathless energies in his own soul. Instead of being raised from the dead, he arose from the dead. He had in his own hand the power to lay down his life and to take it up again. Paul writes to the Romans that by the resurrection our Lord is "declared the Son of God with power."

Some of the Jews, doubtless, turned away from the cross satisfied that some extravagant claims had been effectually disproved and a troublemaker in Israel disposed of. Others, with despairing hearts, were saying, "We were hoping that it was he who should redeem Israel." But three days later the ringing declaration of the resurrection terrified the first group and electrified the second. At the empty tomb, in characters unmistakable, they read that Jesus the Christ is the Son of God with power; power to rob even death of its sting and the grave of its victory; power against which the rulers of darkness will ever break their weapons in vain.

Now this revelation is most heartening for those who accept it. The only world movements in our time which have signally and tragically failed have been those which were projected through ignorance or indifference to it. Back in 1914, the group of men who made war thought of Jesus as lowly of mien, a child of gentleness and sweet song. Their intelligence bureau and diplomatic corps reckoned with wonderful accuracy the enemies' ships and guns and grainfields; man power, training and organization were not overlooked; but as for a Son of God with power, who was taking a lively interest in men and nations, their eyes were holden and they could not see him. And so, those clever war lords omitted him from their calculations, and their omission spelled their doom.

Today mighty influences are at work that profane everything they touch. We are often reminded that "the Canaanite is still in the land." Crass, insolent and often brutal he stalks to and fro, acknowledging the sanctity of neither law nor life. Our hearts sometimes fail within us, but they need not fail. We did not leave our Lord in a "lone Syrian grave." See! He goes before us into Galilee, into Russia, Armenia, Japan, yes and into Germany. The resurrection ever declares him "Son of God with power." Let us who follow him "carry on."

Love Is Stronger Than Death

By MILTON FISH

A NEW day was beginning to dawn as women wended their way to the garden tomb. The Sabbath being ended, they were free to embalm Jesus' dear body. The new and primitive Sabbath was dawning to supplant the Old Testament Sabbaths. When he cried "It is finished," he abolished the old for the new. Neither the Feast nor the weekly Sabbath brought them any rest. Matthew writes significantly, "In the end of the Sabbaths."

Lo! in the morning, angels guard where once the warriors stood. Garments of white are more potent than coats of mail. Sunlight drives the soldiers back to their barracks. Crude is human militarism. Armies and navies of sea and air can destroy but cannot give life. They can shackle the body but not the soul, coerce the hand but not the heart. Angels that excel in strength can enchain both mind and heart, and draw the will by sweet compulsions. However, during man's day, governments enforce mandates by swords of steel and decide international disputes by weight of cannon and thickness of armor-plate. Our Lord's angels overthrew a quaternion of soldiers as a prophecy of his overthrow of all armies at Armageddon. Wars will be no more when the hinted prophecy of resurrection's morn is fulfilled by the return of the King of kings, leading heavenly hosts.

Sunlight was flooding the garden as the angel said, "He is not here. He is risen as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay."

Both his personality and his flesh rose to resurrection victory. His physical body, the very same that was carried into the tomb, came forth changed, by being rendered deathless and glorified. Sorrowing one, eyeing an open grave, "see the place where the Lord lay." He took man's place in death. He knows what it is to lie down in the last dreamless sleep of death. But as our forerunner he took his flesh up with him from the rotting soil. Spiritually and bodily we believers will experience the same victory over death. If we go down into the grave before he returns, we will come forth bodily. Others shall say of the believer, "He is not here. He is risen. Come see the place where he lay."

As they went to tell his disciples, Jesus met them. But later in the trysting place in Galilee, Jesus came and spake to them. Had they refused to tell, they had not seen Jesus. So in this age, we have blessed fellowship with the ever-present Christ. The great commission conditions his fellowship upon obedience to the evangelistic task. Today he is here to encourage us. Hear His voice, "Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the age." However, a deeper, richer and more intimate fellowship awaits us at the appointed meeting in the air. His promise to return for us makes us passionately eager to give the gospel to saint and sinner. Oh! if today's communion with him is so sweet, what will it be when we shall see him no more as through a cloud darkly, but face to face? Our present experience is but a sample or foretaste of the full inheritance that he won for us by his victory over sin and death.

Mary would fain linger at his feet, but he bade her go on in labor till she came to that distant meeting place. Soon we, with Mary and the disciples, will sit down with him at the marriage supper. He is now laboring that where he is there we may be also. He will bring us into the banquet hall, while his banner over us is love. Of that day we may rejoicingly sing, "When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall we appear with him in glory."

Nothing Gone but the Scaffold

By NEWTON A. MERRITT, JR.

ONCE upon a time I asked a man to build for me a fireplace, and he came to begin his work. First of all he made a wooden frame or core, and this he set in place. Then he prepared to build. There was stone in plenty within easy reach; great blocks that the frost had pried from the rocks, and smoother stones of graceful form and attractive color. These he passed by. "They will not stand the fire," was all that he would say. So he pursued his quest and brought from the fields and the shores the sort that he knew would meet the test. And, at last, the fireplace was finished and he said, "You can build your fire." "But what about the wooden frame?" I asked. "That will burn out and fall," he replied, "but the stone will remain." So we built that fire and many fires, and the core charred and crumbled and burned, but the fireplace remains. Eternal life is the indestructible remainder of a human life that has built about itself an imperishable ideal.

Viewed by itself the resurrection of Jesus was a marvel. As a part of his life, it is but a unique incident in a unique experience. The thing that men failed to understand then, and that we only feebly grasp even now, is that Jesus used all the varied opportunities that life offered as means for upbuilding the spiritual and eternal. The common human events, which the most of men regard as ends in themselves, Jesus took as the temporary framework for the permanent temple. Death, in whatsoever way it might come, would claim his body, his brain; would scatter his material belongings; but the other life that he had been building out of materials independent of time and change would remain.

We must think of this as we think of the resurrection. It was not an event but an evidence, an evidence that what he had said about this eternal part of life—his life and ours—was true.

It was as though the friend with whom you were walking suddenly disappeared behind the great wall that flanks the road. All you know is that you have lost your friend. You go on alone and disconsolate. And as you go, you look up, and for a moment the thick wall grows strangely tenuous and beyond it is your friend. You know the meaning of that glad cry of Mary Magdalene, "I have seen the Lord!" The barrier remains—that something that must always separate the two worlds—but the conviction is born that the life of the spirit is death-proof and eternal.

And by means of the resurrection of Jesus, God has been telling men about eternal life. Not simply that the dead shall rise, nor when nor how, but that life as it comes to us here is only a fragile core upon which to shape the sturdier mould. Eternal life for Jesus began when he set into place those first uplifting thoughts, those acts of faith and love and obedience that formed the habit of his every day. And upon this life of his, seen among men for the few years and then unseen save for those days of unrepeatable privilege, the resurrection has thrown a light that has brought to all who sense it, faith in the Christ, conviction of the great truth of immortality and undaunted courage to go on.

Through a mountain valley in the north woods flows a little river into one of the larger lakes. Two miles away you may stand on a jutting rock, and look toward the place where lake and river meet. But you may look in vain. From dawn until evening there is no break to be seen in the line of the shore or in the forest surrounding it. But when the day is over and darkness has begun to settle upon the lake, from over the shoulder of a towering peak the sun looks back and the unseen lies revealed. For, as you look, there is now one narrow opening in the curtain of the falling night, and, for a moment, you can see, as in another world the sparkling river, the fringing trees bathed in golden light, and the eternal distance beckoning on.

When the Church Awakes

When the Church catches its vision, it will be mighty and impressive. New and awakening civilizations await and call us. Two millenniums have passed since the great commission, and a thousand millions sit yet in the shades of heathenism. Let the Church turn its face to the newer dawns of life, turn its worship into service, deal with the labor problem, exalt home and motherhood, redeem the toiling masses, and its deeds of love shall reach higher than cathedral turrets, and its music of gratitude silence even the angel choirs while they prepare to sing a new song in heaven.—Exchange.

Easter in History

(Continued from page 202)

cheer of those hours remains for days as a benison of hope and peace.

The custom of observing Easter has been general throughout Christendom. Roman and Eastern Catholics have celebrated it with great pomp and display. Popes issued decrees directing the detailed manner of the fasting that preceded and the rejoicing that accompanied it. Pagan customs were adapted so that they should fit into the general celebration. All secular work was laid aside. Sometimes in their abandon the joy of the people gave way to a carnival of delights, but the church took care to see that the day did not lose its Christian significance.

Among Protestants Easter has been observed with increasing regard in recent years. In their reaction from Catholicism the Puritans did not observe the festivals of the church year, and American churches that inherited Puritan thought and ways were slow to alter their customs. But by degrees Christian thought has come to center more and more on Easter. We are transferring our special evangelism to the pre-Easter weeks. We are reserving our baptisms for Easter day. We are making more of Easter music and Easter joy. This is as it should be. To make Easter the focal point of the Christian year is the stress our Christian hope and to strengthen our Christian faith. For a life that shall not perish is our great desire, and Easter is the festival of that life.

Thou Source of Peace

By FRED SCOTT SHEPARD

Thou source of Peace,
Bid sorrow cease,
Speak now the word of cheer
Unto our hearts—
That which imparts
Deliverance from all fear.

Past days have taught
The world hath naught
With which to comfort grief,
To smooth life's road,
Or ease its load,
Or give from sin relief.

Thou didst atone
For sin; alone
Hath power of pard'ning grace;
We turn to Thee,
Our need our plea—
In love reveal Thy face!

Tomoi San—An Easter Story

Jesus taught as well as the sages—no, better—well, the best in the world.—What a Japanese boy found, and did

BY GEORGE W. TAFT

ABOUT twenty-five years ago, in connection with our mission at Kobe, Japan, I conducted an evening school. The classrooms of the First Baptist Church of that city were used. Apart from this, and the voluntary service of an English friend, and the missionary's time, the school was self-supporting. The tuition fees were sufficient to pay the incidental expenses and the salaries of the Japanese teachers, of whom there were from three to five. During the year about two hundred students were enrolled, about forty to fifty being the highest number in attendance at any one time. There were two standing rules: First, every teacher must be a Christian. Second, every student must study the Bible; if in the lower classes, the Japanese Bible; if in the advanced classes, the English Bible, with the missionary as the teacher.

JESUS GREW UPON TOMOI

Tomoi San, a clerk in one of the offices of the city, came to the school for the purpose of studying English. He studied the Bible because it was required. The advanced class was studying Matthew's Gospel in English. The first time that Tomoi began to manifest a deep interest in his Bible work was in the study of the Sermon on the Mount. The Beatitudes appealed to him, and as the poor in spirit, the meek, the merciful, the pure in heart and the peacemakers came before him he said, "Those are very good teachings. Jesus was like the great Japanese sages of the past. He was a great man and a great teacher." When blessings were pronounced upon those who with rejoicing were persecuted for righteousness sake, he said, "That is a little different from our teachers and sages." As we went on through the chapters, he was more and more impressed with the fact that Jesus was very different from Japanese teachers. When "love your enemies" was under discussion, he said, "That is very strange teaching. None of our sages had such teachings." But as he thought about it, he said, "It is very good teaching. It is the best teaching that I ever heard. I really am beginning to believe that Jesus was the greatest teacher the world ever had."

Week after week, as he studied his text, he was impressed more and more with Jesus, the greatest teacher the world has ever known. Then he began to be impressed with the wonderful life of Jesus, as depicted by Matthew, and felt that Jesus lived a perfect life. He rejected the miracles as folk-lore and old wives' fables, but still believed in the teachings and life of Christ, and began to say that Jesus was true, his teachings were true, his life was true. After several months, he became a thorough believer in Jesus as the best and truest teacher and the one who had lived the best and truest life of anyone in the world.

The class studied the story of the trial, crucifixion, burial, and resurrection. The resurrection was the test. What had Jesus claimed? After three days he would rise again. He had said so, time and again, and he was a true teacher who lived a true life. What did the disciples believe? That the same Jesus who was buried had risen from the dead. As Tomoi San studied the appearances, he became convinced that Jesus had risen from the dead, that the disciples saw him, that the resurrection was the ground of their faith and the theme of their preaching. Moreover, the only alternatives were that He was a hypocrite or a dupe. If Christ did not rise from the dead, the foundation stone of Christianity was a lie. By this time, he was so thoroughly imbued with the fact of the true life and the true teaching that he said, "I believe and accept the risen Christ. I believe in the resurrection. I am a Christian." The other miracles took care of themselves for he had accepted the miracle of miracles. A little later he said, "I wish to unite with the church."

CARRIED TWO TESTAMENTS

In the meantime, his teacher asked him, "Do you pray?" "I do not know how. I have heard Professor Kambara, Professor Sasaki, and yourself pray in the classes." He borrowed a Japanese copy of Andrew Murray's "With Christ in the School of Prayer." In a day or two, he brought it back and was asked, "Are you not going to read it?" "I have read it, and I have put it in practice."

Earlier than this, in addition to his English Testament, he had purchased a Japanese Testament in order that he might be more certain of the scripture meaning. About the time that he professed to be a Christian, he bought an additional Japanese Testament. When he was asked, "What is that for?" he said, "To lend to my friends. I talk with them about Christianity, and then I lend them this Testament. Then I talk with others, and also lend it to them." He was soon baptized, and for years has been one of our outstanding Baptist laymen. He is now at the head of a large commercial house. His younger brother whom he helped to educate for the ministry has become one of our strong preachers, but Tomoi San himself has remained a Christian business man.

I told this story to Dr. Wm. Ashmore, Sr., of China, and Dr. Alonzo Bunker, of Burma, and they both testified that in almost every case when a thinking heathen became a Christian he accepted the fact of the risen Christ, and that that resurrection was the bodily resurrection of our Lord.

A Trust Song

When the day is stormy, and no sun shines through

Clouds that gather o'er us, shutting out God's blue,

Think 'tis shining somewhere, and take heart of grace;

Let the joy of trusting take the sunshine's place.

If God send the shadow as he sends the sun,

There's a purpose in it, so—His will be done!

Trust Him, never doubting; trust Him, come what may;

And grow glad in trusting all along the way.

Let us, then, in storm-time, feel that God knows best,

He's behind the tempest, trust him for the rest!

So in faith unfaltering, let the moments run,

Trusting in the shadow, trusting in the sun.

Trust and let the sunshine of God's love shine through Every overhanging cloud that darkens over you.

—Eben E. Rexford.

The Bulletin Board

Maligning the Protestant Minister

Following an editorial which appeared in the Journal-World of that city, the ministerial alliance of Lawrence, Kans., church brotherhoods and other Christian societies are preparing to present to Gov. Henry Allen petitions asking that the state censors eliminate from the films the propaganda now being carried on in which Protestant ministers are always pictured in an unfavorable light, the evident purpose being to undermine the church itself. The Jews who control the moving-picture business have long since seen to it that the Jews are not caricatured in the pictures and the Catholics have made an effective protest. If this movement continues to gain headway it will not be long before Protestants also will have fair play.

Week-day Religious Education in Gary

Week-day religious instruction is now so much in the popular mind that the little booklet put out by those who are doing this work in Gary, Ind., must be of general interest. The work there has been done on a larger scale and with more of a pioneering spirit than almost anywhere else. It has now reached large proportions and touches high-school classes as well as those from the grades. The pamphlet called "Community Schools for Week-Day Religious Instruction," which may be had for 30 cents from the Board of Religious Education, 700 Adams St., Gary, gives the history and methods of the movement and answers almost all the questions which persons interested are likely to raise.

Why be Merciless to Adults?

The British Weekly reports a letter from Rev. Mr. Willcock of Lerwick, in which he says: "I see a correspondent suggests that at a certain point in a service children should be let out of church to escape unintelligible sermons. But why this lack of mercy to adults? Why should they be compelled to stay? My remedy is to stop the preaching of all such sermons. There is something seriously wrong with a sermon if it is not intelligible to a child of eight."

Dr. Clifford Urges Evangelism

Dr. Clifford feels that a proper campaign of evangelism would lift the English Baptist churches out of their present despondency and give them new life. A suggestion made by him recently in a sermon will, it is said, receive serious consideration from the Free Church Council. He said at that time:

"I wish that the National Free Church Council would undertake at its Manchester gathering to appoint a committee for the purpose of preparing for a two years' campaign in the interests of personal evangelism. Let that committee get to work from now till October preparing for a year of internal evangelism within the churches, educating the people in what the mind of Christ means the churches to be, and then a second year of external evangelism among people outside the churches, evangelism in which every phase of human thinking and action should be brought face to face with Jesus Christ, and judged by him."

Is Peace Perilous?

The National Security League is promoting universal selective military training and is commending, with a view to federal action, the plan that has been adopted in New York state. A recent statement issued by the league describes this plan as "in harmony with the spirit of the present hour and crisis of the nation, which calls for trained men with guns in their hands, but it also includes within its effective scope provision for safety against the menace of a peace so long and prosperously continued that the capacity of men for service and sacrifice dies of disuse."

This reflection is interesting in the light of the present movement toward disarmament. Does war alone call for heroic sacrifice?

Church-Going in Baltimore

A canvass was recently made in the city of Baltimore to determine how many people went to church on a given Sunday. The population is 734,000 and probably 600,000 are of church-going age. The morning and evening congregations in 349 of the largest churches showed an attendance of 207,180. Possibly 80,000 more attended the services at the small outlying churches of the city. This would mean that 47 per cent of the population was at church on the given Sunday. This is too high inasmuch as many probably attended both morning and evening; but at least one-third of the people of the city were in church that day. Is there any other city which can equal these figures?

On Two Sides of a Thing without a Soul

What the machine did do was to bring in what is called today 'big business.' And it has come about that both big business and the machine upon which it rests are necessary for the ongoing of the modern world.

But the machine has done more than bring in big business and the means of transportation. It has lined the whole world up in two distinct and hostile camps. The owners of the machines are on one side and those who operate them are on the other. It is nip and tuck between them. It is a Rowland for an Oliver. It is organization and agitation on the one side; it is combination and legislation on the other. On one side it is said, "We own the machine-tools and have a legal right to pile up millions in dividends." On the other it is said, "We ply the tools and you haven't a moral right to pile up millions on the profits of our labor."

There you are, and there you are. On it goes and so it goes, and the end is nowhere in sight. The machine, a lifeless, inanimate thing, has the honor of bringing in the modern age and the reproach of breaking the peace of the whole world. The machine has no soul and has split the soul of the world. Jesus has the cure—but, er—well—yes—there are a good many things that stand in the way of the application of his teaching.—Alabama Baptist.

The New Reformation in Bohemia

Mr. Porter of the American Board mission in Bohemia writes that something like 200,000 people have left the Roman Catholic Church to enter the new national church of Czechoslovakia, and the end is not yet. At the recent anniversary of the martyrdom of John Huss there were at least ten open-air meetings in different parts of Prague, besides very many lectures in halls, churches and other places, where Huss was extolled and Christ was preached more or less. At most of these meetings people were publicly urged to leave the church that burned Huss, and join the national church. The multitude marched in procession, carrying the Hussite flag with the chalice upon it, the old emblem of the Hussite movement.—Record of Christian Work.

"A Star in the East"

The story of the mission field need not be prosaic or uninteresting. A book has just come from the press from the pen of Dr. Edward M. Harris which tells in an intensely interesting way the story of the Baptist mission among the Karens of Burma. Seldom has a story of this nature been told in so charming a manner. It reads like a novel. Both Dr. Harris and his father have been missionaries on this field, and their work has been wonderfully blessed. Dr. Harris writes, therefore, out of his own experiences and those of his family. If anyone wants to know what the result of Christianity is in the Far East he can discover it in this book and at the same time be highly entertained during the process. "A Star in the East" is published by Fleming H. Revell Company.

Individual and Social Christianity

In the section of its report dealing with social problems the Lambeth Conference of 1920 declared: "We do not for a moment deny that the primary business of the church is to deal with the individual. Personal relationship with God in Christ is vital religion, and without personal conversion our labor will be vain. But we want the conversion to be real and complete. The converted life is Christ-centered, not self-centered; it means the acceptance of Christ as king. And if he is king anywhere, he must be king everywhere. He cannot be excluded from politics or industry or from any of our social relationships."

Balasure Children Answer Europe's Appeal

A few weeks before Christmas the little children in the Baptist mission Sunday school in far-away Balasure were told of the suffering and want of the children in Europe. The stories of hunger and cold made such an impression that the mission children in the spirit of true Christian love offered to lay aside a part of their daily portion of rice each day until Christmas Sunday. At that time the offerings of rice—and of money and clothing—were gathered together and sent on their journey to Europe.

Culinary View of Church Union

The Continent (Presbyterian), speaking of definite propositions looking towards church union, remarks that it may as well be made perfectly plain at the beginning that "if Presbyterians are for church union they will have to be in favor of giving up some things Presbyterian." And then it gives what has been called a culinary view of Church union:

"There is a very homely proverb which may be commended to grave and reverend thought among ministers and elders as their presbyteries take up the question of church union involved in the proposals of the Philadelphia conference, which were referred to them by the General Assembly of last spring. The opinion may be confidently risked that the most reverend and gravest of presbyters have heard it before: 'You can't have an omelet without breaking eggs.'

"There may be objections to the now pending plan from the standpoint of those who are eager for union—in fact, there are such objections; but the stress of such lawful and valid criticism rests not on the dread of abandoning the peculiarities of Presbyterianism, but on the fear that nobody concerned counts on abandoning enough to make any real union possible. For gentlemen whose anxiety is of this nature it is more in point to revise the proverb thus: 'You can't have an omelet without giving it time to cook.' Indeed, we surmise that the most enthusiastic sponsors of the Philadelphia proposition do not themselves regard it as much more than a pre-omelet breaking of eggs. Once that much is effected, they put trust in the warm fervors of Christian fellowship over which the unity omelet may be brought to later perfection. So the real question before each presbytery is, still speaking in culinary parable, 'Do you like omelet?'"

Start Up the War Again, Brethren.

French farmers, according to a report in the New York Times, never prospered so greatly as during the last six years. The reporter "talked with men who went off to the war penniless seven years ago that now own a score of acres around their two-room cottage and have 30,000 francs hidden in their coarse wool mattress." Charming! And it is a remarkable coincidence that he should have lighted upon "men," a liberal number of them no doubt all alike, who had just so many acres and just so many francs just so hid in the same kind of mattresses. How war has blessed France!

Off with the Dance!

Methodists may have trouble with the Discipline about the dance, but some of them have no trouble to see clearly about the subject. Witness this from the Epworth Herald:

"What's the trouble? Why, much the same trouble as the State used to have with the saloon. The dance business has simply got to be regulated, says everybody. But how? The unsupervised public dance hall is called one of America's great social problems. It appears in the reports of vice commissions as well as recreational surveys. During the war the government found the dance hall standing squarely in the way of its fight against venereal disease. The public dance hall, says an authority in the Survey, must be supervised. It must pay a license fee, but also it must be divorced from politics. (Don't laugh!) For the second violation of the license conditions, the license should be forfeited. Boys and girls with sportive tendencies should be reported to their parents. It must have more police—that is to say, supervisors. The jazz orchestras must be restrained. The hall must be brightly lighted. It must be situated (in Cincinnati, this is) a certain distance away from any church, school, or public library. The hall must close at eleven o'clock p. m. Women without escorts must not be admitted (this is in Lansing, Mich.) The matron must know what dances are harmless and what are dangerous—a sort of 2.75 per cent test, you see. Minneapolis will not permit an alien to run a dance hall. Honestly, if the thing were not so tragic, all this would be a theme for the comic muse—municipal authorities running here and there, trying this and that, to keep within bounds a business whose largest profits depend on its breaking out of bounds."

Send Warships to Warsaw.

"The presence of the United States fleet along these shores has checked the typhus epidemic," says an Associated Press report from the Adriatic. If the "presence" of our fleet can do a thing like that, it may be advisable to steam that fleet overland from Flume to Vladivostok as a sanitary measure.

Confer, Fellow Citizens.

Leaders in the industrial and educational world are planning to hold a conference "to promote a better public understanding of the great present world problems in order to facilitate action by the new administration in our foreign policy." Group conferences and community conferences to the same end ought to be held among people of all classes throughout the country. The new administration is going to need all the light it can get from the matured judgment of the people. Confer, fellow citizens, until some common judgments are achieved.

Will Not Let Him Rest.

In addition to all of the expressions of dissatisfaction which followed the heels of Mr. Burleson while he continued in the office of postmaster general, the New York Call, Socialist daily which he forbade the use of the mails, is now suing him for damages to the amount of $500,000.

Bamboozled, Maybe.

The Herald and Presbyterian notes with alarm a report that propaganda of anarchism, Bolshevism and radicalism have invaded the Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopalian and Roman Catholic churches. Such a report is not new, but why should such a paper accept it as true?

Methodists Will Stand by the Report

When the report of the Interchurch committee on the Steel Strike was published, there was some curiosity to know what attitude towards it the Methodist Church would take. The sticking point of curiosity lay in the fact that Bishop Francis McConnell of that church was chairman of the committee making the report. Would the church back up the bishop, or would it, in the face of a powerful and enraged opposition, dodge the issue and leave the bishop to his fate? Methodist papers are giving clear answer. They are standing by the report.

Giving "Color" to Sovietism.

Along with animism, Mohammedanism and other none-Christian cults pervading or invading Africa, comes sovietism. Witness this recent official call issued to natives in the heart of Africa: "I. W. W. Local No. 123 will meet tonight in the second house on the jungle side of the kraal. Subject of lecture: 'Superiority of the Soviet Over Capitalistic Society,' to be followed by unveiling of Lenin portrait. Members will come prepared to sing the first and second verses of the 'Internationale.' Admission by red card only." By the time Protestant denominations are ready to undertake the evangelization of Africa in earnest, that continent will be in a condition to test their missionary mettle keenly.

The Camel Sticks in Their Throats.

Baptists in England, according to the Times and Freeman, participated in a conference on the "Lambeth Proposals" for union issued by the bishops of the Anglican church; but they got no further in a conference of two hours than to redefine their differences. At the end of it, the Times and Freeman says, "the dean (Inge) seemed hopeful that some understanding might be reached by Anglicans with Presbyterians and Wesleyan Methodists. As for the others—well!" That "well!" indicates a rising gorge in the throats of British Baptists. They simply cannot swallow the "historic episcopate."

Thirty-one Things to Keep Still About

Representatives of seventeen Tokio newspapers, it was reported a few days ago, drafted a strong resolution of protest against official suppression of news. They demanded freedom of speech and of the press. At the present time there are thirty-one news subjects under the ban of the censors. Unless given assurances that the censorship will cease, the newspapers plan a series of mass meetings in which an appeal will be made to the public. When they try to hold those meetings, look for a good display of 100 per cent patriotism in breaking up such assemblies.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lessons for April 3

THE IDEAL CHRISTIAN

Rom. 12:1-2, 9-21. Golden Text: Luke 6:31

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

"Some Social Teachings of the Bible" is the general theme for the lessons of the next quarter. It is the aim of the lessons to enlighten the pupils on the art of living with others and to encourage them to practice the art. The Christian religion is a social religion. It is designed to fit individuals to live in right relations with society and to prepare society to live in right relations with the individual. In the first eleven chapters of Romans Paul treats of the great doctrines of theology, or the science of God; in the last five chapters he deals with the great doctrines of society, or the science of social living. The first two verses of the lesson connect the theology of Paul with his sociology which begins with verse three of chapter twelve.

The Lesson Taught

The ideal Christian lives in right relations with his God, with his brother and with himself.

Ideal Religious Relations

We speak of a man's relation to his God as religion. This relationship is primary. It takes precedence over all social and personal relations. "God first, my neighbor second, myself last," is the correct order. Another has put it in this phrase, "Love thyself last." A true theology is the soil out of which grows the flower of brotherhood. The opening verse of our lesson is significant because it is a plea based upon the great doctrines of Christian theology as interpreted by Paul in his letter to the Romans. It is as though Paul had said, "The practical issue of all I have written heads up in an appeal for the enlistment of life in the service of God. Do not rest in the intellectual process of interpreting God; present your bodies to him as a living sacrifice, for it is only by this serious and sincere consecration of personality to God that you can be fitted to maintain the right spirit toward society." Ideal religious relations are an experience interpreting a philosophy. We must avoid the fiction of having merely a theoretical God, however well defined by words. The test of any theory is its application. Into the laboratory of Christian experience Paul carries his philosophy of God as outlined in his letter to the Romans, and with the flaming passion of a true prophet cries, "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God." By this test must his theology stand or fall. The ideal Christian life is primarily expressed in a genuine Christian experience of consecration to a life of sacrificial service in the consciousness that such a life is in harmony with the good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

Ideal Social Relations

The lesson should cover the entire chapter, because from the third verse on to the close, ideal social relations are set forth. Paul never gets away from his favorite figure—the body. The members, however diverse their functions, all unite in the body. On this biological basis Paul built up his philosophy of society. He regarded the church of Christ as the type and form of universal brotherhood, and the church as one body in Christ. All diversities of race, nationality, social condition, sex and service found their common center in the church. The slave was Christ's freeman and the freeman was Christ's slave. Equality of rights and privileges was the fundamental doctrine of Paul for society. On this principle he fought his battle with the advocates of circumcision as a condition of Christian brotherhood, and won. He deplored the middle walls of partition which race and religion had built up, and rejoiced that Christ, the Savior and Lord of all the people, had broken them down. He pled with the Christian churches to cultivate the social consciousness, to cherish the mind of Christ, to make love the ruling principle of their fellowship. Every exhortation of the lesson is either a direct social appeal or has an indirect social bearing. The twelfth chapter of Romans is the sermon on the mount condensed. When one considers the atmosphere in which this letter was written and received he will appreciate the spirit and power of Christian teachers like Paul and Christian churches like that in Rome. It was an atmosphere of slavery and contempt of honest toil, of autocracy and contempt of human rights, of persecution and contempt of human freedom and justice. Measure the magnanimity of Christ with the monstrosity of Caesar, and you will have a faint idea of the social heights to which the Christians of the first century had climbed. The lesson is a direct contradiction of the social philosophy and practice of Rome and contradicts much of the social philosophy and practice of the twentieth century.

Ideal Personal Relations

The ideal Christian is not complete without self-respect and self-control and self-denial and honest self-judgment. The Christian religion does not destroy self. Personality is really the most valuable asset in the whole list of things appraised by Jesus Christ. Only as a man gives himself up to God and in the measure in which he gives himself up to God for sacrificial service does he find his powers and consciousness of personality enlarged. That is one of the paradoxes of Jesus: "He that loseth his life shall find it." Paul in this lesson calls upon individuals to appraise themselves on the basis of their social relations (verses 3-4), to humble themselves with the lowliest member of society in mind (16), and to conduct themselves in such a way under the most adverse circumstances that no one can charge them with being vengeful or even resentful (17-21).

Vacation School Notes

CHICAGO ASSOCIATION

"In vacation Bible schools we had sixty-one Baptist schools, enrolling 9542 boys and girls, 974 volunteer workers and sixty-four paid workers, making a total of 10,580. The missionary offering amounted to about $400.

"At the present time we are engaged in a city-wide simultaneous increase campaign in all of our schools. We have set out to increase the attendance of our Baptist schools in our Chicago Association 2000 per Sunday. We are finding great interest in all of our schools in increasing the attendance and in making the schools more efficient.

"We are working out several experiments on week-day instruction in co-operation with public schools and several experiments in week-day instruction in the form of continuation classes along the line of daily vacation Bible schools" (Albert H. Gage).

NEW YORK

"New York state went into the daily vacation Bible school in earnest, with a big increase in both city and rural schools. We conducted four training conferences for workers, two of them in co-operation with the state Sunday-school association. Two of our rural schools were a marked success.

"Week-day religious education is forcing itself upon us here faster than we can attend to it, and must have much attention this year.

"Two full half-days of the state convention are given to religious education matters, besides the two young people's sessions. That marks much progress. One afternoon is given up to a school of methods, three simultaneous sessions—one for elementary workers, one for the teen age, and one for adults and organization. Most of the addresses are by successful pastors and superintendents, rather than by specialists. The addresses will give us methods that have worked and are working." (Chas. W. Briggs).

The Chimney Corner

A Thought for Lent

THERE is a certain gentleman very dear to us who received in the morning mail an unexpected pleasure. "Look!" he called happily, and handed us a typed copy of some verses about "Touching Shoulders." Written by hand across the top were the words, "This is the way I feel about you!" together with the initials of the sender.

And the beautiful part of the whole affair was the naive surprise of him who had received the poem. "But you are all that," we cried, "and more!"

Whereupon we fell to wishing that we also could touch shoulders and leave a little trail of winsome memories behind us, until with sudden insight we said to one another: "But what is Christianity except just that? It's the one sure thing we busy mortals inevitably do, day in and day out!"

So we decided that through Lent, when others were giving up candy and movies and parties, as for us, we would simply rub shoulders,—not for praise or credit or poems in the mails: indeed we have not yet succeeded in becoming heroes to our valets nor heroines to the maid servants within our gates, nor even noticeably improved in our friends' eyes! But the glory of being human has descended on us. And we glow with the wonder that the spread of the kingdom is brought about by means so simple: yellow shoulder touching yellow shoulder, black shoulder touching black shoulder, the whole world around, as you shall see by reading of Nana.

Nana, The Mother

NOWADAYS there are in the forest of the Kamerun interior in West Africa many thousands of cabins where Christian women pray, but in the middle nineties there were only two such cabins, and one of these was the home of Minkoe Ntem. And if today many thousand mothers speak to their little ones in Bulu dialect of the things of God, in those days there was just one such mother, and that was Minkoe Ntem.

It was not for nothing that Minkoe Ntem's hut was built in the middle of the street. All the other houses in the village were built in two rows, with the cleared commons between them—two rows of little bark huts thatched with leaves, and between them the cleared commons.

Minkoe Ntem's house was made of plates of bark like the others, and thatched with palm leaves. The clay floor was worn into holes. From the roof-tree hung baskets filled with corn or with peanuts. These baskets were smoked brown. Everything in that hut was smoked brown but the dear white head of Minkoe Ntem and her teeth when she laughed: for at one end of the interior the fire smoked between two beds slatted with bamboo and covered each with an old grass mat. Bits of rough-hewn wood had served so long for stools that they were worn to a polish, and you were welcome to one of these if they were empty.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

How rarely Minkoe Ntem sat alone in her hut I am reminded as I think back! It was not for nothing that her house was built in the middle of the street with an open door both ways. In the morning and the evening of how many days I have put my head in at one of those doors! There would be guests sitting about on the bit stools in the brown dusk of that little cabin—neighbors or visiting women from the Elat district with their Christian faces, or women of the Ntem tribe bridled

Touching Shoulders

THERE'S a comforting thought at the close of the day.

When I'm weary and lonely and sad,
That sort of grips hold of my crusty old heart,

And bids it be merry and glad;
It gets in my soul and it drives out the blues,

And finally thrills through and through—
It is just a sweet memory that chants the refrain:

"I'm glad I touched shoulders with you!"

Did you know you were brave? Did you know you were strong?

Did you know there was one leaning hard?

Did you know that I waited and listened and prayed,

And was cheered by your simplest word?

Did you know that I longed for that smile on your face,

For the sound of your voice ringing true?

Did you know I grew stronger and better, because

I had merely touched shoulders with you?

I am glad that I live, that I batter and strive

For the place that I know I must fill;

I am thankful for sorrows—I'll meet with a grin

What fortune may send—good or ill.

I may not have wealth, I may not be great

But I know I shall always be true,

For I have in my life that courage you gave

When once I rubbed shoulders with you!

and harnessed with beads, and collared and fettered with brass. There Minkoe Ntem would be sitting by the fire, a little old woman with a white head, making love to her guests—my heart remembers how! It was not for nothing that we called her Nana, which is the Bulu vocative for mother; for she was mother to so many. She began to be mother to me that day I saw her first, the day I came first to Efulen station, from the green forest to the north on a blue day of the dry season. I was passing that little hut in the middle of the way, too silly to know that I should put my head in at the door, when Minkoe Ntem ran out and embraced me—a little brown mother, God-given to missionaries.

Nana was all maternal. God had given her this treasure in an earthen vessel. A little brown jar she was, full of clear water from the springs of maternal kindness. For this, many wayfarers frequented the hut that was built in the middle of the street—she was there to slake the thirst of black and white.

Of the first deep thoughts of this friend of ours I have an account written on a lovely morning when we had a crack together. She was telling me the thoughts of her heart before she heard the Word. She lived, it seems, far back "in the morning," as the Bulu say of their youth, in a town that was the town of Moonda. In that town there was great ignorance of all the things of man but the things of the body—as indeed, why not? Who knew? But they wondered, too. When a woman's child was born and it lay upon her knees, she looked at its little hands and its little feet and the little body of it and marveled at the little image and asked in her heart, "What great cunning has been at work here?" Many women wondered thus in their hearts. And so did Nana, who bore many children and wondered much at their little bodies. Then there was death. When a child of hers died and lay thus upon her knees, she wondered: "All these people of mine that I put in the grave, where do they go?" But what little wisdom she and her husband had drew them to rise up and leave the town of Moonda, and they came to the region of Nkonemak. Here her husband died. Here too came Ngoto (Dr. Good). So she heard the Word, and learned that God is Lord of the bodies and the souls of men.

"Eke! Ngoto!" How well she remembers a day when she took some eggs out from under her hen and gave them to Ngoto; and some of them were bad eggs, and he said: "I forgive you, Minkoe Ntem; the fault is not yours!"

Eke! Minkoe Ntem! So we spoke together in your dim little hut, with your dear little body pressed close against mine, while outside the lovely morning was bright on half the world!

This mention of Dr. Good, that first servant of God to the Bulu, was very characteristic of the conversation of Nana; in and out of her narrative he wandered, trailing clouds of glory. And yet he was accessible, a person to be presented with eggs or a handful of peanuts roasted over the fire; a person to be refreshed, I infer, from the little brown jar that was beginning to overflow with maternal kindness.

Another of our missionaries remembers the comfort of that little human presence in the valley of the shadow. All one night when their white woman lay at the door of death on Efulen hill Minkoe Ntem shared the vigil down below in the village. This was long ago, before the dawn of the Lord's day in the Kamerun.

For the conversion of her three living children she travailed. She bore those three strapping Bulu girls into the kingdom upon her heart. Her sister, too, she converted, and how many of her neighbors who shall say? Or how many Ntum women, bridled and coiffed with beads. Stranger bodies from alien tribes were ever dear to her. She was made nigh to them in Christ; for them her hut was built in the middle of the street; those open doors were for them; for them those little stools, and the fruit of Minkoe Ntem's garden and the broken Word of God. Yes, she would sleep upon the ground that they might sleep upon her bamboo bed. And for them were the last agitations of this passionate maternal heart and the last prayer. "My heart is hung up," she told her sister Zamo, "for women of the Ntum tribe. You and I must travel that way!"

But God called her upon another journey. Other women of her neighborhood and tribe, in memory of the last desire of one so dear to them, are at work among the Ntum women.

She was, I say, a little brown jar full of the water of maternal kindness. And then I think: surely that water was drawn from a deeper than mortal well, from a well of living water. There was in that water a more than earthly sparkle, there was the coolness of the shadow of a great rock and the reflection of the bright and morning star.—Jean Kenyon Mackenzie, in a Presbyterian leaflet.

The Young Reserves

The Log of the Flying Pig

CHAPTER VII

EVERY new day our ark was such fun that we hated to think how nearly the trip was over; we ticked off the remaining time each morning at breakfast: ten more days—then seven—then three—then oh dear! only one more! For at the town of Tupper's Crossing some friends of father's were to take possession of The Flying Pig and be "Noahs," while we rode back home in their automobile. As Bill said: "Give me an ark-omobile any day, though!" Fords had lost their charm. And we knew nobody would ever admire us as Jake did! He actually thought Bill's stupid "Log" was wonderful, whereas it was only a dull record of dates, temperatures, new bugs and new flowers we had learned. But the very fact that we knew so many flowers seemed marvelous to Jake, to whom every flower with oblong petals was a daisy, while every blue flower was a violet!

This was especially evident on the last day of our ark-trip when mother's birthday occurred. Jake stopped at a farmhouse and picked three of the largest sunflowers you ever saw: regular cart-wheels they were. We shall never forget how he poked them at her and mumbled: "Here's some daisies from me and Fanny-Anny, mum, with the compliments of the season, mum!"

Daisies!

And "implements"! But dear mother wore his daisies in her belt all day, and looked ravishing. Most ladies would have laughed.

Bill and I planned a wonderful surprise party for supper, only it turned out more of a surprise than we expected. All morning we worked in the kitchen and in secret corners of the deck. We set Timothy to weaving garlands of daisies (really trulies, not sunflowers!) to loop around mother's neck, and I evolved the most unusual potato salad that ever was! On each plate I put a whole boiled potato—this was the head. Two green peas were eyes, a crescent was easily cut from a slice of red beet to form a smiling mouth, while a funny dab of mayonnaise in the middle made a beautiful nose! A lettuce leaf curled over the face served for a hat, two uncut green beans formed bangs down each side of the face and a ruffle of mayonnaise was the neck. It was a regular work of art, as you plainly can see; even Bill said it looked "easy to eat!" We had bought ice-cream at our last stop, so we cut it in slabs with a chocolate drop in the center and shelled peanuts radiating from it like the petals of a brown-eyed Susan. Bill made clever little baskets of thistles to hold the birthday candy; then we concocted a huge table cloth from a very big sheet of wrapping paper, on which we painted peculiar pictures with jingles to show where each of us was to sit. For instance, Bill drew a very leggy Fanny-Anny and wrote:

"Tailing the Donkey is very hard work,
So Jake is to sit here and lazily shirk."

At mother's place I painted a golden crown with this verse:

"The queen of the party will kindly sit here

And balance her crown over each ear."

Everybody's jingle was appropriate, although I liked mine best (by Bill):

"The Noahs now take their next-to-the-last look

At the dreadful concoctions prepared by their cook!"

At supper-time we smuggled everything on shore into a mysterious little green dell beside the towpath, which seemed designed especially for picnics. We fixed everything "just so," then rushed on deck to summon the others. We looped mother in Timothy's garlands and led her over the gang-plank by daisy chains into our dell, when behold! Standing around our fancy table stood four spellbound children and two staring women with shawls over their heads. They simply stared and stared at the comical tablecloth and the absurd salad that made faces at them—I really believe they thought the fairies had been at work until we mortals appeared on the scene! Well, of course we had never laid eyes on them before, nor they on us. Moreover they weren't invited, and there wasn't going to be enough to go around, but I knew mother! She'd share her tiniest crumb with a stranger, so sure enough she picked up her plate of salad and proudly pointed out the comical features to the admiring foreigners.

"Dobra! Dobra!" they clucked, and pointed dirty fingers at the mayonnaise nose and the beet smirk. So before any of us knew how it happened mother had us all sitting squeezed into a circle meant for six but including twelve of us, each of the Hathaways and Jake with an unexpected twin to share things with. And not a single twin knew a word of English!

But mother soon discovered that "dobra" must mean "fine," so then we all shared our dobra this and our dobra that until we laughed ourselves into a merry gale.

"They're Poles, I think," mother said in a stage whisper. But Timothy solemnly patted his twin on her arm as he said anxiously: "But I don't fink mine's a telegwaff pole, muvver!"

Well, the sun finally set, and those six dear spooks began jabbering excitedly; then in honor of our hospitality they danced the quaintest strangest dance you ever saw. They hummed their own weird music as they clogged and curtsied round the dell. It made me think of enchanted frogs in some fairy tale. We all felt very friendly with them, and when the grass grew far too dewy we said goodbye as if we just couldn't let them go. But mother in her own dear way had actually discovered their names and address, so we kissed them goodbye and trooped on deck waving our hands until they became mere specks off in the distance.

Then mother said: "Its been the cleverest, beautifullest birthday I ever had, my dears! And when we get home we'll send things to the Jackinowitches: stories in Polish, you know, and mittens and things."

We did, too, all winter long. Only, of course, this was weeks later when the Flying Pig was only a lovely summer memory—but the six spooks kept on lasting forever and ever, as I'll tell you by and by, if the Chimney Corner editor is polite enough to ask me—provided, of course, that you yourselves want to meet Bill and Timothy and the rest of us again!

THE END

Young People's Work

Topic for April 3

THY KINGDOM COME. IV. IN MY COMMUNITY

Matt. 6:7-15 (Consecration Meeting)

"Let Thy will be done, as in heaven so on earth."

We sometimes fear that half the people who pray this "model prayer" have absolutely no idea of realizing the thing for which they pray. In fact, they would be surprised should their prayer be answered.

Suggested Literature: "Serving the Neighborhood," by Felton.

1. A Definition: What do we mean when we say "our community"? Perhaps just our own set; our school group; the people who attend our church. The community we are to consider is made up of all kinds of folks; peoples from every nation, living next door to us, in our village, or across the city from us.

2. Varieties of Life: The foreigner with his continental Sunday and in many instances low moral standards; the native "high" American with "low" ideals, thrown together in what we choose to term our "melting pot," produce a type of life of which we are not very proud. This life manifests itself in the baser sort of amusements—blood and thunder movies; the latest diabolical wriggles to the strains of the saxophone, in unsupervised dance halls. Then, young people of Christian homes feel that in order to be up to date, they, too, must partake.

3. The higher ups: Perhaps these are more dangerous than those mentioned above. They are the church folks, if you please. They honor the church and the pastor by their presence on Sunday morning, only. Really, they find it very taxing to attend Sunday evening services! But, this indifferent mother instead provides a "tea dance" for her daughter and invites the "select" young people of the church to attend. This desecration of the day of worship finds expression in attempted dancing in church parlors on a Sunday evening, while the more interested young people earnestly seek to carry on their expressional activities.

4. What are we to do? Certainly we cannot sit around and criticise. Mere negation is destructive. The church must have a program. That program must be based on the actual needs of the community. These needs can be known only by a careful study of all the forces at work in the community. When these forces are properly valued every member must accept his share of making the community Christian. The church must do more than provide two sermons on Sunday and conduct a Bible school. Wherever there is need the church must

Speakers for Thirtieth Anniversary Convention

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION OF AMERICA

CINCINNATI, OHIO, JUNE 30—JULY 3, 1921.

S. R. VINTON

F. E. TAYLOR

A. RAY PETTY

G. A. CLARKE

F. F. GIBSON

N. B. HENDERSON

F. K. SINGISER

W. F. REYNOLDS

F. A. AGAR

go, whether it be around the corner or across the sea.

"In solemn truth I tell you that in so far as you rendered such services to one of the humblest of these my brethren, you rendered them to me."

Our Own Folks

Des Moines University Takes Forward Steps

Dr. John W. Million Is Now President

After careful consideration of a number of men, the trustees of Des Moines University have elected as president of that institution Dr. John W. Million, who, for the past twenty-five years has been connected with Hardin College, Mexico, Mo., and for a large part of this time has been president of that school. Dr. Million was graduated from William Jewell College in 1889 and was thereafter a graduate student at Johns Hopkins University, University of Chicago, University of Berlin and the University of Missouri. At Hardin he has been notable for his unquestioned and demonstrated ability in handling financial matters, his patience and persistence in carrying a hard task through to a successful issue, his high standards and proved efficiency in educational matters, and his sincere devotion to the highest ideals of the Christian religion. He is regarded by competent judges as one of the ablest Baptist educators in Missouri. It is believed that he will command at once the confidence of the business men and the pastors of the state. Both he and the new chancellor will take up their work at the close of the commencement season this June.

Dr. Loran D. Osborn Becomes Chancellor

In the judgment of the board of trustees, the adequate development of the university requires the services of two men especially qualified for their respective tasks. The president will be responsible for general administration and will give his special attention to the public interests and constituency of the institution and the securing of adequate financial support and equipment. In order that he may be free to devote his energies to these aspects of the work, the office of chancellor has been created and the incumbent of this position has been made responsible for the internal and educational administration of the institution, including the selection of the faculty and the supervision of the class work and student body. Dr. Loran D. Osborn, who has been spending his year's leave of absence from the University of Colorado in the internal administration of the school this year, has been elected as permanent chancellor to fill the new position.

Dr. Osborn is familiar with educational work both in denominational colleges and in state universities, and the trustees feel that they are fortunate in securing his services for the university at this time. Dr. Osborn took the first two years of his college course at Kalamazoo College and the last two years at the University of Michigan. He spent four years in post-graduate work, one at Newton Theological Institution and three at the University of Chicago, receiving his Ph. D. degree from the latter institution. For eleven years he was pastor of churches in Illinois—at Elgin, Centralia, and Bloomington. From Bloomington he went to the presidency of the old Des Moines College, where he served for six years, until 1911. For the past eight years he has been professor of sociology and director of the extension division of the University of Colorado, at Boulder, where he inaugurated the extension work and built it up into a well-organized and influential department. In Colorado, Dr. Osborn entered energetically into social welfare activities of the city of Denver and of the state, and when he left last fall was president of the state conference of social work and chairman of the state Americanization committee. He received a hearty welcome back to Iowa, where he is well known and with whose conditions and educational needs he is already familiar.

DR. JOHN W. MILLION

The New Name Now Settled

It will be recalled that the terms of agreement under which the Baptist educational interests of Iowa were consolidated involved a new name. The preliminary conditions having been fulfilled, Des Moines College turned its affairs over last June to Union College of Iowa. No one was satisfied with this name, however, and the educational committee of the Iowa Convention recommended to that body at its annual meeting in Keokuk, last fall that the name be changed to Des Moines University. This recommendation was unanimously adopted, and on Dec. 14, last year, the trustees of the university officially changed the name, voting unanimously to amend the articles of incorporation to that effect, and all legal requirements incident to the change have been fulfilled.

DR. LORAN D. OSBORN

The University Organization

In order to avoid misconception, those interested in the development of the university wish to make it clear that the title "university" is not used at the present time in the sense of a graduate and research institution, but rather in the sense of a corporate collection of colleges, which seems to be good usage.

The following colleges and schools are now in existence: the college of liberal arts, the college of education, the college of engineering, the college of pharmacy, and the school of fine arts. In addition to these college divisions, there are now several schools of non-collegiate grade. These include the school of trades, the preparatory school, the commercial school (affiliated), and the Danish Baptist Theological Seminary (affiliated). The non-collegiate schools are educationally separate from the colleges.

No report of the plans for the university would be complete that failed to call attention to the efficient and arduous work of the business manager, Mr. J. R. Vaughan. Mr. Vaughan has been a member of the board of trustees for twenty years, during many of which he was chairman. For the past three years he has been working shoulder to shoulder with Pres. Earl during the trying transitional period of the school, and he will continue to handle the current business affairs of the institution, where his services are indispensable.

A Letter from Dr. Strong

Hotel Maryland, Pasadena,

Feb. 24, 1921.

Dear Editors:

THE BAPTIST could do no better thing than to call the attention of our denomination to the "Historical Sketch of the South China Mission," by Lida Scott Ashmore, the wife of William Ashmore, Jr., our esteemed missionary in Swatow for these last twenty-two years. It is a wonderful record of Christian progress, beginning with the life and mission work of Mr. Ashmore's father, the intrepid and heroic pioneer, founder and builder, and supplemented by the even longer work of his son, who has now completed his translation of the Bible into the colloquial Chinese. The book, printed in China, with more than 150 views and portraits, is a remarkable product of Chinese typographic art and a noble memorial of Christian service.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashmore, I am glad to say, are now on furlough for a few months at Buena Park, Calif., and will send a copy of the work, postage paid, for $2 on receipt of the money. I commend the book to all missionary helpers as containing valuable and interesting material for meetings and addresses.

AUGUSTUS H. STRONG.

Wisconsin News and Notes

By ROBERT W. SHAW

Eau Claire Association

This is our largest association geographically. In future days it will probably be our largest in point of numbers. But just now it presents plenty of opportunity.

Following the regional conference held at Eau Claire, two teams made up of Pastors MacKinney and Savage, Miss Elsie Kappan and Mrs. W. S. Lincoln, visited every church in the association, and presented the New World Movement. The intent was wholly educational, and it is expected that results will follow. Many people came to more fully understand the purposes for which the New World Movement was created.

Pastor David Alexander has closed his work at Barron, and moved to Grundy Center, Iowa, where he became pastor of our church there. He has been in the state a number of years and has done good work. We are sorry to see him go.

Pastor S. R. Dunlop of Hillsdale, Maple Grove and West Dallas began his fourth year recently. His salary was increased substantially. He has done a good, constructive work on these fields, and his people appreciate his work.

At River Falls Pastor H. E. Bowe is much encouraged. A splendid interest is being created and the attendance is increasing. Miss Dorothy Taggart, one of their own girls, is in missionary work in the Philippines. The church helps in her support. Six have been received for membership.

At Eau Claire E. R. MacKinney is in his fourth year. The audiences are large and the Sunday school and prayer meeting are growing. Frequent additions cheer the minister's heart.

Over The State

Pastor P. J. Morris of the Beaver Dam church has placed the emphasis this year on worship. A recent clergyman who was a visitor said, "The service is the most beautiful I have ever attended." During the year a number have been received into the church, and coming for baptism were two of the teachers of the academy. During the year the church increased the salary $300.

At Antigo the church has adopted as its motto for 1921, "Honoring Christ by rendering our largest service." It has set for itself ten objectives. Pastor H. C. Carnell is a good, wise, constructive leader.

At Stevens Point thirteen were added to the church, and seven received for baptism at the watch night service. This was a part of the evangelistic fruits of pastor James Blake's work for the last three months of the old year.

During the few months that Pastor E. A. Deake has been at Superior he has been privileged to receive eighteen new members, nine of whom came by baptism. Congregations are good and the spirit is fine. An earnest effort will be made to erect a new house of worship this year.

Milwaukee Doings

On March 11 the Baptist young people of the city held their annual rally with the Immanuel Church. A splendid crowd of young people was present. Dr. James A. White was the speaker of the evening. In connection with this rally was the meeting of the Milwaukee city union, and the Women's union, each of which had a part on the program.

Recently Dr. D. D. MacLauren, of Madison, gave an address before the general ministers' association of this city. He spoke out of the experiences of forty-eight years in the ministry, and his address was helpful to both the old and the young. He said some things which every young minister should have said to him as he begins his work in the ministry.

The Garfield Avenue Church is in special meetings. Pastor F. W. Kamm is assisted by Pastor A. S. Reitz of Berlin.

The West Allis Church will begin a series of meetings next week with Evangelist Hayworth of Indiana. Since removing to its new location this church has made some remarkable advances.

Just a Preachment

Recently the state board of promotion held a meeting and discovered a number of interesting facts with reference to the financial side of the New World Movement in Wisconsin. Up to that time approximately eighty-three of our churches had put on the drive and had been paying more or less regularly. A number of churches had not put on the canvass, but had been paying something for the general denominational work. Fifty-seven churches had subscribed nothing and had paid nothing. A church of the latter class was recently visited by a representative of the state and claimed it had never received any literature on the New World Movement. But the records of the state office show that at least twenty copies of the survey were sent to that church. When the state representative had explained the whole matter the church immediately took steps to put on the drive. Now if all the churches knew the facts with reference to the New World Movement, how many would refuse to stay out of the movement? But what became of much of the literature which was sent out all over the country?

Colgate University Holds Annual Dinner

Dr. Frank W. Padleford, secretary of board of education of the Northern Baptist Convention, gave the address at the annual dinner of Colgate University men who are preparing for the ministry, which was held in the college commons on the evening of March 1. The subject of the address was "Opportunities for the Christian Minister," outlining the great need for trained men in the ministry, and the varied avenues of greatest usefulness open for such men. Dr. Padleford's intensely earnest speech made a deep impression upon his hearers.

Dean J. F. Vichert, of the Colgate Theological Seminary, presided at the dinner, and besides the students Dr. M. S. Read, acting president of the university, Dr. W. A. Granger, president of the education society, and several members of the board of trustees were present.

There are ninety men in Colgate preparing for the ministry, and during the dinner the statement was made that excepting only Chicago University there is no university in the North where a larger number of men are students for the ministry.

Announcement has been made that the General Education Board has allotted to Colgate University the sum of $150,000 in connection with the campaign for one million dollars and a new gymnasium for the university conducted by the alumni corporation. About $300,000 remains to be raised before the goal is reached.

Four recent graduates of the university have been accepted by the Foreign Mission Board in the past few months. Colgate has 51 men in foreign mission work. During the 100 years of its existence Colgate has sent 1,482 men into Baptist pastorates and 221 men into home and foreign mission service.

Two hundred and forty-five of the 700 men in the university have elected the curriculum Bible study courses offered in the college this year. During a college generation nearly 100 per cent of the students elect courses in Bible study.

Eighty-three per cent of the men on the campus are members of churches. In a senior class graduated recently every man was a member of a church. Many students become members of churches during their student days at Colgate. At the present time nine men are awaiting baptism in one of the village churches. Rev. F. D. Elmer, who came from Poughkeepsie recently to the pastorate of the Baptist Church in the village, is already exerting a helpful influence among the university students.

The Forum Still Going Strong

By MARY CAROLINE CRAWFORD

Perhaps it is because the world is "fed up" as it never was before with the bickerings of partisanship, the bigotries of sectarianism, and the brutalities of class conflict, that men and women everywhere are responding eagerly to the means of brotherhood which the open forum movement provides. George W. Coleman of Boston, founder of the Ford Hall Forum and president of the Open Forum National Council, reports that the number and the variety of forums in the United States at the present time is simply astonishing. Hundreds of Bible classes, private clubs, women's groups, chambers of commerce, and all sorts of social and political organizations are using the forum name to characterize their open discussions, and an impressive number of quasi public organizations are regularly employing the forum technique and adopting its spirit without any thought of using its name. All this is in addition to distinct progress made in the multiplication of easily recognizable open forums through the summer schools held last year at Chautauqua, New York and at the Winona Assembly in Indiana.

Mr. Robert S. Holmes, well known among the Baptists of Michigan, having lived in Lansing most of his life, was the presiding officer at this Winona forum. Mr. Holmes is also well known to all who visit Daytona Beach, Fla., during the winter months, and leads at Daytona Beach a community forum which is an intellectual center for that whole section. He is also one of the moving spirits at the summer school of open forum methods held in Chautauqua, N. Y., and has recently been elected secretary of the Open Forum National Council. Thus, after carrying the cares of the forums pretty nearly alone, so far as ardent Baptist co-operation is concerned, for more than a dozen years, Mr. Coleman now finds his hands upheld by a fellow Baptist who, like himself, has foregone business to give himself heart and soul, without any material compensation, to forum work. It is reasonable to believe that, more than ever, we shall find this movement going on by leaps and bounds in the near future.

At Ford Hall, Boston, Mr. Coleman's own particular forum, there has never been a more successful season than the present one, which has eight more meetings to come.

The program for the rest of the season bids fair to be no less interesting than the earlier meetings have been. With Sherman Rogers, a one-time I. W. W., who is known as the "lumber-jack orator," bringing a message concerning the tremendous need of co-operation between employers and employed, and Dr. Samuel Schulman of New York, talking (Feb. 20) on "The Eternal Verities," the Ford Hall announcement has quite a conservative look. Yet Scott Nearing (Feb. 27), on "Leadership and Democracy," Edwin Markham (March 13), on "How To Think of the Spiritual World," and Louis F. Post (March 20), on "Deportations," balance with a radical tinge. George O'Dell, however, now of Grand Rapids, but formerly associated with Dr. Stanton Colt in ethical society work in London, talking on "Marriage and the Home" and urging that the church, the stage, novelists and the press should set their faces sternly against breaking the marriage relation lightly, might belong to the most respectable lyceum course, as might also Dr. Herbert Adams Gibson, who on March 27 will speak at Ford Hall on, "What about Redeeming Our International Pledges?" and Edward Howard Griggs, who will close the Ford Hall season on April 3 with a consideration of "The Future of Democracy."

Benjamin Franklin, whose "Poor Richard" sayings have recently been exhumed to help the association life insurance companies of the country put on a thrift week, gave voice to a saying much more profound than any which have to do with saving and spending, when he declared that "if we do not all hang together, we will all hang separately." Franklin was talking about the colonies and not about the classes when he made this observation, but it is perhaps more true of the classes than it ever was of the colonies. The forum seems the one place in our country to-day where people of diverse races and habits and prospects and possessions and opinions can and care to meet together. Possibly it is because we have been denied a league of nations that we are embracing so eagerly this league of opposing individuals within our nation. Whatever the reason for the phenomenon may be, the forum in 1921 is going strong.

ADDED TO THE LIST of the already reported successful meetings conducted by State Evangelist Milo G. Bentley is the meeting at Pendleton concerning which Pastor W. H. Cox writes that ninety have taken a stand for Christ. And as the meetings are continuing as this notice goes to press the number will doubtless be increased to more than a hundred. It will probably be safe to state that fifty Baptisms will result from these meetings. Brother Bentley will go from Pendleton to meetings with our church at Redmond, J. H. Cabeen, pastor.

THE THIRD GERMAN CHURCH, located at St. Johns, Rev. F. Buerman, pastor, has completely outgrown the meeting house, and is therefore confronted with the practical question of how to take care of the increasingly large numbers who desire to attend the Sunday school and preaching services.

DR. W. B. HINSON has so fully recovered that he has been pronounced cured by his physician, and he purposed to preach to his people on the first Sunday in March. The prayers of his many friends have been answered in his speedy recovery. Dr. S. J. Reid has supplied the pulpit of the East Side Church during the month of February. Dr. Reid has been in evangelistic meetings so continuously that a rest was imperative, therefore it was possible to consent to the earnest request of the East Side Church for him to supply their pulpit. He will be with the University Park and Glencoe churches of Portland preceding and up to the Easter period. During the month of January Dr. Reid visited, in conjunction with Assistant Director of Promotion Austin, twenty of the churches in Eastern and Central Oregon, during which visit he was not only able to assist in the kingdom conferences but also to present the work of evangelism. The rising tide of evangelism in the state is a tribute to the splendid services of Dr. Reid in the past years as superintendent of evangelism.

A RECENT PREACHER at the White Temple was Dr. C. B. Waller, formerly pastor of this church who was en route to hold a meeting with the First Church of Tacoma. The reports of the meeting at Tacoma indicate a wonderfully successful meeting.

AT THE REQUEST of the deacons at the First Church, Portland, Secretary Wright has recently baptized three into their membership. One of these was a Chinese young lady whose baptism was witnessed by a large number of the Chinese members of our mission and others of their friends.

THE DALLES with a population of 6000 and situated along the Columbia river ninety miles east of Portland is one of the important commercial centers of eastern Oregon. Historically it has played a large part in the development of the northwest. Baptist work in the city is under direction of Pastor J. L. Bogue who came to the field about one year ago from Army Y. M. C. A. work. During the month of February special services were held. The pastor preached and the music was handled by Charles Roth an active layman of the church. Thirty new members added will make about forty-five additions during the past year. The Sunday school has increased nearly 100 per cent in attendance during the same time. A splendid corps of teachers kept up a teachers' meeting every Saturday night from June 1 to Feb. 1.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our time pencil.

Pacific Coast

OREGON

PASTOR J. H. DICKSON, Roseburg, writes of the great meeting conducted as a united effort by the churches of Roseburg under the leadership of Dr. Bulgin. About 150 expressed a preference for the Baptist Church. Fifty-one were received during the month of January, and the pastor predicts as many more will be received.

THE REVIVAL CONTINUES at Enterprise. This is an evidence of the splendid meetings held earlier in the winter by Bro. Bentley. In a letter recently received, a member of the Enterprise church speaks of frequent conversions in the young people's meetings, although at the time the church was without a pastor.

REV. D. LOREE has concluded a successful meeting with the church at Lacombe, Rev. S. L. Boyce, pastor. As early as the third night of the meeting there were heads of three prominent families of the community converted. A number have been received for baptism, and the church is revived.

PASTOR DUNHAM of the Eugene Church reports a number of conversions and baptisms growing out of the regular ministry of the church. Pastor Dunham is proving to be a pastor of able leadership and a preacher of marked ability—one of the most popular men Eugene has ever had.

THE FIRST GERMAN CHURCH of Portland of which Dr. Jacob Kratt has been pastor for more than twenty-four years, has now the distinction of being the largest German-speaking Baptist Church in America. Dr. Kratt speaks to probably as large audiences as any other pastor in the State of Oregon, and baptisms are frequent.

REV. W. H. COX at PENDLETON has closed a series of meetings in which he had the assistance of Rev. Milo Bentley, state evangelist. Thirty-five were received by baptism, sixteen by letter and two restored. The Sunday school grew from 150 to 175. The junior B. Y. P. U. has an attendance of forty and the seniors of forty-five. Pastor Cox regards these meetings as the best ever held in the history of the church, Rev. J. H. Cabeen, pastor.

PASTOR A. R. SITTON at La Grande states that the church has received thirty additions, and several more are approved for baptism. "We expect quite a number to be baptized and received on Easter Sunday. We have put in and paid for a new furnace costing $250. The church expects to come up in every way to your expectations."

PASTOR JOHN L. BOGUE of The Dalles Church is leading his own people in evangelistic effort with marked success. There have already been a number of baptisms and the meetings continue with interest at this writing. Members of The Dalles church attending the Portland missionary conference, report that the leadership of Pastor Bogue is meeting with marked success.

Successful Missionary Conferences

Two successful missionary conferences have recently been held in Oregon,—the one at Portland, and the other at Eugene. Mrs. H. W. Peabody, Dr. C. A. Brooks, W. H. Bowler, C. R. Shepherd and local pastors and state workers assisted in these conferences. The state promotion committee undertook to help pay the expenses of three delegates from the churches of the two respective districts. The committee on arrangements provided entertainment after the Harvard plan for the delegates and visitors. The attendance was large and thoroughly representative, so that practically every church in Western Oregon was represented at one or the other of these conferences. The findings committee of each of the conferences put themselves on record through the delegates as determined to see that Oregon ultimately secured the entire allotment asked of our state.

The spiritual awakening in the state is remarkable as judged by the many genuine revivals in our churches, with large gatherings for baptism, and a rising tide of missionary enthusiasm everywhere. About fifty local church kingdom conferences had been held in Oregon preceding these district conferences, under the field leadership of assistant state director, Rev. J. C. Austin, who was assisted by Rev. S. J. Reid, superintendent of evangelism, Dr. A. M. Petty part of the time, and Miss Kappen, who was able to give a short time.

On March 4 and 5 another conference is projected for Pendleton to comprise the northeastern part of the state. Thus both by local kingdom conferences, wherein the attempt has been made to visit every church in Oregon by qualified teams, and by the district conferences, it is safe to say that Oregon has been more thoroughly cultivated in behalf of world missions as projected in the New World Movement than ever before. Both at Portland and Eugene, pastors who led their churches in the campaign previously, and who had the impression that nothing more could be done, together with their delegates, put themselves on record as willing to undertake in the renewed strength of God the completion of their quotas. Individual delegates who attended these conferences were so impressed with the world's need at this time that in some instances they increased their pledges 500 per cent.

Marked most of all was the spiritual uplift and the awakening that came through the remarkable addresses, particularly of Mrs. Peabody and Dr. Brooks. The type of addresses which they gave were in the nature of asserting concretely and by specific instances the work that our denomination is undertaking to do at home and abroad. And when the people saw what is actually being done, and how the New World Movement relates itself to the various types of work and achievement, they became enthused and were willing to re-consecrate themselves anew to the world task. It is safe to say that our people have been gripped with a new determination to complete the unfinished task, and at the same time there is a consciousness that only in the strength of God can there be a realization of the goals set before them.—O. C. Wright.

WESTERN WASHINGTON

THE DAVIS MEMORIAL CHURCH, Mt. Vernon, Rev. J. E. Noftlinger, pastor, held its annual business meeting Jan. 25. The reports of all departments showed a substantial year's work. There were forty-two additions to the church, twenty-two of whom came by baptism. Present membership is 361. The Sunday school has an average attendance of 220. All current expenses have been paid and in September the pastor's salary was increased $500 per year, $1958 has been given for missions. The sum of $22,785 has been pledged toward the church building fund. Of this sum the Ladies' Aid Society has $1550 towards the pipe organ for the new edifice.

REV. THOMAS HOWLAND, living near Edmonds, and supplying the Edmonds Church, recently lost his home and contents by fire, and a few weeks later his wife, who has been an invalid for a number of years, died.

REV. EARLE D. SIMS, after several months of special work in Western Washington, will leave for Oregon this month. While in Washington Mr. Sims rendered notable service at Dryad, Kelso, Lyman and Concrete.

Seattle Baptist Rally

On March 4, a Baptist mass meeting was held in the First Church of Seattle in the interest of the simultaneous evangelistic campaign to take place in all the Baptist churches of the city this month. The crowd filled the large auditorium and the galleries. Old timers reported it the largest gathering of Baptists ever held in the city and all the churches were well represented. The Bellevue Church received the silk flag for having the largest percentage of its members present, being in fact represented by more than the entire membership. The spirit was most excellent, each church responding to the roll-call with an appropriate song or scripture message. It was voted to make this an annual affair. The address of the evening was given by Dr. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the First Church of Vancouver, B. C. His strong Gospel sermon on "Faith" was a fitting prelude to the evangelistic campaigns. The congregation voted unanimously to invite Dr. Maguire to be present at the state convention in May.

Church Evangelism

During the month of February, under the direction of Rev. Fred Berry, director of evangelism, simultaneous evangelistic campaigns were held in many of the churches of the Puget Sound Association. Reports from these meetings indicate fine interest and a large number of conversions:

Tacoma First: Dr. C. B. Waller, of Little Rock, Ark., assisted the pastor, Rev. C. O. Johnson, for two weeks. In addition to meetings in the church five days each week, noonday meetings were held in a large theater. On Feb. 27 the pastor gave the hand of fellowship to thirty-seven new members at the morning service and baptized twenty-four candidates at the evening service. A number of others have been received for baptism.

Tacoma, Sixth Ave.: The pastor, Rev. F. W. Wightman, was assisted by Evangelist Bruce Evans. The interest was so great at the time of closing the meetings that they were continued for two weeks and are still being held at the date of this writing. The pastor reports this the best series of meetings in the history of the church.

South Tacoma: The new pastor, Rev. E. F. Hamby, conducted the meetings. The church is greatly encouraged. Nine new members have been received.

Tacoma, Bethlehem: The pastor, Rev.

A. W. Williams, was assisted by Rev. Mr. Pius, of Seattle. Bruce Evans and the Sixth Avenue choir conducted the service one Sunday afternoon. Director Berry and Earl Cochran, with the choir from the First Swedish Church, conducted the meeting another Sunday afternoon.

Tacoma, First Swedish: Rev. Charles Asplund was assisted by Director Fred Berry and Earl Cochran, singer. From the beginning great interest was shown, which increased to the last service. The pastor reports this to have been the best meeting held in the seven years he has been there. Between thirty and forty have indicated their purpose to come for baptism.

Olympia, Tabernacle: Rev. N. J. Barnes, of Sedro Woolley, assisted Pastor A. J. Jacobson in the meetings. They report the meetings as the best in the history of the church. Eight have been received for baptism and others have indicated their purpose of uniting with the church. Tumwater: Rev. A. H. Hause, the pastor, is leading his church in these meetings.

Shelton: Rev. Fred Berry and Earl Cochran assisted the pastor, Rev. Addison Self, in the meetings. More than twenty professed conversion, fourteen have been received for baptism and the church has been greatly revived.

Sumner: The pastor, Rev. S. G. Maness, had the assistance of Rev. A. H. Nickell, pastor of Bethany Church, Seattle. The interest was so great the pastor continued the meetings for another week. A goodly number have united with the church and others will follow.

Kent: A short series of meetings was held here by Director Berry and Mr. Cochran before beginning campaigns in Seattle. Twelve have been received for baptism and the general interest on the part of the members revived.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

PASTOR JAMES A. BROWN at Clovis recently held a reception for forty new members, twenty-eight of whom came by baptism.

Mount Hermon Federate School of Missions

The midwinter meeting of the Mount Hermon Federate School of Missions, in which nine denominations are now affiliated, was held in the First Church, Oakland, Feb. 25. Among the speakers were Mrs. Loyal L. Wirt, who gave a review of "The Church and the Community" by Diffendorfer; Rev. T. R. Gale, formerly of chapel car work, but now in Sunday school work; Mrs. Miles Fox of the First Church, Oakland, who conducted the symposium on "Worth While Plans," Mrs. T. S. Tompkins, vice-president of our South Pacific District, who spoke on "The Practical Use of the Study Book," giving an account of the school of missions conducted in her Southern California church; Dr. Loofbourow of Burlingame, Methodist, who gave a fine address on "Stewardship," emphasizing the stewardship of life, as well as money; Dr. A. W. Russell of St. John's Presbyterian Church, Berkeley, on "Some Unique Phases of God's Word"; Mrs. Elmer K. Cole, representing the Friends, the most recent denomination to become affiliated in the Federate School; Mrs. Martha G. Castor of the department of Bible history, Mills College, who gave a fine address on "The Bible and Missions"; Miss Evelyn Baugh, missionary from China; Dr. A. W. Mell of the American Bible Society's branch in San Francisco, who spoke on India; Miss M. E.

Church, Methodist missionary from Korea; Dr. Gluntz, twenty years Presbyterian missionary to the Philippines.

In the afternoon the young women of the Baptist Church gave very beautifully the pageant "The Message to Man," written by Mrs. Withoft of the women's union of Georgia. In the evening the young people opened the session, and the principal address afterwards given was illustrated with a stereopticon on "Lights and Shadows of Mount Hermon," by Dr. W. F. Crouser, Lutheran pastor at San Jose.

The denominations now affiliated in the Mount Hermon Federate School of Missions are, Baptist, Christian, Congregational, English Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Methodist South, and Friends. There were nearly 300 registrations in the midwinter meeting. The regular school of missions will be held as usual at beautiful Mount Hermon, in the Santa Cruz mountains, July 9-16.—Mary E. Bamford.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE FIRST CHURCH, LOS ANGELES, is steadily growing. For many Sundays past, Sunday morning congregations have been so large that the Sunday school hall was opened. The Bible school has passed the 600 mark and the B. Y. P. U. has been divided into a senior and intermediate union. Dr. Francis has for twenty weeks been conducting a class for young people on "What I Believe and Why." The four-minute speakers have been stressing evangelism, stewardship and life enlistment. At the last communion sixty-seven new members were received. Special meetings will be held during the week preceding Easter. Pledges to the New World Movement are paid up to date and there have been generous responses to appeals for European relief, for Labrador and for China.

THE CHURCHES IN REDLANDS AND VICINITY are deeply indebted to the Publication Society and its director of religious education, Dr. J. D. Springston, for the school of religious methods conducted in the Redlands Church, Feb. 14-17. The numbers of credits by churches are as follows: San Bernardino, 220; Garden Grove, 121; Colton, 87; Corona, 34; Thermal, 35; Fullerton, 21; Redlands, 521. It is now proposed to make this school an annual feature of the Redlands work. Redlands is becoming more and more a center for religious education.

Mississippi Valley

ILLINOIS

GREAT MEETINGS have just closed at Latham. The church had been looking forward to the coming of Dr. L. D. Lamkin and a great revival for many months. He came, and the meetings commenced Feb. 21 and continued to March 6. It was a wonderful meeting. Not only were there large numbers brought to Christ and many into the church, but the whole community was stirred as it has not been for many years. Dr. Lamkin is a gospel preacher of great power.

THE NORTHERN BAPTIST THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY has recently enjoyed inspiring lectures from Secy. Charles A. Brooks of New York on "Conditions in Europe"; from Dr. C. H. Woolston of Philadelphia on "Illustrative Work with Children";

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS, MORGAN PARK CHURCH, CHICAGO

Mr. Ed. Clissold, well-known in Chicago musical circles, Mr. Hartley C. Laycock, president of the class, Dr. A. W. Cleaves, the teacher, and Dr. Howland Hanson, pastor of the church, will be recognized in the center of the front row.

from Dr. W. L. Ferguson of India and Dr. W. H. Leslie of Africa on their notable work in those continents; from Dr. L. C. Barnes of the Home Mission Society on "Religious Work with Individuals"; from Dr. Melbourne P. Boynton of Chicago on "The Church's Chance in a Great City"; and from J. Foster Wilcox of New York, director of the Baptist Brotherhood Federation, on present phases of men's work for men.

THE WOMAN'S BAPTIST MISSION UNION of Chicago met Tuesday, March 8 at the Immanuel Church. The union was unusually fortunate in having three speakers who were in Chicago in connection with the regional missionary conference: Dr. G. A. Huntley, medical missionary, Shanghai, China; Dr. William Axling, evangelist missionary, Tokyo, Japan, and Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, president of Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Dr. Johnston Myers also spoke, telling how Immanuel Church is meeting the needs of the community. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: Pres., Mrs. R. P. Fales; first vice-pres., Mrs. F. S. Osgood; second vice-pres., Mrs. E. L. Manville; third vice-pres., Mrs. Frank C. Randolph; rec. secy. and treas., Mrs. Carl D. Case; cor. secy., Mrs. Ernest Ridgeway. Luncheon was served to 800 people.—Mrs. Carl D. Case, Secy.

REV. M. F. GILBERT commenced work at Campbell Hill and Willisville churches Jan. 1. A fine young people's society has been organized at each place. Willisville has a new building almost ready for occupancy. New pews have just been ordered. Two new members have recently come into the church by baptism, and two by letter.

STONINGTON CHURCH, with all its contents, was totally destroyed by fire, Sunday morning, Mar. 6. Rev. R. H. Crawford, the present pastor came upon the field last August. A strong organization of the young people has been effected. The men's Bible class has grown from five to eighty members and expects to reach 100 soon. This class, as well as the boys' and young women's classes is accepting the responsibility for putting on good programs in the regular church services. All of these people are making remarkable sacrifices to build a new church.

INDIANA

MARCH 1 CLOSED one of the most successful pastorates in the history of the First Church of Richmond, with Rev. Shelby C. Lee as pastor. Among the notable things accomplished are these: the church is thoroughly established in a regular Christian finance system, based strictly on a freewill offering; all financial obligations are promptly met; there are no suppers or fairs for the purpose of earning money; a large number have been added to the membership.

REV. T. J. PARSONS has become editor of the Baptist Observer. Hitherto he has served as district superintendent of the southwest district of the state. He is an experienced newspaper man and brings to his new work exceptional qualifications.

MICHIGAN

SINCE THE BUILDING of the Fountain Street Church of Grand Rapids burned in May, 1918, services have been held in Powers Theatre, where the attendance averages 1300. Many are turned away every Sunday. The church now has more than $400,000 of pledges and other assets toward a new building. Pastor Alfred W. Wishart has divided the church parish into thirty-five districts supervised by thirty-five district captains who have accomplished great results. Five group-district dinners have been held since November with an attendance of 800. Plans are in progress for a big church dinner after Easter. A membership committee has secured more than fifty applications for membership. The sermons of the pastor are being printed and distributed by a committee headed by a prominent business man, 5,000 copies of each being printed.

Regional Missionary Conferences

Interest deepened from the beginning; the most of them were largely attended. We must have reached 300 churches, sometimes only through the pastor, but in most cases through four to a dozen or more delegates. Pastors, laymen and women expressed great appreciation of the series, and the men and women that were sent to us for the teams were without peers. Dr. Browne's message was always well-given and well-received, as was Miss Troeck's. A great many small churches caught a new vision of the entire task.

A splendid, outstanding young man and his wife, members of a Negro church in Detroit, have felt called to dedicate themselves as missionaries. A young man, twenty-two years of age, who has been a fireman on a railroad came clear across the state, after the regional conference meeting in his section, inquiring at headquarters how he might enter some institution and prepare himself for definite Christian training. A pastor, at the close of another group session, came to the director, broke down and in tears said that he had been letting business keep him out of the full gift of his talents to the Christian ministry, but had been led as he saw the vision now in the conference to make the decision to sell everything and throw himself wholly and unreservedly into the Christian ministry.

On Sundays, in many churches, large numbers made decisions for Christ. So blessed have been the conferences that we are planning a large number with local churches through March and April with some state worker and some missionary attending, holding an afternoon meeting for women and then gathering in a supper conference to lay the whole matter of the unfinished task before the entire church.—Grant M. Hudson.

OHIO

MISS ISADORA FRANCIS KING, a prominent member of Xenia Church, and well known as a beneficent supporter of denominational interests, died March 4.

EVANGELIST A. W. LITRELL and singer, D. L. Moody assisted Rev. M. R. Sheldon of the First Baptist Church of Bucyrus, in one of the most successful meetings the church has ever experienced. The pastor baptized two men, heads of families, Sunday night, Feb. 20, and the evangelists began on the following Monday closing March 6. After the fourth night the church auditorium did not hold the people. Whole families came forward for church membership. The last night ninety decisions were made.

PASTOR ALBERT KING MORRIS, of the First Church, Toledo, is rapidly enlisting his people in an aggressive work. During the five months of his pastorate, congregations have steadily increased, especially in the evening. Thursday evening is the time of the gathering of the membership for supper, which is followed by study classes. The pastor is leading a class in comparative religions; Mrs. Morris leads a large class in mission study, and Miss Anna Yeslin has a class in systematic Bible study. This church is the mother church of the Baptists of Toledo and continues today a vital force in the community.

E. E. Gates, pastor-at-large, spoke on the subject of prayer. The following Friday evening Rev. A. D. Carpenter, pastor of the First Church, Willimantic, was the speaker at the father and son banquet: Sunday was confession and dedication day. More than a score of fine young people took their stand for Christ and the church.

THE INTENSIVE STUDY PROGRAM in the South Church, Hartford, has proved exceedingly interesting. The membership gave loyal support to the classes in stewardship, missions and evangelism. The attendance grew with every session, until it reached 192, 156 and 150, respectively.

RHODE ISLAND

THE EVANGELISTIC COMMITTEE of the state held a conference at Westerly on Tuesday, March 1, with both churches, the First and Calvary, uniting. Pastors Caterer of Bradford, Coon of Charlestown and Sailer of the Christian Church, Westerly, were in attendance. Rev. W. B. Greene spoke on "The Bible and Evangelism," Rev. B. T. Livingston on "The Need of Evangelism" and Rev. C. E. McColley on "The Cost of Evangelism."

THE UNITED CHURCH, PROVIDENCE, Rev. W. G. Greene, pastor, is holding a series of evangelistic services under the leadership of Colporter Watt. Several of our local pastors will assist.

PASTOR MANUEL of the Swedish Church in Providence reported nine baptisms recently and the work growing splendidly.

REV. JOHN BJORK who has had the care of the Swedish chapels at Hissgrove and South Auburn has had to resign on account of serious illness.

THE WORK OF PREPARATION for the Baptist Institute to be held in the state, April 3-8, at the Calvary Church, Providence, is progressing splendidly. Mrs. W. C. Murdock has the organization and program practically completed.

DR. GREUL who has been supplying the First Church, Providence, for several months, closed his work with the church on Sunday, Feb. 27. Five were baptized. Dr. Faunce is the preacher for the month of March.

THE PROGRAM COMMITTEE of the ministers' conference has arranged an interesting series of addresses on Monday mornings from various departments of the city and state. On Monday, Feb. 7, Dr. Ranger, commissioner of education of R. I. spoke on the "Present Peril in Education." Feb. 28, Richard Jennings, state treasurer, addressed the conference on the "Receipts and Expenditures of the State." The addresses were informing and helpful.

DR. H. F. STILLWELL has spent a week in evangelistic services at the Central Church, Providence, with Dr. C. M. Gallup and his people. On Feb. 27, the last day of the meetings, thirty young people publicly accepted Christ as their Saviour. Dr. Stillwell will find the doors wide open whenever he can return to Rhode Island.

THE ROGER WILLIAMS CHURCH, Rev. S. D. Ringrose, pastor, is witnessing the power of God in a remarkable way. Conversions and baptisms are occurring constantly. On Sunday evening, Feb. 28, more than forty came to the front of the church indicating their desire and decision to accept and follow Christ. The church is making a new record for itself in its offerings to the New World Movement. Recently the church increased the pastor's salary $500.

Harry W. Jones CHURCH ARCHITECT

Minneapolis

Annuities

Annuity Bonds are issued by all the Boards and Societies of the Northern Baptist Convention.

For information, including rates, write to the Society or Board concerned

or to

The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention

276 Fifth Ave. - - New York

Write for this Booklet

For Christian investors. You receive regular, generous, non-taxable life income. Your money helps a Christian enterprise.

Ask for Booklet B American Bible Society
25 Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society
Our Corporate name is
"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"
Executive Secretary, Charles L. White
Treasurer, Samuel Bryant
23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N.Y.

In writing to our advertisers mention The Baptist

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

THE BAPTIST is in receipt of an excellent six-page paper, "The Baptist Guest," published monthly at Fort Fairfield in the interest of the Bethel, Limestone and Grimes churches. The pastors, Dr. J. W. Brown and Rev. A. W. Brown are the editors. The paper contains items of news relating to the churches and short articles of inspirational value.

CONNECTICUT

REV. D. P. GAINES, pastor First Church, Waterbury, has been conducting a ten-week intensive study in the principles of the Christian life and church membership. The undertaking has been well supported by the church. Forty personal workers have co-operated in the plans of the pastor and a number of new members have been reached.

ON MARCH 6, REV. I. W. REED, pastor of the Grace Church, Waterbury, celebrated his twentieth anniversary as pastor. An interesting program was arranged for the occasion. Mr. Reed has been practically the only pastor the church ever knew. The work has grown under his leadership until the congregations tax the capacity of the present building.

AT THE MEMORIAL CHURCH, HARTFORD, the pastor, Rev. M. W. Schuh, has been presenting the claims of Christ to his people for several weeks. On Feb. 24, Rev.

THE REGIONAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCES held recently in Rhode Island have been a spiritual uplift to the entire state. If the severe snow storm had not come on Sunday, Feb. 20, the conferences would have been record breakers. The team was exceptional in its make-up and rendered splendid service. Rev. P. C. Wright was the leader. The others were Dr. Archibald Adams of West China, Miss Julia Parrott of Mandalay, Mrs. J. D. Rough of Connecticut, Miss Helen K. Wallace of Rhode Island, and Prof. F. L. Anderson of Newton. The following cities were visited: Newport, Westerly, Providence, Pawtucket and Woonsocket.

NEW JERSEY

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH OF NEWARK, Sidney W. Powell, pastor, reports a strong revival movement. Feb. 13 thirty-five decisions for Christ were reported in the church school and eighty-five more decisions at the evening service. The church was filled at both services. Nine were baptized on Feb. 13, and others are now waiting for the ordinance. Prayer meetings are very largely attended, and much interest is shown. March 6, ten were received into the fellowship of the church; and the church was again filled at both services. Very interesting conversions are reported, and Sunday evening meetings are wonderful.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

INDIAN CREEK CHURCH, Rev. F. S. Wortman, pastor, has just closed an interesting meeting. Forty candidates wait baptism and six will be received by letter. The church pledged $10,000 to the New World Movement, giving more to missions now than it paid its pastor when Bro. Wortman began his work twenty years ago.

THE FIRST CHURCH, WAYNESBURG, has just closed special meetings. Pastor Arthur J. Morris was assisted by Dr. W. J. Cambron and Mr. K. L. Cramer. Meetings of this sort in a college town are particularly difficult, yet the meetings won support from the first and the results will greatly strengthen the life of the church.

REV. EUGENE NEUBAUER was installed as pastor of the Elizabeth Church on March 4. The principal addresses were made by Secy. W. C. Chappell and by Dr. C. E. Hemans of Homestead. The new pastorate opens with splendid prospects.

REV. WM. R. HILL, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Church, McKeesport, is assisting Rev. L. B. Ford in revival meetings at Woodlawn.

REV. CHARLES F. CARL of LEECHBURG is conducting special meetings. Plans are making for improvements on the church building and parsonage, and lifting the church mortgage. The sum of $208 has just been paid on the debt. The New World Movement pledges are paid in full.

AT THE FIRST CHURCH, MCKEESPORT Pastor J. S. Braker is conducting a Monday afternoon training class for young converts. The church has granted a license to preach to Paul W. Evans, son of John D. Evans, president of the Bible school convention. Mr. Evans is a student at the Northern Theological Seminary, Chicago. The pastor's son is also in preparation for the ministry. A group of sixty personal workers has been organized for evangelistic work. Dr. Braker has been elected to fill the vacancy on the board of directors of the association caused by the resignation of Rev. H. E. Owings.

FIFTY MEMBERS HAVE BEEN ADDED to the Oakmont Church during the first year of Rev. L. D. Dunning's pastorate. A special service was held Wednesday evening, March 2, welcoming these new members. Secy. W. C. Chappell gave the address, his subject being "The Church and the New Member."

REV. L. B. JONES HAS RESIGNED as pastor of the Apollo Church to accept a call to Hephzibah Church at Coatsville. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have done a good work during their year at Apollo. Their removal from the association will be greatly regretted.

REV. W. J. JOHN, OF CANONSBURG, has a class of thirteen preparing for baptism and church membership. The senior deacon of the church, W. F. Holsing, died Feb. 26.

Rocky Mountain States

COLORADO

FORT MORGAN CHURCH experienced a great revival campaign from Feb. 13 to 27. Convention Evangelist F. W. Starring was the preacher. Pastor E. T. Cassel, author of many gospel hymns, was song leader, and his wife, an accomplished musician, was pianist. From the beginning of the campaign the attendance taxed the capacity of the building. Sixty people came forward during the meetings. Thirty-seven were received into membership, twenty-four by baptism. On the last day an afternoon baptismal service was held. Eighteen of the converts were baptized by Dr. Cassel, these ranging in age from nine years to seventy-one. Evangelist Starring goes from Fort Morgan to the First Church of Pueblo for a campaign closing Easter Sunday.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Our Present Government Debt

A RECENT bulletin of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States gives the following:

"Speaking on the situation with respect to government finance, an official of the treasury department recently said that the government now has a public debt of twenty-four billions, which includes a floating debt of about two and one-half billions. The interest charges on the public debt alone amount to over a billion dollars a year, or more than it cost before the war to run the whole government. We are still spending at the rate of about one and one-half billions a year to maintain the army and navy, and still paying hundreds of millions for railroads and ships. The government of the United States has, however, made more substantial progress toward paying its debts and its finances are in sounder condition, than any other important billigerent. It balanced its budget, current ordinary receipts against current ordinary expenditures in the fiscal year 1920, the first full year after hostilities ceased. In the current fiscal year, notwithstanding hundreds of millions of extraordinary expenditure, it is balancing its budget, and for the first half of the year showed a current surplus of over 450 millions. The public debt has been reduced about two and one-half billions from the high point reached in 1919. A staggering load of debt, however, still remains and the best interests of the country require that orderly progress be made in its liquidation, he says. Within about two years government war indebtedness to the amount of over seven billions matures, of which about two and one-half billions are short-term treasury certificates. The current expenditures of the government are still running at the rate of about five billions a year and the great bulk of internal tax collections and other current receipts is being absorbed by current expenditures, leaving relatively little surplus to be applied to the retirement of the short-dated debt. Even with the utmost economy, internal taxes can not safely be reduced below four billions after this fiscal year and for some years to come, he states."

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

Arizona—*Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phoenix.
California, N.—*Dr. C. W. Brinstad, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
Idaho—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
Indiana—*Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
Iowa—424 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capitol Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
Minnesota—*Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2nd Ave., So. Minneapolis.
Montana—*Rev. G. Clifford Cress, Box 643, Lewistown.
Nebraska—*Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
Nevada—George L. Snyder, Box 230, Sparks.
New Hampshire—*Rev. D. S. Jenks, 92 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
New Jersey—*Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singiser, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
North Dakota—*Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
Ohio—Dr. F. G. Cressey, Granville.
Oregon—*Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin, Field Promotion Director, 405 Tifford Bldg., Portland.
Pennsylvania—*Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
Rhode Island—*Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauderdale Bldg., Providence.
South Dakota—*Dr. S. P. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
Utah—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Vermont—*Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
Washington, E.—*Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane.
Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213 1/2 Fourth St., Parkersburg.
Wisconsin—*Dr. D. W. Hulburt, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
Wyoming—*Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

Jesus' Principles of Living

By Prof Charles F. Kent and
Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks

This book is absolutely up to date. It applies to present day problems such as wages, justice, democracy, the use of wealth, the obligations of one nation to another and international brotherhood the principles laid down by Jesus.

158 pages, cloth $1.25

Charles Scribner's Sons
597-599 Fifth Avenue New York

IT IS A BURNING SHAME

that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

Baptist Department
Mutual Insurance Corporation
furnishes protection AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM

No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured.

No agents. Deal direct. National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. & Mgr., 1909 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO. HILLSBORO, OHIO

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO.
Baltimore, Md.
CHURCH, CHIME AND PEAL BELLS
Memorials a Specialty

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6 cents per word per insertion; cash with order.

Walter Moncure Jennings, Evangelist and Bible teacher. Single or union meetings. Box 272, Mt. Vernon, Wash.

Wanted: Second-hand pipe organ, in good condition, medium sized. Any church having such an instrument to dispose of, please write to Rev. Stephen Gazsi, 149 Ash St., Bridgeport, Conn., giving description, price, etc.

Great opportunity to help boys and girls of East Tennessee and Western North Carolina by giving books to start library in denominational academy. Send only good books of recognized worth or cash with which to buy them. Make inquiries. Watauga Academy. Lowell Q. Haynes, Principal Butler, Tenn.

Go to Europe in 1921 at my expense by organizing a party of five. Babcock's European Tours, 1137 Dean St, Brooklyn, N. Y. Established 1900.

For Sale—Slightly used "Rotaspeed" Duplicating Machine. Perfect running order. Bargain.—X.Y.Z., THE BAPTIST.

In writing to our advertisers mention
THE BAPTIST.

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

WILLIAM LESTER

ORGAN THEMATICS

From the White-Smith Music Publishing Co. of Boston comes a very interesting booklet comprising some twenty or more thematic pages of successful organ novelties, all by American or Canadian composers and all of fine musical value. Almost without exception they will be of service to the church organist for devotional use. Complimentary copies of this catalogue may be had from the above named company at 40-44 Winchester Street, Boston, Mass.

A LITTLE SELF-PRAISE

Among the many letters which have come to this department since its birth some six weeks or more back, the page-pilot especially values one from Raymond N. Carr, director of music, State Teacher's College, Kirksville, Mo., director of the First Baptist Church choir in that location, formerly professor of church music in Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. I am going to take the liberty of quoting from this letter, written with no idea of public reproduction, but, to me, worthy of wider reading if only on account of one or two sentences it contains. I have never seen such a splendid summing-up of the question of musical versus religious standards as is to be found in this short letter: let it speak for itself:

Dear Sir—

I wish to congratulate you and Baptists in general upon the inauguration of the "Music Corner," and upon its conductor, William Lester. It has seemed to me that we have needed something like this for a long time, and I bespeak success for it, and the serious interest of our Baptist musicians and laymen. Oftentimes our poor music has been due to the fact that music was not emphasized in our theological seminaries, but before the symptom comes the cause—we must have our Baptist laymen educated in good church music so that they will demand it of their leaders. There is no more excuse for inferior music in church than an ungrammatical sermon in the pulpit, even though both be from the heart.

I shall follow with interest the "Music Corner," and if I can be of any help, let me know.

Raymond N. Carr.

I would like to print the sentence beginning with, "There is no more excuse," at the top of this page ad infinitum—it is the pungent truth!

A PERSONAL PLEA

This corner is for all of us. If the choir of your church puts on a special music service; if they give a concert for some outside event; if your own organist or some visiting artist gives a concert in your church; let us know about it, so that mention can be made of it in these columns. If you have an idea for the betterment of church music that would be of general interest, send it in! If we can help you in any way, call on us. During the past three weeks, we have had four letters asking for aid in the planning and purchase of new pipe-organs, two calls for advice as to electric motor-blowers, seven calls for decisions as to new hymnals, many questions along musical lines, and numerous requests for aid in choosing and suggesting music for special services. Some of these last letters as yet always given from memory and which remain unanswered—not from intentional neglect, but because the desired information is not at hand; we are in search of it, though, and all will be taken care of as soon as possible. Some of these queries have revealed really surprising lacks and vacancies in the field of sacred music, notably in good material dealing with missions and Christian brotherhood; we may have to write some special service material to fill these voids!

NEWS NOTES

A very successful organ recital was given in the Hyde Park Baptist Church of Chicago, Tuesday evening, Feb. 1, by the organist, Frances Anne Cook. She was assisted by Frank Parker, the well-known baritone, who is the capable director of music at that church.

Under the auspices of the Maryland Chapter of the American Guild of organists, Charles M. Courboin gave his first organ recital in Baltimore at the Seventh Baptist Church the evening of Jan. 31. His program included the following numbers: Passacaglia, Bach; Aria from Suite, Bach; Allegretto, de Boeck; Chorale No. 3, Cesar Franck; "Abendlied," Schumann; Sketch No. 3, Schumann; Concert Overture, Mailland; Venetian Serenade, Berwald; "Echo" and "L'Organo Primitivo," Yon; "Choeur Dialogue," Gigout.

Lenten music need not be dreary. We write thus because so many choirs favor fashions in church music during Lent's solemn season that are infinitely depressing and not at all effective. One need only study some of the great classics depicting the season to be set right. All are solemn and dignifiedly beautiful—a character befitting music related to such a sublime subject—but void of unnecessarily sombre realism or any other depressing influence.

The offertorium organ music should continue until the ushers, who in Protestant churches usually receive the offering, have regained their pews. Organists not infrequently stop playing during the presentation and then allow the disturbing footsteps of the retiring ushers to sound loudly. A better plan is to play very softly while the presentation prayer is being uttered, make a slight crescendo as the ushers step away, and then close gradually as silence once more reigns.

In buying anthems choir directors should always confer with the clergy in charge with regard to the texts. Clergymen complain with reason that a great amount of the so-called sacred texts by contemporary writers and poets is not sacred at all; they also feel that in the selection of hymn and biblical texts their desires and judgment should be learned and sought.

The proper manipulation of the swell shutter is an art itself. Very few young organists utilize the swell wisely or well. Good organists create by registration the rise and fall of tone and tone coloring which their more inexperienced brethren depend upon the swell box to supply.

The Attainment of Our Goal

(Continued from page 196)

we might begin to reduce our work among the Negroes of the South, but we have had our eyes opened by this great migration that has been moving up from the South. We know better than we did before what a peril there is in great masses of uneducated, untrained people in our country. For the sake of the North as well as for the sake of the Negroes themselves, we now see that our work for the Negroes of the North and the South ought to be enlarged greatly.

Here are two phases only of our home mission problem that call for the immediate inauguration of our whole great American program. It halts at our peril.

Religious Education

Then there is our work of religious education. Every new study of the situation that is made reveals more clearly how desperate is the need of doubling this work. Such a small percentage of our American children are having any training at all in religion! We shall speedily have upon the stage a generation of people who are almost totally devoid of any adequate knowledge of religious things. Morals can not long survive without religion. Yet our great program of religious education is not at all adequate to the situation and this too halts because we have not yet subscribed the one hundred million. Our Publication Society has, heretofore, turned over each year large profits from its publishing business for the extension of its missionary work, but now the unparalleled cost of printing has absorbed all the profits, and the missionary and educational work is seriously hampered.

Everyone knows what the situation is in our educational institutions. The cost of everything that enters into education has increased and our schools and colleges are crowded to the doors. It was hard enough for them to balance their accounts before the war. The difficulty is doubled now. These institutions which are seeking to provide a training for our boys and girls are calling loudly for help. The payment of the full amount allotted in the budget will not be too much to help them over the hill. Some of them can not wait long for the help.

Then there are our aged and disabled ministers and missionaries. How the hard times have hit them! Their pittance was small enough in the days of low prices. What must it be today? These soldiers of the cross have suffered pitifully during this period. What can we do to make these days easy and pleasant for them is little indeed.

Our Work Overseas

Of our work overseas we do not need to speak at length here. We have recently issued a special appeal on behalf of our foreign mission enterprise. Perhaps none of our work has been harder hit during this period than the work in the Orient. Prices soared there as here and in the midst of it all the value of the gold dollar was seriously depreciated. The scale has now turned, but our loss from exchange during the past two years has run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The demands for work in the Orient have multiplied. New doors are opening constantly. To decline to give the gospel now to a hungry world may set back the clock of the kingdom for generations. We have sent out more than 150 new missionaries in the last two years, but these have not been sufficient to replace our depleted and overworked missionary forces.

These demands and many others are calling to us most insistently for the completion of our full hundred million dollar fund. Large numbers of our churches have done wonderfully—many of them oversubscribed their allotments in a heroic way. If all our churches had responded in the same generous way as did many of them, the full amount would have been subscribed. Is it not time now that those churches which have not as yet responded should provide their full share of the funds needed? A united effort by all of us will make victory possible.

Pay Your Pledge Promptly

And the payments. Our people are doing wonderfully well. The receipts for January were the largest for any month. The receipts of the national societies are very much greater than last year or ever before. Over 75 per cent of the payments now due have been made. But what about the remaining 25 per cent? We cannot meet our obligations without it. In the meantime our societies and boards are having to borrow money with which to pay current bills, that could be met promptly without payment of interest, if all subscribers paid their pledges in full each month.

In the name of our Master whose we are and whom we serve, we appeal to all our Baptist people to subscribe without delay the balance of the full one hundred million dollars and to make full and prompt payment of all their pledges, that the work of our Lord may prosper.

MRS. W. A. MONTGOMERY, Mrs. ANDREW MACLEISH, Women's American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society; Mrs. JOHN NUVEEN, Mrs. KATHERINE S. WESTFALL, Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society; GEORGE B. HUNTINGTON, American Baptist Foreign Mission Society; CHARLES L. WHITE, American Baptist Home Mission Society; GILBERT N. BRINK, American Baptist Publication Society; E. T. TOMLINSON, Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board; FRANK W. PADEL-FORD, Board of Education.

The SCOFIELD Reference Bible

Edited by Rev. C. I. Scofield, D.D.

Assisted by Eminent Scholars

Helps on Pages Where Needed

With Chain References, Revised Marginal Renderings, Prophecies Harmonized, Books of the Bible Analyzed and many other features every Bible student needs

Send for Descriptive Literature

At All Booksellers or the Publishers

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

American Branch

35 West 32d Street New York

RELIGIOUS BOOK WEEK

March 13-20—Put good books in your home, especially THE SCOFIELD REFERENCE BIBLE

DO YOU KNOW!!

THE Business World needs Christian Young People. An efficient Business Training amidst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY

Write for particulars

Osage, Iowa

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Young Women

Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year. Apply early for September.

Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

In writing to our advertisers mention The Baptist

The Children's Great Texts of the Bible

Edited by JAMES HASTINGS, D. D.

This set has been prepared to meet the great need for the religious education of children. In the first volume seventy-four carefully selected texts are treated with the aim of giving to the child in simple form the great biblical truths which should help him in character building.

These books will supply the preacher with materials for sermons for children, the parent with stories that may be told to them, and the Sunday-school teacher with illustrations that will help in his teaching.

The set when completed will consist of six volumes. Three volumes are now ready and the remaining volumes will be published within a few months.

Single or selected volumes, $3.25 each net

Special Offer to Advance Subscribers

Orders for the complete set will be accepted at the special subscription rate of $15.00

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

597-599 Fifth Avenue

NEW YORK

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

In the Land of No Easter

THERE IS A LAND OF NO EASTER.

Where there is no Christ there is no Easter; for Easter is a day of the heart, not a date on the calendar.

WHERE IS THIS LAND OF NO EASTER?

It is wherever a little child has not heard of the Father's love and the Risen Christ,—in India, the land of child widow woes; in China, the home of the bounden feet; in Africa, the land of the dread medicine man; in America, in a thousand darkened homes where the Gospel light shines not. It is wherever superstition and formalism have crushed the spirit of true religion, and men and women have no open Bible and no living Christ. It is wherever men live and labor "having no hope and without God in the world." Everywhere the Land of No Easter.

HOW BIG IS THIS LAND OF NO EASTER?

So big is this dark and hopeless land that figures lose their meaning. So big is it that the utmost the people of Easter Land can do will not overtake the need. Uncounted millions still know not the meaning and the message of Easter.

HOW CAN WE HELP THE PEOPLE OF NO EASTER?

The Baptists of Easter Land—the Northern Baptists—are privileged to give thanks for their hope and joy by sending to the people of No Easter the light of the glorious Gospel of the Son of God. It is to be a spiritual feast, a joyful bringing "over and above" of the gifts of gratitude to Him who has begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

Easter Sunday is the great thanksgiving day of the Christian world. Our gift is to be a token of gratitude. Let it be eloquent of our thanks.

REMEMBER that the Easter Offering is a Thank Offering and is Over and Above our pledges already made. It will be credited toward the 100 Million Dollar Campaign.

GENERAL BOARD OF PROMOTION OF THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

286.05
BAP
Volume II

March 26, 1921

Number 8

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

"I cannot put His presence by, I meet Him everywhere;
I meet Him in the country town, the busy market-square;
The mansion and the tenement attest His presence there."

What Is Our Money Doing?

The question is frequently asked, "What have our New World Movement gifts accomplished so far? We have paid in much more than we ever gave before. What have we to show for it all?" That is a natural question and it demands a frank answer.

1. First of all we have prevented a great disaster on the foreign field. How many of us appreciate what this era of destruction and speculation has cost our foreign mission enterprise? It can be stated clearly in this way, perhaps. Before the war it cost on an average $2,000 a year to support a missionary on the foreign field. That included his salary, the salaries of his native pastors and assistants, the upkeep of his property, and his passage to the field and return. Now it costs to sustain that same man $3,600. What would have become of our foreign mission enterprise if it had not been for the enlarged receipts from the Victory Campaign and the New World Movement? Yet as a result of this enlarged income we have been able to maintain our work without diminution, undertake some new work, and send out 162 new missionaries in two years. Is this not abundant proof that the New World Movement was inspired of God? No one but He who sees the end from the beginning could have put this inspiration into the hearts of his people to save his great missionary enterprise from impending disaster. For that inspiration we are deeply grateful.

2. The one hundred million is not yet pledged, but the advance has already begun. We can not carry out the full program until the fund is completed, but the development is under way.

The salaries of our missionaries have been increased on every field.

Owing to the prompt payment of the gifts to the Jubilee Fund, which form a part of the New World Movement Fund, the Woman's Foreign Mission Society has been enabled to make the most marked advance. Forty-five young women have sailed since the Denver convention, the largest number in the history of the society in the same period of time.

Fourteen new buildings have been provided for and plans are already under way for their construction. Gaubati has been chosen as the location for the first hospital for women and children in Assam. While the plans are being drawn the first trained nurse has already reached Assam and will be ready for work when the hospital is completed.

Work is about to begin on the first building of the Gale Memorial training school for women at Jorhat, Assam.

The initial payment has been made on the assembly hall and dormitory of the girls' school at Kemendine, Burma, and the building will be erected within a year. The architect is now at work on the plans for the new high school for girls at Mandalay, Burma.

The land has been purchased at Ningpo, East China, for the first building for the Riverside girls' academy. The blue prints are already in hand and construction is about to begin. For the high school at Swatow, South China, land is now being broken and the building will be erected this year.

The money has already been paid for the women's residence and mission compound at Chenctu, West China, where it has been possible for the woman's society to buy a group of Chinese buildings in a strategic center in that large city. The land for the new hospital for women and children in South India has been secured. Plans for the erection of the hospital will proceed as soon as physicians return from furlough. Our missionaries at Osaka, Japan, are trying to secure land for a Christian neighborhood house adjoining our Bible training school and money for this purpose has already been advanced.

In addition to the advance evident through the gift and erection of these much needed buildings there are other signs of progress in our women's foreign missionary work. The plans are being perfected for the opening of the girls' commercial school in Tokyo, Japan, which will involve the expenditure of $50,000. Land has been purchased at Sendai, Japan, which makes possible further enlargement of the girls' fine school there. The kindergarten and social work in Kobe, Japan, has been moved to a needy section of the city. A dormitory for students has been secured at Iloilo, P. I., and the opening of the work for students has in less than a year become most encouraging. The industrial school for the manufacture of dolls at Shaohsing, East China, has had a remarkable growth. The first high school for girls among the Chinese speaking the Hakka dialect has been opened at Kaying, South China. The women's department has been opened at Judson College, Rangoon, Burma, with its hostel for girls.

3. In the home fields there is much advance to report. Many of the state conventions have been able to raise the salaries of their missionaries, pitifully low at best, in order to help them meet the increased cost of living. This has enabled men to continue at their work who must otherwise have turned to other occupations. Some of the missionaries with large fields have been provided with Ford cars. This has made it possible for many missionaries almost to double their usefulness. Owing to the high cost of building, few new projects have been undertaken. Plans are under way to begin construction at many points this spring.

4. The home mission society has been enabled to purchase a valuable property in Newark, New Jersey, for its new international training school. A beautiful estate which will provide ideal surroundings for the students was secured at a reasonable figure. Here the new school for training Russian, Polish, Italian, Slovak and other missionaries is now opened. There is already demand for more men than the school can turn out.

5. By reason of generous gifts to the home mission society, new buildings will soon be in process of erection at Morehouse College for Negroes in Atlanta, Georgia, and for Bacone College for the Indians in Oklahoma.

6. Report was made in the Survey of the necessity of opening work at once in Honduras, Central America. This country had been allotted to us and there was scarcely a single Protestant missionary in the entire territory. Before the New World Movement was fairly under way a generous gift made possible the beginning of that work.

7. The publication society has been able to make some advance upon its great program of religious education. But as yet only a beginning has been made at a task which runs far afield into every nook and corner of our land. From these many points come some of our loudest calls. The publication society has been handicapped during the past two years by the excessive cost of doing its publishing business. Heretofore this department has

(Continued on page 246)

Fresh from the Field

The cover picture this week is "The Supper at Emmaus," and was painted by von Uhde. An increasing number of our readers is expressing appreciation of the splendid reproductions we are printing from week to week on this cover page.

Ministers who hold Eastern Clergy Certificates should remember that these are good east of Chicago only, so that it would be necessary for those who plan to attend the Des Moines Convention to provide themselves with Western Clergy Certificates if they are to take advantage of the Ministerial rates. Application should be made to Eben E. MacLeod, Agent Clergy Bureau, 2162 Transportation Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Baptist, Congregational and Methodist churches in Camden, Me., closed series of union meetings March 6, under the leadership of Harry Taylor, evangelist and his daughter, Ruth, gospel singer. The community was deeply impressed.

Mrs. Thomas W. Goodspeed, wife of Dr. T. W. Goodspeed, corresponding secretary of the University of Chicago, died March 13 at her home, 5765 Blackstone avenue. Two sons, Attorney Charles Ten Broeke Goodspeed and Edgar J. Goodspeed, professor at the University of Chicago, also survive her. Mrs. Goodspeed was 76 years old.

Third Church, St. Louis, Mo., Dr. W. H. Geistwelt, pastor, received twenty-seven new members in February.

Baptists of St. Louis had a big get-together dinner at the Third Church, when Dr. C. A. Brooks of the A. B. H. M. Society gave a wonderful word picture of Europe as he found it. Miss Jessie Burrell also spoke.

Mother's Day occurs this year the second Sunday in May. The use of buttons and posters is suggested. They may be had of the Mother's Day International Association, Philadelphia.

Rev. F. Allison Currier, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Millinocket, Maine, has received a unanimous call to the Court Street Free Baptist Church of Auburn, Maine.

Pastor C. P. Morris of Prescott, Ariz., has been ill for three months. During that time the members of the church have kept up the regular services with good interest.

Pastor Llewellyn Brown of Grand River Ave. Church, Detroit, received twenty-two for baptism March 2. The church expects to spend $100,000 for the enlargement of its building.

Rev. John J. Bell closed his work at Tilden, Neb., on Easter Sunday.

Rev. Wilbert R. Howell died at Seattle, March 13, as a result of burns accidentally received from a gas heater in his residence.

Chaplain Cephas C. Bateman, director of the chaplains' service school at Camp Grant, Ill., having served as chaplain in the regular army of the U. S. longer than any other chaplain in its history, on the occasion of his retirement March 18, was given a testimonial dinner by the officers of the camp.

The Berean Band movement for Scripture memorizing is now organized in twenty-five states.

The Baptist

Vol. II March 26, 1921 No. 8

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Editor; Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor; U. M. McGuire
Managing Editor; Edgar L. Killam

Committee on Publication;

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WILLIAM A. MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors;

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs including every family, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	226
EDITORIALS .....	229
OXENMOBILE EVANGELISM IN BENGAL, by Mabel R. Long .....	232
RELIGIOUS CULTURE IN THE UNIVERSITY, by C. C. Long .....	234
TRUE AMERICANIZATION .....	235
FAITH AND I, a poem by M. Carrie Moore .....	236
HOW JAPAN TREATED AN AMERICAN, by Annie S. Buzzell .....	236
CHRISTIAN CONVERTS UPSET PAGAN ALTAR, by P. E. Moore .....	237
HIS EARS ARE OPEN TO THEIR CRY, some answers to prayer .....	238
WHO'S WHO AMONG BAPTISTS, by W. B. Lippard .....	239
DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....	240
BULLETIN BOARD .....	241
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	242
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	243
CHIMNEY CORNER .....	244
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	247
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS .....	252
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	254

Dr. H. F. La Flamme of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the United States and Canada writes: "Your paper, our paper is great. Keep at it hard. Make it more of a people's paper. Print plenty of news. Cut out controversy. Give us a wide vision. Help boost confidence now. The days are dark enough without any more shadows. Keep up a good heart. You are bound to succeed."

Gloom Killers

Digging Up Letters

FRANCIS STIFLER of Wilmette, Ill., believes in THE BAPTIST. He has believed in it from the first but a recent experience has given him new grounds for his confidence.

In the issue of Mar. 12 we published an editorial on "Transients in Heaven." It now appears that there were denominational transients in Wilmette. Pastor Stifler read the editorial to his morning congregation. It was first class publicity for THE BAPTIST. We are not sure, however, that it was to advertise the paper that he read the article. Be that as it may. He gave THE BAPTIST a boost and incidentally secured three good church members. Think of it, in Wilmette! Three saints on their knees digging in their trunks for forgotten church letters. What would result if a similar course were followed in Morgan Park, Oak Park or any other Chicago suburb?

Neigh! Neigh!

"A new barn has been built on the parsonage property and the whole church has taken on new life." Are we to understand that inspiration came through the new barn? Neigh! Neigh!

Another Subscriber Missing

Another postmaster recently sent us this notice. "Subscriber deceased. Present address unknown."

Sound on Fundamentals

"Toot! Toot! THE BAPTIST is paying more attention to doctrine or teachings and consequently to the fundamentals of our holy religion. Keep on; the churches will fall in line that have not already done so." Frank Knickerbocker, Hillsdale, Mich.

That's What They're Doing

"I cannot understand why the Baptists of the North do not send in their subscriptions to THE BAPTIST by the thousands. We consider it indispensable in the university, and also the same to every layman. We congratulate you on your splendid achievement in giving us, as a denomination, such a fine newspaper." W. M. Reynolds, East Lynn, Conn.

"THE BAPTIST is getting better—I mean warmer spiritually. Allow me to congratulate you on your new dress." Joseph Dent, Chicago.

"I like the broad, yet Christian attitude of your paper, which keeps one in touch with so many phases of denominational life." Ellen H. Butler, Bangor, Me.

New World Movement

Financial Report to February 20, 1921

CO-OPERATING BODIES

I. Organization	II. Budget Fiscal Year 1920-1921	III. Proportionate Amount due to Feb. 20, 1921.	IV. Receipts May 1, 1920 to Feb. 20, 1921.	V. Balance due to Apr. 30, 1921.	Receipts for entire fiscal year 1919-1920.
N. B. C.	$ 15,000	$ 12,500.00	$ 6,589.22	$ 8,400.78	$ 658.70
A. B. F. M. S.	1,761,287	1,467,739.17	976,852.06	784,434.94	1,166,667.91
European Relief	166,666	138,888.88	166,666.00
W. A. B. F. M. S.	669,769	558,140.84	489,439.19	180,329.81	480,880.45
A. B. H. M. S.	956,887	797,405.84	553,102.27	403,784.73	1,003,080.54
A. B. Roger Williams.	12,000	10,000.00	12,000.00
W. A. B. H. M. S.	483,404	402,836.67	252,847.71	230,556.29	288,637.65
A. B. P. S.	339,017	282,514.17	227,947.71	111,069.29	318,129.87
M. & M. B. B.	291,100	282,583.33	270,008.29	21,091.71	230,231.31
B. of E. General	200,000	166,666.66	81,303.75	118,696.25	65,860.27
B. of E. S. & C.	2,715,582	2,262,985.00	1,689,349.37	1,026,232.63
TOTAL	$7,610,712	$6,382,260.56	$4,726,115.57	$2,884,596.43	$3,554,146.70
G. B. of P.	$1,900,000	$1,583,333.33	$892,348.60	$1,007,651.40
Interchurch	1,000,000	833,333.33	794,534.67	205,465.33
TOTAL	$2,900,000	$2,416,666.66	$1,686,883.27	$1,213,116.73
B. Y. P. U. of Am.	$15,000	$12,500.00	$11,667.30	$3,332.70	$6,000.00
For. Spk. Bodies	45,625	38,020.83	18,571.75	27,053.25
Inter-denominational Cooperation	60,000	50,000.00	8,625.28	51,374.72
Contingent	6,542	5,451.66	87,155.33
TOTAL	$127,167	$105,972.49	$126,019.66	$81,760.67

STATE CONVENTIONS

Arizona	$18,400	$15,333.33	$15,333.88	$3,066.12	$5,821.00
Calif. N.	50,000	41,666.66	46,721.47	3,278.53	28,791.74
Calif. S.	103,000	85,833.33	88,714.04	14,285.96	103,054.00
Colorado	31,000	25,833.33	29,960.65	1,039.35	16,779.00
Connecticut	35,600	29,666.66	27,450.33	8,149.67	27,079.00
Delaware	2,800	2,333.33	2,099.97	700.03	1,930.00
Dist. of Col.	17,500	14,583.33	946.90	16,553.10	33,927.73
Idaho	11,100	9,250.00	9,853.23	1,246.77	8,115.21
Illinois	52,500	43,750.00	42,293.84	10,206.16	22,320.75
Indiana	61,500	51,250.00	24,014.85	37,485.15	41,000.00
Iowa	36,300	30,250.00	28,538.62	6,761.38	25,585.61
Kansas	38,400	32,000.00	30,345.13	8,054.87	32,300.80
Maine	35,000	29,166.66	18,944.09	16,055.91	27,050.26
Massachusetts	58,000	48,333.33	48,353.97	9,646.03	27,277.50
Michigan	36,000	30,000.00	30,082.69	5,917.31	23,422.15
Minnesota	59,900	49,916.66	49,916.66	15,625.50	39,963.48
Montana	10,000	8,333.33	8,889.20	1,110.80	5,524.82
Nebraska	84,800	70,666.66	80,125.07	4,674.93	28,031.09
Nevada	4,000	3,333.33	3,784.76	215.24	737.16
New Hampshire	25,000	20,833.33	19,370.00	5,630.00	18,471.00
New Jersey	55,000	45,833.33	45,533.31	9,466.69	15,834.34
New York	80,500	67,083.33	68,362.84	12,137.16	67,766.73
North Dakota	13,600	11,333.33	11,976.72	1,623.28	8,164.00
Ohio	130,000	108,333.33	108,333.33	21,666.67	51,070.00
Oregon	20,500	11,083.33	18,259.18	2,240.82	12,370.00
Pennsylvania	57,000	47,500.00	47,500.00	15,009.76	38,034.52
Rhode Island	20,000	16,666.66	16,666.64	3,333.36	15,080.31
South Dakota	18,000	15,000.00	15,000.00	3,000.00	7,045.87
Utah	3,100	2,583.33	2,188.75	728.75	1,430.68
Vermont	27,800	23,166.66	16,770.00	11,010.00	23,177.00
Washington, D.	12,500	10,416.66	11,964.17	3,353.83	7,558.00
Washington, W.	50,000	41,666.66	38,006.56	12,013.44	48,700.00
West Virginia	30,000	25,000.00	26,627.72	3,372.28	32,978.34
Wisconsin	44,000	36,666.66	27,239.06	16,760.94	21,322.71
Wyoming	14,000	11,666.66	9,934.98	4,065.02	4,135.88
TOTAL	$1,346,800	$1,116,333.21	$1,071,102.61	$286,466.81	$871,850.68

CITY MISSION SOCIETIES

New York	$114,400	$95,333.33	$79,762.19	$34,637.81	$90,718.27
Brooklyn	67,735	56,445.83	36,494.52	31,240.48	11,502.89
Philadelphia	61,080	50,900.00	36,506.01	24,573.99	27,112.67
Pittsburgh	48,300	40,250.00	27,972.35	20,327.85	28,176.00
Detroit	76,350	58,625.00	44,677.59	25,672.41	31,056.00
Cleveland	32,525	27,104.16	20,655.17	11,869.83	13,083.32
Buffalo	39,456	32,880.00	22,851.34	16,604.66	19,115.69
Chicago	52,475	43,729.16	37,850.53	14,624.47	20,421.71
Los Angeles	19,000	15,833.33	28,064.04		55,567.00
St. Louis	10,000	8,333.33	5,594.20	4,405.80
TOTAL	$515,321	$429,434.14	$340,427.94	$183,957.10	$296,753.55

Our readers are urged to study with care the facts presented above. For the first time the denomination as a whole has the information regarding the operating budgets and receipts for the current year of each organization participating in the New World Movement. These tables reveal how much each organization, city, state and national, should receive during the fiscal year, the amount paid to date and the balance needed to April 30, the end of the year. Over 76 per cent of the amount pledged by the churches has been paid. It will appear, however, that to provide for all the needs of our work will require not simply 100 per cent payment on all pledges but also large gifts in addition thereto.

No question perhaps has been asked more frequently in connection with the New World Movement than this: "What is the money we have been contributing from month to month actually doing?" A complete answer can hardly be expected. But there is presented on page 226 a carefully worked out article dealing with this very matter. There is much of progress to report, but there is also the clear warning that only the prompt payment of all pledges and general and generous co-operation looking towards the completion of the $100,000,000 can make certain the accomplishment of the large advance program to which Baptists should give themselves.

The Baptist

A Generation of Butterflies

IN A recent address Dr. Henry Van Dyke made the remark that nobody charges that the present generation of young people is a generation of vipers but that there is cumulative evidence that it is a "generation of butterflies." And the smiles and approving nods which went about the audience indicated that he had done something more than make a clever-sounding phrase.

A butterfly is a pleasant feature in the landscape. Its light body and gay shimmering wings give pleasure to the onlooker. Something would be missing if all at once it disappeared to return no more. But its contribution to the life of the world can hardly be counted as valuable at that of many less gaudy creatures who take life more seriously and who go about their work without advertising themselves by brilliant colors or airy graces.

Young people who are gay, both in manner and costume, are interesting objects as they appear on the horizon and possibly the days would be somewhat more drab if they had no place in them. But one remembers occasionally that if they are nothing more, they are drones, living on the fruit of the industry of others, and wonders whether they return value for what they receive. The world became tired of kings because they were expensive and oftentimes troublesome ornaments. It also becomes tired of people who assume that they have a claim on the world's support, whether or not they are doing anything to forward the work of the world. The slacker was execrated in war-time; peace will not forever tolerate him.

General charges are always dangerous and seldom true. But it will be found that they have some background. And the current charge that large numbers of young people are irresponsible, living merely for the delight of the moment and with no due sense of obligation towards the world and its work, will be found, even if it must be qualified a good deal, to have some truth back of it. One has only to walk the streets of a great city like Chicago or New York and to observe carefully the people whom he meets to discover a situation which prevails only on a lesser scale in all parts of the country. Eating, playing and dressing are the serious business of life to multitudes, while praying and giving and working are side-issues, if indeed they have any place at all. Butterfly life is in the ascendant and everywhere conspicuous.

But butterfly life, if brilliant, is short and the ending dark. And the generation of butterflies is living a life which leads nowhere; the future has no promise for such. Moreover, unless life means more than this, it is not worth living. To fly about a light until the wings are scorched and one falls helpless to the ground is not to win anything either for oneself or for others.

Life is more than a chance to play and to drift. There is hard work to do and loads to lift; only as one does the work and lifts the loads does he bring to light the hidden powers and joys of his own life. There are fellowships to be known and spiritual powers to be realized; only as one discovers this does he become of moment and does life become of real value. In him is the outlook on immortality; he must see this and live as an immortal if the days are to be really good. America is a great country today because we had forefathers who lived lives founded upon the Word of God, who took righteousness seriously and who confidently counted themselves heirs of immortality. If America tomorrow is to be good, it will be because the people of this generation do more than live on the surface.

We make here no general charges against the younger generation. The thing Dr. Van Dyke said of them might be said against large numbers of people, old and young. But according to the measure of truth there is in it, it is commended to the serious thought of our people. Is this a generation of butterflies? If so, what of the morrow?

The Easter Offering

THE MOST precious hopes of the world cluster about the events which we recall to mind at the Easter season. Our salvation from the curse and power of sin was made possible through the death and resurrection of our Lord. All that we are and hope to be we owe to his triumphant power. Our assurance of a future life and of a restoration of fellowship with those whom "we have loved long since and lost awhile," is in the fact of the resurrection of Jesus himself.

How vastly different is the confidence and hope of those who have known the risen Lord from that of those who have never known of his love and power! The difference between the West and the East, is the difference between those who know Him and those who do not

The women of our churches are busy gathering their offerings now in the beautiful Easter boxes which have been widely distributed. Every Baptist who has really known the power of the resurrection in his own life will surely embrace this opportunity to share it with others.

A deep gratitude for what the death and resurrection of our Lord mean to us cannot fail to find its expression in an effort to share this faith and hope with others. Unless it grips us with a passion to share it with others, it means nothing to us. The Easter thank offering of this year is nothing but the effort of Northern Baptists to share this life and hope-giving message with those who have not known it heretofore.

Rest, but Remember, Christ Is Waiting

HOPEFULLY and perseveringly, goes the campaign for the $100,000,000. Those churches that raised their quota of subscriptions are expressing no regret that they did so, and while payments are coming in too slowly, there is a general expectation among them that they will pay what they have subscribed. Many other churches are undertaking special local campaigns to make up their original allotments. The promotional agencies in official pronouncements and in the regional conferences, proclaim the unflinching purpose of the denomination to prosecute the campaign to a successful conclusion.

Taking conditions as they existed at Denver two years ago, nobody has expressed the opinion that the total asking was too great for the ability of the Baptists of the North or for the pressing emergency that confronted the denomination for a strengthened and extended program.

Needs remain undiminished, but conditions are not as they were at Denver. Testing times have come. Millions who at that time had plenty of money at command are now unemployed or facing bankruptcy. While the campaign was on, and throughout the period of nearly two years since the meeting at Denver, a hot controversy about doctrine and policy has hindered co-operative effort in hundreds of places. We are trying to carry out in the midst of poverty and dissension a program projected in prosperity and apparent unanimity. But these conditions which may be plead as an excuse for inaction are not a sufficient reason for it. We are still able to perform the task, and they merely challenge our courage and faith.

Moreover, as citizens in common with others, we have supported during six terrible years a series of strains, toils, sacrifices and drives unparalleled and unapproached in the history of the human race. Pastors and churches are complaining that they are tired. They want rest. They are turning to "spiritual" things—prayer meetings, evangelistic efforts, devotional reading. No wonder they are tired. How marvelously their faith and enthusiasm held on through those terrible years! God bless them! It is a gracious thing that they can find rest and refreshing in a deepened fellowship with the Christ of Calvary, while he breathes God's peace into their hearts. Let us not forget, though, that these sacrifices themselves have prepared us for this deeper spiritual life our hearts now long for.

The unresting Christ is still on the march. His campaign is as far-reaching, as imperious and as exigent as it ever was. Momentarily it halts for his tired people. When they shall have rested and refreshed themselves, it will go on as swiftly as ever, and even more swiftly. Do we not purpose so? In this case rest ought not to be permitted to degenerate into dissipation and dawdling. There is such a thing as being too softly spiritual for service. There have been men who would not help in the prohibition movement or the missionary movement because they were too much interested in "spiritual religion" to concern themselves with such matters. They were rather pietistic than spiritual. Our resting time ought to fit us quickly to answer Jesus' call to the religious, intellectual and moral conquest of the earth—to answer it with swift feet and jubilant souls.

Reports of revivals from all parts of the North are encouraging. We are truly in a time of refreshing. We are to come out of it not only with new morale and strength in our veteran soldiery, but with many thousands of newly enlisted and enthusiastic reinforcements. In the meantime we may expect a removal of the conditions that impede industry, and may look for a new release of economic resources.

Moreover, our people are getting tired of quarrels among Baptists. Discussions of policy with a view to greater unification and efficiency are legitimate and necessary; but he who starts a factious battle-cry now need not be surprised if few rally to his partisan standard. After the resting and the revival we are going to swing into line a more compact and mighty host than ever.

When that time comes, the $100,000,000 will be too small for us.

God speed the day!

Meanwhile, how long must he wait for us to rest?

A Herring Across the Trail

THE WISDOM of the world says: "If you cannot answer an adversary, divert attention from what he is saying. Stir prejudice and passion. People will give up their chase if something sufficiently interesting crosses their path."

Familiar with this method of producing confusion, the liquor interests always used it. A portrayal of the havoc wrought by the saloon was met by talk of "personal liberty." It is not strange that some of the big producers of the moving picture are doing the same thing. In response to the growing protest against the outrage being wrought by means of sex and crime pictures, these men are talking about a revival of the blue laws and about the intolerance and bigotry of church people generally. Proposals for a proper censorship are met with accusations against the spirit of religious and socially-minded people in American communities.

Possibly the public will this time be lured off to a side issue. The most vital interests of our children and communities are involved, but possibly the herring's trail will be followed. Then again our people as a whole may be possessed of sound morals and of common sense.

Brotherhood Not Patronage

ON ANOTHER page will be found the account of a fraternization service in which the members of an American congregation invited a Mexican congregation to worship with them. In accepting the invitation the Mexican pastor said, "Brotherhood is so much better than patronage," and thereby expressed the very secret and center of true Americanization. So much of our attempt to Americanize is vitiated by the unconscious spirit of patronage that permeates the whole attempt; the assumption that all the giving and all the learning are on opposite sides, whereas the contrary is true; we have much to give, but we also have much to learn.

A spirit of fraternity will go far to solve perplexities growing out of the immigration question. Let other congregations invite struggling little foreign churches to a joint service; let Sunday schools and young people's organizations hold exchange services; broaden the simple human contacts, increase the number of brotherly services, remove that overshadowing contempt that embitters the heart of the immigrant, and we shall hear very little of the problem of the foreign born. It is the old parable of the wind and the sun and the traveler's cloak; the harder the wind blew, the more closely he wrapped the cloak about him, but after a little sunshine he threw it away.

The Forum Movement Growing

GEORGE W. COLEMAN says that the forum movement in the United States is growing as rapidly as ever. Chambers of Commerce and even the Knights of Columbus have become interested and are using this method of reaching people with a message.

In a church a forum requires careful handling. Whether there should be one or not depends largely upon the type of men in whom it can be made to head up. But rightly conducted a forum as a part of church work is in these days capable of great good. Especially is it of value in connection with the discussions of adult Bible classes.

People are interested in religious problems, but many of them are perplexed. There should be an opportunity for groups of them to talk out the opinions they have, whether these are clear or vague, in order that they may come to clarity and truth. Such discussion can work no damage to the Christian faith. On the contrary, the more thought they give to the great factors in life the more certain are men to come to the conclusion that Christ is, as he claimed to be, the truth and that in him is to be found the one worthy basis for a working faith that shall be completely satisfactory. Many a man and woman is cribbed and confined by questions and doubts which have never come quite clearly to utterance and which would give place to a happy faith were there only opportunity for thorough discussion. But better no forum unless there is sane and sound leadership.

The Laymen's Appeal

LAYMEN of our Northern churches make in another column a statement which deserves consideration by every man who wishes our Baptist churches to play their full part in making actual the kingdom of God on earth.

Herein is expressed the confidence of the laymen in the Board of Promotion, a desire for wide knowledge of the actual facts regarding the board, a suggestion of an advisory committee, an expression of confidence in the ability of our people to raise the $100,000,000, an endorsement of tithing and an appeal for prayer.

Emphasizing this appeal is a statement of the board that the budgets of all the co-operating organizations for the year ending April 30 aggregate $12,500,000, of which $7,284,212.14 has been paid. In addition to the anticipated income of $800,000 from invested funds the sum of $4,415,787.86 is needed before April 30. To reach this goal, churches must meet their pledges, churches which have not yet given must contribute and there must also be large individual gifts.

The laymen believe that a denomination like ours, rich in missionary history, rich in numbers and rich in this world's goods will not fail. The end in view is the winning of souls and the upbuilding of the kingdom of God. For such a cause men will be willing to put forth effort and even sacrifice. With present opportunities none of the great societies must be sent forth to their work in the new year crippled by enlarged debt.

We believe that the men in the churches will share the faith of the men who made up this group of laymen. Will they share in their good deeds also? So confident are we of their Christian character that we believe they will. The next two months should be the greatest giving months in the history of Northern Baptists.

This Week's Prize-Winner Conserving the Hillside Springs

FAR-SEEING statesmen are warning us of dire consequences that must follow the denuding of our forest lands, if no restorative processes are inaugurated. The hillside springs, the source of rivulets and rivers, we are told, will vanish. The effect, both immediate and remote, means disaster to life and living conditions. The picture is painted none too dark.

Like these hillside springs, the country churches are the source of supply for the churches in the great centers of population. While the constant drawing off of the best blood of these churches suggests disaster for them, and is disheartening it at the same time affords truest inspiration. A pastor in Maine who through the years had been receiving young people into his church became disheartened by the constant migration cityward and went to Boston to see what had become of the members he was constantly losing. Finding them running the Boston churches, he returned with new inspiration, concluding that his best work was that of baptizing more young people to keep city churches going.

Let country churches take heart. Their work is indispensable. If the mission of the city church is to deal effectively with conditions in the storm centers of civilization, let country churches find it their mission to furnish the needed men and women, since it is no secret that a vast proportion of the efficient working force of city churches is country-born. To avoid disaster, the hillside springs must be conserved.

Just here lies the real difficulty. With the Americans of Christian and Protestant traditions drifting cityward, the farms are being taken by Jews, Catholics and a polyglot assortment of foreign-born. The alternative is that the churches either by revision of method adjust themselves to new conditions and so fulfill a new mission or be swallowed up by the incoming flood of aliens. While it is tremendously important that the hillside springs be kept flowing, many are deeply pondering how this is to be accomplished.

New Britain, Pa.

R. M. HUNSICKER.

HOME OF A BENGAL CHRISTIAN

THE BUSY HOUR IN THE MARKET PLACE

Oxenmobile Evangelism in Bengal

How much stuff can be packed in a bullock cart? And what is to be done when one of the bullocks runs away and leaves passengers and load to decorate the landscape? Midnapore missionaries find out.

BY MABEL R. LONG

AFTER the hottest season for more than forty years, it is no wonder that we have been looking forward to the cold season. Greater than our desire to see the mercury fall, however, was our eagerness to have the opportunity to do some directly evangelistic work in the district. So on the afternoon of Nov. 24 we started out west from Midnapore for the village where the preachers had pitched their tents a few days before. Two Bible women journeyed in a country cart, while the baby, the nurse and I went in our large touring garry or "oxenmobile" with two men sitting on the tongue to balance the load. After his office work was finished for the day, and all the last directions given, Mr. Long followed on his bicycle by moonlight.

Now all this probably sounds easy, but if you could have seen the big "oxenmobile" you would have understood that it took several days of planning and preparations to get supplies ready for a three weeks tour. We had bullock and cow feed in huge sacks, boxes and baskets of vegetables, tinned goods, dishes, cooking utensils, whatever necessary household articles could be easily packed in a small compass, our folding chairs, a folding crib and go-cart, our bedding, the stereopticon outfit, as well as tents and their accessories.

A few miles out of Midnapore we came to a long hill leading down to the river, where we had our first adventure. Fortunately Mr. Long had equipped the garry with a brake, as bullocks have no means of holding back on a grade, and there we made good use of it. But the poor bullocks! They had never before heard the grating sound of a brake behind them, and half way down the hill they made a wild dash. Before I knew what was happening, the garry was headed for the roadside ditch, and I caught sight of one of the bul-locks starting toward home. Fortunately the weight of the two men on the tongue held the garry down in front, so that there was no danger of our falling out at the back, and the luggage tumbling over us. We were soon yoked up again and on our way with no further mishaps, except the occasional unyoking of one of the bullocks because his yoke pin had been broken off short. It was a picturesque, but not exactly an easy task to pitch the tents by moonlight, but finally all was ready for the night's rest. We had our supper, and at midnight we were glad to pull our warm blankets over us, for in Bengal from November to February we have quite cool nights.

For several days we camped at this place. Forenoons and afternoons the workers went out to the surrounding homes and adjacent villages and in the evening they showed pictures of the life of Christ and told gospel stories. Our work was for the most part with people of the lower classes, and was most interesting. We found one thing that proved a hindrance, namely, the presence of a fairly large Roman Catholic community. Everywhere we heard, "Yes, we know about Jesus.

A TYPICAL BENGAL OXENMOBILE

We have Christian families living right here, but some of them are no better than we. They steal and lie, and drink." The Bible women were most patient in listening to all these remarks, and tried to convince the people that real Christians, do not steal, or lie, or drink and that they worship only Jesus, and not images.

Our next stop was at a neat little bungalow, six miles further west. It surely was a joy to have a comfortable house, for a small tent with three beds in it and with all our baskets and boxes piled up, leaves much to be desired in the way of space. We passed several pleasant days there, walking to the near-by villages, and to farm homes to tell the story of Jesus. We found that in only one home that we visited had the women ever heard of Jesus. It was an absolutely new field. Just think! On the main road, only thirteen miles from Midnapore are homes that never before have been visited by Christians! See how sadly Midnapore needs an evangelistic missionary, who can give all his time to this work of spreading the good news to those in this district.

We found the father, sons, daughter, and four daughters-in-law in one high caste home very cordial. They listened very attentively, the women with their saris drawn well over their faces, and simply peering through at one side lest some man might see them. They bought gospels to read, so that we have some hope of having the word remembered and studied in that home. It is most hopeful when we can sell Gospels, Psalms, the Teachings of Jesus, and other religious books, for then we know that there is something to build on for the future. Even if another worker does not come for years, at least they have the written Word to study. In the homes of the illiterate it is much harder to make an impression unless one can go frequently to show pictures and tell of Jesus and his salvation.

In many of these homes it is difficult even to see the women of the household. The men usually find an audience on one of the verandas, but the Bible women must gain access to the inner court, where they will find the women strictly guarded. In one home the mother-in-law opened the street door just a crack, and was so startled at the sight of us that she hardly dared stay to listen to our explanations—we were women, not men; we were Christians, not begging Brahmins; they would need to give us neither food nor money. Finally they mustered up courage to let us in, but all the time we sat on a bed in the middle of the courtyard showing pictures and talking, the small children regarded us with awe and fear, and the women stood ready to snatch them up if necessary.

Another day we walked away out in the country to visit a large farm house. It looked near, but it was really a long distance to travel on the ridges between the rice fields, the Bible women to sing Santal hymns and to tell the stories in her native tongue. In the caste homes we found willing listeners, and each afternoon Mr. Long had many visitors and crowds of curious on-lookers. So we feel that a little start has been made there.

Our next stopping place was across the river. We had a long hard pull to make the journey, as the bullocks are not accustomed to pulling through water and sand. As we came down the steep incline leading to the river, the brakes were applied vigorously, men pulled back on the wheels, and all sorts of directions were shouted out to the patient driver. We made the grade safely, and the bullocks bravely made for the deepest water, but there we stopped. They were unused to pulling through river bottoms, and the heavily loaded garry kept sinking deeper and deeper into the sand. Up crept the water to the hubs, over the hubs, into the back of the garry, wetting the tent carpet. We drew up our clothes to keep them dry, and patiently waited, while the bullocks swung around to the right and to the left. Fortunately our bedding and food were far enough toward the front of the load to escape the water, and the only mishap was the soaking of the driver's cooked rice, which he had tied to the axle. At last all available hands turned to, and we made a start, pulling into the shallower water where the bullocks could manage their load better. Then the worst was over, and there was only the long pull through the dry sand of the river bed before we reached the good main road again.

We have been four days in this little straw thatched bungalow. We find many of the people eager to hear the word. This morning I found a most cordial welcome in one home where one of the women had for many years been in touch with missionaries, as her girlhood home was in Midnapore. The children gather about the baby's go-cart when the nurse takes him out for his morning and evening airings. Everywhere we go, he is a great attraction, and opens the doors of many homes. All along the way we have given lantern lectures on the life of Christ.

A CHAPEL ON THE MIDNAPORE FIELD

meandering about the water courses. It was most pleasant to see a welcome smile on the face of the mother at the end of our long walk. She had taken her young daughter into the Midnapore hospital for treatment this last year, and so she recognized one of the Bible women and welcomed her cordially. Both she and the girl were glad to see the Gospel pictures once more, and to hear the simple stories of Jesus' life. Incidentally other members of the family also heard the Word.

Two miles farther west we found another good camping site, except that the well was three hundred yards distant. There was a large Santal community near-by, and our Santal preachers were able to touch a great many people. Evenings, the lantern talk was given both in Bengali and Santali, so that all could understand. One morning I stayed with baby, while the nurse went with

Religious Culture in the University

Mr. Long, as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Urbana, Ill., has opportunity to study at first hand the problem here presented and he gives this authorized interview to the readers of THE BAPTIST

BY C. C. LONG

THE university is a factor in our educational life that is becoming more and more prominent, and it will gather an increasing number of young men and young women from Baptist homes. It meets a need that at present the denominational school cannot meet. Where could all our Baptist boys and girls be accommodated in distinctly Baptist institutions? The facilities are totally inadequate both from the point of view of building equipment and courses offered. Hence the university is with us. Large numbers of our Baptist families will patronize it. The distinct problem before the denomination at this hour is to look after the religious needs of its boys and girls attending the state institutions. The question is: How may this best be done?

CANNOT MIX THEM WELL

Some of the denominations have attempted to meet this need through the expansion of the local church so as to reach the student body. A pastor's assistant is appointed to work among the students and to look after their religious interests. This method has been and is at the present time only partially effective. This is true from very evident reasons. The mind of the family church in any given community differs from the mind of a student body. The pastor of a family church who attempts to minister to the needs of the student group will find his grip slipping on the family group, and vice versa. If he is to hold his students he must place them in positions of responsibility. This must frequently be done at the expense of the development of the family church. Then on the other hand a student body regards an assistant as an "assistant." In another relation, as pastor for instance, he might become very effective with the student body, for he carries with him an element of moral authority, which he cannot carry as an "assistant." These students who have come from homes of good religious training will indeed usually offer an easy field for the pastor's helper. But most of these will find their way into church life without a prod. It is that larger group of young men not so predisposed who need the shepherd's crook and loving sympathy of a virile character to guide them during these formative days.

The outlook, the mental life, the expanding ideals, the inquisitive mind, so characteristic of the student body, requires an approach not necessary in the stabilized family church. For the average student is a walking interrogation point. He feels that he must place a question behind all things. For him life is in a state of flux. This is not so in the family church. For it most things are settled, and innovations and disturbing questions are unwelcome. A common ground of thought between these two groups is hard to find.

The other method in vogue is that of a church in the university community, with its own organization and pastor to take care of the religious life of the student body. This is the method now in practice at the University of Illinois. Around the campus are grouped seven churches, six of which have buildings especially constructed to care for their student constituency. The university has grown until we have seven thousand students enrolled. Four hundred of these are Baptist students. Prior to the building of the University Baptist Church, seven years ago, the Baptist students attended either the First Baptist Church of Urbana or the First Baptist Church of Champaign. But at the best a minority of the Baptist student body was touched by either of these churches. Both churches had their local responsibilities to meet and neither could concentrate on the needs of the student body. Moreover neither church was prepared to give to these students the training in religious education that their situation demanded.

STUDENT CHURCH SUITS THEM

But what is the situation now? The students have their own church. They have their own organization. They have their own pastor. They have their own Sunday school with a faculty and a curriculum specially adapted to the needs of a student body. The pastor himself conducts a class of the freshmen, and this past semester he has led these young men through Fosdick's "The Meaning of Prayer." About fifty of these young people have purchased texts and are making a serious study of the subject of prayer. Fully 70 per cent of the Baptist constituency in the university are connected with the student church. This was not so under the former arrangement.

The pastor under this scheme can do things and give himself to the interests of the students in a way that a pastor of the family church is unable to do. The pastoral work among the student group is one of the most essential factors in the success of the venture. The freshmen year is the strategic period. Two weeks prior to the opening of the school the pastor is busy locating students. He is also busy locating himself in the life of the new student in these days of opportunity.

CALLS FOR SPECIALIZATION

The university of Illinois has graduated thousands of students but out of these thousands less than one hundred have gone into distinctly religious work. Under the regime of the student churches this will be changed. Just last year twenty-two students of the Baptist church sought a private interview with Dr. Lerrige, on one of his visits here, to consult with him concerning the choice of a life work in distinctly religious activity. In my judgment the student body requires an intensive cultivation that cannot be done in co-operation with the family group. We have seen this contrast here. The churches that are trying out the combination are far less effective on the student group than are the churches that are specializing on the students. Specialization must be done on either one or the other; the one must suffer at the expense of the other.

A matter of most vital interest to the Baptists of Illinois is now in process at University of Illinois. At this present time there is an enrollment of 448 Baptist students. The pastor has his hands more than full to look after this group. At a recent meeting of the authorities of the university, on petition from the religious groups about the university, credit is extended to students taking work offered by the denominations in religious subjects. The requirements are such, however, that only two religious organizations have been able to meet them. The university authorities regard the pastor as having his hands full in looking after the special work committed to him and as not in a position to offer courses of instruction worthy of university credit. The Methodist church has one man who devotes his entire time to the work of religious instruction and offers three courses this semester that are largely attended. As soon as the denomination can make the arrangement it will have another man and thus enlarge the opportunity for the student body to pursue courses in religious subjects.

The Methodist church is just now completing a building adjacent to the campus at a cost of $250,000. This building is to be devoted to social and religious opportunities for the student body. The Church of Christ will soon erect a building for the same purpose. The Catholics are looking forward to the time when they will have such a building for their students. At the present time they are offering courses to their students for which credit is given in the university. The Methodists look forward to that hour when their enterprise, known as the Wesley Foundation, will be the center of a large school of religion, co-operated in by the other Protestant denominations. I am told on good authority that the directors of this Foundation would welcome the appointment of a good man for religious instruction by any Protestant denomination. Here is a situation that it behooves the Baptists of the state of Illinois to consider. Baptist students registered here would welcome strong courses in religious instruction, especially when these courses will receive credit in the university toward the A. B. degree. Mr. Bryant, the pastor, has gone into this matter quite thoroughly and feels strongly with others that the denomination would be making a most valuable investment to take this whole situation under advisement looking forward to the appointment of a representative on the faculty of religious instruction.

True Americanization

Mexicans are not bandits, nor Americans scornful oppressors. Christians of both countries interchange songs and shake hands. Brotherhood is better than patronage or plunder.

A CONGREGATION in Los Angeles recently invited a Mexican congregation to a fraternization service with the American congregation at its beautiful building. The response was prompt and hearty.

The story, in part, as told in the New Era Magazine, is as follows:

"I have been working here for six years," said Rev. Jose Falcon; pastor of the Mexican church, "and I have heard much about Christian Americanization; but this is the first time my congregation has had such an invitation. Brotherhood is so much better than patronage. We will be there."

So the American pastor and the Mexican pastor planned together the program for a fraternization service, and on Sunday evening, Nov. 16, a large Immanuel congregation played host to 250 Mexicans. The hymns were sung antiphonally—the first verse in English by the American congregation; the second verse in Spanish by the Mexicans. The Spanish voices were wonderfully sweet and mellow. The Mexican choir sang an anthem for the American congregation, and the American choir sang an anthem for the Mexican congregation.

Early in the service a Mexican lad of six years recited the Ten Commandments in Spanish. When he had finished there was a moment of silence, then a burst of applause. After that all through the service vigorous handclapping was frequent—and reverent. Brief addresses in English were made by Dr. Smith, the pastor, Dr. McLean, the superintendent of the Home Board's Mexican work and Rev. E. Fred Eastman, educational director for the Home Board. Dr. Falcon preached to his own responsive congregation in Spanish, and while few Americans understood his words, he was applauded roundly, for there was no mistaking his sincerity and his power over the congregation.

"When you think of Mexicans," said Dr. McLean to the American congregation, "do not think of a few bandits—think of Christian people like these."

"When you think of Americans," said Dr. Falcon in Spanish to his congregation, "do not think of those who oppress you or scorn you—think of Christians like these."

That was the spirit of the service. When it was all over and the last strains of "America" died away, there was much hand-shaking and exchange of greetings in English and Spanish between the two congregations, and the gratitude was not all on the part of the Mexicans.

"We have enjoyed many services in Immanuel," said one of Dr. Smith's members, "but never have we had a service that has moved us more than this."

REV. JUAN RODRIGUEZ, a missionary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, visiting among the Mexican settlements in Southeastern Colorado, calls at a settler's home.

Faith and I

FAITH and I went forth to sow
Early in the morning;
All the streams ran very low,
Doubt looked on with scorning.

"See," he said, "a barren field,
All the flowers are blighted;
Thorns alone the ground will yield;
Thus is faith requited."

"Nay," said Faith, "I hear the rain
Singing in the mountain,
And the dry and thirsty plain
Laughs to meet a fountain."

"Ha!" cried Doubt, "that same old tune;
But if you remember,
Frost can show a smiling June
Frowning as December."

Then with fainting heart I thought,
"Faith and I must sever;"
But with steadfast trust she wrought,
Whispering softly, "Never!"

Then I turned from Doubt and lo!
By me stood the Master,
And I heard him saying, "Go!"
While Faith held me faster.

Joyful now we onward press,
Faith and I together,
Sowing seed of righteousness
In all kinds of weather.

—M. Carrie Moore.

How Japan Treated an American

After a sixteen months' furlough in the United States, during which time she spent six months in delightful study at the University of Chicago, the writer recently returned to her work in Tono, Iwate Ken, Japan. Under date of Feb. 3, she describes her reception in the following significant letter

BY ANNIE S. BUZZELL

AND now I am back in this, my other country—and do I feel a new anti-American spirit, such as some newspapers try to make you think has sprung up here? Not a bit of it. I can give you only my experience, but I am an American. So many of my old boys and girls and friends met me at the landing at Yokohama that the reporters thought that some great personage had arrived and crowded around with their questions, which were answered by the Japanese friends. The next morning, papers gave quite a prominent place to the announcement of the return of this American missionary. One of my old Bible-class "boys," now high up in the department of finance, gave me a card of introduction to the head of the custom house; so porters were ready to do my bidding and an inspector was on hand immediately, all politeness and consideration. He took my word for everything. Not a box was opened, and not a cent of duty was charged, though I told him of my new Victrola and records, of the new bed, of the kodak, of the bountiful "hope-box," which the "showers" of my loved Nebraska friends had filled for me, and of anything which I thought might be liable to duty. As an American missionary he trusted me and believed that all that I had was not for my profit but for Japan. I could not see any anti-American spirit there, nor anywhere, all the way along—could you? I wondered if such a thing really existed.

Now I am living in a country town of 8000 population, the only foreigner for miles and miles around; but do I feel any anti-American spirit? Not a bit of it. Am I afraid? Not a bit. Everyone is kind, polite, helpful and friendly. Not a child calls me any bad names—not even "Ijin," which is only an equivalent to "Jap," "Chink," "Sheeny," "Dago," and the like. I go everywhere freely, alone, day or evening, even on market days, when the streets are crowded. If I lose my way someone helps me to find it. I live in a Japanese house, with only paper walls between me and out-of-doors, but the only thing that I feel any anxiety about is fire, and not much about that, for every two hours (if I wake) in the silence of the night I can hear the clack-clack, clacker of the night watchman as he passes through my backyard; and I turn over and sleep again, knowing that he is looking out for fires or other danger. Would anyone begrudge 15 or 20 cents a month for such a feeling that someone is on guard? Tono is up among the mountains, where the air is clear and crisp and cold, and where the scenery is beautiful. In this town of 8000 there are seven Buddhist temples and seven Shinto shrines, besides numerous smaller places of worship; and each of the many surrounding villages has its own village god in its place of worship. It is my business here to establish among all of these one Christian community center. Do you wonder that I am happy, with such a field and such an opportunity? Don't you wish that you were here? Come on, and see for yourselves how kind and helpful these simple country people are. Come and learn to know the Japanese as they are in everyday life, and you will not be afraid of them any more.

Christian Converts Upset Pagan Altar

They talk of crops, then of gods, then fall out.—The god of the hill challenges the God of heaven.—Three active corpses accept a dare.—“Ek-e-bar-y-hey-sha” (Yo, heave), hearties!—And there lies the altar.

BY P. E. MOORE

THE hill country of Assam affords a sense of relief after one has travelled for days on the plains of India. One section of the hills is inhabited by a tribe called the Mikirs of whom there are about 103,000 in number, a strong and a fairly sturdy race. One of the villages had as its chief a young man named Pankri who as a boy had been taught by a missionary to read and write. Few Mikir chiefs can read and write, so when a clerk was wanted by a certain assembly of chiefs, Pankri was elected clerk and later secured the government position of chief of the chiefs of a certain district.

One day not so many months ago, Pankri and four of his companions met three Christian youths on the road. For some minutes they chatted about the various crops and then the Christians asked if it were not now time for the people of the district to become Christians. "How can we?" was the reply, "when the Christian's God is such a weak one, and our Rekanglong is so powerful?" Of course the Christian's reply was, "But our God is the Creator of all these hills, He gives us rain from his clouds and sunshine from his sun. And He has endowed you with brains so that you can think of the things that your eyes see and your ears hear. And your chief of chiefs has even learned to wield the pen so that you can send a message even to far distant Calcutta for half an anna only. Your father could not do that; neither could your grandfather although he was a great man. Further than that no Mikir ever learned to read or write until a Christian nation took an interest in us." To this sermonette Pankri listened attentively. But one of his followers who had become very restless exclaimed: "But Rekanglong lives right on yonder hill and if we should become Christians, he would be sure to feel insulted and would at once destroy us before we could get home." "No he wouldn't" retorted one of the Christians. "He could not" said another, while the third said, "Just you look at me! I live near the Rekanglong Mountain and have been a Christian for more than two years. Do I resemble a two-years old corpse very strongly?"

The simultaneous replies of the five non-Christians were loud and fiery and fast. These replies had lots of vim and plenty of anger. In closing the followers of Pankri repeated the words of their leader who, pointing to a sacrificing altar two men placed their shoulders against it from the opposite side and calling "Ek-e-bar-y-hey-sha!" meaning "altogether now," they put forth their best strength again and again till at last down went the altar. If only a good photographer could have taken a likeness of the triumphant faces of the three and then turned of rock near by had said, "If your Christian God is bigger and stronger than Rekanglong go and pull down yon sacrificial rock of our God."

A WAYSIDE SHRINE IN INDIA

Soon as the confusion of angry voices had ceased, the leader answered the fiery challenge thus: "You have insulted our God who created not only the hill where you say your god dwells, but also all these hills and the plains too, and all the stars and sun and moon, you claim that he is less powerful than that Reganglong. Since you seem to think our God who has defended us from all demons for years is not able to protect us now, we accept your challenge." And addressing his two companions in a clear voice he said, "Come on fellows. Let us see what we three corpses can do for this old altar rock." Leading the way to the slab of granite that had been brought from the hillside and set there generations ago, he clasped his hands about its top. The other his kodak upon the five.

For some moments they scarcely spoke a word but stood looking at the three, expecting to see first the leader and then his followers fall dead. In greatly subdued tones they tried to assure the Christians that they would die on their way home and if not, they would be dead before the next sunrise. And so they parted, each spreading the news that caused more excitement and talk than an ordinary murder. Many of the more ignorant heathen were truly surprised to learn that all three of the Christians were alive the next day and had not even a headache, nor a sign of fever but were perfectly well.

Today the prone altar, still prone, preaches to the passer-by of this much traveled road and joins its witness to that of the Christians that the living God is able to save, while a mythical demon has no power to avenge itself upon those who overthrow its altars.

His Ears Are Open to Their Cry

Does God answer prayer? Readers of THE BAPTIST were recently invited to send in sketches from their own experience bearing on this question. Some of their interesting replies are here given. What is your experience?

A Sick Girl's Prayer

HELEN Sears lay at the mercy of her physician and the surgeon who felt it necessary to operate on her chest at ten o'clock in the forenoon. Helen anticipated this operation with horror and was convinced that she could not survive it.

There was no one to intercede for the lone girl, so her only resource was prayer. A little before ten she began with all fervency to pray that the dreaded operation might never be necessary. At ten nobody had come and she prayed on with ever growing faith till twelve. At noon she knew that no doctor would come that day, and from twelve till two she spent in fervently thanking God for her deliverance.

Meanwhile, the surgeon took the electric car ten miles away to keep his appointment with Helen's physician. There appeared no earthly reason why in a few minutes he would not reach his destination. But presently the car ran off the track. The conscientious surgeon tried vainly to secure private conveyance for the rest of the trip; nothing was available.

At twelve, as he could do nothing more, he took a car back home. Had he known that the wreck occurred only two miles from the place of his appointment, he would gladly have walked that distance.

The next morning, when her physician called, Helen was so much better that the operation was unnecessary and never took place.

Charlotte Bird.

God Sent Ten Dollars

I WAS about to visit my native home for the first time after my conversion to tell my relatives how I had been changed in heart by the mercy of Christ and prayed that I might be made a blessing to them.

Before leaving for home 100 miles away, I was impressed to visit a certain Christian woman whom I had not seen or heard from for some time and who had been kind to me when a boy, and to give her $10. I called on her and found her husband suffering from a far advanced case of cancer. She seemed glad to hear that I was converted, and the old captain, an unconverted man, came from the other room where he had overheard my story, took my hand and said,

"Charlie I am an older man than you, but hear me now, when I say, hold fast to it." I then pressed the $10 in the woman's hand as she bade me good-bye, when she at once cried out, "My prayer has been answered!"

I urged her to tell me how much she had been praying for and her reply, without looking into her hand to see how much she had, was "$10"; and I shall never forget with what earnestness she said she would never distrust the Lord again.

E. H. Robinson.

When Sue Beat the Devil

IT was on the Nebraska prairies when that country was new. Jim and Sue were then young. Jim owned a horse-power threshing machine with which he served the country for many miles in all directions, always returning to his home at night.

The little church, consisting of five members all of one family, had worked and prayed and payed and sacrificed for two years. Then in harvest time a revival broke out and the little band of five grew to a thriving church of 100 members.

Sue was one of the converts of this spiritual harvest. She desired baptism, but Jim stoutly opposed her. He sent for his mother, an Episcopalian, to "come and settle Sue." She came, but dared not interfere.

Jim was angry with his mother. He had sent for her to "come and settle Sue," but she was "only siding with her." He was angry with Sue, that she would not give up her "foolish intentions." He left home for his day's work without kissing his wife good-bye, and that night he did not return.

Sue spent the whole night on her knees, and next day she went to the water and was baptized.

While the throng was gathered on the river bank a horse and rider were seen in the distance, coming at great speed. The rider was Jim. He had stopped the threshing machine and mounted his horse, hoping to reach the river before the company had dispersed. He dropped from his steaming horse, threw off his coat, and rushed into the water, begging that he too might be baptized.

As he came from the water his joy knew no bounds. He hugged and kissed his wife and said "Oh Sue! I told you you beat the Devil, and you have." He hugged and kissed also the dear little woman who was everywhere known as "Mother" of that little church, and through whose devotion and Christlike living this revival was due.

From that day till his death, Jim and Sue labored hand in hand for the Master.

Mrs. G. B. Hopkins.

MRS. LAURA H. CARSON, WITH KINDERGARTNERS

Who's Who Among Baptists

A Review of Contemporary Denominational Biography

BY W. B. LIPPARD

Mrs. Laura H. Carson

THIRTY-EIGHT years ago a young woman, born in Nebraska, Laura L. Hardin, who later became Mrs. A. E. Carson, went to Burma as a missionary. Appointed in 1883, she sailed in September of that year and began her work at Bassein. She returns to America this spring for a well-earned furlough and rest after a long, faithful and remarkable missionary career. Because of advancing years and health conditions, she will probably not return to Burma. Only a missionary can know what this means. For more than twenty years she lived and worked with her honored husband, who was called to higher service in 1908. Since 1900 she has been serving at Haka, Burma, many times since the death of Mr. Carson being left entirely alone in the station.

Mrs. Carson has given over twenty years of her own life to the Chins of Burma as well as the life of one who was more precious than life to her. During the early days in Haka she and Mr. Carson lived in a little two-room damp brick house. Her husband built the present residence and school which is now used for a dormitory. For a long time they had no response from the people. Today there are 800 baptized Christians, and this year there will be the largest number of additions in the history of the mission. Six mission schools are maintained with over 200 pupils. Mrs. Carson, besides translating text-books into Chin, has produced two hymn books and the historical books of the New Testament, and has just finished a complete dictionary. She has been in Burma during rebellions, one of which was checked before it really started. Four missionaries have gone home sick during the time she has been there and one has been buried in Haka. Mrs. Carson is loved and respected by Chins, both Christian and non-Christian. They are sad over her departure, especially the women for whom she has done so much.

MRS. T. E. ADAMS
(PHOTOGRAPH OF MRS. LAURA H. CARSON ON OPPOSITE PAGE)

MRS. KATHERINE S. WESTFALL
(PHOTOGRAPH OF MRS. LAURA H. CARSON ON OPPOSITE PAGE)

Mrs. Katherine S. Westfall

WHEN the late Dr. Galusha Anderson baptized Katherine Storey, a girl in his Sunday school at the Second Church in Chicago, he was not aware that she was destined in later years to become one of our widely known and highly esteemed women leaders. After her graduation from a Chicago high school, she attended the Chicago Art Institute for four years, and shortly thereafter married Mr. E. W. Westfall.

As a general rule, active interest in missions in later life is the result of years of previous participation in missionary activities. Mrs. Westfall's interest in missions dates back to her Sunday-school days, when her class made gifts and visits to needy families in the neighborhood and supported a girl in Miss Higby's school in Moulmein, Burma. Throughout her career she has been active in all forms of church work, serving as superintendent of the primary and later of the junior departments of the Sunday school, and as president of the woman's missionary society. For nine years she served as superintendent of the Chicago Industrial School. The welfare of working girls has always been on her heart, and many of the Chicago girls' lunch clubs and noonday rest clubs have received their inspiration from and have grown out of one of the first clubs of this character which she helped to establish.

Mrs. Westfall is best known to Baptists through her efficient administration as corresponding secretary of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, a position which she has filled since 1909, having previously been a member of its board of managers for two years. Under her wise leadership the work of the society has made remarkable progress. Since 1910 its income has increased from $190,937.81 to $263,033.52, and today 367 missionaries are in its service, whereas the number was only 302 ten years ago. A large number of denominational and interdenominational organizations have profited by her membership and her helpful counsel. She has visited all the home mission fields of the denomination, and through this personal observation has been in a unique position to bring to the attention of our Baptist women the needs and their responsibilities for meeting the needs of the women and children in our home mission fields.

Mrs. T. E. Adams

THE appointment of Mrs. T. E. Adams of Cleveland, Ohio, as publicity chairman for the Jubilee celebration of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society has met with widespread approval. Few women in our denomination are better qualified for such an important task. Our constituency may therefore expect to become well informed regarding the plans and purposes of this unique celebration, which commemorates fifty years of organized foreign mission activity by American Baptist women. Mrs. Adams has always been interested in editorial work and publicity since her initial introduction as editor of her school paper. This was followed by various connections with educational and journalistic enterprises, including her work as correspondent for the New York Musical Courier. For eight years prior to its merging with THE BAPTIST she was contributor to the Journal and Messenger, furnishing regularly one of the most popular features of that paper.

Her active denominational service dates from 1911, when she was appointed foreign secretary for Ohio

(Continued on page 253)

The Devotional Life

God, as Revealed in the Psalms

By L. B. TROWBRIDGE

One of the richest and most strengthening feasts of which the Christian may partake comes from studying David's conception of God in the Psalms.

Of course the richness and strength comes not from studying about David's God; but from taking this same God, who was completeness of life and joy to David, as all in all to us.

The present article is condensed from material gathered by personal study extending daily over many months. First the writer read through the full one hundred and fifty psalms and noted every name, or benefit or virtue which the Psalmist attributed to God. The mere list of these totaled more than eighty attributes, and under some heads were more than two hundred passages expressing that attribute.

Praise

More than two hundred times the note of praise is sounded in the Psalms. Out of this larder let us taste a few of these rich morsels:

"I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall continually be in my mouth" (34:1).

"My tongue shall speak of thy righteousness and of thy praise all the day long" (35:28).

"Let such as love thy salvation say continually, the Lord be magnified" (40:16).

"From the rising of the sun to the going down of the same the Lord's name is to be praised" (113:3).

"While I live I will praise the Lord: I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being" (146:2).

A Personal God

Forty-six times God is mentioned as a personal God. Among the best of these passages are these:

"This God is our God forever and ever: He will be our guide even unto death" (48:14).

"He that is our God is the God of salvation" (68:20).

"He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust" (91:2).

"He is our God; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand" (95:7).

An Answer of Prayer

Fifty-six times God is spoken of as a hearer or answerer of prayer.

"This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him and saved him out of all his troubles" (34:6).

"The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry" (34:15).

"When I cry unto thee, then shall mine enemies turn back: this I know; for God is for me" (56:9).

"By terrible things in righteousness thou wilt answer us, O God of our salvation" (64:5).

"Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray and cry aloud, and he shall hear my voice" (55:17).

A Deliverer from Trouble

God wonderfully helps in time of trouble, temptation and sin.

"Thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress" (4:1).

"Thou shalt preserve me from trouble; thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance" (32:7).

"God is our refuge and strength: a very present help in trouble" (46:1).

Among the two hundred or more passages which mention God's help a strong one is:

"The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer: My God, my strength; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation and my high tower" (18:2).

Teacher and Guide

Besides helping in trouble, God gives strength and guidance for the routine of life. There are at least eighty of these passages.

My Soul Was as a Drifting Ship

By HALSEY R. CARSTENS

My soul was as a drifting ship,
Out on the restless sea of life;
A fragile craft so all unfit
To brave the danger, storm and strife.

The darkened, angry, threatening clouds
Had brought a tempest of despair;
Depression, like a thickening fog,
Was hanging round me everywhere.

Out on the rising, rolling waves,
My helpless soul was pitched and tossed,
As if it should be dashed apart
In the fury of the storm and lost.

But in the chaos of it all,
There came a consciousness anew:
No matter how the tempest raged,
My Captain, Christ, would see me through.

I put my confidence in Him
As Captain of my ship, and He,
With utmost love, in safety, brought
My soul into a calmer sea.

Oh, Christ of God! could we but know
What strength can come to us from Thee,
If we but let Thee guide our course,
And pilot us on life's great sea;

Ah! then, unnumbered hosts of earth,
Amazed, would learn to understand
The joy and happiness that come
From trusting in Thy guiding hand.

"The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom should I be afraid?" (27:1).

"The God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power unto his people" (68:35).

"God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever" (73:26).

As Teacher and Guide God promises: "I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with mine eye" (32:8).

A Keeper and Upholder

More than one hundred verses offer assurance.

"I will both lay down in peace and sleep; for thou, Lord, only makest me to dwell in safety" (4:8).

"The Lord loveth judgment, and forsakest not his saints; they are preserved forever" (37:28).

"The Lord preserveth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that are bowed down" (145:14).

A Purifier of Souls

God tests and tries his saints to purify from dross and inbred sin.

"The Lord trieth the hearts and the reins" (7:9).

"The Lord trieth the righteous" (11:5).

"For thou, O God, hast proved us; thou hast tried us as silver is tried" (66:10).

"Thou hast proved mine heart; thou hast visited me in the night; thou hast tried me and shalt find nothing" (17:3).

A Physical Provider

God cares for our bodies as well as our souls.

"The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want" (23:1).

"O, fear the Lord, ye his saints: for there is no want to them that fear him. The young lions do lack and suffer hunger; but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing" (34:9-10).

"Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed" (37:3).

A Good and Kind God

At least one hundred and twenty-five times God's goodness, mercy and justice are extolled.

"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life" (23:6).

"Oh how great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!" (31:19).

The Source of Man's Greatness

God's wisdom and power fit men for positions of trust.

"Thy gentleness hath made me great" (18:35).

(Continued on page 255)

The Bulletin Board

May Their Dreams Come True

The Religious Herald estimates that if Southern Baptists should continue to grow during the next twenty years in numbers and resources and in the grace of giving as they have grown during the past twenty years, there will be 33,740 churches, with 5,451,841 members, 32,206 Sunday schools, with enrollment of 5,267,186; gifts to missions and benevolence will reach $77,633,723 that year and total gifts will go to $148,012,414.

The Nation's Religious Denominations

There are 202 religious denominations in the United States, according to a recent compilation of religious statistics. During the past ten years thirty-one new denominations were born and seventeen died. Of the total population in the United States, 41,926,854 are church members, a gain of 6,860,000, or approximately 20 per cent, during the past ten years. There are 227,000 local church buildings in the country, representing a gain of 15,000 during the past decade. The value of the physical property of the churches is $1,676,000,000, or an increase of $420,000,000 in the past ten years.

Churches Gained 667,000

Churches of the United States made a net gain of 667,000 new members in 1920, according to Dr. H. K. Carroll, who says that this is a marked increase over 1919 when the aggregate number of members gained was less than 44,000. Dr. Carroll said in 1919 decreases were shown in most of the churches. He compared figures of some of the larger groups showing that in 1919 the Methodists lost 75,951, Presbyterians 46,459, and the Baptists 11,108. In 1920 these groups gained respectively 237,127, 43,031, and 129,283. The Roman Catholic church showed an increase in 1920 of 127,579.

New Zealand's Hot and Brown Season

New Zealanders have been enjoying their midsummer vacation the last few weeks, and the Baptist pastors returned, brown with tan, from the mountain and the shore are laying plans with fresh zeal for their autumn church work.

Missionaries Studying at Chicago

The University of Chicago continues to attract an increasing number of missionaries of all denominations who are at home on furlough and who wish to pursue further studies in the branches of education, medicine, sociology, philosophy or religion. At present there are in attendance missionary representatives from South America, the Congo, Egypt, Syria, Assam, India, Burma, the Malay States, the Philippines, Korea, Japan, and China—a total registration of forty. On the evening of March 4, this group of missionaries met together and organized themselves into a "Furlough Club," under the presidency of Professor Baker, for the purposes of stimulating missionary interest throughout the institution and of extending a warm welcome to all missionary students.

Stop the Leaks in Our Lodge

A few days ago the United States Senate spent several hours in executive session discussing the question of an agreement with Great Britain and Japan to limit armaments. At the close of the session, Senator Lodge and others are reported as saying that an agreement with Japan would not be worth the paper it is written on. That statement comes very near to a declaration of war from the Senate chamber, and the senators who make it assume a grave responsibility. They are flinging firebrands.

Who Shall Walk the Floor?

The proposal that the United States cancel the debts of the Allies to this country raises the question whether the debtors or the creditor shall walk the floor. It has not yet become a subject of open negotiation among the countries involved, but that stage is probably approaching; and then the American people will do well to think carefully, speak with courtesy and study the parable of the two debtors.

Boy, Page Eternal Vigilance

The Continent, commenting on certain proposed legislation likely to interfere with the freedom of the press, moralizes: "But this is not the only direction in which the liberty of the press is threatened. In the industrial struggles there has been a manifest tendency to disregard fundamental rights. And more than once, in our judgment, there have been unjustifiable invasions of the right of free assemblage and the right of free speech. These two are rights that are very sacred and are vitally important in a republic. Let them be preserved at any cost."

How Many Lies Did We Swallow?

During the war Robert Bridges, poet laureate of England, accepted the stories of German atrocities and wrote a poem denouncing them. Now it is reported, he comes out with a recantation, telling the world that the stories were false and his poem a mistake. Oh, hum! how many lies have we swallowed since 1914—or is somebody lying to us now about Mr. Bridges?

Premillennialism is Not an Issue.

Dr. W. B. Riley, in a recent letter to the Western Recorder, states frankly and finally that the "conservative" Baptists of the North have never made premillennial-ism an issue in the Northern Baptist Convention and will not do so. He states the issue as he sees it in three grievances: the colleges are dominated by rationalism; advocates of the new theology dominate the convention; and men are being sent out who disparage the plenary inspiration of the Bible, the absolute deity of Christ and the blood atonement. Perhaps among these generalizations, when specific definitions are formulated, we shall have not only a clarified issue, but also an opportunity for counsels of harmony.

The Tide Has Turned

During the war several of the leading denominations reported a diminishing attendance in the Sunday schools and a net loss in membership. Figures for last year, however, tell a different story. Baptists reported a net gain of 129,000 and the Methodists of more than 200,000. And from every direction come news reports of doubled audiences, growing Sunday schools and fruitful evangelistic campaigns.

Some Live Fruits of the Spirit

Baptist mission churches and schools in Cuba have been taking up collections for the starving children in Central Europe. The International College and Sunday school at El Cristo and the church at Baire made an offering of $135 while the church at San Luis Camaguay and Guety Baragagua has sent $75. Miss Ethel Fosdick, missionary among the Italians at Lawrence, Mass., sent to the Foreign Society for the hungry people in China. The boys and girls of this mission decided to give up candy, gum and other things dear to the heart of a child for the cause named. The amount of their gift meant a real sacrifice for working conditions in Lawrence have been so poor that some of the children who gave up their pennies get but two meals a day themselves.

"Seeing More Bears Than Are There."

One of the most hopeful signs of returning sanity in the American people is the fact that they are beginning to laugh. An "inconspicuous Methodist preacher" in a recent number of the Epworth Herald tells a story of the lad who saw the whole dark world full of bears at night; and he thinks that like the lad, folks generally have fallen into the habit of seeing bears where no bears exist. Thus Henry Ford sees a Jewish bear, the Pope a Y. M. C. A. bear, the liberals a Blue-Sunday bear; and there are Bolshevik bears; and plots of capitalists, of higher critics, of organized labor, of Japan, of Great Britain, and so on beyond enumeration, thicken. He scouts them all jauntily and cries: "Washington McGillicuddy Johnson, you come out into the dark with me and show me those bears."

Young People's Work

Topic for April 10

HOW DOES CHRIST WISH HIS DAY TO BE SPENT?

Matthew 12:1-13.

"The Sabbath was made for man."

Suggested literature: "One Rest-Day in Seven," by Horsman, American Baptist Publication Society, price 10 cents, post-paid.

The Interest of Each is the Concern of All

The weekly rest-day should be kept because it insures health and betterment for every side of man's nature.

1. The Physical side. Careful investigations into the chemical facts of expenditure and repair as they relate to the body and the blood have shown that nightly rest does not afford complete recuperation of the vital forces.

2. The Mental side. Decline in physical vigor through lack of a weekly rest-day means a corresponding decline in the elasticity of the mind. The mind works through the brain, and men's brains are not made of iron.

3. The Moral side. Whatever makes for energy, buoyancy and cheerfulness makes for good morals also. Toil unrelieved by a weekly rest-day tends toward stolidity and stubbornness of disposition, an inability to throw off care and trouble, a defective sense of responsibility and obligation.

4. The Social side. Many of the noblest exercises of the soul are social, and they wait upon the recurrent rest-day for their fullest expression. Daily struggle for material necessities grows to selfishness, but Sunday makes conspicuous interests and obligations beyond ourselves.

5. The Religious side. The highest thoughts and activities of the human spirit are religious. Personal religion, to be healthful, needs a weekly rest-day. Spirituality should be founded and fed on truth, and the acquisition of truth from the Bible, history or nature, requires time.

The Proper Observance of the Rest-Day

This can best be determined by reference to the purpose of the day. "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath." It should be so used as to satisfy man's several needs—religious, social, moral, mental, physical—in the order of their importance, with divine worship and communion clearly standing first. Unless an individual is better in these various particulars on Monday morning than he was on Saturday night, he has misused the day.

What Christians Can Do for the Rest-Day

1. In their defense of the Sabbath, Christians should abandon all doubtful reason and exegesis. One comprehensive and convincing argument is more potent in this critical age than a dozen suspicious ones.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organizations, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

2. Christians should frankly approve such liberty and variety in the use of the day as our modern complex social conditions make desirable. It is quite as great a service to relieve men's consciences from morbid or mistaken scruples, as to place upon them necessary burdens.

3. The church's work, therefore, with respect to the Lord's Day should be positive and constructive, not merely denunciatory. If Christians really believe that the worship of God is the noblest function of the human spirit they should testify unmistakably to that fact by their example.

4. The church should give liberal support to such organized agencies for the defense of the Sabbath as show by their works that they merit confidence, accounting them its executive arms.

5. Christians collectively should bring to bear upon governmental representatives and officers the pressure of their opinion when the introduction or enforcement of good or bad Sunday laws are at stake.

6. Individual Christians may often take the initiative in effecting more wholesome Sunday conditions in their own communities, but so far as possible all effort should aim toward federated action among the churches and with the moral element of the community.

7. In many localities churches can render a beneficent service to men, women and children by providing the place and the means for quiet pleasure, sociability, and intellectual and moral stimulus during the hours not occupied by regular worship. The Pleasant Sunday Afternoon has grown to large proportions in England under the leadership of churchmen.

8. Believers in the weekly rest-day should take great pains to make that day a peculiar delight to their children.

9. Employers should be made to see that granting their men a weekly rest-day without reduction in wages would be a profitable investment; that by so doing they would raise the morale of their working force, would gain the good will of their men, would get a larger aggregate output, and would decrease the waste arising from carelessness, indifference and inefficiency.

10. Church people should appreciate the fact that the Sunday Rest-Day Movement is part of a much larger problem. The short-hour work-day, the Saturday half-holiday, equitable wages, steady employment, whatever would make the conditions of life for the masses of the people more humane would also promote the nobler uses of the Lord's Day. The author of the Sabbath, we may believe, will feel confident only when, throughout his earthly family, this day has become the choicest among seven days, each in turn pure and glad. (Adapted from booklet mentioned above.)

News

RHODE ISLAND

"Perhaps it may not seem much of an achievement to you men folks, but for the first time in history our Sunday school work had a place on the program of our Rhode Island State Convention's annual meeting. So well was it received that our people are asking that a longer time be given to it next year. Then, too, at each of our associational meetings, time was given for the director to present her plans for the state work."—Lillian F. Murdock.

IOWA

"Associations organized with an elementary director in each association. Organization also includes Swedish, Danish, German, and Negro associations.

"Graded lessons are used to some extent in about 65 per cent of our schools; good use is being made of handwork. Exhibits are made each year at Northern Baptist Convention, state convention, assembly associations and institutes. Iowa has won either first or second place in the handwork exhibit of the Northern Baptist Convention for the past four years. Elementary luncheons are held each year at the state convention, assembly, and at some of the associations.

"The outstanding feature of the work in Iowa has been the annual cradle roll campaign for three years. A pennant is awarded each year to the school making the largest gain in cradle roll membership, and to the school organizing the largest new roll. An annual enrollment of 2000 new babies and about forty new rolls organized, has been the result. Much interest has been manifested and Sunday schools have been greatly helped as a result of these campaigns.

"During the year a fine interest has been taken in daily vacation bible schools, and church schools. Numbers of churches have put on schools with helpful results.

"An elementary union has been organized and maintained for the cities of Waterloo and Cedar Falls. Meetings have been held each quarter, with a luncheon and program period. Plans are now being made to develop this into a general Baptist Sunday-school union with a general lunch, then classes divided according to departments, each department taking a special course of study.

"We feel greatly pleased and blessed in our work in Iowa and are looking forward to greater opportunities the coming year."

—Hazel Boyd.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for April 10.

BIBLE TEACHINGS ABOUT HEALTH

I Cor. 6:19-20, 9:24-27; Gal. 6:7-8.

Golden Text: I Cor. 9:25.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The words, body and flesh, are used interchangeably by Paul in the passages chosen for the lesson. In the first passage the body is the temple of the Holy Spirit; in the second passage the body is the bully who has to be knocked down and kept down by sheer force in order that the body may not dominate the spirit. The passage in Galatians is only indirectly connected with the body, because the context shows that most of the sins of the flesh, or "works of the flesh" are not sensual but proceed from an attitude of mind, a trend of spirit. And yet the body is so closely interwoven with the principle of evil which Paul calls "the flesh," that he has the flesh in mind when he says, "I buffet my body, and bring it into bondage."

The Lesson Taught

The Christian conception of health, the Christian control of health, and the Christian contagion of health cover some of the Bible teachings on health.

The Christian Conception

Jesus was engaged through a large part of his ministry in bringing health to the people. Matthew in his gospel puts it in a single sentence, "And Jesus went about in all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of diseases and all manner of sickness among the people" (Mt. 4:23). Health, not disease, is God's order. Disease like sin is a disintegrating and distressing condition. Jesus did not deal with the scientific prevention of disease or the scientific cure of disease, because he lived in an unscientific age. He founded no hospitals, established no clinics, created no school of surgery or medicine. The physical causes of disease were not sought by him. "Sin no more lest a worse thing come upon thee," he said to the man healed at the pool of Bethesda, thus indicating that personal sin had had something directly to do with that man's former paralysis. He also recognized and acknowledged the common understanding among the people that diseases in large part were traceable to demons. But beyond this he did not go. He healed the sick by his own divine power thus putting the seal of his approval upon health as the normal condition of the human race.

The original disciples followed the Master in his spirit and method. Therefore the New Testament teachings on health, while indirect and lacking system, are always positive and constructive. The body is regarded as a sacred temple of the Holy God, and as such cannot in reason be used for anything that would offend the purity, the dignity and the wholeness of the divine Spirit. Health was to be sought and cultivated with the same diligence that holiness was to be sought and cultivated. Sickness was always a cause for regret, and in the New Testament it was always traceable to the source of all evil—the Devil. In modern times the physical causes of disease have been discovered, for the most part, by medical science, and the treatment of diseases has been put upon a scientific basis; but the Christian conception of health as the normal condition for men has not gone beyond the New Testament.

The Christian Control

According to Paul in our lesson the control of health is both positive and negative. Positive control is indicated in the words, "Glorify God therefore in your body," and in the picture of the Grecian athlete who was the very personification of health and vigor. Negative control is seen in the reference to "buffeting the body," as thought it were a thing to be repressed. The whole thought is personal. The control of public health as a social duty is not in the lesson text, and is not specifically in the New Testament. Health commissions in our states and municipalities are modern. Smallpox, typhus fever, yellow fever, and other diseases used to be regarded as visitations of the Devil or a direct judgment of Almighty God, and left to work their misery and death; but we know that yellow fever was communicated by mosquitoes (I speak in the past tense because yellow fever has been destroyed), typhus is communicated by lice, and smallpox spawns in dirt. We now control diseases by getting at the causes and destroying the causes. The destruction of hookworm freed the people from their shiftlessness and enabled them to become self-supporting, self-respecting citizens. The care, conservation and promotion of public health is one of the most important of services which the state owes to its citizens. If commerce, labor and agriculture are important enough to have a seat in the president's cabinet, health is no less important. Much has been done in this direction, but it is only a beginning. One hundred years from now the people then living will regard our efforts in the care of public health as we regard the efforts of the pagans who beat the tom-tom to scare away the demons from the sick room.

The Christian Contagion

Our negative tendencies are never more apparent than when we emphasize sowing to the flesh to the exclusion of sowing to the spirit. There is a contagion of disease. That is well established. The quarantine sign with its anti-social influence upon the neighborhood is evidence. Disease can be carried and spread. But health can also be carried and spread. Handkerchiefs were taken from the person of Paul and carried to the sick, and they were healed (Acts 19:12). Every modern physician appreciates this law of health. He mixes his medicine with sunshine and his professional visit radiates health. It has been well demonstrated that there are typhoid carriers, that is, people never sick with the disease who carry it and spread it. By the same law there are health carriers, that is, people who carry health and spread it. They may be as unconscious of carrying health as the typhoid carriers are of carrying sickness, but they carry it nevertheless. The Christian should always be a health-bearer, constantly sowing to the spirit, unceasingly promoting private and public welfare, untiringly using every means, physiological, psychological, theological and sociological for the healing of the sick, the prevention of disease and the promotion of health.

A Course for High School Pupils

CONVERSATION TWO

Question: What are the Helps to a Christian Life?

Scriptures: John 14:15, James 1:13-17, 23-24, Phil. 4:8.

By F. F. PETERSON

ARE all Christians equally Christian? Why these differences? How do you account for them? Secure answers showing the differences are due to imperfect or wrong ideas of what it is to be a Christian, that some do not give up their pet sins, that others do not sternly resolve to live with God's help the true Christian life.

What then are the hindrances to a true Christian life?

What is sin? What does it do? To you? To others? Can a Christian sin? If so, what does God do with a Christian's sin? On the whole then, sin is the chief hindrance to the Christian's life.

What are the common sins of youth? Abuse of language? Abuse of body? Abuse of time? Abuse of morality?

How can these hinder? Show how they affect relations with Christ.

What are the best helps one may secure in living the Christian life? Through what people, organizations and practices?

What is temptation? What is its value? When are people tempted? Is it a sin to be tempted?

(Continued on page 255)

The Chimney Corner

Consider the Lilies!

BY A SOPHOMORE WHO WAS PRESENT

THE "Campus Cat" goes to press on Mondays, so there was just time for somebody to slip in this paraphrase:

"Lives of great men all remind us

We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us

Bulbs that will improve with time!"

This aroused a regular wave of indignation at first, some of us fearing it was written in sarcasm, until the girl who printed it declared she was an ardent champion of Mrs. Thayer's, so we settled back happily and—considered the lilies!

You will never fully understand what Mrs. Thayer did for us, until I explain how furious we all were when the authorities—that-be decided that such an early Easter would divide the semesters wrongly, and so set our spring vacation two weeks after Easter: which meant we had to stay cooped up at the academy, miles from anywhere, on the most gorgeous Easter Sunday any of us ever disgraced with age-old bonnets and end-of-the-winter furbelows. They tempered our fury somewhat by announcing that the famous Dr. Anselm Kennedy Thayer would preach in chapel for vespers, so we passed the day gossiping mildly about him. No doubt you yourself know all there is to tell, for everybody everywhere swarms to hear him preach, and although he used to be a bachelor for years-on-end, he had suddenly married quite a plain person, according to fleeting glimpses we had of her as they both drove up to Prexy's house that Sunday noon. Slender and dark she was, but not dashing or any of the other things we thought such a prominent, handsome man ought to have annexed—little ninnies that we were at that particular moment!

Well, we ate our Easter dinner and thanked our stars that there was ice cream instead of the deadly tapioca. Nobody knows to this day what Mrs. Prexy served at her dinner, but verging on four-fifteen o'clock her chief guest suddenly became so ill that any thought of having the poor man speak in chapel was banished for this Easter! According to Clementina (she is Prexy's next-to-the-youngest child) Dr. Thayer simply said: "Mary, you speak in my place; I know you can!" Mary being the new wife, of course. Clementina says her father was so tremendously relieved at having the situation thus saved that neither he nor Mrs. Prexy nor anybody else noticed the stricken startled look that descended on the bride's face. But Clementina noticed. Trust her! She's like the old Jews, not a jot nor a tittle doth she ever overlook.

Clementina says she (Mrs. Thayer, that is) walked out into their garden and stood by the sundial for almost half an hour, twisting her fingers until the knuckles showed white. Then by and by, just as the chapel chimes were calling us, along toddled Prexy's youngest hopeful, carrying a bulb: "I brang you a lily," he piped up politely, and with horrible grammar added; "but the lily ain't came outdoors yet. You see, she ain't got waked up inside properly."

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

And as the great preacher's wife took the bulb in her hand all the paleness left her cheeks. Clementina declares it was as if angels had rolled away a stone. I don't know about that—but anyhow, there we all sat in prim rows in the chapel pews, and the afternoon sun filtered through the rich old stained glass windows as we saw Prexy lead her up on the platform. She sat in the great carved cathedral chair with tall Easter lilies all around her, while we sang, "Low in the grave He lay, Jesus my Saviour," also other Easter hymns. And all the time we were thinking: "No, she certainly isn't much to look at!"

Then Prexy introduced her, and we eyed her gown critically as she stood there, slender as the lilies themselves in that radiant light, with the great gold organ pipes gleaming behind her. And every single nasty little one of us was thinking: "No particular style, either!"

She laid her folded hands on the carved pulpit desk, and this is what she said: "All my life I have wanted to be very beautiful, so beautiful that people would turn on the street to look at me,—I wonder if you know what I mean, any of you?"

Know? Good gracious! Why, it was

The Crystal Christ

BUT Thee, but Thee, O sovereign Seer of time;

But Thee, O poet's Poet, Wisdom's Tongue;

But Thee, O man's best Man, O love's best Love,

O perfect life in perfect labor writ;

O all men's Comrade, Servant, King or Priest,—

What if or yet, what mole, what flaw, what lapse,

What least defect or shadow of defect,

What rumor, tattled by an enemy,

Of inference loose, what lack of grace Even in torture's grasp, or sleep's, or death's,—

Oh, what amiss may I forgive in Thee, Jesus, good Paragon, thou Crystal Christ? Sidney Lanier.

exactly what I was wishing myself! Only of course I mentally added: "But I'm loads nearer the goal than you, Mrs. Wife-of-a-Famous-Man!" And afterwards the other girls said they were thinking the very same thing, too.

Without realizing it, I can see now that we must have all been won over by that first remark of hers, each of us understanding how she must hate being plain! When she had us at this impressionable stage she opened her folded hands and showed us the bulb, telling us what Prexy's son had said: "I brang you a lily bulb—but the lily ain't came outdoors yet. You see, she ain't got waked up inside properly."

"And that's the only reason I'm not beautiful yet, myself," she added, quoting whimsically: "You see, she ain't got waked up inside properly!"

Well, you could have rolled me over with a straw I was so astonished—and interested. Personally I would have recommended a shopping tour on Fifth Avenue as her surest beauty start. But nobody in chapel had ever held us so spellbound; even gnarled old Prexy looked transfixed. So on top of this strange introduction, with a clear mellow voice, she began reading us all of that marvelous fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. Wave upon wave of sadness surged over me, it suddenly sounded so exquisite. I can't quote much that she said after that—not being a born reporter—but she kept holding that ugly bulb in her hand all the time as she read and re-read one of the verses describing Christ: "A root out of dry ground—he hath no form nor comeliness—yet when we shall see him there is no beauty that we should desire him." "Beauty" was his because inside he had awakened—out of the ugly root, this flawless loveliness; and she quoted "The Crystal Christ" by Sidney Lanier. Curious it was, too, for we had had that poem in English class some weeks before, and nobody thrilled. But now—!

Then with quick sketches she began telling us of girls, ugly, uninteresting, cramped girls—mere brown bulbs. One of them Mary Lyon, a poor, little creature in clothes so awkward and poor that they looked like a bran sack tied around the middle with a string; yet, because she waked up, Mt. Holyoke College stands as a memorial to her for what she has done for women to the ends of the earth.

There was another dull drab girl, cramped by threadbare poverty and continual sickness, fighting consumption and a hundred other obstacles, until there waked up in Alice Freeman Palmer beauty so strong and powerful that it could make Wellesley College. And an old farmer's wife said: "When I met her on the hill one afternoon she was the fairest object in the landscape, and all the day was brighter after I saw her. I cut her picture out of the newspaper and pasted it up where I could see it, and every day I say I will try to be a better woman because she lived."

With rapid word pictures she took us all around the world, into little mud huts somewhere in the Orient where a quaint little brown woman would be crouching over a smoky fire, but when she looked up in greeting—behold, the beauty of holiness dwelt in her eyes! India, China, Africa, America, everywhere, brown homeliness was becoming lovely.

Then she told of a forlorn little New York guttersnipe, clutching something secretly inside his coat.

"Whatcher got?" asked a curious pal.

"I got a bottle of perfume," the little fellow whispered back in an ecstasy of joy.

"Aw, go on! I don't believe ya! Take the cork out, buddy, and leave me have a smell!"

"And so," ended Mrs. Thayer, her face like a resurrection angel's, "when they criticize women and girls for being all-earthy and sordid with their foolish outside-in standards of dress and fun and behavior I always say: 'Oh, but I don't believe it, just take the cork out: there'll be sweet perfume there—just smell, and see!' It is a mere matter of bulbs again, the beauty is there, but it hasn't waked up yet. So to everyone of us the Master is saying today as he said to the daughter of Jairus: "Get up, little girl, get up!"

Then Prexy prayed as if he knew God was unusually nearby; after which we all trooped up front to shake hands with her, one by one. But it wasn't until after supper that we exchanged confidences about this and discovered that every blessed one of us had begun as follows: "Oh Mrs. Thayer, if I can ever be half as beautiful as you are!"

For suddenly we knew we were nothing but awkward, clumsy bulbs, wrapped up in crazy, crackly layers of outer flimsiness. It was indeed high time we began to—consider the lilies!

The Young Reserves

Tag! You're It!

OF COURSE it was partly the Easter music and partly the Easter sermon and partly the scent of the lovely Easter flowers, but however it came about, the truth of the matter is that while Alice sat primly in church between her father and mother that Easter Sunday morning, she did an astonishing thing. She never knew how it could have happened without anyone stopping her, for no sooner had she put her head against her father's shoulder than she suddenly found herself walking and walking and walking through marvelous fields of Easter lilies; up and up she climbed until she even reached the golden gates of heaven. She looked inside wistfully, then noticing that others were allowed to walk in, she said to the Angel at the gate: "Could I go in, too, please?"

"Oh, you're Alice in Blunderland, aren't you?" the Angel exclaimed, turning around. "Wait a moment, dear, till I see if your name is in the King's Book of Golden Deeds."

Alice knew, almost before the Angel looked, that her name was not on the list—and it wasn't.

"I'm sorry," sighed the Angel, "but of course you understand that it would not be fair to let you enjoy all the glory inside when you really had done nothing to help."

Alice felt much surprised. "But what could a young girl like me do? And whatever made you call me Alice in Blunderland? D-do I s-seem to have m-made so many b-blunders?"

"I'm afraid you have, for all the entries are on the Blunderland side instead of the Wonderland side. You have no idea how many Baptist children live, and grow up, and die, in Blunderland without once playing 'Tag! You're It!'"

Alice simply stared. "Well, if that's all, I think you ought to know that I perfectly love to play that game, dear Angel; I play it day after day."

The Angel seemed positively startled, and again searched through the records. "There is no littlest mention of you're having played the kind of game I mean, no, not even once!"

"But what kind can you mean?" Alice asked, almost crossly. Of course, if they had their own special variety, how was she to know she ought to play it?

"Oh, it's exactly like any other game of tag, my dear; the minute you are touched, then 'Tag! You're It!' and you must hurry and touch someone else. But I find that in Blunderland men, women and children who are touched stand perfectly still and say to themselves: 'I've been touched! Oh surely nobody is so easily touched as I am!' But they never budge one single inch to touch anybody else. So it's these stand-still-do-nothing, keep-everything-for-themselves people in Blunderland who are continually hindering God's beautiful plans for loving his world."

Alice looked at the Angel eagerly. "But maybe I'm not as bad as you fear, for maybe I've never been touched!"

"Oh, but you have!" cried the Angel; it's down here in the records; why, for one, two, three, four, five Sundays lately you've been touched—oh, very much so! —in Sunday school."

"Have I?" sighed Alice in a meek little tone.

"Yes, my dear. You were very much touched on the Sunday when they gave you the cunning square box in Sunday school to take home to be filled by Easter Sunday. You were so touched that you were going to drop some of your allowance into that box the minute you reached home, and you planned to ask your father and your mother and your uncles and aunts to drop in bigger sums."

"That's so!" Alice admitted, "but I even forgot to tell mother. That was a blunder, wasn't it?"

"A big one, dear, for you've lost all these precious days. Then every Sunday since then you've been hearing new stories and being touched all over again. What about the Little Red Hen?" the Angel asked.

"Oh!" laughed Alice, sparkling all over, "that was such a queer story, dear Angel. There was a little girl in India who terribly wanted a Bible, but she hadn't a single penny and nobody would give her any. But the most obliging old Hen began cackling—you know how sympathetically they can cackle, don't you? Well, that Hen actually laid eggs enough for the little girl to buy a Bible with. Oh, I loved it! But of course, there can't be many other hens in India so obliging, so I really was planning to put some money in my box for other Bibles."

"Exactly! You were touched, dear; but you haven't gone on playing the game."

"Oh!" groaned Alice in a very small voice. For it was all true. She had cared dreadfully at first; but she had forgotten all about it afterwards. "Was I ever tagged again when I stood still?" she begged.

"Yes," sighed the Angel, "oh, yes! Have you forgotten the story of the young lady who dropped a tract out of a car window, the dear little pink tract that O Mitsu kept inside his sleeve? Don't you remember how you smiled when he painted a long wet letter ordering 'one Christian God, just as big as possible for the enclosed money, please?'"

Alice smiled all over again. "He thought God was just a little carved idol, you know! Oh, I was touched, Angel; I was going to earn a dollar to buy fifty more tracts all my own for somebody to drop into the hands of other curious heathen boys the whole world around. But—but I haven't d-done a s-single thing y-yet."

"No," sighed the Angel, "this record shows that your little box is almost entirely empty, just as if you didn't care that great patches of the round globe on top of the box were still rolling in darkness. And when you get home you'll see that the cunning papoose is blinking herself fast asleep, she's so tired waiting for you! All because you've tucked each new story inside your memory, just as if it wasn't a special invitation to come out and play. And it's Easter Sunday this very minute, but the empty box sits forlornly at home. Oh, Alice dear, surely you see now that giving money and getting others to give is the quickest surest way of playing Tag! You're It! It's the only way you have of helping those missionaries of yours."

Alice felt positively buried in disgust at herself, but she managed to say: "It may be the very last minute, dear Angel, but I'm truly touched at last, so you just watch me play tag right, now."

"Sh! 'Sh!" whispered Alice's father in her ear, utterly scandalized; "You

(Continued on page 255)

Baptist Laymen Sound Cry to Northern Host

At the invitation of the finance committee of the Northern Baptist Convention, a group of laymen gathered at the Hotel Cleveland, Ohio, on Feb. 11 and spent the day in a discussion of the interests of the convention, from the layman's point of view. It was a most interesting and profitable day. The program of the Board of Promotion, its policies and methods, the interests of the various societies and boards, the outlook for the completion of the $100,000,000 fund, were all discussed freely and frankly.

At the close of the conference a series of significant resolutions was adopted. No men know our denominational situation better than do these men. Their endorsement of the New World Movement is therefore most significant, but more significant still and more far reaching in its possible results in their enthusiastic endorsement of tithing as a method of giving. It was stated frequently during the day by men who spoke from personal experience that the adoption of this plan would solve not merely the personal problem of giving but also that of financing all our missionary and benevolent work.

The laymen were guests at luncheon of Mr. Ambrose Swasey. It was recalled that it was at the invitation of Mr. Swasey and a few others that the laymen gathered in the same city in the fall of 1917 to consider our Baptist situation. The wonderful development of our denominational ideals and purposes all trace back to that remarkable meeting in Cleveland three and a half years ago.

This statement was adopted by the conference:

We hereby express to The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention the assurance of our high appreciation of its fine services in the face of difficult conditions.

We advise the widest dissemination of detailed information calculated to correct misunderstandings as to the work and methods of the board.

We recommend that the chairman of this conference appoint a committee of five laymen to co-operate with the board in the study which we understand is being made in an endeavor to so correlate the work of the board as to the secure the largest degree of efficiency with the least possible expense.

We heartily believe in the ability of our people to complete the $100,000,000 fund, and pledge our full co-operation with the board in its efforts to achieve this end.

We are convinced that the time has arrived when the work now being carried on by our denomination along the line of Christian stewardship should be more generally emphasized, and that particular stress should be placed upon the duty of the members of our churches to devote not less than one-tenth of their income to Christian work.

We believe that it would help to enlist the hearty co-operation of our entire membership if an advisory committee of five laymen were appointed by the administrative committee of The General Board of Promotion to serve in co-operation with the administrative committee, and that one of the duties of such committee should be to endeavor to establish a tithe's league in each local Baptist church.

Above all, we earnestly call upon our pastors and laymen to wait upon God in intercessory prayer that the divine blessing and power may be abundantly granted to us as a denomination in this whole great enterprise, which we have undertaken in His name.

The following names were signed to the statement:

Elmer B. Bailey, Burlington, Vt.; Harry E. Bailey, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. W. Baker, Pawtucket, R. I.; E. L. Ballard, New York, N. Y.; Harvey Bartle, M. D., Pittsburgh, Pa.; H. E. Beebe, Ipswich, S. D.; Carl K. Bennett, Owatonna, Minn.; A. O. Birch, Los Angeles, Calif.; T. A. Boadway, Pasadena, Calif.; Harry L. Bond, Wheeling, W. Va.; Henry Bond, Brattleboro, Vt.; E. C. Boughner, Denver, Colo.; George W. Bovenizer, Brooklyn, N. Y.; L. L. Brandt, Hastings, Neb.; W. G. Brinson, Chicago, Ill.; Chas. R. Brock, Denver, Colo.; Dorr H. Carroll, Spokane, Wash.; James L. Case, Norwich, Conn.; C. Q. Chandler, Wichita, Kan.; Levi S. Chapman, Syracuse, N. Y.; Herbert B. Clark, North Adams, Mass.; Sidney Clarke, Jamestown, N. Y.; J. H. Cochran, Des Moines, Iowa; L. W. Coggin, Phoenix, Ariz.; Isaac W. Cokefair, New York, N. Y.; Henry E. Cole, Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. C. Coleman, Wichita, Kan.; James C. Colgate, New York, N. Y.; B. F. Conway, Los Angeles, Calif.; Wm. R. Conklin, New York, N. Y.; Albert H. Currier, Rochester, Mass.; C. S. Dearborn, Indianapolis, Ind.; N. W. Dible, Kansas City, Kan.; Frank S. Dietrich, Boise, Ida.; J. B. Dodge, Richmond, W. Va.; E. R. Drake, Galesburg, Ill.; R. Earl, St. Paul, Minn.; Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland, O.; G. L. Estabrook, Philadelphia, Pa.; H. M. Eillebrown, Pawtucket, R. I.; H. I. Foskett, Des Moines, Iowa; F. W. Freeman, Denver, Colo.; D. G. Garabrant, Bloomfield, N. J.; N. S. Gile, Salem, Ore.; L. S. Gillette, Minneapolis, Minn.; Richard C. Goodell, Antrim, N. H.; C. W. Goodman, Phoenix, Ariz.; Geo. Gorton, Racine, Wis.; R. W. Grinnell, Cleveland, O.; Wm. J. Grippin, Bridgeport, Conn.; Frank D. Hall, Fargo, N. D.; L. Burton Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Arthur M. Harris, Plainfield, N. J.; Edw. H. Haskell, Newton Centre, Mass.; Wm. Henry Hays, New York, N. Y.; P. O. Hegberg, Ottawa, Kan.; Howard G. Lane, Hampton, N. H.; Frederic S. La Rue, Beaver Dam, Wis.; D. C. Latourrette, Oregon City, Ore.; George Leask, New York, N. Y.; Charles W. Littlefield, Portland, Me.; R. L. Livengood, Seattle, Wash.; M. C. Lough, Fairmont, W. Va.; W. D. Lovell, Minneapolis, Minn.; Robert Luehrs, Fremont, Neb.; Robert J. McMahon, Shoshone, Ida.; E. H. Mack, Erie, Pa.; W. E. Macurda, Boston, Mass.; C. J. Mills, San Francisco, Cal.; J. S. Minor, Chalmers, Ind.; John W. Moore, Charleston, W. Va.; Geo. I. Neal, Huntington, W. Va.; A. B. Newell, Glenview, Neb.; Frank C. Nickells, Minneapolis, Minn.; John Nuveen, Chicago, Ill.; Geo. W. Palmer, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Charles W. Parsons, New York, N. Y.; Allan P. Peacock, Providence, R. I.; B. S. Pearsall, Elgin, Ill.; Eli Peterson, Wauwac, Wis.; Wallace L. Pond, Providence, R. I.; Chas. M. Porcher, New York, N. Y.; C. H. Prescott, Cleveland, O.; D. T. Pulliam, Loveland, Colo.; R. W. Reid, Woonsocket, R. I.; Frank H. Robinson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Ernest E. Rogers, New London, Conn.; Max Schimpf, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Albert L. Scott, Boston, Mass.; W. G. Shaffer, New Hampton, Iowa; Franklin G. Smith, Cleveland, O.; Geo. E. Smith, Dayton, Ohio; W. W. Smith, Detroit, Mich.; Everett L. Spencer, Providence, R. I.; Hugh Stephens, Jefferson City, Mo.; William W. Stickney, Ludlow, Vt.; A. H. Stockham, Delta, Colo.; E. T. Stone, Minneapolis, Minn.; Ambrose Swasey, Cleveland, O.; J. H. Taylor, Green Bay, Wis.; Joseph D. Thyng, Passumpsic, Vt.; C. O. Tinkham, Fairwater, Wis.; Ernest L. Tustin, Philadelphia, Pa.; Charles P. Walker, New Haven, Conn.; H. W. White, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. A. Wiley, Hartford, Conn.; P. W. Wilton, Montrose, S. D.; Smith G. Young, Lansing, Mich.

Members of Finance Committee:

D. C. Shull, Chairman, Sioux City, Iowa; F. W. Ayer, Camden, N. J.; Clarence A. Barbour, Rochester, N. Y.; George W. Coleman, Boston, Mass.; Orrin R. Judd, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Arthur L. Leshner, New York, N. Y.; W. H. Main, Philadelphia, Pa.; Francis W. Parker, Chicago, Ill.; Corwin S. Shank, Seattle, Wash.

What Is Our Money Doing?

(Continued from page 226)

always turned over to the missionary department handsome profits. But for two years these profits have been wholly absorbed by the high costs of business.

8. The Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board has been sharing proportionately with all others in the receipts of the New World Movement. By reason of a large gift received outside the $100,000,000 fund the board has been able to inaugurate its retiring pension plan for our ministers and missionaries. It is in need of large additional sums before its full plans can be carried out.

9. We have paid over to our schools and colleges—fifty-two of them—the sum of $1,272,716. This is an entirely new departure in our denominational history. For the first time the denomination as a whole has had a part in its great educational work. Heretofore the institutions have depended for their support upon their alumni, their interested friends, and in isolated cases upon the assistance of a state convention. Now the whole denomination has assumed a responsibility toward the education of its children. Future generations will look back upon this as a step quite as significant as the inauguration of the New World Movement itself. These fifty-two institutions have received timely aid in a day when the cost of education has been mounting in like proportion to every other cost.

10. Most significant of all, perhaps, is our work in Europe. At Christmas we asked for a special offering of $166,000 to enable our foreign mission society to undertake relief work among the Baptists of Europe, to begin work of reconstruction in the devastated areas and to inaugurate new work in Central Europe. We are delighted to report that over $186,000 has been paid in and the foreign missions society is vigorously pressing its work in Europe through the men trained in America, who are superintending the work there. One of the first orders was for 2,000 pairs of shoes for the children in Poland. Already $125,000 has been forwarded to Europe. Our representatives purchase Mr. Hoover's food certificates and thus the greatest efficiency is assured in the distribution.

Our Baptist people can be assured that all their contributions to the New World Movement Fund are being handled promptly and efficiently and that the money is going directly to the various fields in accordance with the plans outlined in the Survey.

We can carry on our present work and undertake some new work with the amount already pledged, but the great enlargement upon which we had set our hearts must await the day when our full one hundred million dollars is subscribed.

THE GENERAL BOARD OF PROMOTION OF
THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION
276 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

Missionary Revivals

By A. E. PETERSON

There is a spell over me these days much like that which has gripped me during the season of some gracious revival. I have been in the midst of a revival during the last six weeks or so, as I have traveled up and down the state of Illinois attending missionary conferences and rallies, where I have seen without one exception evidence of the presence of God in a marked degree.

The heart of the people is right in their attitude toward the great forward movement of the denomination. Confidence in the program has increased as the people have come to understand more fully the meaning of it and as they have observed an eagerness on the part of our leaders to rectify any mistakes and to lead us all

(Continued on page 253)

Our Own Folks

Colorado Letter

By W. F. RIPLEY

At this writing we are still experiencing the good effects resulting from the missionary conference held in Denver on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. Having had this experience, Colorado Baptists are eagerly anticipating the conferences to be held at Grand Junction, Delta, Pueblo and Rocky Ford from March 23 to 30, under the leadership of Dr. Franklin, Dr. Ferguson and others.

On March 13 a new church was organized at Fort Lupton on the Union Pacific, twenty-six miles out of Denver. Dr. Palmer, state supt of missions was present and assisted. Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Blinzinger, with chapel car Emmanuel, who have been on the field, will continue indefinitely. The church starts with a membership of thirty-two and a Sunday school of over forty. There is every reason to believe that the organization will have a steady and rapid growth.

Railroad rumors are afloat. Some years ago the Denver and Rio Grande guaranteed interest on certain obligations of the Western Pacific, with the result that both the roads were sold by order of the U. S. court to satisfy creditors. It is rumored that interests behind the Burlington are the purchasers. Just now the whole matter is in suspense because of legal procedure. If the sale as made is confirmed it is reported that the line between Denver and Grand Junction will be shortened something like one hundred and fifty miles or one third of the distance. Should the Burlington come into control of the Denver and Rio Grande and the Western Pacific it will give them a direct line all the way from Chicago to San Francisco. Another rumor is to the effect that a New Mexico Central has negotiated for the purchase of the branch of the Rio Grande from Antonito, Colo. to Santa Fe, N. M. In the event this sale is completed, it is stated that the line will be extended north from Antonito through Monte Vista and Center with the terminus at Saguache, the county seat of the county of that name, which county has the largest per capita wealth in Colorado.

Building campaigns are the order of the day among our churches. Bethany church, Denver, has recently subscribed somewhat in excess of $36,000 for a new building. W. J. Bingham, M. D. is the loved, honored and efficient pastor. Longmont has subscribed $35,000 toward a new building. It expects to receive $10,000 from the sale of its present property and raise an additional $5,000 before dedication, thus making $50,000 available for a new building. The Judson Memorial church, Denver, has subscribed a little over $40,000 for a new building. Rev. Aaron Schlessman is the pastor. Dr. F. H. Divine led in each of these three campaigns.

On March 11, Gordon S. Taylor was ordained to the ministry at Sterling. J. A. M. Crouch of Fort Morgan was moderator; Frank Gray of Holyoke was clerk; A. H. Ballard of Fort Morgan conducted the examination; C. R. Stevens of Burdette offered the prayer and Dr. F. B. Palmer of Denver preached the sermon. Mr. Taylor has been a district secretary of the Y. M. C. A. working in the boys' department.

Many churches are reaping good results from evangelistic efforts.

Dr. Chas. A. Fulton, of the First Church Colorado Springs, has recently closed a meeting, conducted by himself in which there was a large number of additions and a manifest quickening.

Dr. L. B. Crosby, Fort Collins, has recently had the assistance of Harp Evangelist Thompson in meetings resulting in some forty additions to the membership.

State Evangelist Starring recently closed a meeting at Fort Morgan in which there were some fifty additions to the church. He is now with the First Church Pueblo. He goes next to Berthoud and then to Johnstown.

State Evangelist Steadman is in the midst of a good meeting at Durango. He will be at Pikes Peak, Colorado Springs and follow at Florence.

Dr. W. J. Bingham goes in a short time to Calgary, Canada to aid his brother in evangelistic meetings.

Rev. F. E. Eden of the first church, Pueblo, will aid the City Park church, Denver. Dr. W. R. Schoemaker, pastor, in meetings following Easter.

Rev. A. B. Hubbard, Peyton, declines a call to an Iowa church to remain with his present field.

Rev. E. G. Lane, who has just removed from Grand Junction to Longmont finds the work opening encouragingly.

Director of religious education, L. I. Hanson and State Promotion Director Ripley conducted an all day rally at Sterling on March 6 and at Greeley on March 13. The attendance and interest were both most gratifying.

Together with Miss Mabelle Roe McVeigh they will conduct a Sunday school and young peoples rally at Fort Collins on March 18 to 20. Every indication points to this as one of the best rallies held for the young people of the Rocky Mountain Association.

A Bereaved Church

Broadway Church, Denver, has been thrice sorely bereaved within a month.

Mrs. F. C. Dinsmore, wife of the chairman of the board of trustees, one of the most earnest and efficient women of the entire membership passed to her reward Feb. 18. Mr. Dinsmore was for a number of years treasurer of the Wisconsin Baptist Convention before coming to Colorado. The funeral services were conducted by Dr. Thos. S. Young, a former pastor.

On March 8, Mrs. George Fisher one of the most dependable workers on the primary department and woman's auxiliary of the same church was translated.

Mrs. Emma G. Seldon

This charming saint went to her coronation as the evening shadows were gathering on Friday, March 11. Dr. Geo. B. Vosburgh conducted the funeral service. Mrs. Seldon was the widow of the late Rev. Edwin Seldon, one time pastor of Broadway church of Denver. Besides two brothers she leaves two sisters: Mrs. Geo.

Sale, widow of Dr. Geo. Sale, long and usefully connected with the American Baptist Home Mission Society in the educational department, and Mrs. Washington Laycock, treasurer of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society. She also leaves two sons: Richard Goble, a senior in Denver University, and Donald Perkins, a student in one of the Denver high schools. Mrs. Seldon served as superintendent of schools for the city and county of Denver for several years and was a member at large of the General Board of Promotion. Her presence, influence and counsel will be missed by those who had learned to depend upon her in the spheres in which she moved.

Detroit Doings

By ALBERT H. FINN

Detroit is observing the Lenten season with all seriousness. Under the leadership of the Detroit Council of Churches, noon meetings for business men and women are being held in the Detroit Opera House with Dr. Rice as speaker; afternoon meetings, 4 to 5 o'clock, and evening meetings 7:45 in the Central M. E. Church. Dr. Allen Stockdale of Toledo and Dr. Chas. L. Goodell of New York also are speakers. The business houses of the city are largely to be closed from 12 to 3 on Good Friday. This comes through a remarkable, united effort of all churches.

But this is not all. The pre-Easter period is being observed generally by our Baptist churches in an intensive evangelistic effort. Each pastor is leading in his own parish with occasional help from outside in some cases, in others entirely alone. It is a gracious season of consecration and ingathering. The results outnumber any other year.

The newly organized Polish Church has been recognized by a council. Rev. Jos. Rzepecki has done a remarkable piece of work. The beginning of this work was less than two years ago, and today there is a well organized church of over 100 members, and a growing society of adherents, that promises continued accessions. The great need is for an adequate building to house this most promising work. Detroit has 150,000 Poles and less than 60,000 are affiliated with the Catholic churches. It is a wonderful challenge that must be met. Other denominations have attempted work among these people with indifferent success. The way is wide open for us.

The new Bethel church has also been officially organized and recognized. This is located in a growing American neighborhood northwest from Royal Oak.

Rev. Robert White the new pastor of the Hudson Ave. church is already on the field and has been most cordially welcomed. A reception was given Mr. and Mrs. White March 17.

Convention Pastor C. M. Carter has recovered from a serious illness and is pastor-in-charge of the new Jefferson-Lakeview field. The new building is now ready for the roof and it is expected to be ready for occupancy by June. Here the Clinton Ave. and Jefferson Ave. churches will consolidate and gather in an additional large waiting congregation in this new residential district.

Dr. H. C. Gleiss, general superintendent, and Rev. Arthur V. Allen, religious educational director are leading in the Baptist work in this great city. I would like to tell of the remarkable work already accomplished among the Negro churches but I will reserve that for a later letter. Several large building operations are being prepared for, all of which are greatly needed. Mr. Allen led a city wide movement for increased attendance in the Bible schools that resulted in 20 per cent advance. Calvary reported an increase of 100 per cent and Grand River went from 400 to 600. Birkett Memorial from 216 to over 400. Mr. Allen is doing a great work among the young people, and is an outstanding evangelist and preacher. Miss Cooper has been aiding in New World Movement conference work in Minnesota.

The annual meeting of the Detroit Baptist Union is scheduled for May 10 when Dr. C. A. Brooks, of the American Baptist Home Mission Society of New York will be the guest of honor and leading speaker. This is always a great event for Detroit Baptists.

Detroit churches have been increasing the circulation of THE BAPTIST, Missions and the Michigan Baptist. There is a widening interest in our denominational objectives and THE BAPTIST has much to do with it. There is universal appreciation of the greatly improved character of the paper.

Two Ohio Churches Merge

An important merger occurred in Cleveland Feb. 13, when the Willson Avenue Church, East Fifty-fifth and Quincy Ave. joined hands with the East End Church, East Ninety-seventh and Euclid Ave. This augurs a distinct denominational advance for the city, inasmuch as each church has had a notable past and each possesses a membership to whom the mission of the Christian Church looms large.

As the neighborhood about the Willson building was fast becoming a Negro settlement, the problem of their future duty was already apparent when the Rev. J. Bunyon Lemon resigned after a faithful leadership of ten years. The official board, under the chairmanship of Mr. Geo. Olmstead eventually recommended the sale of the Willson property and that the members, so far as possible, unite as a body with some other Baptist church, preferably East End. This church seemed the logical selection for several reasons: The convenience of location, the fine new auditorium with adequate parish house containing every thing a modern church needs, and the growing importance of the 105th street district including as it does Wade Park, Western Reserve University and the heart of the up-town business and theatre district.

The Willson property was sold to an African M. E. congregation for $62,500 or $15,000 less than might have been realized had they been willing to sell for commercial use. The terms were $25,000 cash, the rest in mortgage notes. Two-thirds of the purchase price will go to liquidate the debt of East End's new house of worship completed in 1917. Out of the other third, provision is made to put the four former Willson pastors now living on the annuity list of the Retired Pension Fund, this not to exceed $5,000, the balance to go to Cleveland Baptist Association.

The formal union took place Feb. 13 when automobiles transferred the entire Willson school to the new church home.

On the 20th, a great united communion service was held and on the evening of March 4, a reception was tendered the Willson Avenue people by the East End church. On Sunday, March 13, members of the former East End congregation will make calls on the 260 families of the Willson Avenue contingent.

The new church has incorporated under the name "Baptist Church of the Master." Both congregations composing the union are warmly devoted to their pastor, Franklin W. Sweet, and bid fair, in their united strength, to be a great church in greater Cleveland.

Iowa Letter

By JAY A. LAPHAM

Pastor A. N. Sorenson of the Danish church in Cedar Falls recently read a paper before the Woman's Club of the city on "The Poetry of the Bible." The paper had so much worth and was so well written that Miss Prof. Hurst invited Mr. Sorenson to read the paper before her class in English literature in the teachers' college at Cedar Falls. Among the most faithful educators in our teachers' college at Cedar Falls is Prof. George Newton. For twenty-five years he has been in the college, a positive power in moulding competent teachers for our public schools. Prof. and Mrs. Newton are deeply interested in foreign missions. Over half of their income they pay gladly into the Lord's treasury for the extension of the kingdom of God in the earth. One of their daughters is now in the training school for the foreign field and another is a member of the Life Service League. The $100,000,000 would come, Oh, so easily! if mind and heart were thus put into the balance with our people generally, each as God has prospered him.

Our Danish church in Cedar Falls has strong leading in the Sunday school in Sunt. and Mrs. A. E. Lunn. A Mid-year meeting for pastors and laymen was held with the Danish church at Newell, March 9-10. Pastor J. D. Vinding of this church is to take up general evangelistic and pastoral work among the Danish and other churches in Iowa. Here again our Iowa Baptist Convention is uniting all forces in the denomination in team work. Brother Vinding is one of our careful, constructive leaders. Pastors and other leaders in our churches can not co-operate too heartily with the B. Y. P. U. in distributing the leaflets on Tithing sent out free by Dr. James Asa White from 124 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago. At Lorimer the writer suggested that the union plan to give each of the eighteen leaflets out. Let the leaflet be read by one or more; then return it for another leaflet until each man member of the union has read all of the leaflets.

A Baptist Department of Architecture

By CHARLES L. WHITE AND GILBERT N. BRINK

Baptists everywhere who are interested in church building problems will be glad to know that they may now have the services of a department of architecture which has been organized jointly by the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the American Baptist Publication Society, with offices at 23 E. Twenty-sixth St., New York City.

The department is organized for service and operates without financial profit to itself. It seeks to assist architects, churches and institutions to secure better results from money spent by making available the experience and study of specialists. The purpose of the department is to discover and advance more adequate provisions in building arrangements for the broadening program of church work and to raise the level of church architectural design.

This department does not take the place of the practicing architect. It acts in the capacity of a consulting architect, its function being mainly advisory and to afford a clearing house for information. Full architectural services will not be rendered except possibly in isolated cases, such as that of a small church in an outlying district where no competent architect can be obtained by the local building committee.

During the past few years there has been an increasing demand for changes in the planning of church buildings to make possible an enlarging program of work. But individual churches contemplating building do not always fully realize the most advantageous way of meeting their needs; nor do they always have an adequate appreciation of the relative importance of their several needs and desires. The result is that their funds, insufficient to cover all these needs and desires, are frequently unwisely expended.

While it is the policy of the department to leave the actual design and supervision of construction to the local architect, its aim is to influence the design of church buildings in the direction of beauty and seriousness. In recent years the general character of the average church architecture in America has not advanced on a parity with the advance in other types of public buildings. The department of architecture seeks to forward the movement towards a wholesome and artistic advance by a message which will stimulate a desire for that ideal beauty and usefulness which ought to be evidenced in every church building.

The practical value of the services rendered by the department to a church is in direct proportion to the extent to which the church makes use of its services. The church, through the department, profits also by the experience of two similar organizations which have been in operation for several years—the building bureau of the Young Men's Christian Association, and the bureau of architecture of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Both organizations have generously placed at the disposal of our department the benefit of their researches and experience. We are especially indebted to Mr. Neil McMillan, director of the building bureau of the Y. M. C. A., and to Mr. Elmo C. Lowe, consulting architect for the bureau of architecture of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

One of the first points the department makes in dealing with each project is that of the individual study necessary for each building proposed. Every church building, because of its special site, climate, building customs, materials, and the varying requirements of its use, presents a new problem in planning. No model plan or "stock designs" can therefore be expected to answer the needs of any particular community, and any effort to adapt or make over such a standardized design ends usually in little more than an awkward and unsatisfactory compromise.

When a church applies to the department before securing the services of an architect, the method of procedure is as follows:

The church is asked to send in complete information as to its local situation, this to include not only facts regarding the site, the church and the Sunday-school organization, and the immediate surroundings, but also something of the spirit of the local church community, its ideals and aspirations.

On the receipt of this information, careful study is made of the particular problems involved, and preliminary sketch plans are developed. In order to find the best solution, consultation is held with specialists in religious education and social work. The department utilizes the best architectural advice to obtain the required accommodation, proper articulation of plans with co-ordination of program, pleasing effect and economy of construction. This first sketch submitted to the church is often only a means of bringing out more definitely the limits within which the problem is to be solved—the peculiar difficulties and special opportunities—and of focusing attention upon the practical aspects of the plans. This gives the department data upon which to work the plans over again, and sketch plans are prepared repeatedly, if necessary, until a solution of the problem is found which is satisfactory to all concerned. It was found, in the many projects which were studied by the department previous to this announcement, that the ultimate result of this series of sketches, together with correspondence and conferences, is a plan and statement of requirements which satisfies the local committee and the department. As a good plan is the first step towards a good design, the product of the department's study lends itself to good architectural treatment. When the plans are approved, the sketches and a complete statement of requirements are placed in the hands of a reliable architect, who proceeds, under the usual terms of architectural practice, to design an acceptable structure, make the working drawings, write the specifications, and supervise the construction.

This special study of a building problem necessarily involves special expense. Whenever possible, it seems proper that the church benefited should reimburse the department for this special cost. To cover this cost, a charge has been established of 1 per cent of the estimated cost of the building project. This charge assists the department in becoming more nearly self-supporting, and yet it adds nothing to the total cost of the building, as the architect would otherwise have to make this study himself and charge at least 1 per cent for that work. Architects appreciate the valuable consultation assistance given by the department's development of the requirements, and deduct 1 per cent from their usual fee. The department is ready to assist in the selection of competent architects.

In cases where the architect has already been employed and the preliminary plans are already developed, the department will gladly work on these plans and give, without charge, constructive criticism in the way of revised sketches and reports.

The department will assist all architects who wish information or help. The drawings and reports of the department are always at their disposal. Architects who have been commissioned to build Baptist churches are urged to write to the department before completing their plans and specifications. Any assistance thus given is without charge.

While the department will not submit any typical or model plans, there will be furnished, without charge, prints of projects previously studied which are attempts to solve problems similar to those presented. These are merely suggestive and serve only to stimulate constructive thinking.

All consultations at the office are without charge. Where conferences at a distance are requested, the department will expect reimbursement for the traveling and hotel expenses of its representative, plus $15 per diem for the time spent. Where the department's services at 1 per cent are engaged, the per diem charge is remitted.

The organization of the department and its administration has been placed in the hands of Mr. George E. Merrill, a New York architect. Mr. Merrill received his professional training in the University of Minnesota and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Some of his more notable professional work has been the supervision of the construction of St. Margaret's Hospital in Pittsburgh, the rebuilt and enlarged Naval Academy at Annapolis, the Naval Training Station at North Chicago, and the City Hall at Chicago, as well as churches, colleges and other institutions in various parts of the country.

The department of architecture welcomes inquiries and will be glad to receive at its office those interested in church building planning. The members of the staff are at your service.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Atlantic Coast

VERMONT

FAIR HAVEN AND HYDEVILLE churches, Elbert J. Smith, pastor, are greatly encouraged in their work. Pastor Smith began a series of special meetings with the Hydeville Church on Feb. 20, closing March 6, which demonstrated anew that a pastor may be his own evangelist. The Christian people were greatly blessed, some who were cold and indifferent were revived, so their voices are again heard in prayer and testimony, and thirty-two persons took a definite stand accepting Christ as their personal Savior. A beautiful scene occurred Friday night, March 5, when five men—three of them between forty and fifty years of age and the other two a little younger—came forward announcing their determination to live a Christian life. At least twenty will be baptized Easter Sunday and others will follow later. Among those converted were a mother sixty-five years of age, her son forty years of age, and his son fourteen years old—three generations: all will be received into the church by baptism at the same time. Pastor Smith has also been chairman of the associational evangelistic committee, and has done good work in arranging for special meetings in other churches than his own. The pastors have gone out two by two to do special evangelistic work, and this has proved a great blessing to themselves as well as to the churches where they have labored.

REV. THOMAS DAVISON was recently assisted in a series of special meetings by Rev. Walter F. Sturtevant. As a result of the faithful seed-sowing by the pastor and the reaping during these special meetings, four have been received by baptism, one by experience. A Baraca Bible Class has been organized in which there were on a recent Sunday sixteen men. The church has heartily and unanimously voted to increase the pastor's salary $200, which is the third time within two years.

REV. FRANK S. TOLMAN, pastor of the churches at Randolph and Braintree, has since the last roll call received eighteen new members into the Randolph Church, the largest number received in the same length of time during the history of the church. He is planning for baptism at Easter, and is hoping to have at least twelve candidates.

FIRST CHURCH, BRATTLEBORO, Clark T. Brownell, pastor, is prospering in its work. Pastor Brownell has been preaching a series of sermons on "Mysteries of Revelations," covering the following subjects: "The Seven Candlesticks," "The Seven Seals," "The Seven Trumpets," "The Woman and the Beast," "The Seven Bowls," "The Great Judgment" and "The New Jerusalem." These sermons have drawn large audiences and have been both interesting and helpful. The attendance at the Bible school is by far the largest during the present pastorate, taxing the capacity of the edifice, so that larger accommodations seem to be imperative.

WEST BRATTLEBORO, E. B. Cornell, pastor, has had a good year, raising over $1500 for current expenses and going beyond its allotment in securing $3400 for the New World Movement. Twenty or more are now awaiting the ordinance of baptism.

REV. THOMAS NEIL, who for about two years has been the pastor at Vergennes, closed his work March 14 and has removed to Philadelphia; so another good field is open for a man who can bring things to pass.

RUTLAND CHURCH, George W. Peck, pastor, has 151 tithers, which is the largest number of any church in the state, so far as the writer knows. Pastor Peck is preaching to large audiences, and is seeing definite results of his labors. He recently baptized four men, all heads of families, and now has a large class in training for Easter Sunday.

REV. W. C. GOODWIN, pastor of the Wallingford Church, was recently assisted in a series of special meetings by Rev. Joseph S. Brown of Manchester and Rev. A. D. Bennett of West Pawlet. Pastor Brown did the preaching and Mr. Bennett took charge of the singing and devotional services. Good audiences attended, the church was quickened and already twelve have been received into the church by baptism.

REV. KENDRICK HACKETT, the versatile pastor of the churches at South Newfane and West Dummerston, is seeing things accomplished. Large audiences are coming out to hear him. The eighteenth anniversary of the Christian endeavor society of South Newfane was recently celebrated. Remarks were made by Mrs. Ella S. Willard and others who were charter members. During the eighteen years the society has not lapsed, and is now an important branch of the church.

REV. ISAAC M. THOMPSON, pastor of the churches at Hardwick and East Hardwick, is doing good work and leading his people to undertake and accomplish hard things. He has started a system of credits for giving in the Sunday school, which is working splendidly and bringing in over $7 a Sunday. He has also established systematic giving for missions in the Sunday school, and this is proving helpful both educationally and financially. Recently he had the people contribute to purchase four-foot wood and then had a bee when the men got together and sawed up the eight cords. This gives them enough to heat the church for the balance of the winter. He has also a good class now ready for baptism. At the present time he is being assisted in special meetings at the East Hardwick Church by Rev. George H. Chambers of Newport Center. These meetings promise to be very helpful.

THE MISSIONARY AND INSPIRATIONAL reading contest conducted by Miss Beulah B. Bates, who is in charge of religious and missionary education, is moving forward splendidly, there being sixty churches which have entered the contest with 831 individuals who have read 3316 books since Nov. 1. This is a splendid showing for little Vermont.

RHODE ISLAND

THE CHURCH at PASCOAG gave a reception to Rev. C. B. Osborne and family at the close of his pastorate and presented the pastor with gold to the amount of $227. The ladies' social circle presented Mrs. Osborne with a purse and bouquet of flowers, and her Sunday-school class presented her with a gift of money. The daughter, Natalie, was presented with a gift of money from her Sunday-school class. Bro. Osborne has done exceptional work on the field and goes with the best wishes of the entire parish to the church at Blackstone.

PASTOR JOHN SCHNEIDER of the German Church which meets with the Bethany Church of Pawtucket reports a baptism service recently at which Dr. Frank Rector of the First Church officiated. Bro. Schneider is doing excellent work as a student supply.

MR. J. C. WORDEN of the Chestnut Hill Church, Exeter, was given an increase in salary recently to the amount of $500 and reports the raising of the apportionment for the New World Movement by his people. This has been a notable year of progress for the church in Exeter.

THE UNION CHURCH, PROVIDENCE, E. A. Love, pastor, is holding a series of services under the leadership of Evangelist McNeill and several conversions have been reported.

THE WOODLAWN CHURCH, Rev. J. M. Lent, pastor, recently held a conference on evangelism under the leadership of the evangelistic committee of the state. The following pastors took part: Rev. William Clements, Rev. J. J. Williams, Rev. H. H. Hayes, Rev. G. S. MacKay and Rev.

George H. Watt. This conference was held during a week of evangelistic services at which local pastors took part.

PASTOR PERRY, of the Central Church, Tiverton, had a very successful father and son banquet with 150 men and boys present. H. W. Gibson of Boston was one of the speakers. The church is making progress constantly in baptisms, benevolences and enlargement of the local work.

MASSACHUSETTS

AT CHELSEA an evangelistic campaign under the auspices of practically all the Protestant churches of the city was begun February 1 in the First Baptist Church, which has the largest church building in the city. The Evangelist was Dr. Milton S. Rees of Rochester, N. Y. with Mrs. Rees leading the chorus choir. Thousands attended the services, packing the auditorium, Sunday-school room and gallery. Hundreds signed cards of rededication or of confession of faith in Christ. The pastors of the Baptist churches speak in the highest terms of Dr. and Mrs. Rees. The old First Church of which Rev. Wm. S. Jacobs, is the pastor, and the Horace Memorial Church, of which Rev. Wm. E. Blake is pastor, expect large additions at Easter.

WEST VIRGINIA

CLARKSBURG closed a profitable training school for Christian workers March 13. The faculty was composed of Rev. S. L. Roberts, Rev. Raymond M. West, Rev. Milton McGorrell, Miss Edith M. Town, Dr. Thomas S. Young, Miss Erna Wells, Rev. W. H. Bayles, Mrs. Fanny M. Jennings and Rev. A. B. Withers.

CONNECTICUT

HARTFORD MINISTERS' MEETING was held March 7 in the Memorial Church, Rev. M. W. Schuh, pastor. There was a large attendance. Rev. Herbert B. Hutchins, pastor of Olivet Church, Hartford, read a strong paper on Leo Tolstoi showing his religious evolution. Dinner was served by the church.

SPECIAL REVIVAL MEETINGS are now in progress in the Olivet Church. Rev. J. W. Osborne, pastor of Union Mystic Church is the preacher. His messages are strongly evangelical and are being heard with great profit. Since Mr. Hutchins settled over this church three months ago, fourteen have been added to the membership. New recruits are expected as result of the special effort.

THE STATE BOARD OF PROMOTION held a special meeting on March 8 in the South Church, Hartford. At this meeting the Board approved the reports of the various committees on "findings" at the recent missionary conferences held throughout Connecticut, and voted to put on an intensive campaign to secure 100 per cent payment on pledges by May 1; to secure new pledges on balance of church quotas; to have churches observe anniversary week, Apr. 25-May 2.

NEW YORK

HARLEM CHURCH largely grown during the past seventeen years of the pastorate of Rev. Adam Chambers, is predominantly a young people's church. Of its members, 90 per cent came out of the churchless group, either Protestant or Catholic. The church had given more in ten months for world wide work than it had previously given in ten years.

CENTRAL PARK CHURCH is attended largely by a fine group of young people.

The growth of the last three years under the ministry of Rev. Milton W. Pullen has been through the development of older boys and girls into dependable young people who have entered heartily into the church and missionary support. The church sorely needs additional facilities for its expanding educational ministry.

IT WAS AN UNUSUAL SUNDAY afternoon service held in the East End Church of Brooklyn, because fully 90 per cent of the audience had never seen the inside of a Protestant church until recently. Except for visitors from the mother church and from the Brooklyn Extension Society which has fostered the enterprise, the company was composed entirely of Italians. Twenty-four men and women were baptized, all first attracted to the gospel by open air evangelism conducted by the minister of the Italian congregation, Mr. Salvatore Lopresti.

FIRST CHURCH, GENEVA, Havard Griffith, pastor: The winter's work has gone along in the best possible shape; audiences and interest have been good. A men's club organized by the pastor over a year ago, has grown to an organization of over 80 men. The club meets once a month, for supper and program. Passion week services will be held all week. Easter Sunday will begin with a 6 o'clock sunrise service, when about ten candidates will be baptized. An Easter offering of $1000 is expected, to redecorate the church and install a new lighting system.

Special Services in Albany

THE SIX BAPTIST Churches of Albany, N. Y., just concluded three weeks of special services under the leadership of the Rev. John Quincy Adams Henry, of Philadelphia. All the services were held in the Calvary church. Dr. Henry preached in the First, Memorial, Hope, and Tabernacle churches on successive Sunday mornings. He also conducted brief sessions in all six Bible schools. On the third Sunday of the campaign, a special service was held for women and girls in the Emmanuel church at 3 o'clock, and another for men and boys in the Calvary church at 3:30. The soloist and chorus leader was Mr. A. C. Joy of Erie, Pa.

This campaign was carried on under the most trying circumstances. Two weeks before the meetings began, the street-car men went out on strike, so we had no trolley service during the campaign. A few cars were run during the day, in compliance with an order from the Public Service Commission, but no attempt was made to run cars during the evenings. A second handicap was the worst snow storm of the season, being a regular blizzard the first day of the campaign, making attendance impossible on the part of many of our people. A third obstacle was the persistent refusal of the press to give publicity to any of Dr. Henry's messages or to help give publicity to the meetings. A fourth obstacle or influence which makes the work of evangelism exceedingly difficult in Albany, is the preponderance of Roman Catholicism. It is estimated that our population is from 55 to 60 per cent Roman Catholic, and 5 per cent Jewish.

Notwithstanding these handicaps, Dr. Henry threw himself unreservedly into the work. So convincing were his sermons that very few left the building without making the surrender of their lives to Christ. The appeal was predominantly to the will, rather than to the emotions.

We are rejoicing in what has been accomplished. More than 180 public confessions were registered. The spiritual life of our churches has been quickened, and our coming together in this united effort, (the first time) is no small success for our Baptist forces. We have developed a consciousness of a Baptist solidarity with a new spiritual morale. Easter Sunday will be a red letter day for the Baptists in Albany, as we baptize many of these converts into the death and resurrection of our Savior and Lord.—James Fisher, sec. of campaign.

Pacific Coast

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

G. W. INGALLS closed an eventful life of eighty-two years at Redlands, March 2. Indian commissioner, superintendent of missions to the Indians for the American Baptist Home Mission Society, probation officer in Nevada, organizer of a great boys' anti-cigarette league, contributor of valuable Indian relics to the Smithsonian Institution, so marked and so continuous was his interest in the Indians that the Yakimas in 1911 enrolled him as a life warrior of the Tipi Order of America.

PORTERVILLE, Frank W. Crawford, pastor, with the assistance of Dr. Ray Palmer, evangelist, closed meetings with thirty additions.

DR. LOUIS AGASSIZ GOULD, graduate of Williams College and of Rochester Theological Seminary, once missionary to China, pastor of several important churches in this country, died at Los Angeles, March 1, in his sixty-sixth year.

WESTERN WASHINGTON

MOUNT VERNON: The pastor, Rev. J. E. Noftinger, had a unique experience on Sunday, Feb. 6. On that day he baptized and gave the hand of fellowship among others to a family consisting of father and mother and five sons, ranging in age from 9 to 17 years. This is a family of Icelanders.

REV. I. V. MAXEY, has resigned as pastor of the church at Kent. His resignation has been accepted to take place on or before May 1.

MRS. M. W. MILLER, wife of Rev. M. W. Miller, recently pastor of the church at Snohomish, died on March 4. She had been in ill health for some time.

REV. EMMA L. SWARTZ, who for many years was engaged in general missionary work in North Dakota and for a number of years has been associational secretary of the woman's missionary society in the Seattle Association, Western Washington, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. M. Barker, of Spokane.

THE FIRST SWEDISH CHURCH OF SEATTLE, on Sunday, March 6, celebrated the tenth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Emil Friberg. His pastorate has been one of the longest that any Baptist pastor has had in Seattle. This large and active church, under his leadership, is doing a most excellent work.

MR. L. M. BAIN, of Tacoma, a young man who expects to enter school in the fall to prepare himself for the Christian ministry is supplying the church at Port Townsend for the summer.

THE NEXT SESSION of the Western Washington Baptist Convention will be held with the First Church of Bellingham, May 10 to 13. The program committee is shaping up a very interesting program. Dr. E. M. Potent will represent the General Board of Promotion at the convention and will be one of the principal speakers on the program.

Mississippi Valley

INDIANA

RENN AND BAKEMEYER, evangelists closed a series of meetings with Pastor Ellis M. Jones at Washington, reporting 100 additions to the church.

REV. E. A. SCHULTZ at Madison with Mr. Fred Butler, singer, is at work in a promising pre-Easter evangelistic campaign.

AT BICKNELL, is a live junior church which, on the occasion of the recent death of one of its members, conducted the funeral service, providing for all of the usual features.

ILLINOIS

ROSETTA AND OQUAWKA are prospering under the ministry of Rev. G. W. Wright. The Rosetta field subscribed for the New World Movement an average of about $20 per member. A number of new members have been added to the churches.

REV. B. F. MARTIN goes from the South Seventh St. Church, Springfield, to Emmanuel Church, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MICHIGAN

BETHANY CHURCH, PONTIAC, Thomas B. Marsh, pastor, enlisted its young people in a "Win-My-Chum week," with a strong organization and audiences that packed the house for the opening meetings of the week. At the morning service thirty-three young people walked to the front to signify their willingness to "give God a chance" in their lives, and in the evening nine others commenced the Christian life.

BETHEL CHURCH, KALAMAZOO: Evangelistic meetings conducted in February proved a great blessing. The pastor was assisted by Dr. H. P. Klyver, convention pastor, as the preacher. Several have been received for baptism and a number more are in training and will be received for baptism Easter Sunday. A social evening was held in the church parlors Friday evening, Feb. 11 as a surprise on our pianist B. M. Barber. After a short musical program Mr. Barber was presented with a beautiful signet ring. The occasion proved to be a double surprise however for the lights were turned out and a large three-story cake covered with candles, representing a guess at the Pastor's age, was brought in and they all had a good laugh on the pastor; then he was presented with a fine pair of driving gloves.

PASTOR E. C. THOMPSON is rejoicing in the reception of several new members. This little village church has raised a budget of $2400. With only ninety members it has a Sunday-school enrollment of 185 and is active in other important lines. Meetings will be held in April.

MINNESOTA

SARAH F. PRESCOTT was born June 19, 1850, in Davenport, Iowa, where her father was pastor of the church at that time. In 1859 she was converted and united with the Baptist church of that city. In 1864 she removed to Galena, Ill., and on Sept. 22, 1869 she was married to John Stewart. In 1870 they removed to Iowa. In 1890 she moved to Minneapolis with her husband and a year later he passed away. Soon after this she was appointed field secretary for the Women's Home Mission Society for the state. After ten years of service in this capacity she was transferred to Wisconsin and was field secretary there for two years. Her death occurred in Minneapolis March 4.

NEBRASKA

BEATRICE CHURCH has purchased a parsonage and called Rev. A. O. Broyles to the pastorate. He has accepted and is now settled on the field.

PASTOR GLENN W. SOUTH at McCook closed a series of special meetings with twenty-three additions and then opened up a pre-Easter campaign on the "Lowell Plan." Teams from the brotherhood and the young people are holding evangelistic meetings in the suburbs of the city. Mrs. South has charge of the junior church.

DR. WILSON MILLS of the Home Mission Society recently assisted Pastor J. M. Etheridge of Falls City in special meetings.

REV. B. J. MINORT at ALLIANCE has been with the church only six Sundays, but in that time he has received twenty-nine by baptism and eight by letter. Attendance has more than doubled at all services. Crowds fill the house and it may become necessary to rent a large hall to accommodate the evening audiences. There have been no special meetings. There is a high tide of spiritual life.

MISSOURI

BAPTIST CHURCHES OF KANSAS City, Mo. are just closing a great united pre-Easter evangelistic campaign. Statistics of the results will not be available before Easter, but it is known that they are most encouraging. Indeed the churches are so encouraged that they have already decided to undertake a similar campaign on even a larger scale at the same period next year, and organization for such a campaign is progressing at once. The papers of the city aided in the publicity by giving large news space to the campaign.

PASTOR J. H. HUGHES with Dr. J. W. Hickerson and J. E. Turner, closed special meetings at Mexico Mar. 6, with ninety-three additions to the church, seventy for baptism. The membership is near 900 an increase of 300 during the three years of the present pastorate. A large attendance of students from Hardin College and Missouri Military Academy, together with the growth of the Sunday school, presents to the church a serious housing problem.

NORTH DAKOTA

MR. W. E. SHARP, pastor at Jamestown was ordained to the ministry by a regular council March 8. Mr. Sharp is continuing his studies in Jamestown College and hopes to complete a regular course.

FIRST CHURCH, GRAND FORKS, B. Y. P. U. held its annual banquet giving a most ingenious and striking program. Officers elected for the new year are Duane Squire, pres.; Dorothy Webster, first vice-pres.; Wesley Johnson, second vice-pres.; Sam Weeks, third vice-pres.; Leslie Airhart, fourth vice-pres.; Lloyd Thompson, treas.; Katherine Pratt, secy.

REV. JOHN GERALD YORK, pastor of the First Church at Grand Forks, carries on an extensive program of religious education. He has a class of boys and girls on Friday afternoons, studies the Gospel of John in the mid-week prayer meetings, and is making arrangements for a daily vacation Bible school. The churches of the city are working out together a plan of religious education for the city as a whole. New members are coming into the church and several were baptized recently.

SOUTH DAKOTA

THE WOMEN OF THE First Church, Moberg, have organized a missionary society which, in addition to the usual program of work followed by such societies will carry on an organized visitation in the interest of the local church.

KANSAS

REV. E. E. POFF, formerly of the Palmyra Church, has been called to the church at Dodge City, and has moved on the field. He is finding a splendid response. The Sunday school has been growing very rapidly.

PASTOR C. W. FISHER has just closed a good evangelistic meeting. He had the assistance of Rev. S. M. Brown of Kansas City.

REV. F. L. STREETER of the Armourdale Church in Kansas City has been in special meetings continuing for several weeks.

REV. L. C. PENNINGTON, student in Kansas City Seminary has been called to the pastorate of the church at Linwood, and has entered upon the work with good purpose.

EVANGELIST W. M. MARTIN and wife closed a meeting with pastor E. L. Wright at Hoyt a few weeks ago. There were some twenty-five professions. Eighteen were received for baptism and two by letter. Mr. Martin began meetings with the Chelsea Place Church in Kansas City Feb. 27.

PASTOR ED PENNINGTON of Council Grove is having the assistance of Rev. Winter Green of Eldorado Springs, Mo., in special meetings.

PASTOR C. F. MATHEWS of the First Church, Topeka, has been greatly encouraged with the response during the past several months. The prayer meeting has come up from a comparatively small number in attendance to more than a hundred; the Sunday-school attendance has been running 450 and upward for some time. Feb. 27 was recognized as family day in the church life, with all the members of the families sitting together for the preaching services.

PASTOR FRANK JENNINGS at Lawrence is observing progress in his church work. The Sunday school has had fine growth during the fall and winter. The Bible Class taught by the pastor has set its goal for a hundred members and expects to realize this goal soon.

THINGS ARE MOVING at Parsons since the coming of Dr. Fred Cochran, the new pastor. The B. Y. P. U. has been divided into two sections with two sets of officers and committees. Both sets of officers are enthusiastic and the membership rolls are increasing rapidly. The workers in the societies make regular visits to the Old Ladies' Home and Hospital and find their work much appreciated. In view of the evangelistic meetings now being planned teams have been organized for soul winning, and fine results are anticipated. Three of the young people have recently declared themselves for missionary service or the ministry as a life work. These societies are planning to make the standard of excellence this year.

THE TEN DAYS' SPECIAL MEETINGS conducted by the pastor W. I. Cale, in the Seward Avenue Church, Topeka, during February proved to be very successful. There were some seventy conversions with many coming into the church.

PASTOR R. J. CHURCH of Arkansas City began the fifth year of his pastorate Jan. 1. In that time 320 new members had been received, equaling the present resident membership.

A REGULAR COUNCIL called by the first church at Hamlin, recommended the ordination of Mr. R. N. Hillier. The church carried out the recommendation the same day, March 10.

THE MEMBERS OF THE FACULTY of Ottawa University are rejoicing in the fact that they now have the use of the new Ward Science Hall. It is a very fine building and is being splendidly equipped.

Rocky Mountain States

WYOMING

MARCH 6 WAS A GREAT DAY at Parkerton. In the afternoon the new meeting house was dedicated. There was a small debt on the building when the service was opened but this was more than raised before the services closed. A large crowd attended the meetings both afternoon and evening. Rev. J. F. Blodgett, state secretary was in charge of the services. Rev. Mr. McMasters of Tama, Iowa, preached afternoon and evening. There were guests from both the Blenrock and Casper churches.

FIRST CHURCH OF ROCK SPRINGS celebrated its tenth anniversary Feb. 27. Dr. D. D. Proper and Rev. J. F. Blodgett were the speakers of the day. The church marked its tenth birthday by raising the last dollar of its $700 debt on the church edifice. Pastor E. Bixler Davis reports that this church raises more money for missions in three months under the New World Movement program, than in a whole year preceding May, 1920. This church is the only church in the state to be 100 per cent paid up in New World Movement pledges to date.

CHEYENNE FIRST is catching the contagion of service that so dominates its pastor. The Bible school has started out after big game for God and is doing well. The last news from Pastor Jackson was that the school was considerably beyond the 300 mark and was aiming at 400 right away.

THERMOPOLIS is in the midst of a season of great refreshing. It is not a trumped up revival but a steady Sunday-to-Sunday piece of work. The pastor, S. A. Phillips, who has recently gone to this important field has started his people to dreaming dreams and then showing them how they can be realized. Already Sunday school and church services have crowded out the present accommodations.

CASPER FIRST is just as far from having equipment as it was in September, when it completed its plans for putting in the basement of its new $80,000 plant. This was occupied the first of February. March finds the church crowded out again. Morning and evening congregations pack the room and the Bible school is facing a serious problem in finding room. Additions are received nearly every Sunday—fifty-one within the last five months and with no special services to draw the net. The pastor, C. M. Thompson, Jr., has a people willing to go the limit in the work of the Master.

COLORADO

BETHEL MEMORIAL CHURCH at Denver, Dr. E. L. Krumreig, pastor, has welcomed nearly 150 new members in the last two years and is soon to finish paying off its mortgage. Special meetings began March 13, with Rev. W. C. Garberson of Mt. Hermon Church, Denver, assisting.

FORT COLLINS, L. B. Crosby, pastor, closed meetings in February with forty-one for baptism. George H. Thompson the harp evangelist was the pastor's helper in the meetings.

UTAH

IMMANUEL CHURCH, Salt Lake, since the coming of Pastor J. Sherman Wallace, has reduced its debt from $23,000 to $7000, gives nearly $3000 a year for missions, gave nearly $700 for European and Chinese relief, has a Sunday school attendance of 250, received sixty-seven new members, dismissed sixty-seven, erased 200, increased the pastor's salary three times and is whooping things up generally.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Selling Utilities Securities to Consumer

A Western reader inquires about Mountain States Power Company 8% ten year convertible notes and encloses an advertisement from the local paper giving a number of excellent points to consider in judging any investment, and applying them to this issue.

There is an increasing movement among companies of this character to get consumers and patrons interested as investors in their companies. It has much to commend it. On the one hand, it should tend to make local management better through the knowledge that a group of local people are vitally interested in the conduct of the local service, while from the company's standpoint, the usually hostile attitude against public service corporations will be modified by having the consumers financially interested in its progress as well as its service.

This particular company operates in a number of communities in Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, having been incorporated in 1917 as a reorganization of the company formerly operating these properties. Since that time it has been gradually improving its standing, showing some margin over expenses and interest charges, with a good increase in total volume of business. It is controlled by the Standard Gas & Electric Co., under the management of H. M. Byllesby & Co., a house of high standing in the business.

These notes can be called a fair investment, but are likely to fluctuate as the company's earnings may rise or fall. They are merely the general obligation of the company, not being covered by mortgage security, but are safeguarded by a provision that no additional mortgages can be created without making provision for them. Being sold, as they are, among consumers, the market is not likely to be a wide one; in fact the circular calls attention to the fact that the Byllesby bond organization will undertake to sell them for purchasers at the market rate. Except through this house, there is likely to be only a limited demand.

Who's Who

(Continued from page 239)

for the Woman's Foreign Society. Under her capable direction the state associations were thoroughly organized, the denominational spirit of the women became increasingly intelligent and loyal, and the national programs were heartily supported. From the first year of her secretaryship the women's apportionments for the state were always paid in full. Since 1914 she has served as recording secretary of the society and has also been a member of the committee on summer schools of the Federation of Women's Boards.

Mrs. Adams is unusually popular as a speaker and as a teacher of mission study classes. Any announcement that she is to conduct such courses or to give addresses invariably brings large, attentive and enthusiastic audiences. Our woman's board is to be congratulated on having such efficient, loyal and valuable service.

Obituary

MARIA ULERY

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Matthew Colman, Ames, Iowa, on Dec. 24, 1920, Maria Ulery passed away after an illness of about six months. She was the youngest daughter of the late Isaac McCann, a pioneer of Elkhart County, Indiana, and a deacon in the Benton Baptist church. Maria Ulery was born Feb. 17, 1840, and lived with her father (her mother having died when she was a little girl) until she united in marriage to Jacob F. Ulery, July 7, 1862. They spent most of their married life in Indiana until he passed away Nov. 8, 1916. She was baptized Dec. 5, 1863, by Elder Bingham in the Eel River, and from that time has taken an active part in religious work. For forty years she has been a member of the Baptist church at Goshen, Ind., and an officer in the foreign mission circle for eighteen years. Every publication of THE BAPTIST (formerly Iowa Standard) and Missions were eagerly watched for and read with keen interest.

Mrs. Ulery leaves two daughters, Mrs. John McGuire, Insein, Burma, a missionary for thirty-one years in Burma; Mrs. M. Colman, Ames, Iowa, and two sons, Clarence E. and J. Pearl of Goshen, Ind.; two grand-children, Judson and Alice McGuire, doing educational work in Porto Rico; six grand-children in Indiana; also, a brother, I. N. McCann, Deesburg, Ind. At the home of her son, J. P. Ulery, interment was in Oak Ridge Cemetery, Goshen, Ind. Words cannot express our grief over the separation from us of our beloved and devoted mother.

MRS. SOPHIA BRONSON TITTERINGTON

After many months of suffering, Mrs. Sophia Bronson Titterington entered into rest on Feb. 22, 1921, at Red Lodge, Mont. She was born in Nowgong, Assam, March 13, 1846, the youngest daughter of Miles Bronson, a pioneer missionary. She came to America with her parents when only four years of age, and on their return to India, remained here, living with relatives. She was educated at Monticello Seminary, and in 1866 was married to Rev. John M. Titterington, who held pastorates in Michigan, Illinois and Nebraska, being pastor of the Auburn, Neb. Church at the time of his death in 1912.

In addition to her home duties and services as a pastor's wife, Mrs. Titterington found time to write many Sunday-school books, of which "Hill-Top Farm" is perhaps the most popular. Many of her poems appeared in "The Standard" and other religious journals, and for some twenty years she wrote comments on the "Golden Texts" for the Revell Company.

Mrs. Titterington lived close to the frontier of possible service. Her love for her Master never waned and expressed itself in varied forms of ministry. While an invalid for many years, and for the last five years of her life practically blind, she kept in vital touch with all movements looking toward the realization of God's reign upon earth. Her poems written during this period of physical suffering breathed a fine spirit of devotion. Very naturally, her interest in foreign missions was deep and constant, but her vision encompassed all the needs of those for whom Christ died.

Five children mourn the loss of a devoted mother: Dr. M. B. Titterington, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. May T. Hastings, Chicago, Ill.; John L. Titterington, Grand Island, Neb.; Miss Anne Titterington, Red Lodge, Mont.; and Frank W. Titterington, Kansas City, Mo. At the time of her death Mrs. Titterington was a member of the Billings, Mont., Baptist Church. Funeral services were held at Red Lodge on February 23, and the interment was at Omaha, Neb., on Feb. 25. L. A. C.

ISADORA F. KING

At her home in Xenia, Ohio, Miss Isadora F. King, daughter of the late J. W. and Betsey Kendall King, passed on March 4, 1921, to her eternal rest.

A member of the Baptist church from early girlhood, all the graces of the Spirit bore fruitage in a character and life, so lovable and winning, that the entire community felt her loss, as that of a personal friend. She is survived by three sisters: Mrs. G. M. Peters of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mrs. C. C. Nichols of Wilmington, Ohio; and Miss Emma C. King of Xenia, Ohio. The funeral services were held at the family residence on March 7, conducted by Rev. Albert Read, who has been for twenty-one years her honored pastor.

JAMES PAYSON DIXON

James Payson Dixon was born in Lebanon, Mo., Sept. 20, 1842. He died in North Rochester, N. H., Feb. 19, 1921. He was the son of the late Frederick and Caroline (Stanton) Dixon.

He first attended school in "the little red school house" near his home. After he had finished work in the public school, he went to West Lebanon Academy, to New Hampton Literary Institute at New Hampton, N. H., and to Brown High School at Newburyport, Mass. Of the last-named school he was a graduate. He entered Bowdoin College at Brunswick, Me., at eighteen years of age. Due to an accident received while there, his school work had to be laid aside for three years. When he was able to return to college life, he went to Bates College at Lewiston, Me., where he remained for two years; but his last year was spent at Bowdoin, from which he was graduated in 1867.

After leaving college, he was principal of the high school at Rochester, N. H., for one year. Following this, he was for eleven years principal of the high school at Somersworth, N. H. In 1880 he went to New London, N. H., where he was president of Colby Academy for ten years. Due to the ill health of his wife, he gave up school work in 1890. Immediately following his career as teacher, he took one year of vacation with his family in the little village of Elkins, a part of New London. Then he went to Worcester, Mass. After about a year and a half spent there in business with his brother, he returned to New London, where he lived on his farm until after the death of his wife in 1904. Nearly thirteen years ago he went back to his boyhood home in Lebanon, Me., where he spent the last days of his life with his daughters and a son, under the shadow of his native pine trees, but so near the granite state that many of his daily activities were carried on in the commonwealth where so much of his life work had been done. So near, indeed, did he live to New Hampshire that to those who knew the place of his home only by post-office address, it was North Rochester, N. H.

In 1872 he married Mary Abby Lord of Somersworth, N. H. Into the home thus established there came, during the passing of the years, eight children. One son, James P. Dixon, Jr., and four daughters, Florence, Mary, Caroline and Abby F., survive him. He also left five grandchildren and a sister, Mrs. Achsa S. Roberts of Chester, N. H.

During his young manhood he joined the Baptist church in Somersworth. His life from that time on was marked by active service for his Master. The ministry of his last few years in the little community where he lived was particularly sweet. Here he gathered the children together into the Sunday school of which he was for more than twelve years superintendent, and here he was the counsellor and friend of all who came to him for guidance and help.

The end of this life came suddenly while about his customary work. It seemed almost as if, like Elijah of old, he was translated; so quickly did God take him to himself. For out of a beautiful morning here he stepped almost instantly into the land which knows no night, for "the Lamb is the light thereof." Here he wished always to be "up and doing," for there was a quenchless ardor of spirit that to the last expressed itself in helpfulness to others. Just beyond he still lives and eagerly serves, for—

"The Master has paid him his wages, the goal of his journey is won;
He rests, but he never is idle; a thousand years pass like a day,
In the glad surprise of the paradise where work is sweeter than play."

Missionary Revivals

(Continued from page 246)

together in the direction toward which Baptists have always faced, which is forward, "to make disciples of all the nations." Our people have wanted the assurance that the New World Movement is of God and that it represents an attempt to further the whole kingdom enterprise, and having this assurance I believe we can count on hosts of them to back it up as far as fifty cent corn will permit!

We have met in groups of two or three churches in associations, and in larger districts; we have had meetings ranging in attendance from fifty to nine hundred, and everywhere the same candid questions have been asked and answered, the same interest evidenced and the same fervent atmosphere prevailing.

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

Arizona—*Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phoenix.
California, N.—*Dr. C. W. Brinstad, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
Idaho—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
Indiana—*Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
Iowa—424 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capitol Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
Minnesota—*Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2nd Ave., So. Minneapolis.
Montana—*Rev. G. Clifford Cress, Box 643, Lewistown.
Nebraska—*Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
Nevada—George L. Snyder, Box 230, Sparks.
New Hampshire—Rev. D. S. Jenks, 92 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
New Jersey—*Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singiser, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
North Dakota—*Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
Ohio—Rev. F. G. Cressy, Granville.
Oregon—*Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin, Field Promotion Director, 405 Tilford Bldg., Portland.
Pennsylvania—*Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
Rhode Island—Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauderdale Bldg., Providence.
South Dakota—*Dr. S. P. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
Utah—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
Vermont—*Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
Washington, E.—*Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane.
Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213½ Fourth St., Parkersburg.
Wisconsin—*Dr. D. W. Hulbur, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
Wyoming—*Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

Beware of Contagious Diseases

THOMAS  COMMUNION SERVICE

INDIVIDUAL

SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES

Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer. Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing out for organs of any make. Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

DO YOU KNOW!!

THE Business World needs Christian Young People. An efficient Business Training midst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY
Write for particulars Osage, Iowa

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outfits, Decks—EVERY THING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.

DeMoulin Bros. & Co., Dept. 17 GREENVILLE, ILL.

Harry W. Jones
CHURCH ARCHITECT
Minneapolis

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH

ROCHE'S  EMBUROGATION

Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.

All druggists or
W. EDWARDS & SON E. FOUGERA & CO.
London, England 90-92 Beekman St. N.Y.

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6 cents per word per insertion; cash with order.

Wanted: Second-hand pipe organ. In good condition, medium sized. Any church having such an instrument to dispose of, please write to Rev. Stephen Gazsi, 149 Ash St., Bridgeport, Conn., giving description, price, etc.

Go to Europe in 1921 at my expense by organizing a party of five. Babcock's European Tours, 1137 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y. Established 1900.

For Sale—Slightly used "Rotaspeed" Duplicating Machine. Perfect running order. Bargain—X.Y.Z., THE BAPTIST.

Pipe Organ, beautiful in tone, recently replaced by larger instrument, for sale. An unusual opportunity. W. C. Simons, Lawrence, Kansas.

In writing to our advertisers mention
THE BAPTIST.

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

WILLIAM LESTER

THREE SPLENDID HYMNALS

The New Baptist Praise Book

The Popular Hymnal

Hymns for the King's Children

FROM the Judson Press, the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia, Pa., come the three hymnals listed above. During the past few weeks, since this music corner has been instituted, some eight or nine requests for advice and suggestions for new hymnals have come in to me. In collective answer to these pleas I take pleasure in recommending one or more of the books under present consideration. Every need of the church in a musical way (so far as it effects congregational singing) will be taken care of in this series. "The New Baptist Praise Book" is a splendid, comprehensive volume, handsome in appearance, substantially bound, clear-cut as to printing and format, and—what is more to the point—of exceptional value as to content. It is comprehensive enough to meet the needs of any congregation, and yet not so bulky as to preclude easy handling and ease in finding desired hymns. Musically the choice of tunes and balance between old tried-and-true favorites, sacred by reason of hallowed use and sentimental association, and newer material perhaps more fitting to some of the modern thought in the church, is good. For the most part, in fact, wherever it was typographically possible; the text of the poem is immediately under the musical notes associated with the particular word. This one feature should appeal to many in the congregation who are sometimes hesitant of hearty aggressive singing because the tune may be on one page, and the balance of stanzas after the first arranged in trellis formation somewhere "over the top" to the right. Voluminous indexes are provided, and should be of great service when some appropriate material for special occasions is called for. If you are in search of a comprehensive hymnal, musically valid and of positive Christian tone, send for an examination copy. You will be grateful for this brief review.

The second title is a smaller volume, of more "evangelical" type, better adapted for the use of young people or more "mixed" audiences than are usually to be found at morning service. The proportion of the "gospel-hymn" type to the more staid English-school chorale of Dykes, Sullivan, et al, is much more in favor of the first; many of the tunes are new, the musical standard has been kept unusually high, for which we esthetic musicians can be eternally grateful; and, what is even more to the point, with no loss to the service value of the book. Some want less elaborate in make-up and form than the first hymnal named, it is naturally of more modest price, though the charge for each of the books is remarkably modest, considering their high value.

Lastly, we will consider the volume for the younger people. Not for many years has the writer run across a book for children that appealed to him as did this hand-book. Most hymnals, or, for that matter, many of the so-called "music books for children," published for the use of the little ones, prove to be inefficient when tested out in actual service. Theories as what should appeal to the adolescent mind have an unhappy faculty of blowing up when put in use with the children. My work with the children's choruses, operated under the auspices of the Civic Music Association here in Chicago—a great work, by the way—has dispelled many, many of the fond illusions that you can find so glibly and pleasantly reproduced in the prefaces to most of the "children's" books. Basing my observations and opinions on the results of many bitter lessons learned in actual working conditions I feel that I can unhesitatingly vouch for this small volume, "Hymns for the King's Children." The editor, Edward M. Fuller, is a recognized authority in his field; of his right to that pre-eminence we have ample proof at hand. Worthy of especial mention is the high literary value of the texts chosen. The musical settings, while of necessity simple and diatonic, are very attractive and appealing. If you want to galvanize your kindergarten and primary departments into renewed enthusiasm, get this characteristic book. If your church is well supplied with the three books reviewed above, you can rest assured that the musical taste of the congregation will be advanced, the praise of God in song in all departments will be improved, and the new generation growing up will be kept in close communion with what is musically and devotionally of the best. And I am just peculiar enough to believe that the Deity prefers the musical part of the church worship to be of musical value as well as sincerely from the heart.

FOR THE SOLOIST

SINGERS desiring sacred songs combining distinctive, beautiful melodic line, rich harmonizations and sincere religious feeling for the meanings of the devotional texts should examine a set of four songs for church services composed by Beatrice MacGowan-Scott, the well-known composer, formerly of Chicago, now located in St. Paul, Minn. Three of the numbers are issued for medium voice—"Here, O My Lord," "The Hands That Are Holy," and "Call the Lord, Thy Sure Salvation"—and one is for high voice only—"They That Wait Upon the Lord." All are published by the Clayton F. Summy Company of Chicago. "Here, O My Lord," subtitled, "a communion hymn," is a melodious, singable setting of the familiar Bonar text, and is a welcome addition to the somewhat limited list of good songs suitable for such a truly religious event as the monthly communion service. Of more general interest as to subject are the other two medium-voice numbers, they are simple and sane in structure, making no great demands upon the vocal equipment of the singer, but supplying fine opportunities for telling spiritual points at the hands of any singer with more than embryonic instincts of style and interpretation. "They That Wait Upon the Lord" is a more dramatic song for high voice, quite a little more taxing vocally than the other selections, but well worth the extra effort. As is always the case with this composer, the songs are exceedingly well written, the many clever features of her writings will appeal to her fellow-craftsmen. The library of songs available for devotional use has received a notable accession by the publication of these four songs—may they have the wide use that they so amply deserve!

Obituary

EMILY MALCOLM

Emily Malcolm was born in Scotland, Ontario, Oct. 27, 1827, and died at Fayette, Iowa, Jan. 20, 1921, at the age of ninety-three years, two months and twenty-three days.

She was the eldest daughter of a large family and spent her early life in her father's home until, at the age of eighteen, on Oct. 29, 1845, she was united in marriage with William A. Whitney of the same place.

To them were born nine children, seven of whom grew to manhood and womanhood. The eldest daughter, Mary, died in 1873. The eldest son, Lewis, died in 1907. Those surviving are A. E. Whitney of Fayette; Mrs. Louise Raphael of St. Louis; Mrs. Ella Merritt of Stillwater, Okla.; Mrs. Martha Nafe of Boulder, Colo., and Mrs. Gertrude Carpenter of Fayette. In addition to the children named, she leaves to mourn her death a large number of grandchildren, great-grandchildren and six great-great-grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney lived in Ontario until the summer of 1861, when they came West, locating at Lake Geneva, Wis., where they lived but a short time. Later they came to West Union, Iowa, which was their home for many years. In 1881 they moved to Grand Island, Neb.

After celebrating their golden wedding anniversary in 1895, on account of declining years they went to Denver, Colo., where they spent two years with their daughter, Mrs. Nafe. In 1897 they came to Fayette, and for the next sixteen years Mrs. Whitney has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter.

In her early married life she joined the Baptist church, of which for more than seventy-five years she was a faithful and consistent member, holding her membership in the Baptist Church at West Union at the time of her death.

She was a most faithful and devoted wife and mother, and after a well-rounded life of nearly a century, she dropped peacefully to sleep, surrounded by all of her children.

A Course for High School Pupils

(Continued from page 243)

We are endeavoring to form Christian character. What is character? What makes character Christian?

The three things which influence us in character formation are inheritance, environment and education.

What traits would you have others inherit if you could control that inheritance? What traits of character would you hope to end? What are you doing to give those who follow you a good inheritance, i. e. in education and in your environment? Can the soul have an environment? What constitutes this environment? Good thoughts, good motives, good acts. How far does the physical environment affect the soul's environment?

Where do you get good thoughts? From good books, good people, good institutions.

How does one get an education for good? In the same way as one gets a good environment.

What books are necessary for the securing of a good education and environment? The Bible, Pilgrims Progress, Confessions of Augustine, Imitation of Christ, Thos. A. Kempis' Manhood of the Master, Meaning of Prayer (Fosdick), John Woolman's Journal. What are the best novels to help in this way? What is your favorite poet? Artist? Favorite sport or pleasure? When are these good?

How should one read his Bible? When is the best time?

Can you give the main points in last Sunday's sermon? The thought in your pastor's prayer? Was it a good prayer? Why?

What is prayer? Why do people pray?

(Matt. 7:7-9.) Analyze the Lord's prayer. Find four other prayers in the Bible. Why did these people pray? This should be an assignment for reporting the following week. The results? How can one get results in prayer? What does the Bible say about it? Have the young people read selected passages.

Is a prayer answered if one does not get what he desires? Can you be sure God answers your prayer? Under what conditions? When in conformity with His character, His will, His promises, His work, His wish for us.

(Continued next week)

Tag, You're It

(Continued from page 245)

mustn't talk out loud or play tag in church, dear!" Whereupon Alice opened her astonished eyes and found herself in church, in her own pew, cuddled up next to her father!

"For goodness' sake!" Alice gasped to herself. "It must have been a dream. Yet how exceedingly real it had seemed, how horrid and blundering and selfish she had felt as the Angel's gentle eyes had looked her up and down—Alice in Blunderland, the slow-poke stand-still tight-wad girl who never played 'Tag! You're It!'"

She sat thinking and thinking and thinking about herself. Then when church was over she said to her father: "Dad, I want to borrow two dollars and a half, please. I'll earn it somehow or other real soon; but I've just got to have it because I haven't done my duty."

"Well!" laughed her father as he fished out the money, "how about my adding a dollar to the amount then? There's a special Easter thank-offering up in school, isn't there? What do they call it—a missionary something or other?"

Alice sighed happily: "Up in heaven they call it 'Tag! You're It!'"

And Alice, having moved from Blunderland forever and ever, is saying to every Young Reserve today: "Tag! You're it! Don't spoil the game! Bring that little box to Sunday school on Easter, brimful of money! Tag! You're It!"

God as Revealed in the Psalms

(Continued from page 240)

"Promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south; but God is judge: he putteth down one and setteth up another" (75:6-7).

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: a good understanding have all 'they that do his commandments" (111:10).

The Perfecter of Character

God rebukes and chastens in order to make our characters perfect.

"It is God that girdeth me with strength, and maketh my way perfect" (18:32).

"Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord, and teachest him out of thy law" (94:12).

"Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word" (119:67).

"I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are right, and that thou in faithfulness hast afflicted me" (119:75).

"Thou who hast shewed me great and sore troubles shalt quicken me again . . . thou shalt increase my greatness and comfort me on every side" (71:20-21).

The Fulfiller of Desires

After seasons of affliction God often fulfills our most cherished desires and causes our ways to flourish abundantly.

"Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart" (37:4).

"They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house" (36:8).

"My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness" (63:5).

The Eternal Rewarder

Space fails to tell of God as lover, friend, forgiver; as maker, master, cleanser, as mighty worker, avenger, justifier; as joy-giver, peace-giver and protector. For these and for hundreds of other promises and provisions one must search for himself, as for hid treasure. The passages quoted are but a few crumbs that have fallen from the rich man's table. The truly rich are those who feast daily upon God's word and who secure therefrom strength for the battles of life.

David lived with God on earth and had no fear of the future. Amid the troubles of life he always retained the thought, "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory" (73:24). "There the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forever more" (133:3).

FOR SALE

Modern cement block house. Beautiful suburb. Convenient train and car service. Hot water heat. Sleeping porch. Completely furnished, ready to move in. Going back to my field in Assam. Inquire of owner, A. C. Bowers, 2228 W. 109 St., Morgan Park, Chicago.

In writing to our advertisers mention The Baptist

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Young Women
Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year. Apply early for September.
Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society

Our Corporate name is

"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"

Executive Secretary, Charles L. White

Treasurer, Samuel Bryant

23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N.Y.

VISUAL INSTRUCTION

by Balopticon and Acme
"Movie" Projection

LANTERNS SOLD AND RENTED

Our Slide Library includes the "S.S. Times Pace Cartoons." Special slides made to order from your pictures or negatives.

Write for Bulletins

GEO. W. BOND SLIDE CO.

Rm. B. 6 E. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

Easter Thank Offering

I believe in the Risen Christ and the light and hope which the Easter Message brings into this world.

I believe that the Message should be taken to the men of every nation who do not share this glorious life.

I believe that the Master has commissioned His disciples to carry the Good News the world around.

I believe that the churches of the Northern Baptist Convention do well to give thanks for God's wondrous blessings through an Easter offering for this blessed work.

I believe that the members of His church ought to make an offering "over and above" their regular gifts which will be a token of their gratitude and will help to bring the peace and cheer the world so much needs—to send out more messengers with the glad news of salvation, to build schools for the millions of children of other lands in ignorance and darkness, to send doctors to the sick, help to the blind, the deaf and the lame, to carry out the Great Commission even to the ends of the earth.

Easter is a day of joy for us.

Let us work and pray that it may soon be a day of joy for the whole world.

MY OFFERING is made because I desire to share more fully the blessings of the Risen Christ with the people of all nations.

*General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention
276 Fifth Avenue, New York*

05
A P
Volume II

April 2, 1921

Number 9

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

Univ of Ill Libr
Urbana Ill

NATURE is waking from her long sleep. Life comes tripping over the hills; her footsteps are traced by soft greens in the valleys; her spirit is dominant around the world. This life is calling to me as it passes on. Its urge is upward and onward. In the fellowship of the Lord of life I may find a perpetual springtime, a glad triumphant realization of endless unfolding.—G. Clifford Cress.

Latest Publications from the Press of the

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

You And Your Church

By JAMES S. KIRTLY, D. D.

What is involved in being a Christian, a church member, a Baptist? Out of an experience of many years as a pastor, Doctor Kirtley has set forth replies to these questions in such way as to construct a work of great practical value to young people. The volume is especially adapted to serve as a textbook for classes in study of the essentials of the principles, polity and work of Baptist churches. Boards, $1.25 net.

A Study of the Holy Spirit

By T. P. STAFFORD, A.M., Th.D.

A well-ordered exposition of the Scripture teaching as to the Holy Spirit, Biblical in method, simple in statement, practical in purpose, this work should find a place not only on the student's shelf, but on the desk of the pastor who aims at Scriptural presentation of so important a doctrine, and in the hands of the church worker who seeks intelligent contact with the source of spiritual power for himself and for others. Boards, $1.00 net.

The Ideal Man

By J. P. GREENE, D.D.

In these chapters is the heart of a course in Practical Ethics given by the author in William Jewell College. They pulsate with the virile personality of Doctor Greene. The outcome of wide experience and of intelligent study of books and men, they have the simplicity of light and the vitalizing warmth of eminently Christian humanity of a man who "sees in to people and still believes in them." Cloth, $1.00 net.

The Stature of a Perfect Man

By P. H. J. LERRIGO, M.D.

A physician's contribution to the statement of natural laws in the spiritual world. Through science "undreamed-of natural secrets have become the commonplaces of popular information." Doctor Lerrigo has drawn upon one department of this widely disseminated classified knowledge in an attempt to indicate the wealth of possibilities of teaching by means of parable the truth concerning the life processes of the soul. "A classification of those laws of spiritual health which parallel the normal physiological processes of the body, and which may perhaps fitly be termed the physiology of the inner life, should be helpful in leading us to a correct understanding of soul health."

Boards, $1.00 net.

JUST PUBLISHED

Hymns for the King's Children

A Song-Book for the Children's Division of the Sunday School

Edited by EDWARD M. FULLER

In this collection are 136 hymns, the words being set within the music. In addition, there are eight special services adapted for opening and closing periods for Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas, for patriotic, temperance, and missionary occasions, and combining Scripture reading, song, and prayer in reasonable proportions; ten additional hymns are given in these services.

Attention has been given to the requirements of each department in the Children's Division, and the range of children's voices has been kept in mind. A number of the favorite hymns of the church have been included. Special indexes of hymns adapted to the departments are provided, together with the indexes of titles and of first lines.

Octavo, 165 pages. Price, boards, 40 cents a copy, $35.00 a hundred; delivery charges extra.

The Religion of Jesus

By ALBERT G. LAWSON, D. D.

In method of treatment, descriptive rather than historical or philosophical; in style, addresses, not essays; in matter, Biblical; the work of a lover of good books—these four papers have the charm of sincerity and beauty in expression that well supports their practical purpose. Boards, 75 cents net.

The Angel's Lily

By RUSSELL H. CONWELL, D.D., LL.D.

An accurate record of one of Dr. Conwell's most interesting and instructive addresses, in the form of an Oriental parable. Accompanying the lecture are eight chapters giving a history of Temple University. Cloth, $1.25 net.

Friday's Footprints

By MARGARET T. APPEGARTH

Truth embodied in a tale enters in at open doors. Here are missionary stories—almost two-score of them—told by a master of story-telling who has so co-ordinated her work and who presents her material in such a fascinating way that to read her chapters is to take a personally conducted tour around the world of missionary interest. Miss Applegarth's charming style in expression of her thorough grasp of facts is most effective to win attention and to lodge information. A worthwhile book for the juniors, and the seniors will not think it beneath them.

Cloth, $1.50 net.

Send for a copy of our complete Descriptive Catalog.

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

Philadelphia Boston Chicago St. Louis Kansas City Los Angeles Seattle Toronto

Fresh from the Field

Dr. J. Sunderland, who has done a great work for the denomination running through a period of sixty years, now eighty-six years old and totally blind, has lately, after forty years of torture from eczema, been completely cured. Old friends may address him at 1584 Hopkins St., Oakland, Cal.

Mrs. Carl R. Gray, wife of the president of the U. P. railway, is giving Bible expositions every Thursday evening to large crowds at the First Church, Omaha.

Mr. Geo. Ellingwood Joy has become director of religious education for Temple Church, Los Angeles.

Thirty-four young people recently confessed Christ at the First Church, Omaha.

Forty pastors of Rhode Island, under the leadership of Dr. Rolvix Harlan, recently held a conference on rural church problems at Providence. Its findings urged a closer co-operation with the state convention and an aggressive evangelistic program.

Representatives from two more Indian tribes have recently been received as students in Bocone College. There are now twenty-three tribes represented and six different states outside of Oklahoma. Thirty-five students were baptized some weeks ago.

Rev. H. F. Huse at Dover, Me., finds the benevolences of his church increased from $1000 a year to $2400, a growing Sunday school and a crowd of 100 young people at the weekly socials. He uses motion pictures and other devices of recreation and amusement.

First Church, Connellsville, Pa., juniors carry on a contest in singing, reading, story telling and Bible knowledge. Prizes will be awarded on Easter Sunday.

Mr. George M. Landis, a student at the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, has recently been invited to serve as acting pastor of the Trinity Church of Marion, Ohio until such time as Dr. McAfee of that Church shall have regained his health.

The Calvary Baptist Church, of Omaha, has just closed a very successful series of evangelistic meetings under the leadership of Evangelist E. S. Stucker of Ottawa, Kansas. Mr. Foster Jones of Winono Lake, Indiana, assisted as singer and choral director. Ninety-two decisions were registered for the christian life and church membership.

Lake Forest College announces as the Bross Lecturer for the present year, the Reverend John P. Peters, director of the Babylonia expedition of the University of Pennsylvania, 1888-95, who will give a course of six lectures on "Spade and Bible." These lectures will be given from April 4 to 9 in the chapel of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago at 4:30 p. m., and in Lake Forest in the Reid Memorial Chapel from April 11 to 16 at 8 p. m.

Rev. E. R. Hermiston with the chapel car, "Grace," has just closed meetings at Waterford, Cal., with forty converts, and is now busy organizing a church at Chowchilla in the same state.

One of the regional conferences was held recently at the Central Church, Quincy, Ill. Pastor Robert Van Meigs and his people are enthusiastic over the results.

(Continued on page 287)

The Baptist

Vol. II

April 2, 1921

No. 9

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves

Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER

MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE

MR. WM. AYER MCKINNEY

MR. PETER R. FINLAY

MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR

MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY

PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY

REV. S. W. CUMMINGS

PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS

MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD

REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR

PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY

HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts. CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	258
EDITORIAL .....	261
SHANGHAI COLLEGE AND THE FUTURE MANHOOD OF CHINA, by W. B. Lippard.....	264
SHALL WE TURN SAVAGES? by Robert Bruce Smith....	267
A HIVE OF BAPTIST BEES.....	266
LIFE WORK IN WOMEN'S COLLEGES, an interview with Chas. W. Gilkey.....	268
LIGHT SHINES FROM WARREN TO BUCHAREST.....	268
THE JAPANESE WOMEN'S HOME IN SEATTLE, by Jessie Dodge White .....	269
SUICIDE OR PRAYER, by Marola E. Rivenburg.....	270
PREACHERS WHO SING IN HARMONY, by C. C. Overeem	271
WHEN ALABASTER BOXES ARE BROKEN, by Chas. L. White .....	271
DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....	272
BULLETIN BOARD .....	273
HERE ARE BOOKS FOR YOU .....	275
CHIMNEY CORNER .....	276
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	278
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	279
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	280
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS.....	285
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	286

Warms Their Hearts in Alaska

THE BAPTIST is certainly an interesting paper for our people of Baptist faith. To see the reports from the workers and missions all over the world will build up our interest and faith in the work more than anything else could do."—S. Reinholdsen, Alaska.

Killam's Kollum

The Little Secretary Gets The Baptist

"In the issue for 19 a little girl, bless her heart, regrets the discontinuance of THE BAPTIST in her home. Please renew at once in her name."—Mary H. Crocker, New York.

Letter of Notification

THE BAPTIST wrote the "little secretary of the C. E." as follows: "Your letter addressed to THE BAPTIST some weeks ago was printed in the issue of Mar. 19 simply omitting your name and your city.

"It was a good letter. We used it to show that some young people at least were interested in what other folks were trying to do to build up God's kingdom.

"This morning I received a letter from Mary H. Crocker of New York in which she asked me to send to you personally THE BAPTIST for one year. I am sure you will appreciate this unexpected response to your letter. The weekly visits of the paper will help you in your new work as secretary of the C. E."

Deposition Number One

"The following American citizens, being of sound mind and clear conscience, do hereby depose and authorize me to convey to your excellency the information that you are permitted to convey to them through the devious and uncertain ways of the American mail system THE BAPTIST and Missions for one year. Others will duly be sent along until there will be a list that will lighten up your countenance so that it can be seen even in Chicago atmosphere."—T. V. Pierce, Brookings, S. D. The fee was $49.50.

The Baptist Cheers Pastorless Church

"I want to tell you what your paper has meant to our church and to myself. We are a small mission church. Our building was erected six years ago with a debt of $6,000. We have been without a pastor for over a year. We have kept up Sunday school and had an occasional church service. Our membership is forty of whom less than twenty-five are resident. We have twelve copies of THE BAPTIST and this has meant a great deal to us. We have reduced our debt to $750 and went over the top with the New World Movement, raising $2700."

How Can They Sing Without Hymnals

This church needs some Baptist Hymnals or any other good hymnal with "the good old gospel hymns." Who will give this heroic little church fifty hymnals? Write us, or E. B. Pease, Glasgow, Mont.

Des Moines Getting Ready

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that there will be a rate of one and one-half fare to the Northern Baptist Convention, which is to be held in Des Moines June 22nd to 29. This rate will probably apply to those who desire to come a few days prior to the convention, inasmuch as the Shriners are to hold their conclave in Des Moines immediately before the Northern Baptist Convention and the National Educational Association is to have its convention here shortly after the convention.

It must be kept in mind, however, that it will be almost impossible to secure hotel accommodations in Des Moines during the Shriners' Conclave, as this will be the largest convention that the city has ever entertained.

The local committee on arrangements has its work well under way. Dr. W. C. Biting of St. Louis, who is secretary of the Northern Baptist Convention, visited Des Moines a day or two ago and expressed himself as well pleased with the progress that had been made. Every effort will be made to entertain the delegates in the best possible manner.

Des Moines has ample hotel accommodations, but it will be necessary for delegates to plan to have two occupy a room wherever it is possible. All hotel reservations have been placed in the hands of Mr. F. E. Goodell, 3620 Adams Street, chairman of the assignment committee, and he is very anxious to have delegates and visitors advise him as soon as possible just what hotel accommodations they will require. All letters should be sent to Mr. Goodell instead of to the hotels, as all assignments will pass through his hands.

A Church That Did It

MOST of us belong to the "church that didn't" or at least to the "church that hasn't yet." This is the story of a "church that did it." The church at Malone, N. Y., had all of the alibis of most of the "churches that didn't." On May 8 one of the towers of this church (literal towers of brick and mortar) just fell down. It tore down a good section of the front of the church. The church was so disheartened that it let the pastor-elect know that it was ready to release him from his promise to come. It did not believe that a young graduate from the seminary would want to start his ministerial work with such a handicap. But I. M. Rose was anything but a quitter. He entered his new pastorate the first of July. Nineteen-eighteen was not a good year for building enterprises, as many will recall, but the tower was rebuilt and the building rededicated Feb. 2, 1919. No insurance money was available for a tower that just fell down and the $8,000 was a heavy burden.

June 4, 1919, the other tower burned down! A careless workman, finishing up some decorating, threw a cigarette into some waste and while the men were at dinner the fire got good headway; the entire tower was demolished and the water did large damage to the ceiling of the entire church. Insurance helped on this but there was serious interruption to the work of the church and the inevitable extras, yet the second tower was completed and the church rededicated Oct. 5. Then came the quota, $19,000! Far above the wildest fears of any in the church! (What a modest people we are! Only one church has been heard from that thought its quota too small!) There was a calm facing of the facts and a growing conviction first that it must be done and then that it could be done. And they did it. Very little is to be said as to how they did it except that there was, with the recognition of the urgency of the situation, the will to do it. Practically every member of the church rallied and everyone did his part. The challenge of a world program meant a revolution in giving to some. One man who had given a nominal ten cents a week for benevolences gave $800 for the four years and is happy in it. Another who had given a nominal $10 a year for church expenses and nothing for missions subscribed $100 a year for the church and $150 a year for the New World Movement.

By way of contrast of the old and the new scale of operations in that church, in addition to twice increasing the salary of the pastor the church gave for benevolences during the twelve months May 1919 to May 1920, $495.32. During the eight months, May 1920 to Jan. 1921, the church actually paid into the Board of Promotion $2941.41.

Executive Committee Meeting

A MEETING of the executive committee of the Northern Baptist Convention was held in Chicago, March 17. All the members of the committee were present, or absent for good reasons.

The president made the following appointments, all of which were confirmed by the executive committee: delegates to the Southern Baptist Convention: Rev. J. C. Massee, Rev. Carter Helm Jones, Rev. W. Quay Rosselle and Rev. J. W. Brounger; the following to be representatives on committees and commissions of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America: Rev. J. H. Franklin, Rev. C. L. White, Rev. C. A. Brooks on the permanent committee of arrangements for the universal conference of the church of Christ on life and work; Rev. J. H. Franklin and Rev. Arthur J. Baldwin on the commission on relations with France and Belgium; Rev. J. H. Franklin on the commission on relations with religious bodies in Europe; Rev. Arthur T. Fowler on the commission on international justice and goodwill; Rev. Albert G. Lawson, and Rev. Robert W. Ashworth members of administrative committee; Rev. Arthur T. Fowler, chairman of committee on conference with other religious bodies.

The Annual and the Handbook of the Northern Baptist Convention will be combined in the future.

Standard forms of ex-officio credentials and of those from Baptist churches have been prepared for use at future conventions. Those from churches will be distributed through state convention secretaries to churches which apply for them. The ex-officio credentials will be distributed from the office of the corresponding secretary.

A committee was appointed to consider the matter presented at the Buffalo convention concerning the selection of three or four places as permanent places of meeting of the convention.

The executive committee voted to recommend to the convention changes in the by-laws providing for biennial instead of annual sessions of the Northern Baptist Convention. A memorial from the Baptist State Convention of Pennsylvania brought this matter to the attention of the executive committee.

The Committee decided to attach a salary to the position of manager of transportation of the Northern Baptist Convention, subject to the approval of the convention. The work of the manager of transportation has grown to be very heavy.

The report of the treasurer showed an indebtedness of about $17,000. This indebtedness is an accumulation. It cannot be helped under the present system.

The report of the committee on program for the next meeting of the convention was adopted. This report will doubtless be given to the denominational papers as soon as the committee can make arrangements to do so.

The Committee voted to accept the proposition of THE BAPTIST to issue a daily miniature edition during the convention in Des Moines to perform the service hitherto rendered by the bulletin.

Much other business was done of a routine nature, and many matters considered upon which no action was taken. The next meeting of the committee will be held in Des Moines at the Fort Des Moines Hotel, June 21, 8 p. m.

Women's Colleges in Orient

THE six Christian colleges for women in the Orient which have set out to raise $2,840,000 for their more adequate equipment received Feb. 19, a promise from the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Fund of one-third this amount or any part thereof which the colleges may succeed in raising.

The six colleges and their separate needs are:

The Woman's Christian College of Japan in Tokyo....	$610,000
Ginling College in Nanking, China .....	790,000
Yenching College in Peking, China .....	840,000
The Woman's Christian College in Madras, India.....	200,000
Isabella Thoburn College, Lucknow, India .....	200,000
The Woman's Medical College, Vellore, India .....	200,000

The Rockefeller Fund agrees to hold the offer open until Jan. 1, 1923.

Mr. Russell Carter, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, the treasurer of this central fund, says that these colleges have already raised in cash and pledges $378,459, to which the Foundation is ready to add $384,229 in accordance with the above agreement. These figures include the special International Christmas Gift made by the women of America for these colleges which amounted to $211,662.

These colleges were all founded by foreign missionary agencies and are union institutions maintained by the Baptist, Congregational, Christian, Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal South, Reformed and Presbyterian Churches, also the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches in Canada. They are administered by union boards of managers and trustees and are coordinated by a central committee of which Dr. James L. Barton of Boston is chairman, and Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Beverly, Mass., Dr. Robert E. Speer, Miss Margaret E. Hodge, Miss Elizabeth R. Bender and Mrs. DeWitt Knox of New York City, and Mrs. William E. McDowell of Washington are members. This committee is continuing its appeal for $10 gifts from at least 100,000 Christian women of America for these institutions for the higher education of girls in Asia.

The Baptist

Things That Are Not Shaken

ON ANOTHER page of this issue of THE BAPTIST, there is printed the story of a valiant church which saw one of the brick towers of its church building crumble and collapse. Hardly had the damage been repaired when the other tower caught fire and was partly consumed. Almost immediately thereafter came the suggestion that the proper share of this particular church in the New World Movement was something like $19,000, a sum far beyond anything dreamed of even before the accidents to the building. There was every excuse for failure, but the men and women of this church preferred success, and they pledged the money.

The shaking of the church building did not extend to the souls of these Christian men and women. No matter what might happen to the work of their hands, there was something in their spirit which was not touched. Disaster did not reach beyond that which was seen: the real church was not shaken at all. Calamity became to it God's call to a larger and better Christian life and service. All honor to such people! We almost smile as we read the story of the succession of calamities visited upon them. And then we laugh with joy as we discover the kind of spirit there was in them.

There are, thank God, things in the world which cannot be shaken. The solid earth itself may quiver beneath us, the governments with which we are familiar may be overthrown and we may have to learn geography anew, institutions which have all the sanctity of age may be proved shams, even our own little world may go to pieces about us as the people we have loved and trusted are lost from it. But there remain some sure things which abide forever because they are not subject to change and decay. To discover these and to see that they have a large place in our lives is an important part of our daily business. Different people might perhaps state these essential things in different phraseology. But most will agree that included among them are the verities which are so common that we sometimes almost forget them.

The Word of God is not shaken. "Heaven and earth shall pass away but my word shall not pass away." No single utterance of God shall fail until his law is established in the earth. It is quite true, as Emerson has said, that "no accent of the Holy Ghost the heedless world has ever lost."

The fact of righteousness is not shaken. The Lord loveth righteousness, even as the old Hebrew prophets pictured him and as Jesus showed him. The gay life is brief; the righteous life abides. The final goal is good, not ill; is righteousness, not sin.

And those three great things of which Paul speaks—faith, hope and love—are not shaken. The greatest of them all—love—is the thing which makes heaven eternally beautiful and which sheds its glory over this old world of ours.

Jesus said that the man who heard his words and paid no attention was like a man who built his house upon the sand. He who knows what cannot be shaken and then gives his love to that which is transient may know that he faces the day of shaking when his life structure will be thrown to the ground. Men take risks with their souls which they would not take with even so small a sum as $1000. What words can properly estimate their folly! On the contrary what satisfaction belongs to him who knows that both foundation and superstructure are sound!

On To Victory

AMERICAN cities a little more than two years ago saw such celebrations as the present generation had never before witnessed. For there returned from Europe division after division of the men who had taken their part in the great war and whose actions had achieved victory. They were welcomed in turn by people who had served, who had taken part in all kinds of home work, who had invested their money in Liberty bonds, and who felt consequently that they had a share in the victory. The depth of the welcome to the returning men was measured in part by the breadth of this home activity.

During Anniversary Week the churches of the Northern Baptist Convention which have had part in the New World Movement are to celebrate their first great victory. How splendid it would be if all our churches could have part in the rejoicing! No church should be found standing on the side-lines, an idle spectator of what others have been doing. Churches which have been co-operating can, by paying up, justify themselves thoroughly when they call to other churches to come into a movement which means great things for the kingdom of God.

The receipts during January and February were extraordinarily large. But they must be larger yet if our great missionary societies are not to find themselves facing a necessity for curtailment. Some few weeks ago there was published in these columns a frank statement of the financial condition of the Foreign Mission Society. The carrying out of its program for the year depends on the payment of the amount pledged. It will be seriously crippled if this is not done.

Pledging is easy; paying is harder. The latter is the real test of whether we mean what we say when we declare that we are God's stewards. The regional conferences have given all a clearer understanding of what the New World Movement means. Their enthusiasm must not exhaust itself in words. Shouting does not accomplish things; neither does criticism. There are many who believe that Baptists cannot carry through any great constructive program, that they cannot maintain unity of effort long enough. We believe that they can. The coming weeks will show.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Promotion, held in Minneapolis early in December it was decided that the period April 3-24 should be set aside as the "On to Victory" period. It was determined that we should organize our work during this period so as to secure in every church which had not previously responded the subscriptions needed to complete the quota of that church. Could such a canvass be complete by April 24, Anniversary Week would be a time of abounding joy. Let's show the world! More important yet, let's show the Master!

Many Men of Many Foibles

MANY a pastor preaches the gospel under a false courage. He does not know whether it will save a man or not.

"The trouble with many ministers is they have too many small motives."

So runs a threnody of the Western Christian Advocate. Dr. Wareing ought to know more about Methodist ministers than we do. But if he were to utter such words about the ministry of the Baptist denomination we should demur.

All proper allowance is made for common human short-comings, and nobody's courage and motives are as high as they ought to be, unless perchance Dr. Wareing speaks for a superior group, with which in comparison the "many" ministers make a poor showing. But by reasonable historic and common standards, we do not believe that it is fair to the ministry to publish such broad charges.

The ordinary minister—and this includes Methodist ministers also—when really tested exhibits a large measure of moral courage, believes in the gospel he preaches and feels the uplifting power of high motives.

Some ministers may be subject to the Advocate's indictment, but "many" is too many.

Scale down the impeachment.

Denominational Day

ACCORDING to the vote of the Northern Baptist Convention, Sunday, April 17, has been designated as Denominational Day. The committee appointed to have charge of the day has sent a letter to all pastors urging them to celebrate the day in sermon, Sunday school, men's class and young people's society. The subject for the day is "A Regenerate Church Membership," and in the letter to the pastors there is a brief suggestive discussion of this important matter.

Among all the special days suggested during the year, this day may well under present circumstances have particular attention. Baptist churches are engaged in a great campaign for the quickening of the home churches and for the extension of Christ's kingdom. Power will be added to such a movement if there is a clear understanding among our own people and among those whom we reach of the distinctive message of Baptist churches. A sane and enthusiastic observance of Denominational Day cannot fail to advance the truth and to assist the denomination in its forward work. With charity for all, let us speak the truth as we see it with all the power God may give us.

Stand Aside for the New India

REV. NICOLL McNICOLL in the Times and Freeman discusses "The New Missionary Situation in India" in such a manner as to draw serious attention to the subject.

The core of his argument lies in two special problems which "are causing great anxiety to the representatives of the churches in that country," and which "have leaped suddenly into prominence and are vitally related to the amazing awakening of passion and desire that is in process there at the present time."

What are those problems? They lie in two facts:

First—There is an educational revolt against colleges that are supported and aided by the government. "The demand is and will be that colleges where the Christian religion is a subject to which non-Christian students are required to submit their minds shall no longer be aided from public funds, or even form a part of the educational system." So strong is the feeling among the people that as a result every college in Calcutta is closed for want of students. The young Indians refuse to receive "tainted knowledge."

Second—"The Indian Church is demanding with ever-increasing insistence that she shall herself be placed in command of the forces—wherever they may come from—for India's evangelization." Just as the national movement in India is expressing itself in politics and education, so in religion the people of India are growing weary of self-constituted guardians, even for their souls.

What shall be our attitude towards this new spirit?

In the first place it is going to be accompanied by friction. It will not be tactful and gracious. What great new national enthusiasm ever was so? Missionaries who have given themselves with a holy love to the redemption of India will find their best efforts unappreciated and perhaps themselves treated with slight respect or indignity. Many difficult problems of management and of adjustment will arise. Conflicting claims of authority and of property will tax both patience and ingenuity.

But is not the awakening of India the very thing for which we have been sending out missionaries? Have we not longed for it, prayed for it and wondered whether the people of India were capable of a really virile national revival?

Then shall we not accept it gladly and give it every encouragement in our power? Shall we not hold ourselves ready to effect all changes in our missionary policy that may be required in order for this new spirit to express itself?

There has always been some question among Baptists whether their educational institutions in India ought to accept government aid. Baptist colleges in America would not consent to do so; and that question will probably come up for early reconsideration.

There is one thing more. Our missionaries should clearly understand that they are not sent to Americanize nor to Anglicize the people of India. Just now—was it ever otherwise?—it is important that our missionary loyalties be clearly all for Christ and the people among whom we serve.

Oh, there will be a host of difficult problems in the awakening Orient. God give us wisdom to meet them. And God be thanked for India's awakening.

Please To Accept This Coronal

ALL honor to the Quakers! Perhaps at no time in their history was their fidelity to their pacifist principles more severely and insidiously tried than in the last war.

The whole nation went wild with the primitive passion for war. It was hard for people who loved righteousness and humanity to understand how others who had the same love could consent to withhold their strength from the fight. Some did not try to understand. There were not wanting voices calling for the same treatment to be given to the Quakers that was given to Socialists, Mennonites and members of the International Bible Students' Association.

But they stood firm in both loyalty and human kindness. They offered no active interference to the efforts of the government in the prosecution of the war; but wherever there was suffering from the conflict, there were the Quakers. Even when Russia went wild and the world began to cry horrors, they stood trustingly to their post of dangerous and sacrificial service. The Friends in Russia never ceased to be friends of Russia, to believe in Russia—even to defend Russia.

Through all they labored steadfastly in the ministry of reconciliation.

And when in the disillusionment that followed the war, many other Christians lost courage and faith—which they have not even yet regained—the Friends stood forth with clear vision as interpreters of the transition and bold as the Hebrew prophets in proclaiming the new era.

This tribute is freely bestowed upon them in a spirit of catholicity inspired by theirs. A crown of honor is due them. Let them wear it.

* * *

If in any of the churches of the North there were individuals who were hindering and hampering the work of the kingdom because of their fault-finding and their general contrariness, we should recommend to them this bit of practical wisdom which recently came under our observation: "A horse can't pull while he is kicking and he can't kick while he is pulling." If this is correct the way to perfect harmony lies through effective pulling together.

* * *

One vision is among the fairest that ever threw its radiance over the souls of men: it is the vision of eight millions of Baptists, true to the spirit and ideals of their fathers, advancing with every advance of God in the march of human progress, and throwing their united strength into a sublime endeavor to swing into step with God. No man can serve the Baptist cause at such a time as this who does not give himself, above all interest of self or faction, to make that vision a reality.

* * *

The best way to overcome oppositions of science, falsely so called, is to launch a vigorous program of genuinely Christian evangelism and social service. For such a purpose an ounce of demonstration is worth a ton of controversy.

* * *

To us, the voice of the Baptists of the North, speaking through their representatives in the Northern Baptist Convention, after a careful, unselfish, fraternal, open and full deliberation, is as near to the authoritative voice of God as we are likely to hear from living human lips in this world. We are listening for that voice.

* * *

The cover picture this week is a reproduction of a painting by Wilson Irvine, an American artist. He calls it "The Blue Boat," but so typically American is the scenery that the attention of most will center on that rather than on such a detail as the boat. There are multitudes of places in New England which might have been the original of this picture. But, as somebody has remarked, New England scenery has floated with New England people down the Ohio River and one can go along with the river and find just such spots. So it is in many states. We are glad to present so handsome a picture and with it a few words from a letter addressed by Secy. Cress of Montana to his friends as the wonder of the spring rushes in on us once more.

This Week's Prize-Winner A Much Needed Revival

THE religion of Jesus is flooded with sentiment. Christianity is more a religion for the heart than of the brain. It emphasizes love above everything. A brainless religion commands no respect, but a religion without heart shrivels the soul.

The followers of Jesus swing like pendulums. Now doctrine is vigorously emphasized and now the evangelistic spirit. Dogma alone is dead, and dead dogma propagated by clanking machinery is odorous like unto a soap factory. Only when doctrines and programs are permeated with emotion is there abounding life.

People are fed up on "high things," and are "carried away with things that are lowly" with astonishing eagerness. Why? Because their hearts are burdened, and awakened emotions quicken dull ears. Folks are too worried and tired to hanker after dry bones. Mourners are not comforted by brilliant dissertations, even of a scientific nature, on the diseases of their dead. Men, even strong men, do not resent being made to weep if they are not ashamed of what they wept about when they cool off. Emotional tenderness greatly accelerates the fires of the gospel.

The heart of the world is hungry and sore today. That which feeds the soul and comforts the heart is more appreciated than precious jewels. The shortest road to the conscience and will is through the heart. The hardest work may be done to joyful music. An emotional revival may well frighten the conservatives, but a revival of emotion is imperatively needed. Let the dust in the garden of the Lord be watered with tears and then it will blossom as the rose.

Detroit, Michigan.

C. M. CARTER.

STUDENTS FOR THE MINISTRY, SHANGHAI COLLEGE

FACULTY OF SHANGHAI BAPTIST COLLEGE

Shanghai College and the Future Manhood of China

Dares to admit women.—All but five graduates are Christians.—Baptists have exclusive control.—Students come from all parts of the Far East.—Day breaks over China and all neighboring lands

BY WILLIAM B. LIPPARD

A RECENT cablegram from Pres. F. J. White of Shanghai Baptist College, announced that thirty-four students had been baptized on their profession of faith. In this institution twenty-eight students are today studying for the Christian ministry. Eighty per cent of the present student enrolment are Christians. All but five of the graduates of the college are followers of Christ.

These are facts, and there is nothing in this world so eloquent as facts. Pages of philosophical argument regarding the relation between education and evangelism could never tell so effectively nor demonstrate so clearly as these facts that education under Christian direction can become a powerful factor in evangelism.

No student can go through this Christian institution without sooner or later facing fairly and squarely the question of his personal allegiance to Jesus Christ.

Shanghai is the political, commercial and intellectual center of China. It is situated at the mouth of the Yangtse River which supplies 20,000 miles of navigable water. The city is connected by boat trade with a population of more than 200,000,000 people. Thirty steamship companies furnish lines of contact between Shanghai and the outside world from Mexico to Australia.

On a magnificent site overlooking the river, Northern Baptists in co-operation with Southern Baptists maintain this training school for Chinese young men. It was established in 1906 and officially opened two years later. The college site is in full view of every ship which enters or leaves the harbor of Shanghai. This is the only institution of higher education entirely controlled by Baptists in the whole of China.

The growth of this college has been remarkable. During its first year the enrolment totaled forty-six students. From that little group it has grown to undreamed of proportions—the last report showing that 402 students were enrolled. Although the question of coeducation has not been formally considered a new precedent was established this year when, for the first time, women were admitted to its classes, four being registered for the first term.

Students come not only from the eighteen provinces of China, but from Singapore, Java, Borneo, Australia, Korea and Manchuria. The college is thus endeavoring to serve the Chinese from Australia to Manchuria and from Tibet to Japan. Through its students, the influence of the college is spread into all the corners of the Orient. So popular has the institution become that every year many students are refused admission because of lack of accommodations.

The faculty consists of fifteen foreign teachers and ten Chinese teachers. One of these is a graduate of Shanghai who secured his M. A. degree at Brown University and his Ph. D. degree at Yale University. Courses of study cover the subjects usually included in the standard college curriculum, such as the sciences, literature, mathematics and other subjects, while the theological department includes the courses generally found in the theological seminaries in America.

Shanghai College has apparently presented an attractive appeal to far-sighted friends in America who have recognized its opportunity in the Christianization of China and have taken pleasure in investing their money in its work. Several unusually fine and well equipped new buildings have recently been constructed on the attractive and picturesque campus. A dormitory known as Evanston Hall, made possible by gifts largely from the men of the Evanston Church in Illinois, was opened a year ago and immediately crowded to capacity. Through the generous contribution of a deeply interested friend another dormitory is being completed, and judging from present enrolment figures this will also be taxed to capacity. This same friend is making possible the erection of a thoroughly equipped science hall which is destined to be one of the finest buildings of its kind in all Asia. The Mac-Leish infirmary has rendered large service in maintaining the health of the student body. The first college gymnasium built in China stands on the campus of this institution and was made possible through the generosity of Colonel Edward H. Haskell of Boston. Naturally, so fine a gymnasium has stimulated interest in all forms of athletics.

WOMEN STUDENTS AT SHANGHAI COLLEGE

During the past year the severe famine in China has induced sacrificial giving on a substantial scale. At the Christmas celebrations both money and clothes were contributed and it was decided not to hold the annual banquet but instead to contribute the money involved in its preparation to famine relief.

Shanghai College is urgently in need of residences for members of the faculty. No other structures are quite so essential just now to the work of the College. Even with two new residences now contemplated, several missionary families next fall will be without homes. The usefulness and service of the institution would be greatly increased if five or six residences could be erected in time for occupancy by the fall.

Next in importance to the erection of residences is the proposed chapel, which might worthily bear the family name of the donors. With the present student attendance already exceeding 400, which will be substantially enlarged within the next few years, the present auditorium in one of the buildings on the campus, accommodating only about 250 students comfortably, is entirely inadequate. A suitable auditorium such as would be provided by the erection of a chapel is necessary for the spiritual, social and intellectual life of the institution.

CAPTAIN OF TRACK TEAM, NOW SOCIAL SECRETARY OF THE YANGTSEPOO SOCIAL CENTER

The college has just finished one of the best terms in its history. The spirit of the students has been fine and progress along all lines has been reported. At a recent meeting of a missionary association in Shanghai, when the idea of service was being considered, a missionary of another denomination in concluding his remarks said, "If you want a good example of service go to Shanghai College." The following quotation from a letter of Mrs. Fred C. Mabey indicates not only the evangelistic atmosphere which pervades the entire institution but also suggests the great opportunity which lies before this college in winning China for Christ:

"On the second of December, Mr. Yen, a returned student from America who is an evangelist for the Chinese Y. M. C. A., spoke several times to the students and on Dec. 12 made a final appeal to the non-Christians to accept Christ. This meeting, together with the earnest personal work done by faculty and students for weeks beforehand, resulted in thirty-six men deciding to be Christians, of whom twenty-six were baptized at one of the most impressive services we have ever had. As Rev. P. R. Bakeman received them into the church at the afternoon communion service and we had an opportunity to look into the faces of these men, it seemed to us that the possibilities for China and for the kingdom in those young men at the threshold of their Christian lives were absolutely limitless. Thank God for these and such as these, for they are the hope of this great nation."

China with her 400,000,000 people is a big part of the world. The complete evangelization of this great nation can only be accomplished when the Chinese themselves undertake the task. For this achievement the establishment and maintenance of institutions like Shanghai Baptist College, are fundamentally essential.

BASEBALL GAME: TWO OUT AND THE BASES FULL

A Hive of Baptist Bees

Pastor Albert D. Werden has things quite to his liking and does not hesitate to say so.—A chronicle of a small-town church

EATON RAPIDS, Mich., has a new Baptist church building, a live leader and a virile program. The house, dedicated in November, on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the organization of the church, is practically a new struc-

Rev. Albert D. Werden, pastor at Eaton Rapids, is in the prime of young manhood. He did good work at Lansing and elsewhere before going to his present charge.

ture; the annex containing classrooms, kitchen, dining room, lavatories, cloakrooms, etc., being newly built. The auditorium has been freshly decorated and the pulpit platform and organ space rearranged. A very efficient steam heating plant has also been installed. The old lighting method has been replaced; that in the auditorium by a new reflector system which mildly diffuses the light without shadows. The whole church exterior has been given a coat of stucco and new entrances with spacious concrete steps from the street are provided, and the old spire is removed.

LIVE TOWN: LIVE CHURCH

Eaton Rapids has a population of 2500 with a rural community about the same size. The city has all modern improvements, the Baptist church is abreast of the times—a thoroughly up-to-date equipment, a business administration that commands the co-operation of the city's most representative people, a continuous and constructive program with various forms of organized work.

The church is the center of all activities and is open on the average five evenings of each week. No less than eight departments are at work. The deacons and trustees have the rotating system, part of each board giving way each year to new members, thus keeping the management of the church out of the hands of one or two controlling individuals. The ladies' aid society is constantly awake to the needs of auxiliary work, such as care and upkeep of the church kitchen, comforts for the sick and interior improvements to the church and parsonage. The ladies have been unusually busy this winter sewing and providing for the needy of the community, working in harmony with other agencies. A women's mission society holds regular meetings and reviews two books each year, one on home and one on foreign work. The society also uses missionary publicity through the other departments and seeks to help the church reach its quota on the New World Movement. An active B. Y. P. U. has an average attendance of 70 at the devotional meetings, holds monthly sociables, and trains high school students to take public part in its meetings. A troop of Boy Scouts, numbering about 40, with drum and bugle corps, meets every week for instruction under efficient leadership. The drills and gymnastics are in charge of an ex-service man who served in France. The choir is unusually efficient for a small town, both chorister and organist being well trained for their work and supported by a large, three-manual pipe organ. During the winter the choir has given several concerts in surrounding towns, to the great delight of all.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DOUBLES

The best feature of all is the Bible School which has doubled in size since the new building was dedicated. Both officers and teachers are well fitted for their work and prove remarkably faithful. A Bible School board meeting is held each month where all problems and plans are gone over. The primary department has a well aired and spacious room, with a course especially designed for children, with all modern equipment, such as sand tables, clay, blocks, crayons and blackboard work. A story is told them and from this they draw their own pictures. Two baraca classes and two philathea classes have something doing every week during the fall, winter and spring, and under their auspices a popular Redpath Lyceum course is offered every year. The pastor is instructor of a teacher training class with an enrollment of 23. This class meets at supper once a week, with study-hour following.

Every church service is made as attractive as possible, with the very best of music at all times. Special speakers are brought in every month from Detroit, Lansing, the University of Michigan, and elsewhere. The stereopticon is used about once a month on Sunday evenings. Addresses by returned missionaries are obtained whenever possible.

THE CHURCH BUILDING AT EATON RAPIDS

The membership is now approaching 300. Accessions are frequent and continuous without resorting to the special revival. The pastor follows an evangelistic method without seeking a public manifestation except at communion service. It has been found that personal work brings the best results in the long run, and only after a person shows an interest in the work of the church is he asked to unite with the church. Rev. Albert D. Werden has been the pastor of this model small-town church since Jan. 1, 1916.

Shall We Turn Savages?

On the occasion of the recent race riots at Springfield, Ohio, the pastor of the First Baptist Church in that city proclaimed this message

BY ROBERT BRUCE SMITH.

OUR city's good name, "The best sixty-thousand city on earth," has been befouled by a fiendish crime and a hellish mob. We hang our heads in shame and ask God to be merciful to us. True patriotism condemns the crime and the mob spirit.

The immediate cause of the mob was the fiendish crime of a negro against a helpless white girl. Every father-heart, every mother-heart was stirred to the depths with righteous indignation. The pitiful cries of that child could be heard by all of us, however distant and remote.

FURIOUS RACE PREJUDICE

It must be admitted, however, that the deep-seated cause of the gathering of that angry mob was race prejudice. The awful crime of the negro stirred the smouldering fires of race prejudice into the flames of an angry mob. Race prejudice dethrones reason and punishes an entire race for the heinous crime of an unknown criminal. It charges criminal neglect against local officials who had absolutely no clue as to the identity of the criminal. Race prejudice overlooks and winks at crimes committed by men of wealth and social standing. The wealthy white man who robs a girl of her virtue and then sends her out of the city to hide his crime is a blacker villain than that black negro fiend about whom so much trouble has been made during the last few days. .

PICTURES FOSTER CRIME

There is a cause and a responsibility for every crime aside from that of the criminal himself. He has a responsibility, and so have the rest of us. We reap the harvest of our own sowing. Our present crime wave reveals this awful truth. We are fostering schools of crime in our city, in our state, in our nation. Some juvenile court judges tell us that about ninety per cent of the crimes committed by the boys and girls in this country are traceable to the motion pictures as they are now permitted to operate.

The remnants of primitive savagery and barbarism are dominant in mob violence. We boast of an age the glory of which is love for liberty, respect for the rights of others, for the dignity of courts and constituted government. The mob reveals disrespect for law and order—the precious jewels of our civilization. The mob declares "a wrong had been committed, and we will right the wrong at all hazards of life and property." It defies authority and law. The remedy proposed is more terrible than the foul crime of the fiend. No grievance is ever serious enough to justify the calling together of a mob in disregard for law and order.

Immodest, indecent pictures arouse lust and passion. They are in evidence in our picture shows, on our bill boards, on our side walks, in our daily papers. A goodly number of Christian mothers recently entered their protest in the name of decency and of womanhood and asked for help, only to be met by ridicule and insult. They pleaded for the protection of the youth of our city against certain vile pictures only to be reminded that they would see nothing improper, if their own minds were pure. The shame of it! They argued that Toledo and other cities barred a certain show from being exhibited only to be told that they did not tell the truth, in spite of the fact that the city officials of Toledo were sustained by the higher court in forbidding the exhibition of the said show. Now we throw up our hands in horror when a fiendish crime has been committed and an uncontrollable mob follows in its wake. Our city has been reaping the harvest of her own sowing. The city officials, it is reported, were helpless in their efforts to quell the mob and retreated under a shower of bullets. The pathetic tragedy of it! They assumed the responsibility of the exhibition of indecent pictures and of the open violation of our Sunday laws! The harvest followed.

SUNDAY LAW BREAKING

Our ministerial association has for months made repeated appeals to our officials to discontinue the violations of our most sacred laws on the part of the motion picture shows on Sundays. Hundreds of other citizens have joined the appeal, but the officials have ignored all of our petitions and all of our appeals for the enforcement of this law. Disrespect for this sacred law leads to the disrespect for other laws. We must place the responsibility somewhere.

The fiendish crime and the awful mob emphasize the call to duty to the pulpit and to the press, to the teacher and to the parent, to every man and woman, to engage in a campaign for the application of the principles of righteousness to civic life.

It is also our patriotic and civic duty to elect men of Christlike character to office. The citizens lack confidence and respect for officials whose character is not above reproach. Profane, indecent officials, bad courts, bad juries, bad witnesses, bad politics, create conditions which foster and provoke the mob spirit.

EVANGELIZATION ONLY REMEDY

Our supreme duty is to evangelize our people in the name of Jesus Christ. Multitudes of our boys and girls are growing up in godless homes without any personal knowledge of Jesus Christ or of the Holy Scriptures. They witness evil pictures and hear oaths at home and on the street. They become lawless citizens in a short time. The Bible is the supreme text book which teaches good citizenship and safeguards us against frequent mob violence. If it were not for our churches and the Bible we should be living over the volcano of mobs all the time. We need a campaign in our city for Bible reading and respect for the Lord's Day and for Christ's Church.

Life Work Conferences in Women's Colleges

REV. CHARLES W. GILKEY of Chicago had an interesting experience recently with students in two of the most noted eastern colleges for women. In the month of October he spent three days in meetings at Vassar, running over a Sunday, and in March he held similar meetings extending through three week-days at Mt. Holyoke. A representative of THE BAPTIST requested for its readers brief information on certain matters, which Dr. Gilkey courteously granted, in reply to the following questions:

"What kind of meetings did you hold, Dr. Gilkey?"

"In each case I gave a series of addresses on Christian fundamentals, and spent practically all the rest of my time in meeting groups and individuals who wanted to confer about personal questions of faith and conduct."

"What were the principal questions that came up?"

"I was very much impressed by the fact that the great majority of these conferences turned on such vital questions of personal religion as 'the reality of prayer' and 'faith in a living, personal God.'"

"Do you mean that you found the chief emphasis in personal religion?"

"I found the interest in the social applications of Christianity marked at both colleges, but not so conspicuous as the interest in personal religion. My own impression on this point is borne out by many of the faculty with whom I discussed it."

"Did you discover any significant currents of religious belief?"

"I found many whose ideas about the Bible and Christian truth had broadened and deepened during their college course until they no longer found the phraseology of their earlier training adequate; but they seemed none the less eager to prove the reality and power of their Christianity in the devotion of their lives to the spread of the kingdom of Christ throughout the world."

"Did you find any of them turning towards definitely Christian forms of life work?"

"I was struck to find how many girls there are at both these well known colleges who were definitely looking forward to Christian service as a life work, particularly on the foreign field."

"From your experience in these two colleges, considering them as fairly representative of college life, what would you conclude concerning the religious status in the colleges generally?"

"Such first-hand experience with scores and hundreds of college students convinces me that there is not less religion in our colleges at the present time, but more."

Coming fresh from his contact with the students and faculty at Mt. Holyoke, thus reenforcing his earlier impressions received at Vassar, Dr. Gilkey seemed enthusiastically hopeful about the religious outlook in the higher institutions of learning.

Light Shines From Warren to Bucharest

WHEN Rev. A. A. Nellis came to the First Church at Warren, Ohio, he found nine Roumanian men and two women, members of the church, a Roumanian men's class in the Bible school, a few Roumanian children in the American classes, and several men, women and children, attending the public worship regularly. A Hungarian missionary who could speak Roumanian, came from Youngstown and held preaching services in the Church Sunday afternoons. But the Roumanian settlement was about a mile from the church, and it was difficult to get uninterested persons to attend.

Three months later the Roumanians rented a store room in their section of the city, and from that time the work met with most gratifying success. Soon they asked for a building of their own. They bought a lot with the approval of the home church, paying $450 for it, and asked the American brethren to erect a building, with their help. They did the excavating and contributed over $600. Such a call could not be refused. An attractive building was erected, seating 100, complete in every respect, with furnace heat, electric light, gas for emergencies, a baptistery with gas heating appliance, a basement cemented throughout and with toilet accommodations. This was dedicated Feb.

Perhaps no group of foreigners in the United States is giving a more encouraging result from home mission work than the Roumanians in American cities. From Indianapolis and other places where colonies of these fine people are settled comes the same story of fruitful work done in the homeland by Baptists returning to Roumania.

11, 1917, and is valued at $7000.

At the time of their entrance into the store room, one of their number was selected to preach—John Farkas, who was a Christian and a licensed Baptist preacher before he left Roumania. At this time also a children's class was established and has been maintained since. This class has always been taught by Mrs. H. C. Whitnum, who has been the "point of contact" between the home church and the Roumanian mission at all times. Recently Mrs. Nellis, the pastor's wife, has opened a women's class in the Bible school, teaching through an interpreter. And more recently Mrs. Nellis has started a class in the English language for the women. Since Sept. 1, 1915, fifty-seven Roumanians have been received into the Warren church. Forty of these were received by baptism.

Two Roumanian young men, members of the Warren church, are in Dennison University preparing for the ministry.

During the last year letters have been granted to thirty-six to return to their home land; and here enters the most interesting feature. Like the Christians who "were scattered abroad" after the stoning of Stephen, these Roumanians who returned to their home land, "Went everywhere preaching the word," and reports come of experiences exceedingly similar to those recorded in The Acts. At first the priests of the Greek Catholic church opposed them, stirring up persecution, even enlisting the civil authorities. But before long the opposition ceased, and now the Baptist church has "The right of way" in Roumania. John Farkas, the Warren "preacher," was one of those who returned, and he is now pastor of fourteen churches there. One man who was not a Christian when he returned, after comparing conditions there with conditions here decided that the difference was due to the Christian religion, and accepted Christ. He built a home for himself including a large room specially for the Baptist church of that town. When the last small group left Warren for Roumania, as the train pulled out from the station a young man took his cornet from its case and played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The Japanese Woman's Home in Seattle

A Christian home is made an agency for evangelism. Japanese converted in Seattle may win a whole community in Japan

BY JESSIE DODGE WHITE

WHEN I was in Seattle, Miss Rumsey and the other missionaries invited me to a luncheon served by the Japanese cooking class. The little children, as well as the mothers and fathers, were there. On another evening I was at dinner with the missionaries. —Miss Herd, Miss McCullough, the English teacher, Miss Newbury, the night school teacher, and Miss Rumsey, in their cozy family group. After dinner the boys came in for the glee club rehearsal and Miss Newbury had her class in public speaking, composed of young Japanese men. This class was visited and on leaving I was able to use the three Japanese words which I had at my command. To Miss Newbury I said: "Aregato-gesamus" (Thank you); to the young men I said: "Medito-gesamus" (I congratulate you); and then to the class: "Syamara" (good-bye).

Miss Newbury has entry to the Imperial Japanese Consulate, and has the opportunity to go into the homes of the officials to teach them English. She has been teaching Dr. and Mrs. Murakami, a physician, and also the vice-consul and his family. Miss McCullough helped the consul's wife serve an up-to-date American dinner the other day. She also is invited to go into the homes of the well-to-do Japanese in order to teach them American ways. These means of entry into the homes give the missionaries an opportunity to bring to the people a knowledge of Jesus Christ.

There are four play kindergartens scattered around in the Japanese neighborhood. Miss Herd is in charge of these as well as in charge of the clubs for girls and the glee club work for the boys.

Several times a week Miss Rumsey goes out into the country and holds meetings. The Japanese for ten miles around come in to have Bible lessons in these rural communities. They love Miss Rumsey because she speaks the Japanese language. When I reached Seattle for the first time, I heard someone talking over the telephone fluently in Japanese, and to my surprise I found that it was Miss Rumsey.

In the Japanese home there are a number of apartments in the second story where Japanese families live.

The evening I was there they gathered as usual for their evening prayers. The Japanese are passing in and out of the home every day. There is now an office secretary who welcomes all guests and keeps track of the number. Some forty-five Japanese come to the home every day for one reason or other. One family ican but you are leaving out the heart of America, which is the Christian religion." And then he urged his friends to accept Jesus Christ.

The Japanese in Seattle are coming and going all the time. If we allow them to go home without Christ, then we have lost a great opportunity to bring a whole com-

AN ENGLISH CLASS TEA PARTY; MRS. McCULLOUGH, TEACHER who had caught the vision in Seattle of what a Christian home can be, went back to Japan. The man owns a factory. He and his wife allow the workers in the factory—about fifty of them—to live in their home. The wife is the matron of the home. They have family prayers and are doing this in order to bring these Japanese to Jesus Christ. Another Japanese student at Corvallis was first introduced to Jesus at the Japanese home. Although he had promised his mother faithfully when he came to America that he would not embrace the Christian religion, he later, under the further influence of his Sunday-school teacher, became a Christian and joined the church. When he went back to Japan, a few months later, his whole town turned out to meet him. The people gave a ball in his honor, and when he was asked to speak, this is what he said: "You have copied everything Amermunity in Japan to a knowledge of Christ. Someone has said that converting one Japanese in this country is the same as converting twenty over there.

The Rev. Okisaki is doing a faithful work with the Japanese in Seattle and he has a help-meet in his wife. One afternoon a number of Japanese women were at the sewing meeting. Some of them could not speak English. In the sign language I explained to them how the Indians say, "The Lord is my shepherd." Later I found Mrs. Okisaki interpreting to them what I had said and repeating the signs to them. They were very much interested in the pictures of the Crow Indians.

Every year 18,000 Orientals go back home, either with Christ or without him. We as Baptists are making a tremendous effort to rise to our opportunities here on the Coast.

Suicide or Prayer

"We had thought of committing suicide by throwing ourselves in the canal, and then we remembered what you told us of your God and His love for us, so we decided to try prayer—and things have been easier ever since."

BY MAROLA E. RIVENBURG.

A YOUNG married woman of about twenty who held in her arms one of her lovely two-year old twin girls spoke the words given above. Near her stood her quiet, plain-looking sister-in-law holding the other twin, which she kissed at frequent intervals. A younger girl of fourteen, with a long thick plait of black hair hanging down her back, stood beside her. She is what is called a ian-si-fu, and being betrothed to the youngest son is now being trained in the home by the mother-in-law.

LOOK AT THESE GIRLS

These three bright attractive girls were standing outside their pretty country home which is shaded by a large tree. Just beyond is the canal bordered by willow trees. This home is not far from our Ginling College. One Sunday morning a few months ago, Miss Vautrin, our acting president, and some of the college girls were taking a walk in order to visit some of our neighbors, with a view to telling the gospel story if they should be invited to enter and bide a wee. As they passed this particular home, their greeting was returned so cordially that they went in to chat about the babies and other household interests, and during the conversation, asked if they might return the next Sunday and teach the girls of the home to read. So for the past weeks it has been my privilege to go with Mary Chen and Josephine Tang, two of our students, who have had a little class of women learning to read in that home.

One day as we entered the home, we saw that some thing was very wrong for the three girls were weeping bitterly. Little by little we drew from them their sad story. In that comfortable, cheery Chinese home, the real despot is the mother-in-law whom we had previously met, a keen, handsome woman in middle life. However, she is an opium fiend and will turn heaven and earth to procure the vile poison. She had pawned all her own valuables and all the things of value which her three daughters-in-law had brought with them to the home. Her husband is a dear, kindly old gentleman, who, like many other men of our own land, seems perfectly helpless before the tragedy in his own house, although outside of that house he holds a responsible position as adviser with important business firms in the city. I understand that he earns a good salary, but that most of it goes for opium.

OPIUM DOES THE MISCHIEF

The oldest son, father of the twins, is working in another city, and when he sends money to the home it disappears for opium. The other two sons are wild and often are very cruel to their young wives.

Between their sobs, we learned from the young women that the mother-in-law had "been on a tear" the night before, and had kept them up most of the night waiting on her and her cronies as they smoked and gambled. She had also beaten them in her senseless rage. The girls had to work hard all day to make clothes and shoes for themselves and the rest of the family, and had but one meal a day to nourish them. They had thought of leaving, but did not know where to go, for there is no honorable way for them to earn their living, and they well knew that the Chinese law would be on the side of the mother-in-law. There seemed to be but one way out—suicide. With tears of sympathy in her eyes, our Miss Chen, a member of this year's senior class, told the girls the story of our God who loved women so much that he sent his son to save them, and she begged them to pray to him for help in their trouble.

WHY IS A COLLEGE WOMAN?

As we traveled home that day, we wondered why we were college women with lives so full of richness and joy, when so near to us were these girls, just as bright and capable as any of us, who were suffering so cruelly and whose lives were so barren of things worth while, and I was struck once more with the contrast between the lot of women in any land where the civilization is influenced by Christian ideals and the fate of women in lands where other religions hold sway.

That evening our girls told the college Y. W. C. A. the story of the three daughters-in-law, and some time was spent in prayer for them. The next Sunday, when we returned to that home, we were met with sad smiles, and the sentence with which I commenced this story.

Christmas Sunday dawned bright and joyous for the Christians of Nanking. Our college chapel was decorated for the occasion and a goodly crowd of women met for the usual Sunday Bible class held for the neighborhood. Miss Chen was telling about the joy and power of prayer, and suddenly our little oldest daughter-in-law jumped up, her face radiant, and said that she knew that prayer worked, that she had tried it and that peace had been in her heart ever since.

Jesus said "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

NEW SERVICE BUILDING, NOW IN PROCESS OF COMPLETION AT SHANGHAI COLLEGE. ARTICLE ON PAGE 264

Preachers Who Sing in Harmony

BY C. C. OVEREEM

PICTURED here is a male quartet composed of preachers, who are the four pastors in the town of Morrill, Kansas. It is doubtful if another town in the whole country with only four pastors can boast of such a quartet. The preachers sang at the various revival meetings held in the different churches during the winter. They also rendered several numbers at some of the social functions and filled an engagement in Nebraska.

This is just one of the many illustrations of the spirit of unity and harmony that exists between the pastors and the churches in Morrill. The churches had individual revival meetings during the winter and the choirs were composed of members of all the churches. Each of the meetings could easily have been mistaken for a union meeting. One of the evangelists remarked that his meeting was more nearly union in spirit than most of his so-called union meetings had been. Each of the evangelists expressed himself as being doubtful if the spirit of unity, harmony and co-operation, which so beautifully pervades the religious life of the community, could be duplicated anywhere in the country.

The town has a population of 600, and fully 90 per cent of the people of the town and surrounding country are nominal Christians and members of some one of the churches. A noticeable feature of the revival meetings and one that puzzled the evangelists was the fact that even with a packed house there would often be less than a half dozen non-Christians present. The pastors say that these unusual conditions eliminate many of the difficult problems found elsewhere and present an entirely different set of problems. It will be remembered that this town received a prize of $1000 under the administration of Governor Stubbs as being the best third-class town in the state, religiously, morally and socially. The pastors find that the spirit of unity existing among churches and preachers is helpful in the religious impact made on all the varied interests of the town.

From left to right: Rev. C. C. Overeem (Baptist), first tenor; Rev. A. C. Stewart (Methodist), second tenor; Rev. A. E. Whitted (Brethren Church), baritone; Rev. W. H. Yoder (Church of the Brethren), bass.

When Alabaster Boxes Are Broken

BY CHARLES L. WHITE

WHEN a Christian, whose life travels out widely into the lives of others, has a noble plan to spiritualize any human activity, he should propose it even though men think him a dreamer. To him it may never be more than a dream, but to another it may become a vision, to another a solvent of his perplexity, and to another a path to his victory. Perhaps he can only announce the discovery of his new idea, but men who are strangers to him may explore its mysteries, discover its wealth, and develop its resources. A man should not stop to get every happy thought copyrighted before he lets the world have it. He should publish it in his next conversation with any man who seems to need its stimulus. He should let the fragrance out of the bottle and spray the world with sweetness.

Christianity develops a happy heart and smiles. The cheerful laugh of an optimist in the face of difficulty may save a church from disbanding, a minister from resigning his pastorate, a business man from giving up the fight to be honest, a youth from abandoning the education that will fit him to save the nation. A man should take off his gloves and lend a hand, yes, two hands, and lift with all his might the burden from his neighbor's shoulders. He should remember that the grime of honest toil is one of the cleanest things in the world, and that the water of life always runs down hill and seeks its level in the lowest social levels.

The Christian should not fear to help the down-trodden. The red man has still a burden and should be helped to lift it. The black man's heart may become as white as snow under the treatment of the Savior to whom he introduces him. The yellow face will for him contain no peril if a Christian has the spirit of the Master, the wisdom of the serpent, and the harmlessness of the dove.

God Bless the Home

By C. A. HOBBS

GOD bless the home, the centre fair
Of all the future rich and rare
If we but train our growing youth
In loyalty and love and truth.

God bless the home! O fathers heed!
'Tis yours in life's high path to lead.
O mothers, consecrated be!
Here you will mould eternity.

In yonder home in Galilee
The Lord, a son came down to be.
And God doth claim this centre still
The chosen place to learn his will.

The Devotional Life

Bound By Gold Chains About the Feet of God

MRS. CHARLES CUFF

PRAYER is the communion of the human soul with God. It is not mere petition any more than the conversation of two friends is. At its highest it is not petition at all but adoration, thanksgiving and quiet listening for what our Father has to say. Some one has said, "Prayer is not the overcoming of God's reluctance; it is the taking hold of God's willingness." It is the opening of the heart to God as to a friend. It does not change God, but it does change us and our relation to God.

How shall we pray so as to be heard and to receive help? For one thing there must be a real desire in our hearts for help either for ourselves or for others. Forms of words do not make prayers; we must want something and must realize our dependence upon God for it. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," says James, but the same Jesus says we must ask in faith nothing wavering if we would receive what we ask for.

Savages Grope for God

Prayer is the noblest and most blessed activity of men; it is one of the most natural and universal activities. From the most savage peoples to the most highly cultured we find the desire and need to pray.

"In even savage bosoms There are longings, strivings, yearnings. For the good they comprehend not; And their feeble hands and helpless, Groping blindly in the darkness, Touch God's right hand in that darkness And are lifted up and strengthened."

At their lowest men pray crudely, bitterly; at their best they pray intelligently and spiritually. Low in the scale is the prayer of Sampson, as he wound his arms about the pillars of the Philistine dining hall and cried, "Oh Lord Jehovah, remember me I pray thee, and strengthen me I pray thee, only this once, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes." Compare with this the dying prayer of Stephen as he was being stoned, "Lord lay not this sin to their charge." Both are prayers but they come from two ages which the revelation of God, and the meaning of prayer had both greatly widened.

The Sinless One at Prayer

If we need any argument as to the necessity of prayer, the fact of our Saviour's habit of prayer ought to convince us that if he, without sin, needed to pray, surely we need it the more. We read, "And when he had sent the multitudes away, He went up into a mountain apart to pray." Another time, "In the morning rising up a great while before day, He went out and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed." On another occasion, "It came to pass in those days that He went out into a mountain to pray and continued all night in prayer to God," and at the transfiguration it is said "He took Peter and James and John and went up into a mountain to pray."

Harry Emerson Fosdick says, "Deep in every one of us lies the tendency to pray. If we allow it to remain merely a tendency, it becomes nothing but a selfish, unintelligent, occasional cry of need," such is our prayer for loved ones in time of illness, but he continues, "understood and disciplined it reveals possibilities whose limits never have been found."

Does God Answer a Din?

The heathen of today, as in Christ's day, think that their gods can be wearied into compliance by the persistent dinning of petitions. This is shown most strikingly in the Buddhist prayer wheel, in which written prayers are placed and every rotation of the swiftly revolving wheel is supposed to have the efficacy of a prayer. Thus with the endless pater noster and other prayers of the Roman Catholic church. Indeed there are few Christians who do not find themselves occasionally "saying their prayers," relying rather on the form than on the spirit of prayer.

Simple, direct, brief, the so-called Lord's Prayer remains today as it was given to the apostles at their request as their model. There have been many analyses of this prayer, pointing out the characteristics that are thought to be taught by Jesus. A simple one is this: (1) Reverence—"Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name"; (2) Expectation—"Thy kingdom come"; (3) Submission—"Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven"; (4) Trust—"Give us this day our daily bread"; (5) Love—"Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors" (We ask God to love us enough to forgive our great debt toward Him. God can only do this if we also have the spirit of love and show it by forgiving those who trespass against us); (6) Purity—"Lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil, for thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory. Amen."

God is Never too Busy

Not every true prayer contains all these characteristics but Jesus taught by several pointed parables at least two characteristics he considered essential in prayer. They are earnestness, taught in the parables of the unjust judge, and the importunate friend, and humility, taught in the parable of the Pharisee and the Publican. The lesson of the unjust judge is that "men ought always to pray and not to faint." If the woman by going again and again to the unjust judge gained her request from such a man, surely God who is just will answer the earnest persistent prayer of His people though the answer may be long delayed. Speaking of delay in the answer to prayer, Rev. G. H. Morrison says: "Divine delay does not mean inactivity. God is not idle when He does not answer us; He is busier preparing the answer than we think. The sunshine of May comes and all the world is green, yet in God's loom of January that robe was being spun, and the morning breaks when at last some prayer is answered, and the desert rejoices and blossoms as the rose, yet the answer was being fashioned in those very years when we said there was no eye to pity and no arm to save."

Return to the two characteristics of earnestness and humility taught by Jesus. In the parable of the Pharisee and the Publican (Luke 18:9-14), the Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, trusting rather in his own prominence and virtue, rather than in God. His so called prayer was only self congratulation: "I thank thee that I am not as other men." The Publican on the other hand, standing afar off would not so much as lift up his eyes unto heaven but smote upon his breast and cried, "God be merciful to me a sinner."

Not as I Will

Christ's prayer in Gethsemane combines earnestness and humility more beautifully than any recorded prayer. His earnestness is abundantly shown. He fell on His face, He repeated His prayer over and over. In agony He sweat great drops of blood, but with all the intensity of His desire to escape the horrors of the cross He surrendered himself completely into God's hands. "Not as I will but as Thou wilt."

In closing I want to speak a moment of intercessory prayer. The most notable example of this noblest form of prayer

(Continued on page 287)

After the Darkness, Light

BETTER to hope, tho' the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted,
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through
When the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day
Nor an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning."

The Bulletin Board

If They Had Only Been Baptists

President E. Y. Mullins finds the cause of the materialism and worldliness in Europe to be "the loss or emphasis upon the necessity of the new birth and the substitution of infant baptism for believers baptism. Most European state churches teach baptismal regeneration. Infants, therefore, who are incapable of exercising personal faith are baptized, or rather sprinkled, and henceforth there is no sense of need for the new birth, for personal faith and obedience. Logically the result is inevitable. All are made up of the unregenerate." Observe how the teaching of believers' baptism renders America immune to mobs and other unseemly developments, and how bold Baptist churches are in confronting the great wrongs of the times!

Then Why Tinker With It?

Dr. Mark Matthews offers seven reasons why the Presbyterian Church cannot afford to go into the proposed organic union of churches. He points out that under it the Presbyterians must give up their church government, must swallow the conglomerate creeds of the past, would seriously endanger property rights, would split the denomination, and so on. The conclusions are so obvious that Baptists have refused even to consider the subject of organic union.

You Cried Loudly for Help, Gentlemen

In reply to the criticism that the churches are thrusting themselves into industrial problems where they are not wanted, the Congregationalist presents this timely and true reminder: "But this invasion of industry by the Church is not a self-appointed intrusion. Business firms invited the help of religion to build the morale of the workers. Men will not work well without a religious motive. Leaders in industry saw this and the Young Women's Christian Association along with other religious forces was welcomed in industry by business men to help build the morale of the workers. With a logic which is to their credit and to the credit of the Church. Religious workers have said that the morale of the workers is also dependent on the organization of industry. Men will not work well if they have lost faith in the fairness of the organization through which they are asked to work. If we are to teach men and women that they have a religious obligation to work, we must also build an order of industry in which it really pays to work. Business men should see this and take a different attitude toward the religious organizations which proclaim it."

Which End Are You Arguing?

The Western Recorder reminds us that "we need some real character and stability in individual Americans, some new fear of God in their hearts, a thousand times more than new and strange governmental medicaments, by which the "have-nots" would despoil the "haves." The profiteers and plutocrats need firm controlling, and American government must do it or confess the failure of democratic institutions." It would require a genius in logic to make both ends of that paragraph meet.

What? the Constitution, Say You?

The supreme court in declaring unconstitutional those sections of the Lever law under which coal companies and meat packers were indicted for profiteering, said through Chief Justice White, "The mere existence of a state of war could not suspend or change the operation of the guarantees and limitations of the fifth and sixth amendments." But what of the other amendments protecting free speech, assemblage and domicile? Could a state of war suspend them? They were suspended: by what right? Will the court please to dig up the constitution and take another look at it.

Nearly 9,000,000 of Us Now

The total number of Baptists in the United States is 7,504,447, according to the Baptist Year Book, while Canada has 142,299, Central America 1,476, Mexico 3,626, Cuba 4,111, and the West Indies 46,237, bringing the total for North America to 7,702,196. The Baptist population of the other continents shows South America as having 22,676, Europe 618,538, Asia 244,731, Africa 24,535 and Australasia 31,138.—Religious Herald.

It Is a Small Matter—They are Dead

A few months ago, the papers carried alarming stories of pogroms against the Jews in the Ukraine fomented by the Bolsheviks. Here, on the heels of that report, comes another to the effect that in those pogroms 120,000 Jews were slain, that Denikin and Petlura, anti-bolshevist leaders, were in control at the time and encouraged the pogroms, and that since the soviet forces gained control they stopped the pogroms. The visitors do not express much concern about who was guilty. They are dead. But in the name of Beelzebub, were there any pogroms at all?

Steel Strike Report Sold Out

Those who pronounced the Interchurch World Movement a failure will have some difficulty in explaining the enormous stir created by the Interchurch report on the Steel Strike. The completed report has been sold in such quantities that the publishers have been able to arrange for the publication of a supplemental report from the profits of the book sales which have run well up into the thousands.

Senator Walsh of Montana has introduced a resolution in Congress asking that the report be made a public document. The Methodist Council of Cities, meeting in Buffalo last week, adopted resolutions expressing appreciation of the work done by the commission and asserting that absolute right of the church to enter into such an investigation when the case involved a moral issue. The report is commended to the "conscientious reading of the ministers and laymen." It would seem that the Interchurch had done a more permanent thing in this report than was at first realized.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"Why, Look You, How You Rave!"

When Henry Ford started his crusade against the Jews, public opinion reacted instantly and strongly in their favor. But now they have begun to strike back in a way to estrange their sympathizers. For example, one of their circulars cries out at him: "For the cruel wrongs you have done the Jews, you should pray God to penalize you by converting you into a snake, that the remainder of your days may be spent wiggling your way on your belly across the burning sands of the desert, your hissing tongue striking blindly at everything crossing your path." How convincing and persuasive!

A Bas the Doolittles!

Some church folks are wondering whether this time of stress isn't about over and whether we can't get quieted down pretty soon into the old composure and old habits of indifference and selfish ease. Oh, there will be temporary oscillations of reaction and advance as there have been in the past, but it can never be again like it used to be. We cannot long still our consciences against the world cry we have heard. We cannot be content with doing so little as before. —The Gospel Messenger.

They Will Soon Stop This

A news item relates that "Gov. Small proposes to put the state of Illinois immediately into the road construction business. That is his ultimatum to contractors who have been presenting bids that were thrown out as too high. The department of public works has purchased two complete sets of road building machinery worth $25,000. Gov. Small said today within two weeks the state's gangs of men will be at work. They will start at Joliet, working on the state system that is included within the $60,000,000 bond issue." But just wait till the "business interests" get after him, and see.

"I Don't Know What This War's About"

Gradually the truth dawned on the world that instead of a war to end war, it had been a war which was the starting point for a score of other wars; fought in the interest of humanity and moral idealism it ended in the exploitation of oil wells and coal and the other resources of belated peoples. Hence the feeling of ghastly disillusionment which has hung over the world for the last two years. Under the circumstances no other conclusion was possible. Perhaps if the President, backed by a united people, had said: "We will starve the world unless you come to our terms, we will advance no more supplies of any kind except on a treaty in harmony with the Fourteen Points," the outcome might have been different. But at that time there was no adequate sentiment in this country for backing such a stand.—Pacific Christian Advocate.

Nothing to Fret Over

A religious exchange learns "from several Ohio papers that the Rev. Joseph Denning, Roman Catholic priest at Marion, Ohio, has received from Mr. Harding the promise of an appointment as United States consul at Rome," and comments: "Altogether apart from the diplomatic blunder of appointing to an Italian consulship a Roman priest who had just returned from an unofficial embassy to the Pope, and apart also from the curiosity of having a priest exercise the purely commercial functions of a consulship, for which he cannot possibly have adequate preparation, this appointment does certainly bear the earmarks of collusion between the administration and the Vatican such as is bound to be most distasteful to the American people and almost an insult to the Italian government."

Well, the Vatican is always seeking collusion and must be watched; but we can hardly deny the rights of Catholics to political appointment. Mr. Denning may not go so far as to overthrow the constitution of the United States while our backs are turned.

More Luxury Than Brains

Mr. P. P. Claxton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, calls attention to the fact that the American people spent as much for luxuries in the year 1920 than for education in the whole history of the country. His table of expenditures for luxuries in 1920 included among other items:

For face powder, cosmetics, perfume, etc. ....	$ 750,000,000
Furs .....	300,000,000
Soft drinks .....	350,000,000
Toilet soaps .....	400,000,000
Cigarettes .....	800,000,000
Cigars .....	510,000,000
Tobacco and snuff .....	800,000,000
Jewelry .....	500,000,000
Luxurious service .....	3,000,000,000
Joy rides, pleasure resorts and races .....	3,000,000,000
Chewing gum .....	50,000,000
Ice cream .....	250,000,000

A Community Service Program for Town and Country Churches

This is a little booklet of thirty-seven pages, written by Olive McGuire and published by the department of social service and rural community work of the Home Mission Society. It does not purport to be a religious program for communities—such a program of evangelism and religious education is provided for in other pamphlets. It is however a suggestive program dealing with social, educational and recreational events suitable to different seasons of the year, and is such a brief manual as any pastor, whether in city or country, will be glad to have at hand. It may be had free upon request to the Home Mission Society.

A Matter of Counting

The Western Recorder notes that if Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians combined should count their population, as the Romanists do, they would number 54,000,000, instead of about 18,000,000. Catholics claim about 16,000,000 members in the United States proper, though they usually swell the figures a million or two by counting in our territorial possessions. If they counted as evangelicals do, they have only about 6,000,000 members in America.

Prayer at Mid-day

The Archbishop of Canterbury, impressed by the grave anxieties of the hour in England, has asked for a revival of the mid-day pause for prayer which was so widely adopted during the war. Leaders of the Free Churches have joined in commending the appeal.

Cleric's Yellow Waistcoat

The following interesting anecdote touching on clerical manners and dress, comes from London: "There was much laughter in the Lower House of Convocation at Westminster when one of the best-known members, Canon Wood, made a novel complaint. The canon, who is always emphatic, brought his fist down on the table with a resounding thump, and exclaimed: 'The other day I saw a young ecclesiastic dressed in a grey coat, and—a flaming yellow waistcoat! You may laugh, but it is an outward and visible sign of failure to recognize that they are men who are set apart from other men, and are not of the world!'"

Strasbourg Welcomes American Students

The Protestant faculty of theology at the University of Strasbourg believes that the presence of students from America or other allied countries may help to develop closer ties of international good will. The dean of the faculty is therefore sending through the Federal council of Churches to all who wish it information concerning the degrees conferred and the conditions attending them. Lectures are naturally given in French although a few are in German. Students who wish to study without intending to take degrees will be welcome.

International Children's Week

The International Sunday School Association is urging the week from April 24 to May 1 as International Children's Week. Referring to the observance the editor of Good Housekeeping remarks: "Society is menaced by such a condition, for the child that has no religious education all too often grows into the man or woman without religion, and the man or woman without religion is usually one who will trample, either thoughtlessly or with cunning, upon the rights of others. And it is that trampling, through a colossal selfishness, that is at the base of the world's troubles today." He points out also that "at least 13,000,000 American children under twelve years of age are receiving no religious education whatever."

Have They Learned to Eat Beans?

There is a colony of some ten thousand Italians in East Boston, and an old abandoned church, the historic Saratoga Street Methodist Church. This has been renovated, renamed St. Paul's, and handed over to a newly started mission among the Italian people. The growth has been phenomenal. Since the fifth of October 1920 one hundred and twenty have become members of the church. The Sunday school has an enrolment of forty.

Coligny, Salute!

General Nivelle, who officially represented the French government at the Mayflower celebrations, is described as a French Huguenot of ancient lineage and of eminent devotion to the Protestant faith. He will be recalled as the general who conducted the immortal defence of Verdun. An equally famous Frenchman, Denfert-Rochereau, who defended the pass of Belfort in 1870, was also a Protestant of Huguenot stock.

"Who Healeth All Thy Diseases"

The revival which is breaking out at many points in the world is accompanied with miracles of healing. We make mention elsewhere of well-authenticated cases in Korea. Similar healings are reported from the meetings of Mr. Bosworth of the Christian and Missionary Alliance which are being held in Pittsburgh. "They come for the healing of the body, and then seek salvation for the soul."

Crocodiles With Greek Gizzards

Nearly two decades ago Messrs. Grenfell and Hunt, two young archeologists associated with the master of the profession, Prof. Flinders Petrie, were at work on excavations in Oxyrhynchus, a little place in Lower Egypt, when suddenly the spade turned up an embalmed crocodile. This was, it seemed, the last thing the diggers were looking for, and in an access of impatience one of them gave the ancient beast a kick with his boot. Whereat the entrails flew out in the shape of a mass of papyri, the stuffing which had been used by the embalmers to preserve the creature's shape. These proved to be documents of the first century,—bills, letters, accounts, fragments of authors, diaries, and what not. Further search brought out of the ground more crocodiles, for the archeologists had stumbled on a cemetery of the sacred animals, and from the bowels of each was recovered a mass of similar documents. The whole find filled a great number of packing cases which were promptly shipped to Oxford. There the papyri have been subjected to translation and editing by the finders. Each year for fourteen years a volume of these translations has been published by the university, and the net result of their study has been almost to revolutionize our knowledge of New Testament Greek.

Here Are Books for You

"A People's Life of Christ."

By J. Paterson Smyth. New York City: Fleming H. Revell Company. $3.50.

The publishers declare that there is great need of a life of the Master "which the ordinary man may read with pleasure," so this one is offered to supply that need. New "lives" are constantly being issued, and continually there arises some new admirer who has discovered some other overlooked resplendent graces in Christ's character and activities. The style of this book is rhetorical, ornate, and of a popular type. The author seldom quotes verbatim from the inspired records, nor gives Scripture references; nor is he critical in his presentations. He paraphrases original reports of the deeds and words of Jesus, giving them a flavor of modern phraseology. He presents scenes such as the crucifixion in a dramatic style, and refers more to the deeds and events in the life of Jesus than to his words, as does Geike. The various and many "lives" of the Master affect different classes of people according to their mental bias. This "life" is what it professes to be—"for the average man." It richly deserves a large sale.

"A History of the Japanese People."

By F. Brinkley, with the collaboration of Baron Kikuchi. New York: George H. Doran Company.

No American can afford to be ignorant of the Japanese people and their history. Japan and the United States are the two great powers on the Pacific Ocean, and points of contact are so many that it is almost impossible to escape misunderstandings and irritations. It is therefore extremely important that Americans should know the racial peculiarities and aspirations of the people with whom they must have to do. The present volume is the work of Capt. F. Brinkley, who went to Japan in 1867 as a professor in the Imperial College. Later he was made foreign adviser to the Japanese government, married a Japanese wife and became an integral part of Japanese life. Baron Kikuchi, who collaborated with Capt. Brinkley in the preparation of this work, is a leader in the intellectual and educational life of Japan. This work is far and away the most comprehensive and satisfactory history of the Japanese people that has been written. Beginning with Japanese mythology, the author discusses the origin of the nation, its customs, language, dynasties and wars with a most satisfactory fulness and intelligence. Numerous illustrations add to the reader's enjoyment of the work.

"Personal Recollections of Andrew Carnegie."

By Frederick Lynch. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company.

Not only is this a most readable volume but it should serve to correct some erroneous ideas as to Mr. Carnegie's attitude toward religion. Not a few people believe that he was an agnostic if not an atheist. Dr. Lynch had an opportunity to know Mr. Carnegie through personal contact extending over a period of years, and his testi- money makes it certain that Mr. Carnegie was genuinely devout. It is not claimed that he was "orthodox" at all points, but he believed in God, exalted Jesus Christ and cherished the great hope of a life beyond death. The attractive style in which the book is written adds to the interest which the remarkable personality of Mr. Carnegie must have for all thoughtful men and women.

The spiritual nature needs nourishment no less than the body, and religious books supplement the Bible, the church and the Sunday school.—W. J. Bryan.

"How to Pray."

By Charles Lewis Statterly, Rector of Grace Church. New York: MacMillan Company. $1.50.

A volume of short homilies on the Lord's Prayer—a homily given to each petition. It requires courage on the part of an author to offer such a contribution to the reading public, for the books on this subject are unending. However, the author has a gift to clothe old thoughts in fresh expressions and so manifest the perennial flow of fresh inspiration and help to devotion in this wonderful Prayer.

"The New Light on Immortality" or "The Significance of Psychic Research."

By John Henry Randall. The MacMillan Company.

The author leaves aside the familiar arguments for the great desire—immortality, and considers the "new light" on the subject as thrown by the "poet," Maeterlinck; the "philosopher," James; the "scientist," Lodge and the "psychologist," Hyslop. The several chapters of the book give an excellent condensed statement of the views of each of those eminent writers and thinkers.

The author, while not discrediting the arguments and evidences science and philosophy bring to support the great hope—indeed he looks with favor on some of them—still considers the fact "not proven." The last half of the volume is given to the author's personal views of the subject which we consider quite as rational, sane and satisfactory as are those of the authors he discusses, and outside of the New Testament viewpoint, and Plato's "Phaedo," the most helpful discussion of the great problem we have read in many

"An Open Vision: A Study of Psychic Phenomena."

By Horatio W. Dresser. Thomas Y. Crowell. 350 pp.

The author takes occasion from the war experiences and the illusions, fancies and sentiments inspired by the events to claim that new discernments of the human spirit, and revelations of psychical life and conditions have appeared which make the unseen world more realistic than ever. He does not advertise the cult of modern spiritism, and is indifferent to conservative religious teachings, but discusses the phenomena of occultism from inductions gathered from experience of investigators and from his own experiences. These seem to him to confirm clairvoyance, telepathy and other occult appearances. The author is foraging for materials in the twilight zone between the material and psychic world and there is the nebulousness of the gloaming about it. His "experience" and evidences will be considered by some as possibilities, by others as coincidences and by many as entertaining, not to say amusing mysteries.

"The Song of the Vineyard."

A study in Isaiah's Book, Chapter 5:1-7. By Professor Riggan. Kansas City Theological Seminary: The Gorham Press. Boston.

This attractive "study" is patterned after an expository sermon in this exquisite parable. The "introduction" is a historical setting and an exegetical and literary analysis. The body of the sermon or "study" presents God's past benefits to Israel (v. 2); the responsive attitude of the nation (v. 2); the resulting penalties. The sermon is then applied to God's dealing with man and man's response to God with the consequences. The literary finish of the "study" is what we might expect of a professor.

"Evangelistic Preaching, with Sermon Outlines."

By Ozora S. Davis, Pres. Chicago Theol. Sem. Fleming H. Revell Company. 240 pp. $1.50.

It is certainly refreshing to have such a volume emanate from a theological seminary which is supposed by many to confine itself to instruction in and discussions of apologetics, church history and studies of the curiosities of homiletical fossils. Prof. Davis devotes about a third of the volume to the nature, need and methods of evangelistic preaching and gives an excellent program for the guidance of a pastor and church in evangelistic work. This portion of the book we consider the best. The sermon outlines are sane and suggestive, and will no doubt help the busy preacher; but so many factors enter the composition of a good sermon which no "outlines" can give: its adaption to place, people, and time and the manner and methods of the preacher. Students and experienced pastors will find this volume a present help in time of need. It is inspirational as well as educational and novel from a theological seminary.

"The Problem of Christian Unity."

By Eminent Church Leaders. The MacMillan Company.

The leaders who have contributed seven chapters or essays to this volume are S. P. Cadman, Bishops Garland and McDowell, Robert E. Speer, Henry Sloane Coffin, and Bishop Talbot. In these bright papers we see "old forms with new faces." They all bewail "divisions" into sects among evangelical Christians and elaborate on the inevitable misfortune of the fact; they all assume that the spirit of unity and co-operation prevails as never before, what is needed is the organization of the divisions into a union, so that their energies and powers can be coordinated into one entity. Even these papers do not show the path to that objective. Possibly the best way after all is to act on the basis of spiritual unity as a sure preparation for the desired and possible union.

The Chimney Corner

Discovering America

A well-known librarian assures us this was written in a New York school by a small Polish-Jew boy.

NOW you must know that the world was once divided into little chunks, and on one of these little chunks lived the Spinach. And of the Spinach there was a konig, and his name was Ferdinand, and for short they call him Ferdy. And there was a queenig, and her name was Isabella, and for short they called her Issy. And there was a subject, and his name was Christopher, and for short they called him Chris.

One day Chris went down by the palace, and he said to the guarg what stands by the door, "I would have a speech mit the konig." The guarg he say, "Well you can't have speech mit the konig, cause why he's gone walking with Issy." "Den I go find him," says Chris.

So he went down by the city, and on the odder side of the road he saw Ferdy and Issy, and he began making wavings mit his hands. And Issy she poke Ferdy in the ribs and she say, "What for that man make wavings mit the hands?" And Ferdy he say, "I dunno, but I go see." So he went on the odder side of the road and he say, "What for you make wavings mit the hands?" And Chris he say, "Because I should have discovered America and I ain't did it."

So Ferdy he say, "Issy you go back by the palace, and Chris, we go down by the wharf and any boat what ain't working you dast have." So they went down by the wharf, and Chris he say, "I tink I take the pink one." So they fill the boat mit beer and pretzels and cruise and all those things what you takes when you goes to discover America.

Well, when they was out one, two, three days, the sailors come to Chris and say, "Chris, we would have mutinies." But Chris he say, "We ain't got no mutinies, but they is beer and pretzels." So they goes and gets the beer and pretzels. Then four, five, six days more they comes back to Chris and says, "Chris, we would have mutinies." And Chris he say, "We ain't got no mutinies, but they is more beer and pretzels." Well, seven, eight, nine days pass and they comes to Chris and they say, "Chris, we would have mutinies." And Chris he say, "We ain't got no mutinies, and what's more, we ain't got no more beer and pretzels."

Just then the guy what stands up high—you know that guy? Well, he say, "I spy a speck in the spee-glass." And Chris, he say, "Well, you hang on to it." For you know, when you spy a speck in the spee-glass all you has to do is to hang on to it till you comes up to it.

By and by they comes up to the land—for you know they is two kinds of land.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

they is the kind you comes up to, and the kind you runs around on. And when they comes up to the kind of land you comes up to, they find a lot of little scavages running around on the kind of land you runs around on. And when these little scavages saw Chris, they say, "We knows who you is. Youse Christopher Columbus and we is—discovered!"

An April Fool Menu

Presented by an Elderly and Dyspeptic Bachelor to a Young Lady Keeping House for her Father!

IN THESE days of indigestion

It often is a question

As to what to eat and what to leave alone;
For each microbe and bacillus
Has a different way to kill us,
And in time they always claim us for their own.

There are germs of every kind
In any food that you can find
In the market or upon the bill-of-fare.
Drinking water's just as risky
As the so-called deadly whisky,
And it's often a mistake to breathe the air.

Some little bug is going to find you some day;

Some little bug will creep behind you some day;

Then he'll send for his bug friends,
And all your earthly trouble ends!

Some little bug is going to find you some day.

The inviting green cucumber
Gets most everybody's number,
While the green corn has a system of its own;

Though a radish seems nutritious,
Its behavior is quite vicious,
And a doctor will be coming to your home.
Eating lobster, cooked or plain,
Is only flirting with ptomaine;
While an oyster sometimes has a lot to say!

But the clams we eat in chowder
Make the angels chant the louder,
For they know that we'll be with them right away.

Some little bug is going to find you some day;

Some little bug will creep behind you some day;

With a nervous little quiver,
He'll give cirrhosis of the liver:

Some little bug is going to find you some day.

Take a slice of nice fried onion,
And you're fit for Dr. Runyon;

Apple dumplings kill you quicker than a train.

Chew a cheesy midnight "rabbit,"
And a grave you'll soon inhabit—
Ah, to eat at all is such a foolish game!
Eating huckleberry pie

Is a pleasing way to die,
While sauerkraut brings softening of the brain;

When you eat banana fritters
Every undertaker titters.

And the casket-makers nearly go insane.
Some little bug is going to get you some day;

Some little bug will creep behind you some day;

Then he'll get into your gizzard—
If you lose him you're a wizard!

Some little bug is going to get you some day.

When cold storage vaults I visit

I can only say, What is it

Makes poor mortals fill their systems with such stuff?

Now for breakfast prunes are dandy

If a stomach pump is handy.

And your doctor can be found quite soon enough.

Eat a plate of fine pig's knuckles,

And the head-stone cutter chuckles.

While the grave-digger makes a note upon his cuff.

Eat the lovely red bologna,

And you'll wear a wooden kimono

As your relatives start scrapping 'bout your stuff.

Some little bug is going to find you some day;

Some little bug will creep behind you some day—

Eating juicy sliced pineapple

Makes the sexton dust the chapel—

Some little bug is going to find you some day;

All those crazy foods they mix

Will float us 'cross the river Styx.

Or they'll start us climbing up the milky way;

And the meals we eat in courses

Mean a hearse and two black horses;

So before a meal, some people always pray.

Luscious grapes breed 'pendicitis

And the juice leads to gastritis;

So there's only death to greet us either way;

And fried liver's nice, but mind you,

Friends will soon ride slow behind you.

And the papers then will have nice things to say!

Some little bug is going to find you some day;

Some little bug will creep behind you some day;

Eat some sauce,—they call it chili—

On your breast they'll place a lily:

Some little bug is going to get you some day.

The Young Reserves

A Penny for Your Thoughts

Dear Young Reserves:

THE OTHER day Peggy sat herself down at my desk and said something—I really forget what; anyhow I said something in reply, and she asked: "Honor bright?"

"Honor bright!" I answered positively.

Whereupon Peggy began day-dreaming out of my window, apparently seeing only the little yard next door where the bull dog is forever frisking with an old tennis ball; but I knew she was really miles and miles away, so finally I broke in: "A penny for your thoughts!"

And this is what Peggy said: "Wouldn't it be simply awful, M. T. A., if when people said 'Honor bright' you couldn't believe them?"

"It would!" I agreed, "and is that the thought I'm to pay you a penny for?"

"Yes," she nodded, adding anxiously: "but do you think it's worth a penny?"

"What?" I cried, "isn't truth worth a cent? But if you feel you haven't actually earned anything yet, suppose you write your thoughts about it on this piece of paper."

Peggy did. And when I read it I was so delighted with what she had said about truth that I gave her a shining complement in addition to her well-earned penny. But Peggy modestly said: "Oh, I guess everybody would say just about the same thing, only in different words, you know. Probably your Young Reserves would say it loads better than I have. * * *

And with that, I began day-dreaming myself: wondering what you would say! For Truth is such a nice, straight little thing, yet we do twist it up into such queer uncomfortable shapes, don't we? And supposing nobody told the truth, or supposing they told it on Wednesdays only, whatever would the other six days be like? Or supposing they waited until they were twenty-one years old and told it only when of an age to vote; oh, supposing lots and lots of things—wouldn't the world be an upside-down place, my dears?

So this is what Peggy and I have planned: we're going to have a Young Reserves' truth contest during the month of April. And we want every single one of you before May 1 to write us your own thoughts about truth: why it matters whether people tell it or not, what makes a lie so unpleasantly easy to tell; indeed any of the "ins and outs" of this subject that seem important in your eyes—that is what we want you to send us. It can be just as long or as short as you wish; and Peggy suggests my printing special little stories about truth each week before the contest closes so that we can all have little stepping-stones to truthfulness for our thoughts to skip along! Five brand new little stories are waiting in a pigeon-hole of my desk this very minute, so look for them every week—and begin collecting your thoughts.

Now of course you will be the ones to pay the penny for your thoughts, in fact two pennies (to buy your postage stamp, of course). But a good many other pennies at this end of the line have already bought two very nice somethings for the winners! For when your "thoughts" reach us on May 1, they will be turned over to some highly discerning judges, and these dear kindly souls will undoubtedly sit up all night reading and reading and reading: deciding on the two winning papers. The awards are also sitting on my desk this very minute; so think hard, and write well, and send to the Chimney Corner editor by May 1, with your own name and address on each paper. The two winning papers will be printed in these columns in May! And Peggy is exclaiming right at my elbow: "Oh, how I hope it'll be a regular April shower of articles." Certainly this is the hope of your editor!

Bill's April Fool Birthday Present

By "PEGGY"

SPEAKING of pennies makes me think of Bill's birthday present last year. Our Uncle Timothy (we call him Uncletim,—all in one piece!) thinks it's a huge joke that Bill should have been born on the first of April, and is always trying to "April Fool" him in the matter of gifts. But last year's was the most astonishing of all! For in the mail arrived a perfectly marvelous purple velvet jewelry box, lined with gleaming white satin on which lay one bright, new copper penny. There was a card which read: "Dear Bill. This is a little token of my cent-iments, and you are entirely welcome to this most expensive of all my presents to you provided your good father will promise to double the amount of my gift every day during the month. Surely he will enjoy giving you these trifling sums from day to day, so that you may eventually write a note of thanks for this extravagant present to your Poor old Uncletim."

Instantly Bill suspected an April Fool trick, yet it sounded so reasonable that he asked father if he would double the penny for thirty days, please. But father twinkled his dear blue eyes, and said he was afraid his pocketbook wasn't equal to the strain: "So, I beg to be excused."

Well, we went out in the hall where Bill growled like grizzly bears and panthers, etc. Evidently mad, you see! But I said gently: "Bill, there's more in this than meets the eye!"

"Nothing but one red cent meets my eye," he growled, "dad could double the pennies from day to day just as well as not. April's a short month, anyhow, only thirty days!"

I can't bear to hear father blamed when I know perfectly well how quickly we all make the butter fly, and the potatoes, not to mention shoes and hats and neckties; so I got pencil and paper to count up what doubling Uncletim's penny would amount to—actually, I was planning to give Bill some of the money in my little iron bank. So when I had it all figured up it was as much an "April Fool" on me as on Bill himself, for I only had money enough to pay for 8 days! In one column we listed the thirty dates, and directly opposite we doubled each new amount as follows: (isn't it simply astounding?)

Days	Cents	Days	Cents
1	.01	16	$327.68
2	.02	17	$655.36
3	.04	18	$1,310.72
4	.08	19	$2,621.44
5	.16	20	$5,242.88
6	.32	21	$10,485.76
7	.64	22	$20,971.52
8	$1.28	23	$41,943.04
9	$2.56	24	$83,886.08
10	$5.12	25	$167,772.16
11	$10.24	26	$335,544.32
12	$20.48	27	$671,088.64
13	$40.96	28	$1,342,177.28
14	$81.92	29	$2,684,354.56
15	$163.84	30	$5,368,709.12

Well! Aren't you perfectly flabbergasted? Over and over Bill kept multiplying each new figure by two to be sure that I had doubled properly, and finally when he realized he had calmly been asking dad to make him a millionaire he took up Uncletim's bright little penny chuckling: "You're right, Peg. There's more in this than meets the eye!"

But all I could gasp was: "How lucky for dad that April hasn't thirty-one days, or he'd be owing you over ten million dollars. You'd be sort of a Carnegie-Rockefeller-Vanderbilt, all rolled into one!"

But as Uncletim wrote Bill later (he's a banker), at least the April Fool penny would show us that "a penny saved is a penny earned!" And we suggest that you try this on your family, just for fun.

WAITING FOR YOUR APRIL SHOWERS!

Here we are, drawn by Bill (Peggy's brother). Bill thinks a hundred Young Reserves, at least, will compete, and says he is going to mail us a "Thought" himself!

Young People's Work

Topic April 17

HOW CAN WE IMPROVE OUR RECREATIONS?

1 Cor. 10:23, 24, 31-33; 11:1

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. Give no occasion of stumbling, either to Jews, or to Greeks, or to the church of God."

1. The play impulse: "All amusements have one starting point—the play impulse in man. However widely they differ, they all trace back to our love of play. What then is play? Whatever one does for the pure love of it—that is play. It is more instinctive than work, and not a whit less important. A playless continent would be no more abnormal than a playless life. Play is for childhood the shining gate that opens wide to life, to sociability, endurance, co-operation, natural growth, and the subordination of one's own desires to common ends. It leads out the youthful spirit through mysterious, instinctive regions where no formal education can be its guide, and may, indeed, light up the meaning of government and the moral order. For maturity, the shining gate swings backward, restoring joyous memories and the early freshness of boyhood's mornings, recreating body and soul, warding off nervous exhaustion, maintaining balance and proportion in life, making work tolerable for the oppressed, and releasing the worker to increased efficiency. Many minds in many centuries have misunderstood or denied the importance of play and looked upon it as a more or less permissible sin rather than as a natural, right, and beautiful expression of the human spirit. This tragic misconception has made the earth a sadder place for countless millions. It is well to believe in play, for the love of it leaps up instinctively in every normal being. It is well to believe in play, for morality and play grow up together like joyous children when play is spontaneous, unbought, and clean. America believes in play: that is manifest. The question at issue is the sort of play in which she believes, the sort of recreations which are to possess her leisure hours. These will shape the national character; these will fashion the morals of her sons and daughters." (Edwards.)

2. The national amusements: "Commercial amusements have now become so popular that their patronage may be said to be universal. One has only to watch the night life of any city as it moves in and out past the box-offices, to see young, middle aged, and old, men, women, and children, of every occupation and station in life, all intent on finding "a good time." Sooner or later the whole city turns out. Amusement enterprises have become indeed a vast business interest, involving enormous investments of capital, occupying much valuable property in the heart of the cities, and receiving huge sums from the earnings of all classes of citizens. Their field of operations extends to every place where a venture can be expected to pay. The ability of so many fake enterprises to make money indicates the openness and gullibility of the public mind, and emphasizes also the dearth of wholesome and attractive offerings. The wide variety of commercial offerings is significant of the amounts of money expended upon them and the intensity of popular desire to hear or see some new thing. Ingenious appeal is made to curiosity and the love of spectacle, to sociability, appetite, and thirst, to sex excitement, antagonism, and many other human desires. Spectacular offerings have been sought out in the remotest corners of the globe, and made to yield their brief moment of stimulation to the ever shifting multitude. Some thriller is provided for every pleasurable sensation known to man." (Edwards.)

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organizations, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

3. The way out: Certainly not by way of the negative route. The anathemas of the pulpit will not solve the problem. Churches must frankly face the situation as regards the amusement life of their young people. Something better and more wholesome must be given by the churches. This "something" can be arrived at only by a sympathetic constructive study of the young people themselves and of the agencies now providing their "play" activities.

REV. T. B. FRIZELLE
Director of Summer Assemblies

4. Suggested literature: "Christianity and Amusements" by Edwards; "Ice Breakers" by Edna Geister; "Just For Fun"; "Games for Everybody."

SUMMER ASSEMBLIES

Every year discloses the great need of trained leadership in our churches and every year makes more apparent the possibilities of summer assemblies as training camps for our Baptist young people.

Religious education is the challenging need of the world today. Leadership is the key to religious education progress and successful leadership comes only through training. An unusual opportunity for training is provided for at the Baptist summer assemblies listed below.

Courses are offered in graded Sunday-school work, pedagogy, psychology, missions, and indeed in every phase of the work of the modern church.

It is earnestly hoped that churches will at once select delegates for their own state assembly and send these delegates this summer purposing to secure for themselves and their churches the very best the assembly has to offer in the way of training for leadership. The expense is comparatively small, the fellowship is delightful and the inspiration lasts through the years.

ASSEMBLIES FOR 1921

New Jersey, Hightstown, July 2-9.
South Dakota, Sioux Falls, July 3-10.
Colorado, Denver, July 2-8.
Pennsylvania, Factoryville, July 4-11;
Ridgeview Park, July 11-18; Collegeville, Aug. 22-29.
Idaho, Ketchum, July 5-15.
Oregon, Gladstone Park, July 8-18.
Minnesota, Mound, July 14-24.
Illinois, Shurtleff College, Alton, July 16-23.
Kansas, Ottawa University, Ottawa, July 18-27.
East Washington, July 18-29.
Iowa, Iowa Falls, July 18-31.
Michigan, Kalamazoo, July 21-29.
New York, Keuka Park, July 25-30.
Ohio, Granville, July 29-Aug. 7.
Wyoming, Hyattville, July 29-Aug. 7.
West Virginia, Phillippi, Aug. 2-8.
Indiana, Franklin, Aug. 6-13.
West Washington, Burton, Aug. 9-19.
Wisconsin, Green Lake, Aug. 11-21.
Northern California, Asilomar, Aug. 15-25.
Maine (New England), Ocean Park, Aug. 24-Sept. 2.

UTAH

"At our state convention in June we had Miss Brockway for two addresses and one conference, and also for a social hour where she met and talked personally with many of our elementary workers. We also had Mrs. High, elementary director of Montana, who gave us a helpful demonstration of children's music."

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for April 17

BIBLE TEACHINGS ABOUT WORK

Mark 6:1-3, John 5:17, 2 Thess. 3:7-13
Golden Text: Rom. 12:11

BY JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The great modern industrial problem is not specifically treated in the Bible, because the problem had not arisen when the Bible was written. But the selfishness which creates the industrial problem does not escape the condemnation of prophets and apostles. Honest worthy work is not only commended but commanded by the Bible. "Six days shalt thou labor," is as binding and holy as the rest provided for in "The Sabbath of the Lord." According to the lesson text, God works, Jesus engaged in honest toil, and Paul refused to eat food which he had not earned by working at his trade. Work was never intended to be a curse; it should be one of man's greatest blessings.

The Lesson Taught

The problem and the principle of work need to be restudied in the light of modern conditions.

The Problem

The problem is created by ignorance as to what constitutes work, by making certain kinds of work a marketable commodity, by regarding manual labor as a mark of inferiority in the man or woman who engages in it, by demanding wages for work which economic law will not permit, by destroying man's freedom to work and ability to produce when he does work, by treating the worker as a machine, by failure to form and maintain the necessary partnership between employer and employee. Other things contribute to the problem, but these are primary and fundamental. The problem of work revealed by the lesson text was precipitated by small-town people deciding that work and wisdom are incompatible, and that a carpenter could not possibly be a man of spiritual power. It is still a standing wonder how a rail-splitter could ever become a president of the United States. So deeply embedded in humanity is this notion of labor's precluding a man from leadership, that the old blunder of the neighbors of Jesus in Nazareth is handed down from generation to generation. If the race were wise no man would ever be called to leadership who did not know something of hard, manual labor by actual experience.

Out of this foolish idea spring most of the other foolish ideas about work. If the idea of the inferiority of the man who works with his hands and earns wages could be destroyed we would begin to treat the worker as a human being, refusing to buy his labor at so much per diem as though he could sell it as a thing apart from himself. No man can barter for labor as he barter for other commodities in the open market. Labor is inseparably bound up with the laborer, and capital is inseparably bound up with the capitalist. These are souls, not stock; men, not machines. When this vital truth is learned and practiced the crimes of capital will cease and the sins of labor will be washed away. The soulless corporation whether it be based on capital or labor will begin to grow a soul. The one great menace of labor unionism is the destruction of personal initiative, creative genius and productive efficiency by its unyielding demand that the worker shall merge his soul in the machine and refuse to act as a worker without the consent of his union. He has been driven to this pass by the old-time methods of capital which refused to have a soul or deal with a soul. Only as the soul is recognized and freed will capital and labor join hands in the common work of building up the industries of the world. As Roger Babson so well says, "The solving of the labor situation is wholly a question of religion."

The Principle

The principle of work is threefold. It is personal, social, divine. It is the personal side of work which is emphasized in the Bible. The slave is urged to be faithful to his master, because most of the industrial work in those days was done by slaves. Wherever there were free workers they were commanded to be self-supporting, self-respecting men and women. Paul wrote his second letter to the Thessalonians to offset the influence of his first letter which had caused the members of the church to give up their work to await the speedy coming of the Christ. He points them to his own industrious life as an example, and lays down the law that the man who will not work should starve. He also intimates that idleness is a mischief-maker according to the old adage, "The devil finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." The blessing of work and the blight of idleness are the great arguments for work as a personal duty.

The social principle of work is largely a modern development. It began when the machine driven by steam power took the place of the hand machine or tool. The hand-loom weavers of Manchester, England, went on strike and became violent when the power-loom was introduced; but it was a strike against the inevitable trend which has gone on from that day to this, until now the independent worker is as much out of date in industry as costumes of the middle ages are out of fashion. The fact is, most of our industrial troubles are caused by the failure to apply the social spirit to industry. We are still thinking and talking and acting in an individualistic way, and trying to solve a social problem by an individualistic philosophy. The labor union is as necessary and inevitable for labor as the combination of capital is for the largest interests of capital. What both need to see and put into speedy operation is their essential unity; and if they will not do it, then the public must assist them to get together for their own good and the common good.

Jesus uttered a profound truth when he said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Work is a part of the divinity of man. He has worked best when he has worked with the Master-Worker. God is a creative worker, and man reaches his most godlike stature when he creates. God is an aesthetic worker, and man expresses his divinity when he works to make the world more beautiful. God is a redemptive worker, and man is most like a son of God when he gives himself in altruistic service and sacrifice for the salvation of the world from sin.

A Course for High School Pupils

(Continued from last week)

WE say if one reads the Bible, prays, worships, does right, he is spiritual, his life is that of a saint. What do we mean by spirituality? Is morality the same as spirituality? How do they differ? Draw out the fact that one has to do with right relations with God, the other right relations with man.

Name some people Paul called saints?

Phillipians, Corinthians, Ephesians. Why did he call them such? Are you saints? No? Why not? What makes a saint? Would these practices and traits help one to a better Christian life? In what ways?

God's will is at the heart of all our soul environment, life and work. How do I know what is the will of God? No one has ever expressed it better than Horace Bushnell.

How to Know the Will of God

1. It must be consistent with his character. True, good, just.
2. Must have relation to him. All created beings have their centre and rest in God.
3. Consult conscience to interpret his will.
4. The word and law are guides. Knowing God's commands gives a clue.
5. Observe the workings of Providence. Study the trials, talents, world's wants and stand ready to serve God now.
6. Consult your friends, especially those most experienced in the teaching of God.

(Continued on page 287)

Our Own Folks

Montreal Letter

By O. C. S. WALLACE

The city grows. The housing problem is serious. Rents are cruelly high.

Church building problems are thorny. Westmount planned eight years ago to build. A pastorate began on that understanding. Then came the war, and postponement. Then after-war prices, and further postponement. Quebec built two years ago, and is prospering. Sherbrooke is gathering funds to build soon. Temple Church, Outremont, has sold a large unfinished building to the school board and will build. These new churches will be smaller than desired, because of high cost of materials and labor. All Baptist churches in this French and Roman province are small. Some of them would be larger if vision and courage were greater. The year 1920 was great in financial forward movement in the convention of Ontario and Quebec. Twice as much was subscribed as at first was planned for, the payments to be made within two years. Payments are gratifying. The year 1921 is to be a year of evangelistic forward movement. Mr. S. J. Moore, one of Toronto's great Baptists and business men, is president of the convention, and a man mighty in word and deed. He is evangelistic to his finger tips. An evangelistic campaign is in progress throughout the convention area, personal evangelism being stressed, and pastors assisting each other. Pastors and laymen of evangelistic spirit are holding conferences in many centres. Churches in Toronto and in many parts of Ontario are witnessing old-time revival scenes. At Point St. Charles Church, Montreal, the fire has blazed forth in great power. Pastor John Linton, recently settled in this pastorate, Scottish by birth, trained at McMaster University, a man of thought, study, faith, sanity, and on-pressing zeal, is a great addition to the religious and Baptist forces of Montreal.

Rev. Charles H. Schutt, recently appointed superintendent of home missions in Ontario and Quebec, is showing powerful and wise leadership. He is fostering evangelism in home mission churches. Next year he will foster a campaign of church building.

The Baptists of Toronto have many great congregations. The three outstanding churches there are Jarvis street, Bloor street, and Walmer Road (naming them in the order of age), whose pastors are, respectively, Dr. T. T. Shields, Rev. W. A. Cameron, and Dr. John MacNeill, popular and powerful preachers, all of them. They speak to great congregations and exert a wide influence. Bloor street Church, seating 1000, was too small for the evening congregation. Beginning the first of December the evening service was moved to a nearby theatre, which has seats for 3200. This building is crowded. Pastor Cameron has skill in after meetings. Each of these three men has been ten or more years in his present pastorate.

Rev. Harry Campbell Plant, after four fruitful years at Verdun, a suburb of Montreal, goes to Stratford, Ontario.

Rev. Charles A. Fournier succeeds the late Dr. A. L. Therrien in the pastorate of L'Oratoire, the French Baptist church of Montreal.

Chancellor Abraham Lincoln McCrimmon of McMaster University, is resting this year.

Lately Montreal Baptists held four days of meetings in commemoration of Baptist beginnings on this island. The visiting speakers were Professor Frederick L. Anderson of Newton Theological Institution, Dr. A. K. de Blois of First Church, Boston, Professor J. L. Gilmour of McMaster University, a grandson of Montreal's first Baptist pastor, and Dr. J. A. Gordon, of Ottawa, Canada, a pastor for many years of the First Baptist Church, Westmount, Montreal.

Wisconsin News and Notes

By ROBERT W. SHAW

Wisconsin Produce

Recently the First Church of Waupaca sent a car of Wisconsin produce to the Immanuel Church, of Chicago. The car included 630 bushels of potatoes, twenty-five bushels of apples, twenty bushels of beets, twelve bushels of onions, 100 pounds of cabbage, besides a number of boxes of canned fruit and wearing apparel. Three hundred families participated in this gift of Christian charity. Pastor Anthony Jacobs received a letter of thanks from Dr. Johnston Myers. The freight was also paid on the car.

Death of George J. Fox

On March 5, this brother was shot and instantly killed in Madison. He was one of the Negro ministers of our denomination, and held pastorates in Milwaukee and Beloit. Recently he was engaged in evangelistic work. While holding a meeting in Madison he tried to assist J. Anthony Josey, a prominent member of the Negro church in Madison, who was attacked by a demented religious fanatic. The man shot them both. Mr. Fox dying almost instantly, and Mr. Josey's life being despaired of for several days. The funeral was held in Milwaukee attended by many of the former parishioners, and the ministers of the Baptist churches, and officers of the state convention.

A Baptist Rally

The Baptist young people of Milwaukee, the city union and the Woman's Missionary Union held a joint rally at the Immanuel Church, O. R. Hauser, minister, on March 11. About seventy-five were present for the luncheon, most of these were officers of the local societies. At the public program several short talks were made in order to acquaint the young people with the city mission work. The speaker of the evening was James Asa White, general secretary of the B. Y. P. U. A. who gave a great address. It is planned to have several of these meetings each year.

Some News and Notes

Kirby Chapman, at Raymond, is experiencing a revival of progress on his field. A B. Y. P. U. of thirty members was recently organized. Besides this a debt of $700 on the parsonage has been paid, and a gift of $300 given to the children of Armenia and China. The church recently held a three weeks meeting under the direction of Evangelist Shannon of Pennsylvania.

L. M. Kitzmiller, of Indiana, has been called to the pastorate of the church at Dodgeville, and will begin his work May 1.

F. C. Rhapstock of Plainfield has resigned his work on account of poor health. He has held on bravely despite this handicap, but now feels that he must give up the work.

F. J. McKeown has accepted the call to the Oakfield and Oak Center churches. These churches hope for better days now with an aggressive minister.

The church at Evansville has profited greatly by the union revival meeting recently held by the Taylor-Roth party. The Baptists will probably receive about fifty members as a result of this meeting. Pastor Stephens is conserving the results and will receive a large number on Easter.

Hulburt Hall

Already the director of religious education and his committee are planning for the Summer Assembly at Green Lake in August. The faculty has been secured and many of the plans are being worked out. There is a movement on just now to erect on the grounds of the Green Lake Bible Institute a building to be named Hulburt Hall in honor of Dr. D. W. Hulburt for twenty-five years state secretary of the Baptist work in Wisconsin. It will have suitable class rooms, as well as dormitory facilities for the men of the faculty and an office for the dean and registrar. The building will cost approximately $3000 and it is planned to sell shares at $10 each to defray the expenses.

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

The Spring Conference at Newton

It has become the established custom at our Newton Seminary to utilize a part of the spring vacation in a conference for Baptist ministers of New England. It comes at so opportune a time, and the facilities of the institution are made so free and available, that ministers have come to anticipate it as a privilege. More than a hundred of them assembled at the conference just closed, and they came from every New England state.

The greetings of the commonwealth were extended by Lieut. Governor Fuller, our Baptist reform leader who is "speaking out in meeting" on state questions and conditions with no uncertain sound. He was followed by Pres. Horr on "Our Spiritual Resources." This address struck a key-note, anticipating the timely and practical nature of the entire program.

What makes the conference popular and welcome to working ministers is its facing of their every day problems with the authority of a consecrated intelligence, and with suggestions in practical effectiveness. The entire conference was but a development of that effort, and as the program unfolded itself, the earnest discussion of its parts, and the questions freely asked and answered, attested the success of its purpose. The ministers were evidently "at school" again keenly conscious that the curriculum was adjusted to their strenuous experience on the field.

The Topics of the Conference

Professor Vaughan handled the process of making our spiritual resources effective. Professor Berkeley raised the question "Is religious education a substitute for experience?" Professor Vaughan was followed by Dr. H. F. Stillwell, and Professor Berkeley by Dr. Charles N. Arbuckle, so practical "snappers" on the whips were certain. Plainly the plan was clearly and strongly to state the case, then have ready a practical "follow up." Prof. H. K. Rowe applied the principles of Jesus to industrial conflict, then Professor Woodman Bradbury followed up with them in racial antagonisms.

Properly the "educational institutions" session was divided between Dr. Robert L. Webb, secretary of Newton, and Pres. Clifton N. Gray of Bates College; Dr. Webb giving the survey of the schools, and Pres. Gray pressing the obligation to permeate our higher education with religion. Hot stuff came on Wednesday morning at the closing session when Prof. W. N. Donovan opened up on "Internationalism and War," Professor Anderson on "Christian Propagation at Home and Abroad," and Rev. George F. Finnie of Lewiston, Me., read the sapient and appreciative "findings" of the ministers on behalf of the committee that was appointed to sift out impressions of the whole conference that should be stated. A full report of the sessions will be printed and will make good reading, and valuable ammunition.

Two Jubilees

Old neighbors have been celebrating their fiftieth anniversary: the Ruggles Street Church, and the old "Dearborn Street Church," now the Bethany in Roxbury. The Ruggles Street Church was fortunate in having its new minister, Dr. Cummings, in time for the festivities. His warm and sincere pastoral heart gave an unmistakable flavor to the feast of days, when all the usual features of such celebrations were unfolded. Such eventful days take you back to the earlier times of Dr. Seymour, Daniel Sharp Ford, and W. N. Hartshorn, and remind you that much of that shining past still endures in their worthy successors.

Bethany Church was happy, not in the possession of a pastor, but in having one of those "acting" pastors who is everywhere effectively active—Rev. Arthur H. Burrows, who is serving these people much to their satisfaction. He so fully entered into their celebration that all the memories were gleaned, and their lessons and blessings recalled. Three former pastors were there to help, and to fill the feast, so it was a notable experience for Bethany Church.

Adjustments

Four of our good ministers have recently made happy adjustments, and as many churches are of course well content. Rev. W. D. Goble's coming from Fitchburg to the First Church, Cambridge, brings a strong leader to that strategic center. In place and plant it is ideal for successful community ministrations. There are fine laymen and plenty of people. May this new pastorate recall the old-time glories!

The story of the First Church, Lynn, is much the same. Pastor Eben F. Francis, coming there from West Medford, pleases everybody. The man fits the field.

Even his former church, while regretting its loss, rejoices in the prospect of his bringing such a blessing to his now larger field as his ten years at Medford has brought to its own people.

Pastor Robert B. Pattison's going from Beth Eden, Waltham, to Main Street, Binghamton, N. Y., is one of those longer leaps that are not uncommon as the churches and states exchange their pastoral gifts. After all, what more befitting than that the worthy son should go to the state where the illustrious father, Dr. T. Harwood Pattison, labored so conspicuously?

We have one more instance of neighborly appreciation in the transfer of Rev. A. Judson Hughes from First Everett to the strong church at Needham. To us outside of Everett, no arrangement could seem better. There the protest will be heard. But after fifteen years of noble devotion to a church, a pastor has a right to change. And Needham has a right to claim him. Besides there is something of local triumph when churches esteem near-by ministers beyond the far away charmers of Michigan and Oklahoma.

So these shiftings on the church check-board leave vacancies at First Fitchburg, West Medford, Beth Eden, Waltham, and First Everett. But already there are premonitions of fluttering ministerial movements as "letters" are being written and received.

Delivering the Goods

Just a brief cogitation. Paul says, "Faith cometh by hearing." But not unless you can hear. Public speakers should deliver their goods, men only can we be certain that they have them. There's an implied contract with the listener which they should keep. When they lapse into slovenly mumbling, alternately belch or whisper, give indistinct squeezings from the inner terminus of nose and throat, they are breaking the contract. We are not insisting upon oratory brethren—just hearing. Open up your tubes and let the "goods" come through. We will do the rest.

Denver Baptists

By G. G. LAUGHLIN

The Baptists of Denver are taking some advance steps these days. Dr. F. H. Divine has recently conducted two financial campaigns for new church buildings. Bethany Church of which Dr. W. J. Bingham is pastor, is one of our smaller churches. They set a goal for $35,000 and secured over $36,000 in pledges. Bethany has secured a fine new location and will be able to build about a $40,000 edifice. Judson Memorial Church, of which Rev. Aaron Schlessman is pastor, was the other one putting on the campaign. This church is planning a $50,000 edifice. They have some money on hand. Their additional goal in the campaign was $40,000, which amount they a little over-subscribed. The two churches did heroic giving and are much encouraged over the results of their campaigns. Dr. Divine did splendid service and well deserves his "D. D." title—"Debt Destroyer." He destroys the possibility of a church staying in debt very many years. We hope to have him again in other campaigns as we are planning to build some new churches in Denver every year for some time to come.

Galilee Church of which Rev. Joshua Gravett is pastor has $18,000 to $20,000 cash on hand toward its new $75,000 to $80,000 edifice. Brother Gravett has been in ill health for several months, but he is now improving nicely and expects to return home in a few days from California. His many friends will be glad to learn of his recovery and that he is now able to take up his work again. He has been pastor of the Galilee Church for thirty years. It seems fitting that their much needed new edifice should be erected under his ministry.

Some of the departments of the Denver Baptist Union have been very active during the winter. In addition to the work of the church edifice department, which has aided in the building fund campaigns, the missionary and evangelistic departments have done good work. Rev. Felix Escalante, a Mexican, has been secured as pastor of our Mexican mission. He comes March 20 from Los Angeles to begin work among the 7000 to 8000 Mexicans in Denver. The Baptists have a good work started here among these Mexicans. So far we have had no pastor on the field, a splendid work, however, has been carried on by Miss Mina Everett, and Miss Clara J. Flint. These women deserve much credit for the good work done. Dr. W. J. Bingham has also done good work in conducting a clinic at the mission. The medical service he has rendered for these Mexicans has proven very beneficial to our Baptist work. Dr. Bingham and Supt. Laughlin of the Denver Baptist Union are conducting special services at the Mexican mission this week in preparation for the coming of Mr. Escalante.

Superintendent Laughlin assisted Dr. Bingham in special meetings in Bethany Church in November. He aided Rev. W. A. Daniel in meetings in Beth Eden Church in January, and was with Rev. Farnum St. John in revival meetings in Mt. Olivet Church in February. All of these meetings were very successful and resulted in several additions to each of the churches.

The Denver Baptist Union has loaned the superintendent to Bethany Baptist Church of Colorado Springs for a two weeks' evangelistic campaign in April.

Rev. W. C. Garberson, pastor of Mt. Hermon Church is assisting Pastor Krumreig in the Bethel Church this week.

Pastor Harold Wilson and Berkely Church are planning special meetings in April.

Pastor Floyd and Calvary Church expect to hold special meetings in the near future.

Dr. Schoemaker and City Park Church are planning special meetings in April. Rev. F. E. Eden of First Church of Pueblo is to assist in the City Park meetings.

Dr. Morse and First Church are enjoying enlarged congregations and have received several new members recently.

The outlook for Denver Baptists is very hopeful. Many of the churches are in need of better church equipment, but aggressive work is being planned along this line.

"The Growth of the Bible"

The topic suggested by the B. Y. P. U. for the young people's meeting of April 24 is, "The Growth of the Bible." This is based, of course, on the foreign mission study book, "The Bible and Missions," by Mrs. W. A. Montgomery. There are a number of very interesting and available pieces of literature that can be secured for use in preparation for the topic. Some of the best are the following: "The Bible and Missions," by Mrs. Montgomery (paper 47 cents, cloth 60 cents, post paid); "The Missionary Message of the Bible," by Mrs. Grace G. Farmer, containing outline programs on the topic (10 cents); "A Message for Man," a pageant covering the topic (10 cents); "Lamplighters Across the Sea," by Margaret T. Applegarth (35 cents); "The Twenty-third Psalm in the Indian Sign Language," by Isabel Crawford (25 cents).

Besides the above some of the Orient Pictures can be used most effectively. A limited supply is available of those of Adoniram Judson, Ann Hasseltine Judson and William Carey, and there are others that can also be used. A study of the catalogue of missionary literature will show other titles that will be helpful in preparing the program. The literature can be secured from the literature department of The General Board of Promotion, 276 Fifth Ave., New York City; 504 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.; 2969 Vernon Ave., Chicago, Ill.; 700 Ford Bldg., Boston, Mass.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Pacific Coast

WESTERN WASHINGTON

Walla Walla Association

Mount Pleasant Association held its annual meetings with the church at Walla Walla March 1-2. This association is small, but it is the mother of other associations which have grown out of it.

Participants in the program were Dr. F. P. Lynch, Mrs. A. L. Wadsworth, Dr. A. W. Rider, Dr. A. H. Bailey, and Rev. E. M. Bollinger.

At the close of Dr. Bailey's address on "The New World Movement in Action," Mr. J. F. Samuels of Dayton arose, said he had opposed the movement because he had misunderstood it, but that he had come to see it in a new light, and ended by making his own subscription for $100. Seventy-five baptisms were reported, and a net gain of 106.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

REV. DAVID P. WARD visited Bakersfield last September and found the church holding no meetings at all. He organized a Sunday school and started things up. Since that time the church called Rev. F. W. Hatch to the pastorate. Now the Sunday school has an attendance of 350, the church 600 members, a good young people's society is in operation and plans are on foot to build a house costing $100,000.

REV. WILBERT R. HOWELL, whose death was reported in THE BAPTIST last week, was for many years master of the "Robert G. Seymour," our missionary boat on the Puget Sound. He was previous to that one of our most successful pioneer missionaries in Wyoming, Nevada and Oregon. During the past two years he has been in charge of the branch store of our Publication Society located in Seattle.

LONG BEACH IS PROSPERING under the care of Pastor George D. Knight. Its record surpasses that of any other church in the Northern Baptist Convention in sending packed boxes to missionaries. Sunday-school attendance is close to 700. Forty-two new members came into the church in one day recently. Enlargement of the house is planned to cost $25,000.

FIRST CHURCH, SELMA, joined the other churches of the town in union evangelistic meetings. As a result it received 52 by baptism and thirteen in other ways. Prayer meetings have grown 600 per cent. Sunday school nearly 50 per cent, membership is now 706, and a new house is next on program.

WATERFORD had the service of the Hermistons of the chapel car "Grace," resulting in twenty-two additions. The membership has doubled in the last year.

SUNNYVALE, FIRST, Rev. H. J. Roberts, pastor, had the aid of cor. sec. J. B. Speed of the Nevada-Sierra Baptist Convention in special meetings. The church was greatly strengthened and several new members received.

Rocky Mountain States

ARIZONA

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Arizona Baptist Convention will be held in Bisbee, May 4 to 8.

REV. GEORGE H. GAMBLE of Gillette, has been elected Sunday-school missionary for Arizona and has begun his work.

TUCSON FIRST CHURCH and Pastor Beal are rejoicing over the results of a recent canvass for funds for a new church building. Led by Rev. F. H. Divine, D. D. of the church edifice department of the Home Mission Society the church pledged $105,000.00. Since then $10,000.00 has been added to this pledge. This will give the Tucson church a splendid church home and equipment for a large ministry to both city and students of the State University.

A SUMMER ASSEMBLY will be held in Flagstaff July 29 to Aug. 7.

SINCE LAST REPORT the following pastors have been located in the state: Arturo Vargas, Glendale Mexican; N. A. Coxsey, Casa Grande; W. S. Brown, Palo Verde; V. B. Jones, Yuma Valley; Roscoe Stapp of Arkansas, Clifton; E. R. Beucier of Indiana, Wilcox.

REV. WM. J. GORDON has resigned his pastorate at Nogales and is now located in the Verde Valley, and Rev. Geo. W. Hill goes from Wilcox to Chloride.

REV. A. P. HOWELLS of Redlands was the acceptable supply at Douglas during February and March.

TEMPE CHURCH has called the Rev. E. M. Lands of Hamilton, Mo. to become its pastor. It is hoped he will accept.

REV. C. M. ROCK has resigned the pastorate of the Calvary Church, Phoenix, and Rev. J. B. Bell, after seventeen years of service as general missionary for the colored people of the state, has resigned. He will become pastor at Flagstaff.

Nov. 17, 1920 A COUNCIL was called by the First Church, Miami to consider the advisability of ordaining W. S. Brown to the gospel ministry. Secretary H. Q. Morton was chosen as moderator and Mrs. R. O. Anthony, clerk. The examination proving thoroughly satisfactory, the council recommended the ordination. The church so voted. The sermon was preached by Rev. Hal P. Fudge of Globe, the charge to the candidate by Rev. C. Holland, presentation of the Bible by H. Q. Morton, prayer by the pastor, Rev. T. E. Summers, benediction by Rev. W. S. Brown.

A COUNCIL was CALLED by the First Church of Tucson to meet Feb. 1 to consider the advisability of ordaining one of its members, Mr. C. C. Clark, to the work of evangelist. Secretary Morton was chosen moderator and led the examination. Rev. N. A. Coxsey as clerk. The examination was thoroughly satisfactory to the council, which recommended the ordination. The church so voted. Rev. C. T. Garnett of Bisbee preached the sermon. Rev. N. A. Coxsey gave the charge to the candidate, Rev. O. E. Comstock presented the Bible, a gift from the church, and Pastor R. S. Beal made the prayer of ordination. Rev. C. C. Clarke pronounced the benediction.

THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCES recently held in Douglas, Bisbee, Tucson, Phoenix and Globe were well attended and full of interest. The team sent us could not have been better. Dr. Jas. H. Franklin, the foreign secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, brought before each conference the world field with its challenge and its appeal; Dr. W. L. Ferguson, twenty-five years in India, made missions live before us and made us to see the power of God in the lives of those far away peoples; Miss Ruth Shipley, second vice president of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, laid before us the need of organization for the great service and made the appeal for the enlistment of life for the Lord's work; Rev. E. R. Brown spoke of our local mission problems and of the Mexican people, telling us of the progress of the work among them. Rev. Geo. M. Lehigh led the Bible study and devotional periods, preparing the soil of the heart for the messages. Secretary Morton presented the state work, showing the results accruing to our state and churches as a result of the New World Movement program. A lasting impression was made on the people in attendance and a great impetus given to the churches for the work of missions throughout the world.

Atlantic Coast

NEW JERSEY

FIRST CHURCH, ATLANTIC CITY, welcomed Pastor Hinson V. Howlett back to the pulpit on the first Sunday in March, after an absence of ten weeks, due to illness. The latter part of his convalescence he spent in the home of Deacon and Mrs. R. Milton Henderson, at Lincoln Park, Washington, D. C., members of the Second Church, Washington, which Mr. Howlett served before going to Atlantic City. The pastor had the pleasure of entering the baptismal waters, and welcoming ten into fellowship on his first Sunday, showing that the church had not been idle during his absence.

NEW YORK

MRS. MINNIE B. MANSFIELD, 146 E. 188th St., Bronx, died March 16. Mrs. Thomas was the wife of Rev. Albert C. Thomas, pastor of the Creston Avenue Church, the Bronx, and formerly assistant pastor of the Second Church of St. Louis, and Emmanuel Church of Brooklyn. Before her marriage, Mrs. Thomas' home was in Wakefield, Mass. Funeral services were conducted in the Creston Avenue Church on Friday afternoon, by Dr. Avery A. Shaw of Brooklyn, and Dr. Hugh A. Heath, formerly of Wakefield, and on Saturday afternoon in Wakefield, also conducted by Dr. Shaw. Besides her husband, she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mabel M. Lord, and Miss Alice Mansfield; a brother, William Mansfield, of Wakefield, and two sons, Robert M. and Avery L. Thomas.

Buffalo News

Williamsville Church, which was served for so many years by Rev. John T. Naylor, is looking forward to a fruitful ministry under the new pastor, Rev. Arthur B. Fowler, who began his work Sunday, March 13. Mr. Fowler, after completing his training in Princeton College and Seminary, spent nearly ten years in missionary service in Syria under the Presbyterian board. He and his family have participated in many of the trying experiences in connection with the Armenian horrors. During this period he reached the conclusion that he ought to identify himself with the Baptist denomination. Therefore, on return for furlough recently, he became a member of Memorial Church at Salem, N. J.

At the close of a week's intensive program for the Sunday school at Delavan under the direction of Miss Beard, secretary for Sunday school and young people's work of the Buffalo union, a decision day was held on Sunday, March 13, when some fifteen young men, among others, declared themselves for the Christian life and church membership. In the village 86 families out of 194 families that were visited are not represented in the membership of any Christian church.

Work at Lockport continued strongly during the recent illness of the pastor, Rev. Frank Hollinshead.

Two of the week-day schools of religion being conducted by churches of the Buffalo Association by the Baptist union are in the Polish district. The leadership is mainly supplied by the splendid committee of supervisorship and personal service, through which Delaware Avenue Church functions in the great district occupied by more than one hundred thousand Poles. Rev. Walter Chrzanowski of Chester, Pa., has just accepted the call of the First Polish Church and the Buffalo union to the pastorate in this field.

RHODE ISLAND

EAST GREENWICH CHURCH, Rev. A. H. Adams, Jr., pastor, continues to lead the churches of the state in its payment of pledges. On March 1, they had paid 102 per cent of the amount pledged for 10 months. They hope to pledge the entire quota before long.

Rev. P. M. CURRY, pastor of Knotty Oak

Church reports the addition of fifteen members since last September. The Sunday school has grown 100 per cent in the same time. Pastor Curry is taking post-graduate work at Brown University and expects to return to Texas after the college year.

EDWARD L. THORNTON of Brown University, acting pastor of Allendale, reports seven baptisms ready for Easter. The work is progressing under Brother Thornton's leadership.

REV. ALBERT G. HENDERSON, pastor of Greenville Church, writes that on March 14, four were at the altar seeking Christ, and that quite a number are on the verge of decision.

TWELVE OF THE PASTORS of the state with Secretary Livingston attended the convocation which was held at Newton, Mass. on March 14-16. All agreed that the conference was one of great profit and it is hoped that the trustees of the seminary will arrange for a continuation of the convocation each year.

REV. CLARENCE C. M. GALLUP, of Central Church, Providence, is preaching a series of special Lenten services on Sunday mornings during the month of March.

THE MEN'S BIBLE CLASS of Roger Williams Church held a monthly meeting, Friday, March 11, and 150 men sat down to supper. Secretary Livingston addressed the men on the "New World Movement and Its Relation to the Individual." The work is progressing splendidly under the direction of Pastor Ringrose.

REV. AUGUST MANUEL, pastor of First Swedish Church has resigned and will conclude his pastorate on June 1. He expects to go into evangelistic work.

REV. WILLIAM CLEMENTS, pastor of Trinity Church, Providence, resigned on Sunday, March 13. His resignation will take effect June 1.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

PASTOR AND PEOPLE of Campton Church have been greatly heartened by the generous gifts of Mr. J. C. Haartz a business man who spends a part of his time at Campton. Mr. Haartz has made it possible for an increase of three hundred dollars to the pastor's salary, a bath room, furnace and electric lights for the parsonage. This same friend of the church also remembered the janitor and makes provision for nearly 100 per cent increase in his salary. Rev. A. W. Young has been pastor of this village church since 1913.

UNION EVANGELISTIC SERVICES under the direction of Rev. York A. King are being held in the three Baptist churches of Manchester. The meetings began March 2nd in the Merrimack St. Church. After one week here the services were transferred to the People's Tabernacle and during the final week they are being held in the First Baptist Church. From the first almost without exception the audience rooms have been filled at every meeting. Mr. King has held the close attention of these audiences each night. There have been conversions. It is expected that the best result of these meetings will be the after effect and conversions are looked for then in larger numbers. Mr. Horace Erwin assists as chorister and Mrs. Helen Pitt has given great assistance as soloist.

CHOCORUA PARSONAGE house and barn were recently destroyed by fire, cause unknown. Rev. O. P. Eaches, D. D., of Hadonfield, N. J., has been the supply for Chocorua for six months and had recently been engaged to supply another six months. Dr. Eaches and his family were occupying the parsonage at time of its destruction by fire. It is hoped that this disaster will not hinder Dr. Eaches' continued stay at Chocorua.

REV. JOHN L. CLARK of Bellows Falls, Vt. has been called to the church in Exeter. It is expected that he will accept. Mr. Clark was once the successful pastor at North Stratford.

REV. O. H. TRACY, D. D. has become stated supply at Berlin and his work there is much appreciated.

CONNECTICUT

THE FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL MEETING of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Conference of the Hartford Association was held in the South Church, Hartford, March 18. There was a large representation from the churches. The devotional periods were in charge of Mrs. Manford W. Schuh and Miss Edyth Braddock of Hartford. Greetings were extended by Mrs. Edward H. Crosby of the entertaining church. Solos were rendered by Mrs. M. W. Johnson and Mrs. Clarence Hall Frank. Addresses at the afternoon session were given by Mrs. J. B. Kent, Putnam, and Miss Julia Parrott, Burma, after which a memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Isaac Glazier for Mrs. Rose Attleton Mayer. At the evening session, "The Pill Bottle" was given by the W. W. G. of the First Church, Hartford, under the direction of Mrs. C. H. Barrett. The W. W. G. of the South, Memorial and Asylum Avenue churches, Hartford, participated in the program, each singing a song. Business wise the sessions were epoch making: recommendations looking toward closer union of woman's work in the state were adopted.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of W. A. B. H. M. society of Connecticut will be held in the First Church, Bridgeport, April 14. An interesting program is being arranged.

REV. O. G. BUDDINGTON, pastor of the Poquonock Bridge Church, baptized ten candidates March 13.

MASSACHUSETTS

CENTRAL CHURCH, MIDDLEBORO. Attendance at all services in recent weeks has been excellent. The Bible school has been showing a gratifying increase in attendance, the 300 mark being passed nearly every Sunday. The annual banquet of the B. M. C. was held on Feb. 1 with 175 men present. Dr. W. Quay Roselle, of Malden, Mass. was the principal speaker and was heard with much satisfaction. This class, under the leadership of Herbert S. Sylvester, is entering upon its twelfth year. Cottage prayer meetings are now being held each week. On March 6 pastor C. Raymond Chappell gave the hand of fellowship to five new members, four of whom were baptized the preceding Sunday.

MRS. JENNIE GRACE POTTER, wife of Dr. Henry S. Potter of Arlington, Mass. recently passed away. Among other tributes of love and sorrow, the First Church of Bloomfield, N. J. sent tender resolutions of sympathy to Dr. Potter, who had formerly served that church as pastor.

MAINE

Lincoln Association

Lincoln Association met in quarterly meeting with the church in Warren, March 11. Pastor Turner and his excellent people had made full preparations and extended a cordial welcome. The moderator Rev. W. L. Pratt, having removed to Massachusetts, Rev. C. W. Turner of Warren Church was elected moderator. Reports from the churches were of special interest. The settlement of the new pastor Rev. B. P. Brown at the First Church Rockland is already signalized by a great increase of congregations and spiritual interest. The recent work of Evangelist Taylor in Camden has been remarkably successful. Over 200 have signed cards declaring their purpose to lead Christian lives. Pastor Young, at Rockland will be aided by Missionary Davis in a series of meetings to begin in the near future. During the day in addition to the devotional services, which were a feature of the meeting, addresses were given by Rev. B. P. Browne, Dr. Hamlen and Promotion Director Whittemore. In the evening there was a young people's rally and Rev. Andrew Young gave the lecture on avenues of service illustrated with the stereopticon.

Portland Social Union

Portland Social Union in large numbers met in the vestries of the First Church, Portland, in the evening of March 14. After the tables were cleared, Pres. H. Wallace Noyes, to whose enthusiastic interest the union is greatly indebted, announced the program. Dr. Whittemore spoke of the New World Movement; Supt. W. O. Hersey of the Deering schools spoke of the qualities of the true teacher. Dr. Powell who has recently come from Saco to Portland discussed the relations between religion and medicine and then Dr. Metcalf of the First Parish Church, Portland, gave a delightful lecture on astronomy illustrated by some very beautiful stereopticon views. The Portland Social Union is itself of great value in the life and work of the churches in Portland and vicinity.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

Sherwood Eddy at Bucknell University

Sherwood Eddy came to Bucknell University March 8-10 with a very definite purpose. It was to win young men and young women in this, which he has called, "Everybody's World." That title of his recent book suggests his approach and his method of appeal. It suggest to young people that there is a serious game on and the ball, the world, has been thrown or kicked to a place where according to the rules of the game it is everybody's. Through his description of the world across the sea and of the social and industrial conditions in our land he challenged the powers of youth to enter the game. But he urged the students to bear in mind that within the college there is the challenge of the larger world outside. Let an appeal so definite in its aim, and so comprehensive, be made in a college where the President by personal work among the students has created a favorable atmosphere and the response of the students is assured. Such was the experience at Bucknell. The Faculty, the young men, and the young women attended the meetings almost unanimously. The consequence was that over three hundred and fifty made definite Christian decisions. Some made the first Christian decision; others made decisions in which they determined to devote their powers more wholly to the service of the Kingdom. The decisions were in proportion to the number of students as many as Mr. Eddy had been instrumental in making in any of his college work.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

SPECIAL MEETINGS recently held at the First Swedish Church, McKeesport, under the leadership of Evangelists Olson and Frederikson were most successful. Pastor J. O. Hammarberg reports a marked deepening of interest among the membership and a goodly number of additions.

THE FIRST CHURCH, BRADFORD, is moving forward under the leadership of Pastor Fred R. McArthur. Dr. Agar recently visited the church and helped plan a unified budget. During the week of Jan. 23, this budget of $10,775 was over-subscribed. Miss LaVerne Minniss has been appointed secretary-missionary to assist the pastor. Rev. A. B. Strickland conducted special services beginning Feb. 13 and lasting two weeks. The church membership was organized into bands of personal workers. Of the 300 prospects, seventy-four made definite decisions for Christ. This organization is to be continued.

REV. W. V. BACON, DUQUESNE, recently baptized two brothers who are heads of families. The Bible school has reached the largest development in its history. The pastor's Bible class maintains an attendance of twenty-four.

Mississippi Valley

MISSOURI

COLUMBIA, FIRST, has closed the greatest revival in its history. Dr. T. W. Young, pastor, had the assistance of Dr. W. M. Vines of Norfolk, Va. in the preaching and of J. P. Schaffeld, who sang and led the chorus work of the congregation. Eighty-three came into the church, nearly all by baptism. Since Jan. 1 the church has welcomed 104 new members and has now a membership of nearly 1000.

ILLINOIS

PASTOR C. W. WEBB of Wood River, assisted by Prof. Ira Deal of Waterloo, Iowa, held special meetings resulting in a large number of conversions and baptisms. The community had been dominated largely by the Pentecost people, but the Baptists seem now to have recovered from the pressure of that influence.

IN THE DEATH OF JAMES M. TAYLOR of Taylorville, which occurred Feb. 28th the Baptist denomination in the middle west has sustained a serious loss. As an attorney he had attained prominence, especially in drainage projects and legislation in several states, but as a Christian layman he was a man of unusual ability and activity in Baptist affairs. He served for years on the board of the Illinois State Convention, and as moderator of Springfield Association. Perhaps his most useful service was on the board of Shurtleff College of which he was a member.

WISCONSIN

AT BELOIT, March 9, 1921, Mrs. Mary Williams Eddy, widow of Deacon George P. Eddy passed to rest. Mrs. Eddy was born Sept. 23, 1940 near Johnstown, New York. At the age of thirteen her family moved to Illinois and bought a farm near Tiskilwa where she lived practically all of her life. She united with the Baptist church of Tiskilwa a short time after it was organized and was a devoted member of it for more than sixty years.

INDIANA

REV. F. A. HAYWARD, pastor of the First Church, Seymour, for the past three years and a half, resigned his pulpit Sunday, March 13, to accept the call of the Indianapolis city mission society to become its executive secretary and director of religious education for Marion county. Mr. Hayward will take up his new work Apr. 15, with offices at 729-730 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis, the Baptist state offices.

Before going to Seymour, Mr. F. A. Hayward was pastor of the Underwood Memorial Church, Milwaukee and had previously held the position of director of religious education for the Wisconsin Baptist Convention for five years.

SULLIVAN CHURCH has grown so that a new house is required, and will build soon.

MINNESOTA

DR. W. B. RILEY completed the twenty-fourth year of a notable pastorate with the First Church, Minneapolis on March 6. During these years more than 4000 people have been received into the church and more than $1,000,000 has been given in offerings. The Northwestern Bible and Missionary Training School, which started eighteen years ago with an enrolment of seven has now an attendance of 125 and property valued at $300,000. During February the Sunday school had an average attendance of 1130. Plans are being discussed for the enlargement of the church auditorium and for the erection of a Sunday-school building.

ON A RECENT SUNDAY the Sunday school of the First Church of Mankato, Minn., received an offering for the relief of Chinese Famine Sufferers. This offering amounted to $440.00. At Christmas time this same Sunday school took an offering for European Relief which amounted to $660.00. Thus $1100.00 has been sent from this school for relief of the starving peoples of the world. Both offerings came before there was any local organization in the city and with no outside suggestion save only the crying need as set forth in newspaper and magazines.

DR. E. R. POPE, executive secretary of the state convention has been on a short vacation, visiting one of his daughters in Louisiana.

MICHIGAN

PASTOR JOHN M. WELLS at Ann Arbor rejoices in conversions, baptisms and the reception of new members by the dozen: boys and girls, men and women, students from the university and various other groups contribute their quota of applicants. A forum of the church is attracting much attention in the community. The Sunday school has grown 75 per cent in the last two months. The community chapel cannot accommodate the crowds.

PASTOR JAMES S. WEST of Beulah Temple has received 124 new members in the first 124 days of his pastorate. No special meetings have been held, no pre-Easter campaign and no outside help. The budget has been quadrupled, the pastor has 125 "prospects" on his list and crowds tax the capacity of the house.

Kalamazoo College

With the recent gift of $10,000 toward the erection of a new woman's dormitory, Kalamazoo College feels it is assured of this building in the near future.

During the month the college has received from a woman, who for personal reasons desires her name to remain unknown to the public, the sum of $10,000.00 to be used in the building of the much needed dormitory. This magnificent gift comes from a family which has long been in close sympathy with the college.

While this contribution seems to outshine others that have been made, the lesser donations must not be overlooked. The extension program is still in the educational stage, acquainting the constituency with the needs and the proposed extension. Though the program has not reached the point of solicitation of funds, in addition to the gift already mentioned the College has received a gift of one thousand dollars and a number of smaller gifts. The attitude of the people is most gratifying and consequently the success of the extension program is already largely assured.

KANSAS

SINCE DR. JOHN BUNYAN SMITH entered upon the pastorate of the First Church at Wichita, six months ago, 117 have been added to the church and congregations fill the house.

REV. MR. VANHAGEN is the new pastor of the Norton Church. The outlook for the work is the brightest it has been for some time.

PASTOR WALTER DAVENPORT of Lyons is leading in an aggressive work on that field. The Sunday school has been built up to an attendance of 100 or more, with a church membership of only 78.

REV. GEO. L. TALBOT has accepted a call to the Canton Church, and has entered upon the work with a good outlook.

PASTOR D. D. HAGGARD of Baxter Springs reports five baptized recently; also a B. Y. P. U. organized.

PASTOR I. W. BAILEY has had the assistance of C. V. Lawrence of Ottawa in special meetings at Bush City recently.

REV. HARRY J. BOLLE, student at Ottawa University, is now pastor of the old Tany Church, a few miles north of Ottawa. The work had somewhat run down, but is now coming up to a better standard.

REV. H. G. FRASER of Ottawa and Rev. F. F. Bock, a student at Ottawa, and pastor of the Stilwell and Lyndon churches, are planning to visit most of the churches in the Miami Association in the interest of the New World Movement. They will use a stereopticon with appropriate missionary and stewardship slides.

AN IMPORTANT CONFERENCE of representatives from some of the leading evangelical denominations was held Feb. 1 at the Y. M. C. A. in Topeka to consider the problem of religious education, and especially week-day religious education, and credit for Bible study in high school and college. A further conference is to be conveyed at an early date for further consideration of the subject.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Temporary Investments

A CERTAIN church is accumulating money for its organ fund and expects to use it within a few months. Meantime, whenever the treasurer has $500 on hand, he is buying a United States treasury certificate of indebtedness, and thus is adding interest to the fund at 5½ or 6 per cent, with the utmost safety.

These certificates have been issued almost every month for the past year by the treasury department at Washington. They are really short time notes of the government, due at a certain date, usually within a year and bear interest at different rates, some as high as 6 per cent, the rate being set as low as the treasury thinks the money market justifies at the time they are issued. Those sold March 15, for example, carry 5½ per cent for the six months' certificates and 5% per cent for those running a year. The purpose of their issue is to enable the Treasury to meet its expenditures until periodical tax payments, or other income is received by the government. They come in denominations of $500 and upward and are sold through the federal reserve banks to bankers throughout the country, who, in turn, dispose of them to the public.

For a special fund such as this, or for an individual who has a sum of money for which he has definite use some months hence, they are an admirable investment. They are, of course, entirely free from taxation by the state, and are subject only to surtaxes, excess profits taxes and inheritance taxes levied by the Federal government. Because of the short period for which they are issued, they are less likely to fall to a discount than the longer time liberty bonds have been. Indeed, some of the 6 per cent issues now command a slight premium, and even in the case of some of the 4½ per cent certificates issued in 1920, the discount at which they sold for a time was so slight as to still leave the holder a better interest return than he would have received on a short time bank deposit.

Dietz Two-Pocket Envelopes

READY PRINTED—For Sunday School or Church. Sundays numbered 1-52 and NOT DATED. Envelopes good till used—NO LOSS. A yearly calendar for checking the Sunday numbers.

A New Treasurer's Loose Leaf Record Book NEW PRICES—Samples and literature FREE. Annual catalog now ready. Ask for it.

WM. H. DIETZ, The S. S. Supply Man 20 E. Randolph St., Chicago

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c. Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Write for this Booklet For Christian investors. You receive regular, generous, non-taxable life income. Your money helps a Christian enterprise. Ask for Booklet B American Bible Society 25 Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society

Our Corporate name is

"The American Baptist Home Mission Society"

Executive Secretary, Charles L. White

Treasurer, Samuel Bryant

23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

Directors of State Boards of Promotion

(Star indicates that Director is also State Convention Secretary.)

- Arizona—*Rev. H. Q. Morton, 216 Noll Building, Phoenix.
- California, N.—*Dr. C. W. Brinstead, 408 Humboldt Savings Bank Bldg., 783 Market St., San Francisco.
- California, S.—Rev. F. G. Davies, 506 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles.
- Colorado—Dr. W. F. Ripley, 714 Exchange Bldg., Denver.
- Connecticut—Rev. H. B. Sloat, 647 Main St., Hartford.
- Delaware—Rev. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
- District of Columbia—Rev. F. P. Langhorne, 3817 7th St., N. W., Washington.
- Idaho—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
- Illinois—Rev. A. E. Peterson, 1433 Stevens Bldg., 16 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.
- Indiana—*Dr. C. M. Dinsmore, 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis.
- Iowa—424 Valley Nat'l Bank Bldg., Des Moines.
- Kansas—Dr. J. T. Crawford, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.
- Maine—Dr. E. C. Whittemore, Waterville.
- Massachusetts—Rev. William Reid, 707 Ford Bldg., Boston.
- Michigan—Grant M. Hudson, 368 Capitol Nat'l Bank Bldg., Lansing.
- Minnesota—*Dr. E. R. Pope, 700 Office Equipment Bldg., 529 2nd Ave., So. Minneapolis.
- Montana—*Rev. G. Clifford Cress, Box 643, Lewistown.
- Nebraska—*Rev. Walter I. Fowle, Hedde Building, Grand Island.
- Nevada—George L. Snyder, Box 230, Sparks.
- New Hampshire—*Rev. D. S. Jenks, 922 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.
- New Jersey—*Dr. T. P. Holloway, 671 Broad St., Newark.
- New York, Upper—Dr. R. E. Farrier, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
- Metropolitan Board of Promotion—Rev. F. K. Singiser, Dr. C. H. Sears, 276 Fifth Ave., New York.
- North Dakota—*Rev. F. E. Stockton, 405 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Grand Forks.
- Ohio—Rev. F. G. Cressey, Granville.
- Oregon—*Dr. O. C. Wright, Rev. J. C. Austin, Field Promotion Director, 405 Tilford Bldg., Portland.
- Pennsylvania—*Dr. Wm. G. Russell, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
- Rhode Island—*Rev. B. T. Livingston, 304 Lauerdale Bldg., Providence.
- South Dakota—*Dr. S. P. Shaw, 1520 So. Summit Ave., Sioux Falls.
- Utah—*Rev. A. B. Minaker, 314 Ness Bldg., Salt Lake City.
- Vermont—*Dr. W. A. Davison, Burlington.
- Washington, E.—*Dr. A. H. Bailey, 539 Rockery Bldg., Spokane.
- Washington, W.—Rev. Geo. F. Holt, 433 Burke Bldg., Seattle.
- West Virginia—Rev. G. E. Bartlett, 213 ½ Fourth St., Parkersburg.
- Wisconsin—*Dr. D. W. Hulburt, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.
- Wyoming—*Rev. J. F. Blodgett, 405 So. Park Ave., Casper.

MOUNDS PARK SANITARIUM

Earl and Thorn Streets

MIDWAY HOSPITAL

Snelling and University Avenue

MERRIAM PARK HOSPITAL

(FORMERLY COBB)

Iglehart and Cleveland Avenues

DEPARTMENTS

General Surgery Medicine
Neurology Obstetrics
Eye, Ear, Nose
and Throat

SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES

LABORATORIES

Radium Blood Chemistry
X-Ray Basal Metabolism
Serology Pathology
Electrocardiograph

Gordon

Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course of four years college degree of Th.B. Graduate School of Theology, three year course, graduate degree of B. D. Two-year College Training course. Interdenominational. Of full college and graduate grade, with a wide range of studies, permeated by remarkable evangelical spirit. Notable faculty and student body. New and beautiful fireproof buildings with dormitories. Organized religious work and self-support. For catalog and correspondence, address Nathan R. Wood, President, Gordon Bible College.

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL For Girls and Young Women
Junior College and Academy. Waiting list all year. Apply early for September.
Wm. P. McKee, Dean, Box 620 Mt. Carroll, Ill.

Give Your Pastor a New Book HE READS ALL THE YEAR ROUND

WHAT CHRISTIANITY MEANS TO ME

A Spiritual Autobiography
By LYMAN ABBOTT
Author of "THE GREAT COMPANION";
"THE OTHER ROOM"; "THE TEMPLE"; etc.
"This volume is an endeavor to state simply and clearly the results of sixty years of New Testament study, of more than sixty years of Christian experience." $1.75

THE MESSAGE OF SADHU SUN- DAR SINGH

By CANON B. H. STREETER
Editor of "THE SPIRIT", "CONCERN-ING PRAYER", "IMMORTALITY" etc.
Bears out the prediction often made that Asia in our time would produce a disciple of Jesus who would go fathoms deeper than we ever have into the regions of our religion where the Gospel of John lives and moves and has its being. $1.75

FOUR RELIGIOUS BEST SELLERS

New Printings. Reduced Prices.
JAMES B. PRATT
The Religious Consciousness Paper Boards $2.50
What and Where is God? Paper Boards 1.50
ROGER W. BABSON
Religion and Business, Paper Boards 1.50
S. S. PARKES CADMAN
Ambassadors of God, Paper Boards 2.50

CHRISTIANITY in its MODERN EXPRESSION

By GEORGE BURMAN FOSTER
Only a rare nature that can probe far into the depths of the human spirit can do the large positive, constructive work for his age which Professor Foster has done in "Christianity in Its Modern Expression." $3.75

JESUS AND PAUL

By BENJAMIN W. BACON
"The best way to understand the nature of the changes in Jesus' version of Christianity recorded in the New Testament Literature is to study the crucial change from the gospel preached by Jesus in Galilee to the gospel about Jesus preached by Paul, the most momentous change in the history of our faith."—Dr. Bacon. $2.50

THE OLD TESTAMENT in the LIFE OF TODAY

By JOHN A. RICE
"Gives in small compass what it is important to know about the character, contents and message of the Old Testament." Christian Register.
"Viewed from any standpoint, a masterpiece." J. L. Neill, Methodist Review.
"Dr. Rice belongs to the goodly fellowship of Marcus Dods and A. B. Davidson." Wesleyan Christian Advocate. $3.00

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

Randall: The New Light on Immortality ..... $1.75
Sneath: At One With the Invisible.. 3.00
Tracy: Psychology of Adolescence.. 2.50
McConnell: Church Finance and Social Ethics ..... 1.50
Manning: Call to Unity ..... 2.00
Rice: Old Testament in Life of Today 3.00

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY
64-66 Fifth Avenue New York City, N. Y.

CONDUCTED BY

Our Music Corner

WILLIAM LESTER

SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF

A LETTER from Philip Sack, Jr., choir-director of the Baptist Church of Polk, Neb., brings us the interesting news that this church, in a small town of some 600 people, with the active competition of seven other churches yet can be proud of a live choir of some thirty-odd voices, with the support of an adequate pipe-organ. For these calculations I have to depend upon a fine picture of the choir sent to me by Mr. Sack, who was too modest to tell me all these details lest he seem to brag too much. Personally I feel that this is a remarkable record. The choir appears at all the regular services of the church, and is often heard in special musical services and cantatas. The choir is also the proud possessor of a fine library of good anthems and cantatas. And they ask for suggestions for more material! I will bestir myself and send such a list to this live wire. I have a sneaking notion that the musical advancement of this mighty nation is going to depend a whole lot more for its progress upon such enthusiasts as Mr. Sack, and his faithful choir, than upon many much more pretentious organizations that are much more widely heralded as "Musical Messiahs"!

GET THIS NEW CATALOGUE

CHOIRMASTERS and organists, as well as soloists and all interested in music for the church, will be interested in a new catalogue just issued by the Carl Fischer Company, 380 Boylston St., Boston, Mass. Detailed lists of old and new anthems, sacred songs and duets, and cantatas arranged in a novel listing both by title and by composer will be of great service to the busy director in search of appropriate music for his future services. Complimentary copies of this catalogue may be procured upon request from F. E. Burgstaller at the above address.

CRIBBED FROM A PUBLISHER

CONTAINED in the February issue of "The Word" (a most interesting and stimulating pamphlet published every month for free distribution by the Willis Company of Cincinnati) was a column of pungent items of special value to the organist and choirmaster. We take the liberty of quoting from it the following paragraphs:

Upon being asked what he considered the best quality a church soloist could have, Harry Rowe Shelley, the eminent composer, replied, "Warmth and color." Amplifying Mr. Shelley's conclusion, we would add that in no branch of vocal endeavor does "white" (vapid and colorless) singing appear so distasteful and repugnant as in the church. All religious texts are beautiful, and none is void of deep significance. Hence their delivery by vocalists whose lack of feeling or indifference to their opportunity is quite obvious produces dissatisfaction and usually destroys the sacred messages the singing should enhance.

Poor enunciation frequently ruins the art of an otherwise highly gifted singer. The fault is so common among students that vocal teachers devote considerable time to its correction. This is right. For more and more are the texts of songs being given the prominence they deserve and which they had in the days of Schubert. Defective rendition of words arises sometimes from a bad method, but usually from careless diction which has probably been fostered from childhood. To pronounce correctly when singing one must deliver his words properly when speaking. The true master of enunciation finds little difference in singing words and speaking words. His jaws and tongue are so perfectly trained as to function the right way in either case. One great artist once told the writer that his enunciation was awful in the early part of his career and that he corrected it by reading aloud for hours at a time from books. In going through this rather trying drill, he always considered rigidity of the jaw the enemy of good diction he had most to fear. Today this artist's slightest syllable is intelligible to the farthest recesses of any auditorium in which he sings. Practical advice to voice students is that they carefully scrutinize their normal diction to discover the causes for their bad vocal enunciation. After one, through such scrutiny, puts his finger on the trouble, so to speak, he should have enough cleverness to create an effective cure.

Dr. Ray Hastings completed nine years as organist of the Temple Baptist Church at Los Angeles on Feb. 13 and the pastor of the church, Dr. James Whitcomb Brougher, referred to the fact on the folder for the day, calling Mr. Hastings a "brilliant, genial organist" and "a prince of a good fellow," thus illustrating the relation of pulpit and organ loft in this noted church. In addition to his other work Dr. Hastings has made a special feature of his popular concerts, which are draw large audiences.

Homer P. Whitford played the subjoined programs on consecutive Sunday evenings in January at the Tabernacle Baptist Church of Utica, N. Y.: Jan. 2.—"The Garden of Iram" (from "Persian Suite"), Stoughton; "Thistle-down," Loud; Scherzo Symphonique, Faulkes. Jan. 9.—"Sous-venir" (request), Drlla; "Orientale," Cui; "The Brook," Dethier. Jan. 16.—"The Question" and "The Answer," Wolstenholme; Concert Overture in C minor, Hollins. Jan. 23.—Cradle Song (request), Delbruck; Humoresque, "The Primitive Organ," Yon; Festival March in D major, Faulkes. Jan. 30.—Romance, Sibellus; Capriccio, Lemaigre; Etude in C sharp major, Chopin-Haupt.

Charles M. Courboin took a prominent part in the exercises of centennial week, beginning Feb. 13, in the First Baptist Church of Syracuse, N. Y., of which he is organist. Feb. 14 he gave a recital before an audience which taxed the capacity of the Mizpah Auditorium. His program included: Passacaglia, Bach; "Ave Maria," Schubert; Andante from "Surprise Symphony," Haydn; "Liebestod" from "Tristan and Isolde," Wagner; "Marche Heroique," Saint-Saens; Largo from "Xerxes," Handel; Spring Song, Mendelssohn; "Christus Resurrexit," Ravanello; Allegretto, de Boeck. After playing the above program Mr. Courboin showed his virtuosity by playing Yon's Concert Study with its 1,467 pedal notes in two minutes and twenty seconds, a wonderful feat after so long and taxing a program.

Bound by Gold Chains
(Continued from page 272)

in the Old Testament is the prayer of Moses, when on descending from the mountain he discovered to his horror that the people in his absence had fallen into idolatry. Back to the mount he went in agony and prayed that God would forgive their sin: "and if not," he added sublimely, "Blot me I pray thee out of thy book which thou hast written."

Intercessory prayer is urged by James in the well known verse James 5:16: "Pray one for another," "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." The most beautiful example of intercessory prayer in the New Testament is in John 17—Jesus' prayer for His disciples, the real Lord's Prayer. Intercessory prayer not only helps the one prayed for, it has its effect on the one who prays. It brings one close to God, it broadens and ennobles the spirit. That is what is meant in Job 42:10. Jehovah turned the captivity of Job when he prayed for his friends.

In the end it comes back to the "greatest thing in the world," love. According to the degree of love we have in our hearts for others so is the strength of our prayer for them. Because of his excessive love Moses' prayer was effectual. The same was true of Stephen, of Job, of Jesus Himself. St. Anthony says, "We pray as much as we desire and we desire as much as we love. Shakespeare says: "More things are wrought by prayer Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice

Rise like a fountain for me night and day,
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain.
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God."

High School Course
(Continued from page 279)

7. Go to God himself. Ask for the voice of God in your leading.

It will be helpful if the leader should illustrate each of these points from experiences of well known reformers, missionaries, Christian laymen, etc. Get the young people to test their decisions by these principles. Here would be an excellent opportunity for an experience meeting of a real sort. Discussion however should centre in how God's will became known to the examples noted above. How did they come to realize His will and what is the effect upon a Christian?

What is duty? Is there an infallible guide to duty? How does anyone know he is accomplishing his full duty? How should one determine his duty? We find then a Christian lives the best who knows the word, talks with his Lord, follows God's will in the path of known duty.

(Next week. Deepening Acquaintance with God.)

Fresh from the Field
(Continued from page 258)

Forty new members came into the church at Chadron, Nebr., as the result of meetings held by Chaplain E. W. White and Rev. F. M. Sturdevant.

Mr. George E. Merrill, architect and secretary for the Home and Publication societies, is preparing a layout for a group of new buildings for the Indian college at Bacone, Okla.

Bacone College will lay the cornerstone for a new building April 21.

Pastor Milton Fish of San Bernardino, Cal., has organized his people for work under 100 captains. He finds a remarkable readiness to work on the part of his members, and has a pre-Easter campaign in progress.

Evangelist John M. Linden, 1716 Hoyt St., Madison, Wis., with his singing evangelist, Wm. S. Dixon, is in a pre-Easter campaign at the First Church, Fort Dodge, Iowa. Rev. B. M. Osgood, pastor.

Dr. William S. Abernathy of Kansas City, Mo. has been called to Calvary Church, Washington, D. C. and it is understood that he will accept, to begin the first Sunday in May.

Dr. W. Sanford Gee died in Chillicothe, Mo. March 20. He was a native of southern Illinois, educated at Shurtleff College and held several pastorates in that and other states. He was seventy years old.

For the commencement exercises of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, which occur during the latter part of May, the following speakers are announced: Baccalaureate sermon, Prof. Jacob Heinrichs; missionary sermon, Rev. Charles L. White, the Home Mission Society; commencement address, Rev. Judson B. Thomas; theological conference, Rev. J. W. Hoyt, Prof. Geo. R. Wood and Dr. C. L. White.

Rev. Parker Smith closed a two-weeks series of meetings at Holyoke, Col. March 20, with twenty conversions.

Pastor E. B. Johnson of Milton, Pa., had Evangelists Parsons and Phipps of Walton, N. Y. through February in one of the best campaigns ever held in Milton.

Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto assisted Dr. J. W. Hoyt of Belden Avenue Church, Chicago, in special pre-Easter meetings.

Dr. Charles W. Gilkey of Chicago has been receiving numerous additions to Hyde Park Church recently. On a single Wednesday evening thirty-one were received, most of them for baptism. No special meetings have been held.

Roy V. Whealey, a young man who has been serving the church at La Mesa, Cal., some months, was recently set apart to the ministry by a council of churches in the vicinity of San Diego.

Old friends of Dr. Arthur Given, for many years secretary and treasurer of the Free Baptist mission board and now eighty years old, will be interested to know that he is living with his daughter at Clermont, Fla., where they may address letters to him.

A gracious revival has just been held at the First Church, Downs, Kans. Pastor Kelly did the preaching. He was ably assisted by Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie, singing evangelists.

IT IS A BURNING SHAME
that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire

Baptist Department
Mutual Insurance Corporation
furnishes protection AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM
No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured.
No agents. Deal direct under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy and Mgr., 1509 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO.
Baltimore, Md.
CHURCH, CHIME AND PEAL BELLS
Memorials a Specialty

Beware of Contagious Diseases

THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE
INDIVIDUAL

SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES
Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer. Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

DO YOU KNOW!!

THE Business World needs Christian Young People. An efficient Business Training midst wholesome surroundings; an opportunity to study Art, Music, Literature, Home Economics and Physical Science at a low rate of Tuition and Board, is the remarkable offer of the

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY
Write for particulars Osage, Iowa

Harry W. Jones
CHURCH ARCHITECT
Minneapolis

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1859
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6 cents per word per insertion; cash with order.

A girl for housework in Christian family north shore suburbs of Chicago. Three adults and three children of school age. A good home where a helper will be treated with consideration. Write fully regarding age, experience, health, etc., to Mrs. Wm. Ayer McKinney, 1200 Chatfield Road, Hubbard Woods, Ill.

For live singing and live workers in revivals use Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie. Address: Ekron, Ky.

Go to Europe in 1921 at my expense by organizing a party of five. Babcock's European Tours. 1137 Dean St., Brooklyn N. Y. Established 1900.

For Sale — Slightly used "Rotaspeed" Duplicating Machine. Perfect running order. Bargain.—X.Y.Z., THE BAPTIST.

Pipe Organ, beautiful in tone, recently replaced by larger instrument, for sale. An unusual opportunity. W. C. Simons, Lawrence, Kansas.

In writing to our advertisers mention THE BAPTIST

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

100% Jones

*A little homily on a homely subject.
Having to do with religion, cash and the month of April.*

Jones—you know Jones—made a pledge to the New World Movement last April. Never mind the amount. Together with thousands of other pledges the total was about 50 Million dollars. To date Jones has paid all that is due on his subscription. He's a one hundred percenter.

But there are other folks—never mind their names—who have been negligent; and unfortunately they have paid only forty per cent, or fifty, or sixty. So the total payments are still about 25% short.

You can see what this means. It means that our missionary societies have to borrow great sums of money to carry on their work—part of which is forward work based on the pledges of Jones et al. And other things can't be done till the money is in hand. And altogether it makes an embarrassing situation. Perhaps you don't know just how embarrassing.

Hear the conclusion of the whole matter: We must bring our payments up to 100% by the end of the fiscal year, April 30th.

Pastors, will you not wisely urge attention to this need?

Benevolence Committees, will you not do the same?

Treasurers of Benevolence, "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Delinquents—Thank you.

---

The General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Books Close
May 5th

16.05
P
Volume II

April 9, 1921

Number 10

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

APR 8 1921

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist

Convention

Univ of Ill Libr
Urbana Ill

SPRINGTIME on blue Galilee, "where Jesus loved so much to be."
—A recent photograph of the seaside at Tiberias near the place where Jesus met his disciples in the springtime, shortly after his resurrection. Our readers will admire its serene beauty.

Fresh from the Field

The Normal M. E. Church at Bloomington, Ill. is constructing a baptistery in the basement of the church building to accommodate the increasing number of converts requesting immersion.

Since going to Marceline, Mo., Pastor J. E. Chappelle has welcomed into the First Church eighty-three new members, fifty-seven of them by baptism. Sunday school has doubled and the young people, reorganized, have a minimum attendance of fifty.

Rev. E. J. Nordlander, with Mrs. Nordlander, has entered the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville to complete a course of study.

The First Church of Sacramento, Cal., with Pastor Bryant Wilson, shows great progress in the Sunday school and the women's society, and has organized a men's club, a W. W. G., a children's church, and a school of missions. It has received 103 new members during the year and carries a general budget of $13,000.

Pastor I. Fredmund of the Temple Church, Racine, Wis., publishes a neat folder stating an outline of beliefs in eight articles, and giving a succinct syllabus of Baptist doctrine. His audience is made up largely of Scandinavians. He preaches in Danish in the morning and in English in the evening.

The First Church, Pendleton, Oregon, reports as the result of recent meetings forty-eight baptisms, two restorations and twenty-six received by letter. Congregations are better than in twenty years.

Ganson Street Church, Jackson, Mich., is full of life, the building proving too small for the people who attend. The church has just been decorated. The Easter offering was $50. Rev. B. H. Taylor is pastor.

Baptist women and girls of the Middle Atlantic states should keep in mind the dates for the Wilson College Summer School of Missions—June 28-July 6. This is an interdenominational women's missionary conference, and last year the Baptists had a large delegation. Registrations should be in early. For folders, etc., send to the Baptist camp leader, Mrs. Horace H. Hunt, 5005 Penn Street, Frankford, Philadelphia, Pa.

The centennial celebration of the organizing of the First Church, Bordentown, N. J., will be observed April 10-17. In order, the days of the observance are known as follows: Historical Sunday, Community Service, B. Y. P. U. Service, Sunday-school Service, Trenton Association Service, Denominational Service, Home Coming Day.

The First Church, Douglas, Ariz., has called Rev. John Spindler of Columbia Church, Cincinnati, Ohio, who has accepted. Rev. A. P. Howells who has just closed a two-month's acting pastorate and who now goes to Jacksonville, Ill., for three months, reports that he closed two weeks meetings on March 27. There were forty-six additions, of whom twenty-four were baptized on Easter.

On March 21 Mr. John F. Comey completed fifty years of unbroken and active service as a deacon of the Fifth Avenue Church, New York City. He was a very young man when he began this service under Dr. Thomas T. Armitage and has served continually under every successive minister of the church. On Easter Sunday morning he was presented with a set of resolutions and congratulated by the minister of the church with felicitous and appropriate words.

A special meeting of The General Board of Promotion will be held at Des Moines, Ia., Monday, June 20, and Tuesday, June 21, 1921. Important business is to be considered at this special meeting and it is hoped that there will be a representative attendance. The opening session will be held at 4:00 o'clock Monday afternoon, June 20. Further announcement regarding the place of meeting and other information will be published later.—William B. Lippard, Recording Secretary.

Easter Sunday marked the close of a two-weeks' revival meeting at the First Church in Muscatine, W. H. Rogers, pastor. Attendance at these meetings has probably never been equaled in the history of the church. In the twelve meetings held seventy decisions were made for Christ and forty-five were baptized at Easter. This church expects soon to launch a building campaign. An Easter Offering of $1066 was given in anticipation of that time.

Rev. W. H. Rogers recently completed a successful revival meeting in the Fourth Church of Minneapolis.

The Baptist Ministers' Aid Society of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin will hold its annual meeting at the Baptist Ministers' Home, Fenton, Mich., on Wednesday, May 4, at 10 A. M. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year and seven trustees for three years. The annual meeting of the trustees will follow. Representatives sent by contributing churches are entitled to vote at the meeting of the society.—Joseph W. Priest, Recording Secretary.

Rev. R. B. Favoright has moved from Fremont, Neb., where he labored nearly fifteen years, to Jerseyville, Ill. He began work at Fremont March 1.

Arthur C. Wickenden, a member of the Second Church, Toledo, student in the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, and supply pastor at Wasco, Ill., was ordained at Toledo, March 22. He saw active service in the war and was wounded in action. He has also had active experience in Y. M. C. A. work.

First Church Defiance, Ohio, increased its missionary offerings from $300 in 1918 to $1200 in 1920. Pastor Theodore G. Erler, in the four years of his pastorate, has received 193 members, greatly strengthened the Sunday school and received a substantial increase in his annual salary.

First Church, Lincoln, Neb., dedicated a fine new organ on Easter Sunday.

Mr. J. Burt Bouwman was ordained at Marshall, Mich., March 7. He is serving the First Church at that place as pastor.

Vincennes Church in Indiana, Minor Stevens pastor, has closed a series of meetings with sixty-three additions to the church. Twenty of these were men. Evangelist A. P. Renn of Indianapolis conducted the campaign.

Rev. H. F. Waring, of the Berwyn Church, Chicago, baptized twenty on Easter Sunday, and fourteen were received by letter and experience; a total addition to the membership of thirty-four. The church under the leadership of Mr.

Waring is influencing the life of the community to a greater extent than ever before in its history. The Waring Community Class in the Sunday School, consists of over one hundred young married people.

Evangelist S. A. Hayworth, Danville, Ind., and Geo. Chenhall, singer, closed a successful pre-Easter revival at West Allis, Wis. First Church, assisting Pastor F. F. Parsons, with thirty-nine additions.

Franklin W. Swift, evangelist, of Rochelle, Ill., has just closed a meeting with the First Church of Marietta, Ohio. The meeting was featured by great audiences and 125 conversions. Dr. Swift goes from here to Farmington, N. H., for a similar campaign.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Temporary Investments—II Bankers' Acceptances

SECOND only to United States Treasury Certificates as a temporary investment are Bankers' Acceptances. This form of financing has developed in this country since the Federal Reserve Law went into operation, though abroad it has been used for a long time.

A Banker's Acceptance is a draft maturing at a fixed future date (usually not over ninety days) drawn on a bank by one of its customers. The drawee bank "accepts" it by placing the word "accepted" with the signature of the bank across the face of the draft which makes it the obligation of the bank to pay the sum at its maturity. In other words, the accepted draft becomes practically a sixty or ninety day note of the bank, with the drawer's responsibility added. After being accepted, such drafts are sold at the prevailing rate of discount, which, for the best drafts of this kind, is now around 6 per cent. Many of the larger banks buy and sell acceptances of other banks, and there are also many note brokers who deal in them. They are most frequently drawn in rather large amounts, say $5000 and up, though drafts arising out of exports or imports often cover the particular transaction and can be obtained in smaller amounts.

It is apparent that where accepted by a bank of high standing and responsibility, such a draft gives the holder all the security of the bank's certificate of deposit and usually brings from 2 to 3 per cent higher interest. Perhaps it should be explained that this higher rate is paid, not by the bank, but by the customer whose draft it has accepted, and which the customer sells through another bank or note broker after it has been accepted. Bearing the bank's acceptance, he can sell it at a more favorable rate of discount than his own unsupported promissory note would bring. The bank, in effect has loaned its credit to the customer instead of lending the money direct, and is protected by taking some form of collateral during the time the drafts are outstanding. When they are due, the customer's obligation is to furnish the bank with funds to pay them. But whether he does so or not, anyone who has bought such a draft will find that the bank redeems it at maturity, just as it is bound to repay its depositors.

The Baptist

Vol. II April 9, 1921 No. 10

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire

Committee on Publication:

Rev. James M. Stifler Mr. Peter R. Finlay
Mrs. Clayton D. Eulette Mrs. Samuel C. Jennings
Mr. Wm. Ayer McKinney

Contributing Editors:

Pres. George E. Horr Prof. William Lyon Phelps
Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery Mrs. Bertha Grimmell Judd
Pres. Leonard W. Riley Rev. Frederick E. Taylor
Rev. S. W. Cummings Pres. John W. Bailey

Hon. Carl E. Milliken

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. All subscribers are regarded as permanent and are expected to notify the publishers and pay arrearages if they wish to discontinue THE BAPTIST.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	290
SHORT TALKS ON INVESTMENTS.....	290
EDITORIAL .....	293
"GOD WANTS ME IN MISSOURI," by Roy Ivan Johnson. 296
WHAT THE NEW WORLD PROGRAM MEANS TO THESE, by Charles L. Bromley.....	298
THE WEST IS STILL TO BE WON, by Geo. E. Burlingame 299
CLASPING HANDS BEHIND THE STARS, a symposium compiled by E. M. Poteat .....	300
THE BULLETIN BOARD.....	303
DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....	305
CHIMNEY CORNER .....	306
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.....	308
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	309
OUR OWN FOLKS.....	310
MUSIC CORNER .....	319

Sample Copies

WE ARE very careful in the use of sample copies for obvious reasons. We do not, however, want our friends to think that we will not co-operate with them in their efforts to extend the circulation and service of THE BAPTIST. If you want us to send sample copies to your friends give us their names and addresses and it will be done.

Killam's Kollum

Meat for Cannibalistic Big Guns

THE editors of THE BAPTIST aim to make it a people's paper. They have miserably failed if the judgment of one man is final. A pastor writes, "I fell that your paper is designed for the 'big guns' who feed upon the country churches." We wrote the brother that his letter was both welcome and refreshing for it broke the monotony of constant praise we have been receiving in recent months.

It Might Be Better

The Michigan Baptist Convention sent another check for subscriptions during the past week amounting to $147. This has become a habit. From $75 to a $100 per week for subscriptions from one state director of promotion is not bad. Of course it might be better. Other states please copy.

We Did It Help Him Get Well

"The meanest thing you ever did was to wait until I was in the hospital and then make a better paper."—Curtis Lee Laws.

What Is the Score of Your Church?

The marks of denominational enterprise which at once appeal to a visitor in any city are well-kept church buildings and grounds, well-placed bulletin boards with the name of the church, the pastor and the hours of service, and the presence in the public libraries and reading rooms of copies of THE BAPTIST and Missions and other denominational periodicals. For $3 we will place THE BAPTIST and Missions in your public library for one year. Keep your world-wide work before your community. It is good publicity.

What Is Your Pet Peeve?

We are serious in asking you to send us your pet grievance. We want you to put it on paper. Look it in the face. Let your wrath wax hot. Do not carry a load of bile around with you. After writing a whole solid page of criticism of men and things one writer said, "I am going to come out stronger some of these days." He should never have stopped with one page when another might have brought relief. Send your pet peeve to THE BAPTIST care of the Peeve Editor.

The Advantage of Getting Acquainted

By HENRY E. WOODARD

ON MARCH 14-15 the First Church of Norwalk, Ohio, was remarkably blessed because of the opportunity given it of entertaining one of the regional missionary conferences planned by the General Board of Promotion.

Great men and women everywhere are busy men and women. We appreciate the enormous cost in the curtailment of important duties when the people on such a team as came to Norwalk necessarily leave their offices. The benefits, however, of their visit to us cannot easily be tabulated.

We have read about them and we have read articles written by them but by their presence alone have we understood their spirit. Some of us have criticized their actions and their words and no argument in the world would have changed our conceptions. Now that we have come face to face with them our adverse criticisms change to praise.

A wonderful spirit was exhibited in the open meetings where the leaders considered with us the problems of the denominational work. We freely set forth our difficulties and they were considered in an honest, straight-forward manner. When there were properly two sides to a question both were stated with equal enthusiasm and those of us who had seen previously only the one side had our eyes opened to the other.

We thank God for these blessings that have been ours and pray that in the future whenever we are troubled about denominational matters, there may be sent to us leading representatives of the work who are able to bring not alone the necessary information but the spirit of the work embodied in their personalities.

Any Baptist Mavericks?

By A. W. RIDER

WHEN the program for the spring campaign of the General Board of Promotion was placed before the regional conference in Worland, Wyo., the delegates looked at the last number on the program, which is "Pay-up Week," and expressed themselves that there ought to be an addition, making it "Pay-up and Round-up Week."

They justified their suggestion by saying that when they had an annual round-up, there were always some strays which escaped and must be carefully looked for in the next annual round-up. These strays, together with the unbranded calves of the year, are called mavericks, and constitute an important factor in each year's round-up.

These Wyoming delegates felt that there were a number of Baptists who did not get into line last year and a number of new members who had joined our church since the former campaign, and that this element constituted a large factor in our anniversary campaign this year.

With this explanation the team heartily endorsed the addition and from that date westward every conference put emphasis upon Pay-up and Round-up Week.

The question is passed on to the denomination at large, "Are there any Baptist mavericks?" It so, let special attention be given to them in our "Pay-up and Round-up Week."

If We Should Fail

THE greatest crisis in the history of Northern Baptists is here. The greatest opportunity that we have ever had has come to us today. Would it not be the greatest humiliation that we could sustain as Christians and as Baptists in this era of the world's vast need, if we should fail?

If we should fail, we should know ourselves as false to ourselves, false to our church, false to humanity, and false to God. If we should fail, we should realize that through our failure our denomination could not within this generation undertake another project for Christ as great as this. If we should fail, we could not bow our heads to God in prayer and ask his aid without remembering that we had withheld his own from him. If we should fail, we would not be his fitting partners in this great enterprise.

If we should fail, we could not look at our own happy children, strong in Christian training, without seeing the faces of China's starving children, as famished for God as for bread. If we should fail, there would come between our eyes and the pages of our Bible as we read, the fact that 90 per cent of those who die in non-Christian lands die without a doctor and without a nurse—and without God. If we should fail, it would be our reproach that in Assam 95 per cent of its people cannot know Christ. If we should fail, millions of men, women and children who would otherwise hear of Jesus during the next four years would be betrayed—betrayed by us.

If we should fail, we would prove ourselves blind of heart to the need in our own land. If we should fail, we would impair the power for good of our Baptist schools and colleges, instead of making them a great force for the future of our denomination. If we should fail, we would shut all religious training away from the remote parts of our country, where only colporteurs may carry it. If we should fail, 60 per cent of American Indians would remain as they are today, unevangelized. If we should fail, hundreds of thousands of boys and girls who are growing up in the slums of our great cities with no more knowledge of Christ than they would have in heathen lands, would be our shame.

If we should fail, we would deny Christ as surely as another unworthy disciple once did many centuries ago.

Lest We Forget

THE BOOKS of all the state boards of promotion will close promptly on May 5. The fiscal year for all our state and national missionary organizations closes on April 30, but in order to accommodate those churches which wish to utilize the last week in April in making final collections on their pledges the books of the state offices will be held open until Thursday, May 5. They will close without fail on the afternoon of that day.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of making our hundred per cent collections on the pledges then due. All our national and state organizations have received more money than ever before, but the fearful increase in the cost of all missionary work will bring many of our national societies face to face with a deficit, unless a full hundred per cent collection on the pledges of the New World Movement due May first is made.

We appeal, therefore, to the pastors, treasurers, and promotion committees of our churches to see that these collections are made. We are not unmindful of the fact that our people are not as prosperous as they were a year ago, and the payment of some of the pledges may entail sacrifice. But we cannot forget our missionaries whom we have sent out on the furlough battle line—especially those 162 new missionaries, our own boys and girls, who have gone out since Denver, and who went in the strong assurance that their denomination, aroused with a new determination, would stand back of them.

We cannot forget that the bars are down and our country is being flooded with a new immigration. Our time to reach these new Americans is during the first months in this strange land. They will not wait for the return of more prosperous days that we may minister to them more conveniently. It is now or never for them.

We cannot forget that in this day when our whole civilization is in flux, when our whole moral order is shaking, that America needs the gospel of Jesus Christ with its regenerating stabilizing power, as it never needed it. If we withhold the gospel from this generation it may be too late for our beloved land. Our great work of evangelism must not be held up.

We cannot forget that if we are going to give the children of our generation a religious training we must do it now. They will pass out of our hands, some of them, before more prosperous times return. Once gone they can never be trained. If we could only foresee what it is going to mean to the future of America to have 75 per cent of the present generation of children growing up without any knowledge of the Bible and its great moral and spiritual principles, we would pay every dollar of our New World pledges and then pledge the remaining forty-five millions at once. Can we not foresee something of it and arouse ourselves to action?

We cannot forget that our pledges are just as sacred today as they were when we made them a year ago. To fail to redeem them now is to be untrue to ourselves as well as to our Christ. That we will never do.

We cannot forget.

We must not forget.

We will not forget.

The General Board of Promotion.

Will Your Pastor be There?

MEETINGS of the Northern Baptist Convention in Des Moines, Iowa, open on Wednesday, June 22 and continue through Tuesday, June 28. For a number of reasons, the convention this year will be notable. The Jubilee program of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, for instance, will well repay a trip to Des Moines. Then there will be the report of the committee on inquiry concerning Baptist schools and colleges, a subject of the utmost importance and interest. The Board of Promotion will report concerning the first year's collections in the New World Movement and on the plans for the future. The addresses by groups of missionaries at home on furlough always are of intense interest and few sessions exceed that in which the new appointees are presented. Important matters of denominational concern are to be considered and decided.

Pastors and laymen from all the churches should be in attendance. Many churches are now including the pastor's expenses in connection with the annual

(Continued on page 318)

The Baptist

Unsuspected Power

A CHURCH in Colorado faced in the New World Movement an apportionment of $25,000. The sum seemed absurdly large. Nevertheless an effort was made and the sum of $5,000 pledged. Compared with the giving of the past, this amount was no mean sum and consequently the church, having made its try, sat down and folded its hands in all the peace of accomplishment. But there were reserves of power which had not been touched. A new pastor came; advisers were called in; a new spirit appeared; a second canvass was made. And when the returns were all in, it was found that the church had exceeded its apportionment of $25,000, and what was more significant still that new members were crowding to its doors. And there came joy. The people are delighted at the revelation of their own power. And the church itself is now one of the liveliest in the great state of Colorado.

Moses had an experience like that once. The Lord called him to a large and difficult task. So overwhelming did it seem that excuses rushed to his lips. He was surprised to discover that the Lord did not know that there were no means at hand adequate to the work. The attention of Moses thereupon was called to a stick which he held in his hand. Sticks are much alike and this one had no pre-eminence over others. But there were possibilities, under God's guidance, in the stick. And when Moses perceived these, he hastened to the work and found that he had all that was necessary to successful accomplishment.

The moral is easy. One does not need to use many words in pointing it out. There is unsuspected power, not only in churches, but also in individuals. Men and women, groaning under their load or summoned to duties which seem entirely beyond their power, have within themselves reserves of strength which will become apparent when once they are fully launched in the undertaking which is before them. If they only begin again at the moment they are about to give up, they do great things for the glory of God.

In the average individual, for instance, there are reserves of faith which have hardly been touched. Men trust God in an easy way and do little things; it is possible to trust God in a big way and do large things. God's power releases itself through men who make themselves one with his Spirit and unbelievable things are brought to pass. Those who trust God make the impossible possible.

Love in all its possibilities is but a slightly used power. Some people seem afraid to allow themselves to love lest they shall in some way get into trouble. What Paul calls the greatest of the three supreme things is not given its fair chance. Self-restraint is excellent under some circumstances. But there are moments when the heart should be allowed to lead. Such moments rightly used lead to great hours and days.

Should service also be mentioned? Great has been the praise of service in recent years. But not all those who glorify it practice what they exalt. Jesus was among men as one who served. And he declared that the greatest among his disciples should be the one who served best. There is yet room for more great Christians in the sense of the Master's word.

If one seeks to know how it comes to pass that there is such unsuspected power in his life, he may do well to reflect upon the words of Jesus who summoned his disciples to a great task and then added: "And lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." Men and women who will to do so become channels through which flows the power of the Almighty. It is not they who accomplish things, but Christ who liveth in them.

Designated Gifts

NO large missionary enterprise would be possible if all individuals and churches were to designate their gifts for particular objects. For not only are there charges of administration which must be met, but there must also be room for the exercise of the judgment of the men and women who are closest to the situation and who know better than others can possibly do the relative importance of the work projected in different fields.

On the other hand, the human element in missions is of the greatest value. People always take pleasure in following their gifts and seeing what the money is doing. They like to know that some missionary family of their acquaintance is living in a bungalow they helped to build or teaching in a school or riding in a Ford made possible by their gift. So some churches have assumed the definite support of particular missionaries and have the advantage which comes from hearing directly of the work and seeing these missionaries when they return on furlough. Probably nothing can take the place of this human touch.

Very wisely therefore the Board of Promotion has made possible in the Hundred Million Campaign the giving of money for specific objects. A booklet listing just such objects and specifying the amounts of money required can be had from headquarters in New York. Amounts already pledged by churches or individuals cannot be diverted to such objects. But new subscriptions or additional subscriptions can be used, if so desired, for the objects mentioned in this attractive and informing booklet.

The attention of individuals and churches is called to this. Opportunity for large service knocks at the door. A chance to get acquainted in a helpful way with some of the best people in the world is offered. Those who meet the particular needs listed may know that they are giving to God's kingdom abroad the same personal service they give to the church at home. This booklet is an eye-opener to those who want open doors of usefulness.

Four Hundred Years Ago

FOUR hundred years ago, on April 18, Martin Luther stood before the Diet of Worms at what has been called the "birth moment of civil and religious liberty," and uttered his unshakable words: "Here I stand. I cannot do otherwise. God help me. Amen."

For the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, Pres. Robert E. Speer suggests that throughout the churches we should recognize on Sunday, April 17, the anniversary of the Diet of Worms and the significance of its lessons for our own day. The two paragraphs following are taken from his letter:

"Will it not be appropriate on Sunday, April 17, for the ministers of our churches to make public recognition of the results which have flowed from Luther's fearless words before Charles V and his council and to emphasize afresh some of the great truths which burst forth with renewed power in the Reformation—justification by faith, the duty of obedience to Jesus Christ, the sole Lord of the conscience, the freedom and responsibility of the individual soul, the right of every man to access to the Bible in his own tongue, the obligation of loyalty to the living God, our only king.

"We cannot hope to fulfil our longing for a new and reconstructed world otherwise than through the truths which the Reformation proclaimed, and which have yet to dominate the life of the world."

Special days in the churches have become a weariness to the pastors, but so significant is this particular occasion that work of value in the present American situation might be accomplished by its observance.

Is Sin a Matter of Definition?

IN A certain household, which shall be nameless, there dwelt a wife who felt that she had attained to the higher life and who did not fail to let the other members of the family appreciate that fact. A nephew visiting the family was surprised at the manner in which his "saint" treated her husband and at the language employed towards him. When he spoke of his perplexities and frankly stated that he did not understand, his aunt made to him this reply, "Don't you know that sin is a matter of definition?"

Whose definition? Your definition or my definition? Has sin no reality except as I choose to label it? If I brush it aside or give to it a new name, does it thereby cease to be sin? This way lies the road to mental and moral confusion.

There have been legalists who have so defined sin that they could do just about as they pleased and yet count themselves righteous. Was the law of God made thereby of no effect? There have been those who have deliberately done evil because of the freedom they felt they had achieved in Christ. More than once in the world has it happened that some mighty defender of the faith has proved weak in his moral life. Such may excuse themselves if sin is a matter of definition.

But if it be true that "he that doeth righteousness is righteous," if the ten commandments and Christ's law of love are yet valid, if only the pure in heart can see God, if the God of the Bible is the true God, sin is more than a matter of definition. I can define it away endlessly and yet stand at last at the judgment seat of God, who deals with facts and not with pretty tricks of language.

Christian people do well to beware of befuddling themselves on this subject. Every moral abomination in the world will defend itself with pious words if there is nothing more to sin than the definitions men give to it.

Lenine Sees a Grim Joke

LENINE, so the story goes, never laughs. We are instructed to think of him as a gloomy and saturnine ogre.

Well, he may never laugh but he can see a joke.

Yesterday he was represented in the standard newspapers as a blood-thirsty autocrat with whom a self-respecting nation could have nothing to do. Additional evidence of his degradation of character lay in the fact that under his regime there was no opportunity for the profitable investment of capital. The shedding of blood might be forgiven him as it has often been forgiven other bloody leaders in the past. But the depth of his depravity in the interference with property and profits was simply unspeakable. Religious, political and economic orthodoxy required us to pronounce his name in accents of abomination.

But, my countrymen, what a change has come!

Recently he uttered the magic word, "Concessions," and lo! his scarlet sin became as white as snow.

What is a concession? Ask Standard Oil or U. S. Steel or any metropolitan bank. They will tell you that a concession, when it is finished, bringeth forth ducats.

And now, within three feet of the writer at this moment, is a copy of a daily paper—it might be almost any daily paper—which has hitherto screamed with moral horror at the mention of a soviet; but in this very copy it says that Lenine is sagacious, honest, courageous, dreaming a great dream of a glorious Russia yet to be. Speaking of his reported favorable attitude towards capital, it says also, "His further efforts will have tremendous interest."

"Interest"?

